PREFACE

TO THE NEW ENGLISH BIBLE

IN MAY 1946 the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland received an overture from the Presbytery of Stirling and Dunblane, where it had been initiated by the Reverend G. S. Hendry, recommending that a translation of the Bible be made in the language of the present day, inasmuch as the language of the Authorized Version, already archaic when it was made, had now become even more definitely archaic and less generally understood. The General Assembly resolved to make an approach to other Churches, and, as a result, delegates of the Church of England, the Church of Scotland, and the Methodist, Baptist, and Congregational Churches met in conference in October. They recommended that the work should be undertaken; that a completely new translation should be made, rather than a revision, such as had earlier been contemplated by the University Presses of Oxford and Cambridge; and that the translators should be free to employ a contemporary idiom rather than reproduce the traditional 'biblical' English.

In January 1947 a second conference, held like the first in the Central Hall, Westminster, included representatives of the University Presses. At the request of this conference, the Churches named above appointed representatives to form the Joint Committee on the New Translation of the Bible. This Committee met for the first time in July of the same year. By January 1948, when its third meeting was held, invitations to be represented had been sent to the Presbyterian Church of England, the Society of Friends, the Churches in Wales, the Churches in Ireland, the British and Foreign Bible Society, and the National Bible Society of Scotland: these invitations were accepted. At a much later stage the hierarchies of the Roman Catholic Church in England and Scotland accepted an invitation to appoint representatives, and these attended as observers.

The Joint Committee provided for the actual work of translation from the original tongues by appointing three panels, to deal, respectively, with the Old Testament, the Apocrypha, and the New Testament. Their members were scholars drawn from various British universities, whom the Committee believed to be representative of competent biblical scholarship at the present time. Apprehending, however, that sound scholarship does not necessarily carry with it a delicate sense of English style, the Committee appointed a fourth panel, of trusted literary advisers, to whom all the work of the translating panels was to be submitted for scrutiny. It should be said that denominational considerations played no part in the appointment of the panels.

The Joint Committee issued general directions to the panels, in pursuance of the aims which the enterprise had in view. The translating panels adopted the following procedure. An individual was invited to submit a draft translation of a particular book, or group of books. Normally he would be a member of the panel concerned. Very occasionally a draft translation was invited from a scholar outside the panel, who was known to have worked specially on the book in question. The draft was circulated in typescript to members of the panel for their consideration. They then met together and discussed the draft round a table, verse by verse, sentence by sentence. Each member brought his view about the meaning of the original to the judgement of his fellows, and discussion went on until they reached a common mind. There are passages where, in the present state of our knowledge, no one could say with certainty which of two (or even more) possible meanings is intended. In such cases, after careful discussion, alternative meanings have been recorded in footnotes, but only where they seemed of sufficient importance. There is probably no member of a panel who has not found himself obliged to give up, perhaps with lingering regret, a cherished view about the meaning of this or that difficult passage, but in the end the panel accepted corporate responsibility for the interpretation set forth in the translation adopted.

The resultant draft was now remitted to the panel of literary advisers. They scrutinized it, once again, verse by verse, sentence by sentence, and took pains to secure, as best they could, the tone and level of language appropriate to the different kinds of writing to be found in the Bible, whether narrative, familiar discourse, argument, law, rhetoric or poetry. The translation thus amended was returned to the translating panel, who examined it to make sure that the meaning intended had not been in any way misunderstood. Passages of peculiar difficulty might on occasion pass repeatedly between the panels. The final form of the version was reached by agreement between the translators concerned and the literary advisers. It was then ready for submission to the Joint Committee.

Since January 1948 the Joint Committee has met regularly twice a year in the Jerusalem Chamber, Westminster Abbey, with four exceptions during 1954-5 when the Langham Room in the precincts of the Abbey was kindly made available. At these meetings the Committee has received reports on the progress of the work from the Conveners of the four panels, and its members have had in their hands typescripts of the books so far translated and revised. They have made such comments and given such advice or decisions as they judged to be necessary, and from time to time they have met members of the panels in conference.

Of the original members of the panels most have happily been able to stay with the work all through, though some have been lost, through death or otherwise, and their places have been filled by fresh appointments.

The Committee has warmly appreciated the courteous hospitality of the Dean of Westminster and of the Trustees of the Central Hall. We owe a great debt to the support and the experienced counsel of the University Presses of Oxford and Cambridge. We recognize gratefully the service rendered to the enterprise by the Reverend Dr. G. S. Hendry and the Reverend Professor J. K. S. Reid, who have successively held the office of Secretary to the Committee. To those who have borne special responsibility, as Chairmen of the Joint Committee, we owe more than could readily be told. Dr. J. W. Hunkin, Bishop of Truro, our first Chairman, brought to the work an exuberant vigour and initiative without which the formidable project might hardly have got off the ground at all. On his lamented death in 1950 he was succeeded by Dr. A. T. P. Williams, then Bishop of Durham and subsequently Bishop of Winchester, who for eighteen years guided our enterprise with judicious wisdom, tact, and benign firmness, but who to our sorrow died when the end of the task was in sight. To both of these we would put on record the gratitude of the Committee and of all engaged in the enterprise.

If we embarked on mentioning the names of those who have served on the various committees and panels, the list would be a long one; and if we mentioned some and not others, the selection would be an invidious one. There are, nevertheless, three names the omission of which would be utterly wrong. As Vice-Chairman and Director, Dr. C. H. Dodd has from start to finish given outstanding leadership and guidance to the project, bringing to the work scholarship, sensitivity, and an ever watchful eye. Professor Sir Godfrey Driver, Joint Director since 1965, has also brought to the work a wealth of knowledge and wisdom; to his enthusiasm, tenacity of purpose, and unflagging devotion the whole enterprise is greatly indebted. Professor W. D. McHardy, Deputy Director since 1968, has made an invaluable contribution particularly, but by no means exclusively, in the sphere of the Apocrypha. It is right that the names of these three scholars should always be associated with The New English Bible. Our debt to them is incalculably great.

DONALD EBOR:

Chairman of the Joint Committee

OLD TESTAMENT

INTRODUCTION

TO THE OLD TESTAMENT

THE OLD TESTAMENT consists of a body of literature spread over a period extending from the twelfth to the second century B.C.; this literature is written in classical Hebrew, except some brief portions which are in Aramaic, a cognate or sister language (Ezra 4. 8—6. 18 and 7. 12—26, Jeremiah 10. 11, Daniel 2. 4—7. 28). No manuscripts of the Old Testament from the earlier part of this period have been preserved; indeed much of it must have been handed down by oral tradition from generation to generation. The impetus to collect, edit and make copies of the national literature may well have come from the disaster of 587/6 B.C., when the Babylonians captured and burnt Jerusalem and carried off many of its inhabitants into exile.

The earliest known Hebrew manuscripts containing any parts of the Old Testament are among the Scrolls (commonly called the Dead Sea Scrolls) found in caves at Qumran near the north-western end of the Dead Sea; they may be dated in the last two centuries B.C., though some may be a little earlier and others somewhat later. They include two copies of Isaiah, one complete and another badly damaged, a commentary containing most of the text of the first two chapters of Habakkuk, and fragments of every other Old Testament book, except Esther. The text which they present is to a large extent identical with that in our Hebrew Bibles.

In the second century A.D. or even earlier the Rabbis, the Jewish religious leaders, compiled a text from such manuscripts as had survived the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70, and on this basis was established the traditional or Massoretic text, so called from the Hebrew word massorah 'tradition'. This text incorporated the mistakes of generations of copyists, and, in spite of the care bestowed on it, many errors of later copyists also found their way into it. The earliest surviving manuscripts of this text date from the ninth to eleventh centuries A.D.; and it is this text, as printed in R. Kittel's Biblia Hebraica (3rd edition, 1937), which has been used for the present translation.

The traditional text was originally written only in consonants, but in order to preserve what they regarded as the correct pronunciation of the words the Rabbis added vowel-signs to the text. Of the various systems of vowel-signs which were devised, that developed at Tiberias in the fifth to sixth centuries A.D. ultimately prevailed and is still used in our printed Bibles. The vowels are here represented by means of strokes and dots added to the consonantal text, and this method of vocalization made it possible for the Rabbis to indicate variant readings which they preferred, without meddling with the consonants: they put in the margin of their manuscript the consonants of the reading which they wished to adopt and added the vowel-signs of this reading to the consonants in the text which they were rejecting. The reader knew that he was to pronounce the consonants in the margin with the vowels in the text.

One variation of this convention is of special importance, inasmuch as it affects the divine name. This personal proper name, written with the consonants YHWH, was considered too sacred to be uttered; so the vowels for the words 'my Lord' or 'God' were added to the consonants YHWH, and the reader was warned by these vowels that he must substitute other consonants. This change having to be made so frequently, the Rabbis did not consider it necessary to put the consonants of the new reading in the margin. In course of time the true pronunciation of the divine name, probably Yahweh, passed into oblivion, and YHWH was read with the intruded vowels, the vowels of an entirely different word, namely 'my Lord' or 'God'. In late medieval times this mispronunciation became current as Jehova, and it was taken over as Jehovah by the Reformers in Protestant Bibles. The present translators have retained this incorrect but customary form in the text of passages where the name is explained with a note on its pronunciation (e.g. Exodus 3. 15) and in four place-names of which it forms a constituent element; elsewhere they have followed ancient translators in substituting 'LORD' or 'GOD', printed as here in capital letters, for the Hebrew name.

So much for the text of the Hebrew Old Testament as it lies before us; but it is certain that this does not always represent what was originally written. The translator must often go behind the traditional text to discover the writer's meaning. For this purpose he may have recourse first to the Scrolls; but these cover only a very small part of the Old Testament writings. Secondly he may have recourse to the Samaritan Pentateuch, which, though extant only in late manuscripts, the earliest being dated about the eleventh century A.D., may be somewhat earlier than the Scrolls and represents the text of the five books of the Law (Genesis to Deuteronomy) which the Samaritans took with them when they seceded from Judaism. It differs from the traditional Hebrew text in a considerable number of small and mostly unimportant points.

For further help the translator may turn to the ancient versions. Of these the earliest is the Old Testament in Greek, designed to meet the needs of Greek-speaking Jews in Egypt in the third and second centuries B.C. According to tradition the Pentateuch was translated by seventy-two elders, six from each of the twelve tribes of Israel, and so the Greek version of the Old Testament came to be called the Septuagint, from the Latin septuaginta 'seventy'. Clearly it is the work of a number of translators of unequal skill; their rendering is now literal, now paraphrastic, and now interpretative. Not infrequently it contains absurd mistranslations. Yet it is valuable for the recovery of the original Hebrew, because it is based on an underlying Hebrew text older than the Massoretic, and it often preserves the correct reading in passages where our Hebrew manuscripts are manifestly in error, or the true interpretation where this has been obscured in the traditional text. Its defects, however, were patent, and early in the Christian era several scholars, Aquila, Symmachus and Theodotion, tried to improve on it; other scholars produced fresh recensions of it, among which the text associated with the name of Lucian is commonly included.

With the spread of Christianity across the Mediterranean world the need for a Latin version of the Scriptures arose, and a translation of the Septuagint was made by unknown translators. This, known as the Old Latin Version, of which only parts survive, was so unsatisfactory that towards the end of the fourth century A.D. Pope Damasus ordered Jerome to prepare a fresh Latin translation. The new version, commonly called the Vulgate, and produced with the help of Jewish scholars, is idiomatic and forceful, and, being made directly from the Hebrew text, is especially helpful in recovering the form and sense of that text.

As the knowledge of Hebrew died out among the Jews, the reading of the Scriptures in the synagogue had to be followed by a translation of the passages into Aramaic, the language which had supplanted Hebrew. Such renderings, known as Targums (Aramaic targum, 'translation'), tended to become traditional and stereotyped and finally were written down. Some of them contain pre-Christian material. There are Targums to every book of the Old Testament except Daniel, Ezra, and Nehemiah, but only one, on the Pentateuch, is a straightforward translation.

Between the first and third centuries A.D. a Syriac translation, known as the Peshitta (i.e. 'simple') Version, was made; some parts of it are more literal than others, and, though it agrees in the main with the Hebrew text, it bears traces of the influence of the Septuagint. Other versions in various languages appeared between the third and thirteenth centuries A.D., but they are of little value for the recovery and interpretation of the Hebrew text.

In spite of this wealth of ancient versions, and even when the earliest known form of the text has been established, many obscurities still remain in the Hebrew Scriptures. The classical Hebrew vocabulary as known today is small, with the consequence that the meaning of an unusually large number of words is uncertain or unknown. In such cases recourse may be had to the cognate languages. Already medieval scholars had begun to use the Arabic language for this purpose, and in later centuries Syriac and Ethiopic also were used. In more recent times scholars have had access to the vast literature in Babylonian, Assyrian, and kindred dialects which has been preserved on cuneiform tablets. Archaeology, too, has at times been helpful in clearing up an obscurity in the Hebrew text. But in the last resort, the translator may have to arrive at the sense of a word from the context alone, or he may even have to emend what is demonstrably faulty; such corrections of the text, except when only the vowels are affected, are recorded in the notes of the present translation.

The paragraphs in this translation are a modified form of those in the Authorized and Revised Versions, and the present translators have added headings to the main sections into which the text falls. Sometimes, for what seemed sufficient reasons, the order of the verses has been changed, as will be seen from the verse-numbering. Occasionally passages have been brought together if a common refrain or other evidence shows that they have been wrongly separated; such changes are recorded in the notes.

The headings of the Psalms, consisting partly of musical instructions, of which the meanings have mostly been lost, and partly of historical notices, deduced (sometimes incorrectly) from the individual Psalms, have been omitted; they are almost certainly not original. On the other hand, the designations of the speakers in the Song of Songs, though absent from the Hebrew text, have been introduced, with occasional corrections, from two manuscripts of the Septuagint.

A major difficulty in translating the Old Testament lies in the difference of time and place. Palestine differs greatly from the Western world in its physical aspects, in its plants, birds and beasts, its arts and crafts, as it did also in its social, administrative and religious institutions, so that no English words exist to represent much about which the Old Testament speaks. The modern translator then must be content to use paraphrase or even to transliterate certain Hebrew words. The present translators have transliterated the Hebrew words for technical terms, where verbal exactness has seemed essential, while in other passages they have allowed themselves a paraphrase to bring out the general sense, where no technical problem requiring particularization is involved; but they have adopted such devices as rarely as possible.

Finally, the translators have endeavoured to avoid anachronisms and expressions reminiscent of foreign idioms. They have tried to keep their language as close to current usage as possible, while avoiding words and phrases likely soon to become obsolete. They have made every effort not only to make sense but also to offer renderings that will meet the needs of readers with no special knowledge of the background of the Old Testament.

GUIDE TO THE NOTES

The footnotes in this edition of the Old Testament serve (a) to give cross-references to parallel passages, chiefly in the historical books, (b) to indicate where verses or parts of verses have been transposed, (c) to give the meaning of proper names where it appears to be reflected in the context, (d) to give an alternative interpretation where the Hebrew is capable of such, and (e) to indicate places where the translators have adopted what seemed to them the most probable correction of the text where the Hebrew and the ancient versions cannot be convincingly translated as they stand.

Unless otherwise indicated by its wording, a note refers to the single word against which the reference is placed.

MARGINAL NUMBERS

THE conventional verse divisions in the Old Testament are based on those in Hebrew manuscripts. Nevertheless any system of division into numbered verses is foreign to the spirit of this translation, which is intended to convey the meaning in natural English—the prose in paragraphs, the poetic passages in lines corresponding to the structure of the Hebrew.

For purposes of reference, and of comparison with other translations, verse numbers are placed in the margin opposite the line in which the first word belonging to the verse in question appears. Sometimes, however, successive verses are combined in a continuous translation, so that the precise point where a new verse begins cannot be fixed; in these cases the verse numbers, joined by a hyphen, are placed at the point where the passage begins.

GENESIS

The creation of the world

IN THE BEGINNING OF CREATION, when God made 1 heaven and earth,^a the earth was without form and void, with darkness 2 over the face of the abyss, and a mighty wind that swept^b over the 3 surface of the waters. God said, 'Let there be light', and there was light; 4 and God saw that the light was good, and he separated light from darkness. 5
He called the light day, and the darkness night. So evening came, and morning came, the first day.

God said, 'Let there be a vault between the waters, to separate water 6 from water.' So God made the vault, and separated the water under the 7 vault from the water above it, and so it was; and God called the vault 8 heaven. Evening came, and morning came, a second day.

God said, 'Let the waters under heaven be gathered into one place, so 9 that dry land may appear'; and so it was. God called the dry land earth, 10 and the gathering of the waters he called seas; and God saw that it was 11 good. Then God said, 'Let the earth produce fresh growth, let there be 12 on the earth plants bearing seed, fruit-trees bearing fruit each with seed 13 according to its kind.' So it was; the earth yielded fresh growth, plants 14 bearing seed according to their kind and trees bearing fruit each with seed 15 according to its kind; and God saw that it was good. Evening came, and 16 morning came, a third day.

God said, 'Let there be lights in the vault of heaven to separate day from 17 night, and let them serve as signs both for festivals and for seasons and 18 years. Let them also shine in the vault of heaven to give light on earth.' So 19 it was; God made the two great lights, the greater to govern the day and 20 the lesser to govern the night; and with them he made the stars. God put 21 these lights in the vault of heaven to give light on earth, to govern day and 22 night, and to separate light from darkness; and God saw that it was good. 23 Evening came, and morning came, a fourth day.

God said, 'Let the waters teem with countless living creatures, and let 24 birds fly above the earth across the vault of heaven.' God then created the 25 great sea-monsters and all living creatures that move and swarm in the 26 waters, according to their kind, and every kind of bird; and God saw that 27 it was good. So he blessed them and said, 'Be fruitful and increase, fill the 28 waters of the seas; and let the birds increase on land.' Evening came, and 29 morning came, a fifth day.

God said, 'Let the earth bring forth living creatures, according to their 30 kind: cattle, reptiles, and wild animals, all according to their kind.' So it 31 was; God made wild animals, cattle, and all reptiles, each according to its 32

kind; and he saw that it was good. Then God said, 'Let us make man in our image and likeness to rule the fish in the sea, the birds of heaven, the cattle, all wild animals on earth, and all reptiles that crawl upon the earth.' So God created man in his own image; in the image of God he created him; male and female he created them. God blessed them and said to them, 'Be fruitful and increase, fill the earth and subdue it, rule over the fish in the sea, the birds of heaven, and every living thing that moves upon the earth.' God also said, 'I give you all plants that bear seed everywhere on earth, and every tree bearing fruit which yields seed: they shall be yours for food. All green plants I give for food to the wild animals, to all the birds of heaven, and to all reptiles on earth, every living creature.' So it was; and God saw all that he had made, and it was very good. Evening came, and morning came, a sixth day.

Thus heaven and earth were completed with all their mighty throng. On the sixth day God completed all the work he had been doing, and on the seventh day he ceased from all his work. God blessed the seventh day and made it holy, because on that day he ceased from all the work he had set himself to do.

This is the story of the making of heaven and earth when they were created.

The beginnings of history

WHEN THE LORD GOD MADE EARTH AND HEAVEN, there was neither shrub nor plant growing wild upon the earth, because the LORD God had sent no rain on the earth; nor was there any man to till the ground. A flood^a used to rise out of the earth and water all the surface of the ground. Then the LORD God formed a man^b from the dust of the ground^c and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life. Thus the man became a living creature. Then the LORD God planted a garden in Eden away to the east, and there he put the man whom he had formed. The LORD God made trees spring from the ground, all trees pleasant to look at and good for food; and in the middle of the garden he set the tree of life and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil.

There was a river flowing from Eden to water the garden, and when it left the garden it branched into four streams. The name of the first is Pishon; that is the river which encircles all the land of Havilah, where the gold^d is. The gold^d of that land is good; bdellium^e and cornelians are also to be found there. The name of the second river is Gihon; this is the one which encircles all the land of Cush. The name of the third is Tigris; this is the river which runs east of Asshur. The fourth river is the Euphrates.

The LORD God took the man and put him in the garden of Eden to till it and care for it. He told the man, 'You may eat from every tree in the garden, but not from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil; for on the day that you eat from it, you will certainly die.' Then the LORD God said,

^a Or mist.

^b Heb. adam.

^c Heb. adamah.

^d Or frankincense.

^e Or gum resin.

'It is not good for the man to be alone. I will provide a partner for him.' So God formed out of the ground all the wild animals and all the birds of heaven. He brought them to the man to see what he would call them, and whatever the man called each living creature, that was its name. Thus the man gave names to all cattle, to the birds of heaven, and to every wild animal; but for the man himself no partner had yet been found. And so the LORD God put the man into a trance, and while he slept, he took one of his ribs and closed the flesh over the place. The LORD God then built up the rib, which he had taken out of the man, into a woman. He brought her to the man, and the man said:

'Now this, at last—
bone from my bones,
flesh from my flesh!—
this shall be called woman,^a for from man^b was this taken.'

That is why a man leaves his father and mother and is united to his wife, and the two become one flesh. Now they were both naked, the man and his wife, but they had no feeling of shame towards one another.

THE SERPENT WAS MORE CRAFTY than any wild creature that the LORD God had made. He said to the woman, 'Is it true that God has forbidden you to eat from any tree in the garden?' The woman answered the serpent, 'We may eat the fruit of any tree in the garden, except for the tree in the middle of the garden; God has forbidden us either to eat or to touch the fruit of that; if we do, we shall die.' The serpent said, 'Of course you will not die. God knows that as soon as you eat it, your eyes will be opened and you will be like gods^c knowing both good and evil.' When the woman saw that the fruit of the tree was good to eat, and that it was pleasing to the eye and tempting to contemplate, she took some and ate it. She also gave her husband some and he ate it. Then the eyes of both of them were opened and they discovered that they were naked; so they stitched fig-leaves together and made themselves loincloths.

The man and his wife heard the sound of the LORD God walking in the garden at the time of the evening breeze and hid from the LORD God among the trees of the garden. But the LORD God called to the man and said to him, 'Where are you?' He replied, 'I heard the sound as you were walking in the garden, and I was afraid because I was naked, and I hid myself.' God answered, 'Who told you that you were naked? Have you eaten from the tree which I forbade you?' The man said, 'The woman you gave me for a companion, she gave me fruit from the tree and I ate it.' Then the LORD God said to the woman, 'What is this that you have done?' The woman said, 'The serpent tricked me, and I ate.' Then the LORD God said to the serpent:

'Because you have done this you are accursed
more than all cattle and all wild creatures.

To the woman he said:

‘I will increase your labour and your groaning,
and in labour you shall bear children.
You shall be eager^a for your husband,
and he shall be your master.’

And to the man he said:

‘Because you have listened to your wife and have eaten from the tree which I forbade you,
accursed shall be the ground on your account.
With labour you shall win your food from it all the days of your life.
It will grow thorns and thistles for you,

You shall gain your bread by the sweat of your brow
until you return to the ground;
for from it you were taken.
Dust you are, to dust you shall return.’

The man called his wife Eve^b because she was the mother of all who live. The LORD God made tunics of skins for Adam and his wife and clothed them. He said, ‘The man has become like one of us, knowing good and evil; what if he now reaches out his hand and takes fruit from the tree of life also, eats it and lives for ever?’ So the LORD God drove him out of the garden of Eden to till the ground from which he had been taken. He cast him out, and to the east of the garden of Eden he stationed the cherubim and a sword whirling and flashing to guard the way to the tree of life.

The man lay with his wife Eve, and she conceived and gave birth to Cain. She said, ‘With the help of the LORD I have brought a man into being.’ Afterwards she had another child, his brother Abel. Abel was a shepherd and Cain a tiller of the soil. The day came when Cain brought some of the produce of the soil as a gift to the LORD; and Abel brought some of the first-born of his flock, the fat portions of them.^c The LORD received Abel and his gift with favour; but Cain and his gift he did not receive. Cain was very angry and his face fell. Then the LORD said to Cain, ‘Why are you so angry and cast down?’

Cain said to his brother Abel, 'Let us go into the open country.' While they were there, Cain attacked his brother Abel and murdered him. Then the LORD said to Cain, 'Where is your brother Abel?' Cain answered, 'I do not know. Am I my brother's keeper?' The LORD said, 'What have you done? Hark! your brother's blood that has been shed is crying out to me from the ground. Now you are accursed, and banished from^a the ground which has opened its mouth wide to receive your brother's blood, which you have shed. When you till the ground, it will no longer yield you its wealth. You shall be a vagrant and a wanderer on earth.' Cain said to the LORD, 'My punishment is heavier than I can bear; thou hast driven me today from the ground, and I must hide myself from thy presence. I shall be a vagrant and a wanderer on earth, and anyone who meets me can kill me.' The LORD answered him, 'No: if anyone kills Cain, Cain shall be avenged sevenfold.' So the LORD put a mark on Cain, in order that anyone meeting him should not kill him. Then Cain went out from the LORD's presence and settled in the land of Nod^{b c} to the east of Eden.

Then Cain lay with his wife; and she conceived and bore Enoch. Cain was then building a city, which he named Enoch after his son. Enoch begot Irad; Irad begot Mehujael; Mehujael begot Methushael; Methushael begot Lamech.

Lamech married two wives, one named Adah and the other Zillah. Adah bore Jabal who was the ancestor of herdsmen who live in tents; and his brother's name was Jubal; he was the ancestor of those who play the harp and pipe. Zillah, the other wife, bore Tubal-cain, the master of all copper-smiths and blacksmiths, and Tubal-cain's sister was Naamah. Lamech said to his wives:

'Adah and Zillah, listen to me;
wives of Lamech, mark what I say:
I kill a man for wounding me,
a young man for a blow.
Cain may be avenged seven times,
but Lamech seventy-seven.'

Adam lay with his wife again. She bore a son, and named him Seth,^d 'for', she said, 'God has granted me another son in place of Abel, because Cain killed him.' Seth too had a son, whom he named Enosh. At that time men began to invoke the LORD^e by name.

THIS IS THE RECORD of the descendants of Adam. On the day when God created man he made him in the likeness of God. He created them male and female, and on the day when he created them, he blessed them and called them man.

Adam was one hundred and thirty years old when he begot a son in his likeness and image, and named him Seth. After the birth of Seth he lived

Seth was one hundred and five years old when he begot Enosh. After the birth of Enosh he lived eight hundred and seven years, and had other sons and daughters. He lived nine hundred and twelve years, and then he died.

Enosh was ninety years old when he begot Kenan. After the birth of Kenan he lived eight hundred and fifteen years, and had other sons and daughters. He lived nine hundred and five years, and then he died.

Kenan was seventy years old when he begot Mahalalel. After the birth of Mahalalel he lived eight hundred and forty years, and had other sons and daughters. He lived nine hundred and ten years, and then he died.

Mahalalel was sixty-five years old when he begot Jared. After the birth of Jared he lived eight hundred and thirty years, and had other sons and daughters. He lived eight hundred and ninety-five years, and then he died.

Jared was one hundred and sixty-two years old when he begot Enoch. After the birth of Enoch he lived eight hundred years, and had other sons and daughters. He lived nine hundred and sixty-two years, and then he died.

Enoch was sixty-five years old when he begot Methuselah. After the birth of Methuselah, Enoch walked with God for three hundred years, and had other sons and daughters. He lived three hundred and sixty-five years. Having walked with God, Enoch was seen no more, because God had taken him away.

Methuselah was one hundred and eighty-seven years old when he begot Lamech. After the birth of Lamech he lived for seven hundred and eighty-two years, and had other sons and daughters. He lived nine hundred and sixty-nine years, and then he died.

Lamech was one hundred and eighty-two years old when he begot a son. He named him Noah, saying, 'This boy will bring us relief from our work, and from the hard labour that has come upon us because of the LORD's curse upon the ground.' After the birth of Noah, he lived for five hundred and ninety-five years, and had other sons and daughters. Lamech lived seven hundred and seventy-seven years, and then he died. Noah was five hundred years old when he begot Shem, Ham and Japheth.

The flood and the tower of Babel

WHEN MANKIND BEGAN TO INCREASE and to spread all over the earth and daughters were born to them, the sons of the gods saw that the daughters of men were beautiful; so they took for themselves such women as they chose. But the LORD said, 'My life-giving spirit shall not remain in man for ever; he for his part is mortal flesh: he shall live for a hundred and twenty years.'

In those days,^b when the sons of the gods had intercourse with the daughters of men and got children by them, the Nephilim^a were on earth. They were the heroes of old, men of renown.

When the LORD saw that man had done much evil on earth and that his thoughts and inclinations were always evil, he was sorry that he had made man on earth, and he was grieved at heart. He said, 'This race of men whom I have created, I will wipe them off the face of the earth—man and beast, reptiles and birds. I am sorry that I ever made them.' But Noah had won the LORD's favour.

This is the story of Noah. Noah was a righteous man, the one blameless man of his time; he walked with God. He had three sons, Shem, Ham and Japheth. Now God saw that the whole world was corrupt^b, and full of violence. In his sight the world had become corrupted, for all men had lived corrupt lives on earth. God said to Noah, 'The loathsomeness^c of all mankind has become plain to me, for through them the earth is full of violence. I intend to destroy them, and the earth with them. Make yourself an ark with ribs of cypress; cover it with reeds and coat it inside and out with pitch. This is to be its plan: the length of the ark shall be three hundred cubits, its breadth fifty cubits, and its height thirty cubits. You shall make a roof for the ark, giving it a fall of one cubit when complete; and put a door in the side of the ark, and build three decks, upper, middle, and lower. I intend to bring the waters of the flood over the earth to destroy every human being under heaven that has the spirit of life; everything on earth shall perish. But with you I will make a covenant, and you shall go into the ark, you and your sons, your wife and your sons' wives with you. And you shall bring living creatures of every kind into the ark to keep them alive with you, two of each kind, a male and a female; two of every kind of bird, beast, and reptile, shall come to you to be kept alive. See that you take and store every kind of food that can be eaten; this shall be food for you and for them.' Exactly as God had commanded him, so Noah did.

The LORD said to Noah, 'Go into the ark, you and all your household; for I have seen that you alone are righteous before me in this generation. Take with you seven pairs, male and female, of all beasts that are ritually clean, and one pair, male and female, of all beasts that are not clean; also seven pairs, male and female, of every bird—to ensure that life continues on earth. In seven days' time I will send rain over the earth for forty days and forty nights, and I will wipe off the face of the earth every living thing that I have made.' Noah did all that the LORD had commanded him. He was six hundred years old when the waters of the flood came upon the earth.

And so, to escape the waters of the flood, Noah went into the ark with his sons, his wife, and his sons' wives. And into the ark with Noah went one pair, male and female, of all beasts, clean and unclean, of birds and of everything that crawls on the ground, two by two, as God had commanded. Towards the end of seven days the waters of the flood came upon the earth. In the year when Noah was six hundred years old, on the seventeenth day of the second month, on that very day, all the springs of the great abyss broke through, the windows of the sky were opened, and rain fell on the earth for forty days and forty nights. On that very day Noah entered the ark with his sons, Shem, Ham and Japheth, his own wife, and his three 14 sons' wives. Wild animals of every kind, cattle of every kind, reptiles of 15 every kind that move upon the ground, and birds of every kind—all came 16 to Noah in the ark, two by two of all creatures that had life in them. Those which came were one male and one female of all living things; they came in as God had commanded Noah, and the LORD closed the door on him.

17 The flood continued upon the earth for forty days, and the waters swelled 18 and lifted up the ark so that it rose high above the ground. They swelled and increased over the earth, and the ark floated on the surface of the waters.
19 More and more the waters increased over the earth until they covered all 20 the high mountains everywhere under heaven. The waters increased and 21 the mountains were covered to a depth of fifteen cubits. Every living creature that moves on earth perished, birds, cattle, wild animals, all reptiles, 22 and all mankind. Everything died that had the breath of life in its nostrils, 23 everything on dry land. God wiped out every living thing that existed on earth, man and beast, reptile and bird; they were all wiped out over the whole earth, and only Noah and his company in the ark survived.

24 When the waters had increased over the earth for a hundred and fifty 8 days, God thought of Noah and all the wild animals and the cattle with him in the ark, and he made a wind pass over the earth, and the waters began 2 to subside. The springs of the abyss were stopped up, and so were the 3 windows of the sky; the downpour from the skies was checked. The water gradually receded from the earth, and by the end of a hundred and fifty 4 days it had disappeared. On the seventeenth day of the seventh month the 5 ark grounded on a mountain in Ararat. The water continued to recede until the tenth month, and on the first day of the tenth month the tops of the mountains could be seen.

6 After forty days Noah opened the trap-door that he had made in the 7 ark, and released a raven to see whether the water had subsided, but the bird continued flying to and fro until the water on the earth had dried up.
8 Noah waited for seven days,^a and then he released a dove from the ark to 9 see whether the water on the earth had subsided further. But the dove found no place where she could settle, and so she came back to him in the ark, because there was water over the whole surface of the earth. Noah 10 stretched out his hand, caught her and took her into the ark. He waited 11 another seven days and again released the dove from the ark. She came back to him towards evening with a newly plucked olive leaf in her beak.
Then Noah knew for certain that the water on the earth had subsided still 12 further. He waited yet another seven days and released the dove, but she 13 never came back. And so it came about that, on the first day of the first month of his six hundred and first year, the water had dried up on the earth, and Noah removed the hatch and looked out of the ark. The surface of the ground was dry.

14 By the twenty-seventh day of the second month the whole earth was dry.
16 And God said to Noah, 'Come out of the ark, you and your wife, your sons 17 and their wives. Bring out every living creature that is with you, live things of every kind, bird and beast and every reptile that moves on the ground,

^a Noah . . . days: prob. rdg., cp. verse 10; Heb. om.

and let them swarm over the earth and be fruitful and increase there.' So 18
Noah came out with his sons, his wife, and his sons' wives. Every wild 19 animal, all cattle, every bird, and every reptile that moves on the ground, came out of the ark by families. Then Noah built an altar to the LORD. He 20 took ritually clean beasts and birds of every kind, and offered whole-offerings on the altar. When the LORD smelt the soothing odour, he said 21 within himself, 'Never again will I curse the ground because of man, however evil his inclinations may be from his youth upwards. I will never again kill every living creature, as I have just done.

While the earth lasts 22
seedtime and harvest, cold and heat,
summer and winter, day and night,
shall never cease.'

GOD BLESSED NOAH and his sons and said to them, 'Be fruitful and in- 9 crease, and fill the earth. The fear and dread of you shall fall upon all wild 2 animals on earth, on all birds of heaven, on everything that moves upon the ground and all fish in the sea; they are given into your hands. Every 3 creature that lives and moves shall be food for you; I give you them all, as once I gave you all green plants. But you must not eat the flesh with the 4 life, which is the blood, still in it. And further, for your life-blood I will 5 demand satisfaction; from every animal I will require it, and from a man also I will require satisfaction for the death of his fellow-man.

He that sheds the blood of a man, 6
for that man his blood shall be shed;
for in the image of God has God made man.

But you must be fruitful and increase, swarm throughout the earth and 7 rule^a over it.'

God spoke to Noah and to his sons with him: 'I now make my covenant 8 9 with you and with your descendants after you, and with every living crea- 10 ture that is with you, all birds and cattle, all the wild animals with you on earth, all that have come out of the ark. I will make my covenant with you: 11 never again shall all living creatures be destroyed by the waters of the flood, never again shall there be a flood to lay waste the earth.'

God said, 'This is the sign of the covenant which I establish between 12 myself and you and every living creature with you, to endless generations:

My bow I set in the cloud, 13 sign of the covenant between myself and earth.
When I cloud the sky over the earth, 14
the bow shall be seen in the cloud.

Then will I remember the covenant which I have made between myself 15 and you and living things of every kind. Never again shall the waters become a flood to destroy all living creatures. The bow shall be in the cloud; when 16

18 Ham was the father of Canaan. These three were the sons of Noah, and their descendants spread over the whole earth.
- 21 Noah, a man of the soil, began the planting of vineyards. He drank some 22 of the wine, became drunk and lay naked inside his tent. When Ham, father of Canaan, saw his father naked, he told his two brothers outside.
23 So Shem and Japheth took a cloak, put it on their shoulders and walked backwards, and so covered their father's naked body; their faces were 24 turned the other way, so that they did not see their father naked. When Noah woke from his drunken sleep, he learnt what his youngest son had 25 done to him, and said:

'Cursed be Canaan,

the Jebusites, the Amorites, the Girgashites, the Hivites, the Arkites, the 16 17
Sinites, the Arvadites, the Zemarites, and the Hamathites. Later the 18
Canaanites spread, and then the Canaanite border ran from Sidon towards 19
Gerar all the way to Gaza; then all the way to Sodom and Gomorrah, 20 Admah and Zeboyim as far as Lasha. These were the sons of Ham, by 20 families and languages with their countries and nations.

Sons were born also to Shem, elder brother of Japheth, the ancestor of 21 all the sons of Eber. The sons of Shem: Elam, Asshur, Arphaxad, Lud^b 22^c and Aram. The sons of Aram: Uz, Hul, Gether and Mash. Arphaxad was 23 24 the father of Shelah, and Shelah the father of Eber. Eber had two sons: one 25 was named Peleg,^d because in his time the earth was divided; and his 26 brother's name was Joktan. Joktan was the father of Almodad, Sheleph, 27
Hazarmoth, Jerah, Hadoram, Uzal, Diklah, Obal, Abimael, Sheba, 28
Ophir, Havilah and Jobab. All these were sons of Joktan. They lived in 29 30 the eastern hill-country, from Mesha all the way to Sephar. These were the 31 sons of Shem, by families and languages with their countries and nations.

These were the families of the sons of Noah according to their genea- 32
logies, nation by nation; and from them came the separate nations on earth after the flood.

ONCE UPON A TIME all the world spoke a single language and used the 11 same^e words. As men journeyed in the east, they came upon a plain in the 2 land of Shinar and settled there. They said to one another, 'Come, let us 3 make bricks and bake them hard'; they used bricks for stone and bitumen 4 for mortar. 'Come,' they said, 'let us build ourselves a city and a tower with 4 its top in the heavens, and make a name for ourselves; or we shall be dis- 5 persed all over the earth.' Then the LORD came down to see the city and 6 tower which mortal men had built, and he said, 'Here they are, one people 6 with a single language, and now they have started to do this; henceforward 7 nothing they have a mind to do will be beyond their reach. Come, let us 7 go down there and confuse their speech, so that they will not understand 8 what they say to one another.' So the LORD dispersed them from there all 8 over the earth, and they left off building the city. That is why it is called 9 Babel,^f because the LORD there made a babble of the language of all the 9 world; from that place the LORD scattered men all over the face of the earth.

This is the table of the descendants of Shem. Shem was a hundred 10^g years old when he begot Arphaxad, two years after the flood. After the 11 birth of Arphaxad he lived five hundred years, and had other sons and 12 daughters. Arphaxad was thirty-five years old when he begot Shelah. After 12 13 the birth of Shelah he lived four hundred and three years, and had other sons and daughters.

Shelah was thirty years old when he begot Eber. After the birth of Eber he lived four hundred and three years, and had other sons and daughters.

Eber was thirty-four years old when he begot Peleg. After the birth of Peleg he lived four hundred and thirty years, and had other sons and daughters.

Peleg was thirty years old when he begot Reu. After the birth of Reu he lived two hundred and nine years, and had other sons and daughters.

Reu was thirty-two years old when he begot Serug. After the birth of Serug he lived two hundred and seven years, and had other sons and daughters.

Serug was thirty years old when he begot Nahor. After the birth of Nahor he lived two hundred years, and had other sons and daughters.

Nahor was twenty-nine years old when he begot Terah. After the birth of Terah he lived a hundred and nineteen years, and had other sons and daughters.

Terah was seventy years old when he begot Abram, Nahor and Haran.

This is the table of the descendants of Terah. Terah was the father of Abram, Nahor and Haran. Haran was the father of Lot. Haran died in the presence of his father in the land of his birth, Ur of the Chaldees. Abram and Nahor married wives; Abram's wife was called Sarai, and Nahor's Milcah. She was Haran's daughter; and he was also the father of Milcah and of Iscah. Sarai was barren; she had no child. Terah took his son Abram, his grandson Lot the son of Haran, and his daughter-in-law Sarai Abram's wife, and they set out from Ur of the Chaldees for the land of Canaan. But when they reached Harran, they settled there. Terah was two hundred and five years old when he died in Harran.

Abraham and Isaac

THE LORD SAID TO ABRAM, 'Leave your own country, your kinsmen, and your father's house, and go to a country that I will show you. I will make you into a great nation, I will bless you and make your name so great that it shall be used in blessings:

Those that bless you I will bless,
those that curse you, I will execrate.
All the families on earth will pray to be blessed as you are blessed.'

And so Abram set out as the LORD had bidden him, and Lot went with him. Abram was seventy-five years old when he left Harran. He took his wife Sarai, his nephew Lot, all the property they had collected, and all the dependants they had acquired in Harran, and they started on their journey to Canaan. When they arrived, Abram passed through the country to the sanctuary at Shechem, the terebinth-tree of Moreh. At that time the Canaanites lived in this land. There the LORD appeared to Abram and said, 'I give this land to your descendants.' So Abram built an altar there to the LORD who had appeared to him. Thence he went on to the hill-country east of Bethel and pitched his tent between Bethel on the west and Ai on the east. There he built an altar to the LORD and invoked the LORD by name. Thus Abram journeyed by stages towards the Negeb.

There came a famine in the land, so severe that Abram went down to Egypt to live there for a while. When he was approaching Egypt, he said to his wife Sarai, 'I know very well that you are a beautiful woman, and that when the Egyptians see you, they will say, "She is his wife"; then they will kill me but let you live. Tell them that you are my sister, so that all may go well with me because of you and my life may be spared on your account.' When Abram arrived in Egypt, the Egyptians saw that she was indeed very beautiful. Pharaoh's courtiers saw her and praised her to Pharaoh, and she was taken into Pharaoh's household. He treated Abram well because of her, and Abram came to possess sheep and cattle and asses, male and female slaves, she-asses, and camels. But the LORD struck Pharaoh and his household with grave diseases on account of Abram's wife Sarai. Pharaoh summoned Abram and said to him, 'Why have you treated me like this? Why did you not tell me that she is your wife? Why did you say that she was your sister, so that I took her as a wife? Here she is: take her and be gone.' Then Pharaoh gave his men orders, and they sent Abram away with his wife and all that he had.

Abram went up from Egypt into the Negeb, he and his wife and all that he had, and Lot went with him. Abram was now very rich in cattle and in silver and gold. From the Negeb he journeyed by stages to Bethel, to the place between Bethel and Ai where he had pitched his tent in the beginning, where he had set up an altar on the first occasion and had invoked the LORD by name. Now Lot was travelling with Abram, and he too possessed sheep and cattle and tents. The land could not support them both together; for their livestock were so numerous that they could not settle in the same district, and there were quarrels between Abram's herdsmen and Lot's. The Canaanites and the Perizzites were then living in the land. So Abram said to Lot, 'Let there be no quarrelling between us, between my herdsmen and yours; for we are close kinsmen. The whole country is there in front of you; let us part company. If you go left, I will go right; if you go right, I will go left.' Lot looked up and saw how well-watered the whole Plain of the Jordan was; all the way to Zoar it was like the Garden of the LORD, like the land of Egypt. This was before the LORD had destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah. So Lot chose all the Plain of the Jordan and took the road on the east side. Thus they parted company. Abram settled in the land of Canaan; but Lot settled among the cities of the Plain and pitched his tents near Sodom. Now the men of Sodom were wicked, great sinners against the LORD.

After Lot and Abram had parted, the LORD said to Abram, 'Raise your eyes and look into the distance from the place where you are, north and south, east and west. All the land you can see I will give to you and to your descendants for ever. I will make your descendants countless as the dust of the earth; if anyone could count the dust upon the ground, then he could count your descendants. Now go through the length and breadth of the land, for I give it to you.' So Abram moved his tent and settled by the terebinths of Mamre at Hebron; and there he built an altar to the LORD.

14 IT WAS IN THE TIME OF AMRAPHEL king of Shinar, Arioch king of 2 Ellasar, Kedorlaomer king of Elam, and Tidal king of Goyim. They went to war against Bera king of Sodom, Birsha king of Gomorrah, Shinab king of Admah, Shemeber king of Zeboyim, and the king of Bela, that is Zoar.
 3 These kings joined forces in the valley of Siddim, which is now the Dead
 4 Sea. They had been subject to Kedorlaomer for twelve years, but in the 5 thirteenth year they rebelled. Then in the fourteenth year Kedorlaomer and his confederate kings came and defeated the Rephaim in Ashteroth-6 karnaim, the Zuzim in Ham, the Emim in Shaveh-kiriathaim, and the Horites in the hill-country from Seir^a as far as El-paran on the edge of the 7 wilderness. On their way back they came to En-mishpat, which is now Kadesh, and laid waste all the country of the Amalekites and also that of 8 the Amorites who lived in Hazazon-tamar. Then the kings of Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboyim, and Bela, which is now Zoar, marched out 9 and drew up their forces against them in the valley of Siddim, against Kedorlaomer king of Elam, Tidal king of Goyim, Amraphel king of Shinar, 10 and Arioch king of Ellasar, four kings against five. Now the valley of Sid-dim was full of bitumen pits; and when the kings of Sodom and Gomorrah 11 fled, they fell into them, but the rest escaped to the hill-country. The four kings captured all the flocks and herds of Sodom and Gomorrah and all 12 their provisions, and went away. They also carried off Lot, Abram's 13 nephew, who was living in Sodom, and with him his flocks and herds. But a fugitive came and told Abram the Hebrew, who at that time was dwelling 14 by the terebinths of Mamre the Amorite. This Mamre was the brother of Eshcol and Aner, who were allies of Abram. When Abram heard that his 15 kinsman had been taken prisoner, he mustered his retainers, men born in his household, three hundred and eighteen of them, and pursued as far as 16 Dan. Abram and his followers surrounded the enemy by night, attacked them and pursued them as far as Hobah, north of Damascus; he then 17 brought back all the flocks and herds and also his kinsman Lot with his flocks and herds, together with the women and the other captives. On his return from this defeat of Kedorlaomer and his confederate kings, the king of Sodom came out to meet him in the valley of Shaveh, which is now the King's Valley.

18 Then Melchizedek king of Salem brought food and wine. He was priest 19 of God Most High, and he pronounced this blessing on Abram:

'Blessed be Abram
 by God Most High,
 creator^b of heaven and earth.
 20 And blessed be God Most High,
 who has delivered your enemies into your power.'

Abram gave him a tithe of all the booty.

21 The king of Sodom said to Abram, 'Give me the people, and you can take the property'; but Abram said to the king of Sodom, 'I lift my hand and swear by the LORD, God Most High, creator of heaven and earth: not a thread or a shoe-string will I accept of anything that is yours. You shall never say, "I made Abram rich." I will accept nothing but what the young men have eaten and the share of the men who went with me. Aner, Eshcol, and Mamre shall have their share.'

AFTER THIS the word of the LORD came to Abram in a vision. He said, 'Do not be afraid, Abram, I am giving you a very great reward.'^a Abram replied, 'Lord GOD, what canst thou give me? I have no standing among men, for the heir to my household is Eliezer of Damascus.' Abram continued, 'Thou hast given me no children, and so my heir must be a slave born in my house.' Then came the word of the LORD to him: 'This man shall not be your heir; your heir shall be a child of your own body.' He took Abram outside and said, 'Look up into the sky, and count the stars if you can. So many', he said, 'shall your descendants be.'

Abram put his faith in the LORD, and the LORD counted that faith to him as righteousness; he said to him, 'I am the LORD who brought you out from Ur of the Chaldees to give you this land to occupy.' Abram said, 'O Lord GOD, how can I be sure that I shall occupy it?' The LORD answered, 'Bring me a heifer three years old, a she-goat three years old, a ram three years old, a turtle-dove, and a fledgling.' He brought him all these, halved the animals down the middle and placed each piece opposite its corresponding piece, but he did not halve the birds. When the birds of prey swooped down on the carcasses, Abram scared them away. Then, as the sun was going down, a trance came over Abram and great fear came upon him. The LORD said to Abram, 'Know this for certain, that your descendants will be aliens living in a land that is not theirs; they will be slaves, and will be held in oppression there for four hundred years. But I will punish that nation whose slaves they are, and after that they shall come out with great possessions. You yourself shall join your fathers in peace and be buried in a good old age; and the fourth generation shall return here, for the Amorites will not be ripe for punishment till then.' The sun went down and it was dusk, and there appeared a smoking brazier and a flaming torch passing between the divided pieces. That very day the LORD made a covenant with Abram, and he said, 'To your descendants I give this land from the River of Egypt to the Great River, the river Euphrates, the territory of the Kenites, Kenizzites, Kadmonites, Hittites, Perizzites, Rephaim, Amorites, Canaanites, Girgashites, Hivites, and Jebusites.'

Abram's wife Sarai had borne him no children. Now she had an Egyptian slave-girl whose name was Hagar, and she said to Abram, 'You see that the LORD has not allowed me to bear a child. Take my slave-girl; perhaps I shall found a family through her.' Abram agreed to what his wife said; so Sarai, Abram's wife, brought her slave-girl, Hagar the Egyptian, and gave her to her husband Abram as a wife.^b When this happened Abram had been in Canaan for ten years. He lay with Hagar and she conceived; and when she knew that she was with child, she despised her 5 mistress. Sarai said to Abram, 'I have been wronged and you must answer for it. It was I who gave my slave-girl into your arms, but since she has known that she is with child, she has despised me. May the LORD see justice 6 done between you and me.' Abram replied to Sarai, 'Your slave-girl is in your hands; deal with her as you will.' So Sarai ill-treated her and she ran away.

7 The angel of the LORD found her by a spring of water in the wilderness
 8 on the way to Shur, and he said, 'Hagar, Sarai's slave-girl, where have you come from and where are you going?' She answered, 'I am running away 9 from Sarai my mistress.' The angel of the LORD said to her, 'Go back to 10 your mistress and submit to her ill-treatment.' The angel also said, 'I will 11 make your descendants too many to be counted.' And the angel of the LORD said to her:

'You are with child and will bear a son.
 You shall name him Ishmael,^a because the LORD has heard of your ill-treatment.
 12 He shall be a man like the wild ass,
 his hand against every man and every man's hand against him;
 and he shall live at odds with^b all his kinsmen.'

13 She called the LORD who was speaking to her by the name El-Roi,^c for 14 she said, 'Have I indeed seen God and still live^d after that vision?' That is why men call the well Beer-lahai-roi;^e it lies between Kadesh and Bered.
 15 Hagar bore Abram a son, and he named the child she bore him Ishmael.
 16 Abram was eighty-six years old when Hagar bore Ishmael.

17 When Abram was ninety-nine years old, the LORD appeared to him and 2 said, 'I am God Almighty. Live always in my presence and be perfect, so that I may set my covenant between myself and you and multiply your 3 descendants.' Abram threw himself down on his face, and God spoke with 4 him and said, 'I make this covenant, and I make it with you: you shall be 5 the father of a host of nations. Your name shall no longer be Abram,^f your 6 name shall be Abraham,^g for I make you father of a host of nations. I will make you exceedingly fruitful; I will make nations out of you, and kings 7 shall spring from you. I will fulfil my covenant between myself and you and your descendants after you, generation after generation, an everlasting 8 covenant, to be your God, yours and your descendants' after you. As an everlasting possession I will give you and your descendants after you the land in which you now are aliens, all the land of Canaan, and I will be God to your descendants.'

9 God said to Abraham, 'For your part, you must keep my covenant, you 10 and your descendants after you, generation by generation. This is how you shall keep my covenant between myself and you and your descend-11 ants after you: circumcise yourselves, every male among you. You shall circumcise the flesh of your foreskin, and it shall be the sign of the covenant between us. Every male among you in every generation shall be circumcised on the eighth day, both those born in your house and any foreigner, not of your blood but bought with your money. Circumcise both those born in your house and those bought with your money; thus shall my covenant be marked in your flesh as an everlasting covenant. Every uncircumcised male, everyone who has not had the flesh of his foreskin circumcised, shall be cut off from the kin of his father. He has broken my covenant.⁷

God said to Abraham, 'As for Sarai your wife; you shall call her not Sarai,^a but Sarah.^b I will bless her and give you a son by her. I will bless her and she shall be the mother of nations; the kings of many people shall spring from her.' Abraham threw himself down on his face; he laughed and said to himself, 'Can a son be born to a man who is a hundred years old? Can Sarah bear a son when she is ninety?' He said to God, 'If only Ishmael might live under thy special care!' But God replied, 'No. Your wife Sarah shall bear you a son, and you shall call him Isaac.^c With him I will fulfil my covenant, an everlasting covenant with his descendants after him. I have heard your prayer for Ishmael. I have blessed him and will make him fruitful. I will multiply his descendants; he shall be father of twelve princes, and I will raise a great nation from him. But my covenant I will fulfil with Isaac, whom Sarah will bear to you at this season next year.' When he had finished talking with Abraham, God ascended and left him.

Then Abraham took Ishmael his son, everyone who had been born in his household and everyone bought with money, every male in his household, and he circumcised them that very same day in the flesh of their foreskins as God had told him to do. Abraham was ninety-nine years old when he circumcised the flesh of his foreskin. Ishmael was thirteen years old when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin. Both Abraham and Ishmael were circumcised on the same day, and all the men of his household, born in the house or bought with money from foreigners, were circumcised with him.

THE LORD APPEARED TO ABRAHAM by the terebinths of Mamre. As Abraham was sitting at the opening of his tent in the heat of the day, he looked up and saw three men standing in front of him. When he saw them, he ran from the opening of his tent to meet them and bowed low to the ground. 'Sirs,' he said, 'if I have deserved your favour, do not pass by my humble self without a visit. Let me send for some water so that you may wash your feet and rest under a tree; and let me fetch a little food so that you may refresh yourselves. Afterwards you may continue the journey which has brought you my way.' They said, 'Do by all means as you say.' So Abraham hurried into the tent to Sarah and said, 'Take three measures of flour quickly, knead it and make some cakes.' Then Abraham ran to the cattle, chose a fine tender calf and gave it to a servant, who hurriedly prepared it. He took curds and milk and the calf he had prepared, set it before them, and waited on them himself under the tree while they ate. They

10 asked him where Sarah his wife was, and he said, 'There, in the tent.' The stranger said, 'About this time next year I will be sure to come back to you, and Sarah your wife shall have a son.' Now Sarah was listening at the opening of the tent, and he was close beside it. Both Abraham and Sarah had grown very old, and Sarah was past the age of child-bearing. So Sarah laughed to herself and said, 'I am past bearing children now that I am out of my time, and my husband is old.' The LORD said to Abraham, 'Why did Sarah laugh and say, "Shall I indeed bear a child when I am old?" Is anything impossible for the LORD? In due season I will come back to you, about this time next year, and Sarah shall have a son.' Sarah lied because she was frightened, and denied that she had laughed; but he said, 'Yes, you did laugh.'

16 The men set out and looked down towards Sodom, and Abraham went with them to start them on their way. The LORD thought to himself, 'Shall I conceal from Abraham what I intend to do? He will become a great and powerful nation, and all nations on earth will pray to be blessed as he is blessed. I have taken care of him on purpose that he may charge his sons and family after him to conform to the way of the LORD and to do what is right and just; thus I shall fulfil all that I have promised for him.' So the LORD said, 'There is a great outcry over Sodom and Gomorrah; their sin is very grave. I must go down and see whether their deeds warrant the outcry which has reached me. I am resolved to know the truth.' When the men turned and went towards Sodom, Abraham remained standing before the LORD. Abraham drew near him and said, 'Wilt thou really sweep away good and bad together? Suppose there are fifty good men in the city; wilt thou really sweep it away, and not pardon the place because of the fifty good men? Far be it from thee to do this—to kill good and bad together; for then the good would suffer with the bad. Far be it from thee. Shall not the judge of all the earth do what is just?' The LORD said, 'If I find in the city of Sodom fifty good men, I will pardon the whole place for their sake.' Abraham replied, 'May I presume to speak to the Lord, dust and ashes that I am: suppose there are five short of the fifty good men? Wilt thou destroy the whole city for a mere five men?' He said, 'If I find forty-five there I will not destroy it.' Abraham spoke again, 'Suppose forty can be found there?'; and he said, 'For the sake of the forty I will not do it.' Then Abraham said, 'Please do not be angry, O Lord, if I speak again: suppose thirty can be found there?' He answered, 'If I find thirty there I will not do it.' Abraham continued, 'May I presume to speak to the Lord: suppose twenty can be found there?' He replied, 'For the sake of the twenty I will not destroy it.' Abraham said, 'I pray thee not to be angry, O Lord, if I speak just once more: suppose ten can be found there?' He said, 'For the sake of the ten I will not destroy it.' When the LORD had finished talking with Abraham, he left him, and Abraham returned home.

19 The two angels came to Sodom in the evening, and Lot was sitting in the gateway of the city. When he saw them he rose to meet them and bowed low with his face to the ground. He said, 'I pray you, sirs, turn aside to my humble home, spend the night there and wash your feet; you can rise early and continue your journey.' 'No,' they answered, 'we will spend the night in the street.' But Lot was so insistent that they did turn aside and enter his house. He prepared a meal for them, baking unleavened cakes, and they ate them. Before they lay down to sleep, the men of Sodom, both young and old, surrounded the house—everyone without exception. They called to Lot and asked him where the men were who had entered his house that night. 'Bring them out', they shouted, 'so that we can have intercourse with them.'

Lot went out into the doorway to them, closed the door behind him and said, 'No, my friends, do not be so wicked. Look, I have two daughters, both virgins; let me bring them out to you, and you can do what you like with them; but do not touch these men, because they have come under the shelter of my roof.' They said, 'Out of our way! This man has come and settled here as an alien, and does he now take it upon himself to judge us? We will treat you worse than them.' They crowded in on the man Lot and pressed close to smash in the door. But the two men inside reached out, pulled Lot in, and closed the door. Then they struck the men in the doorway with blindness, both small and great, so that they could not find the door.

The two men said to Lot, 'Have you anyone else here, sons-in-law, sons, or daughters, or any who belong to you in the city? Get them out of this place, because we are going to destroy it. The outcry against it has been so great that the LORD has sent us to destroy it.' So Lot went out and spoke to his intended sons-in-law.^a He said, 'Be quick and leave this place; the LORD is going to destroy the city.' But they did not take him seriously.

As soon as it was dawn, the angels urged Lot to go, saying, 'Be quick, take your wife and your two daughters who are here, or you will be swept away when the city is punished.' When he lingered, they took him by the hand, with his wife and his daughters, and, because the LORD had spared him, led him on until he was outside the city. When they had brought them out, they said, 'Flee for your lives; do not look back and do not stop anywhere in the Plain. Flee to the hills or you will be swept away.' Lot replied, 'No, sirs. You have shown your servant favour and you have added to your unfailing care for me by saving my life, but I cannot escape to the hills; I shall be overtaken by the disaster, and die. Look, here is a town, only a small place, near enough for me to reach quickly. Let me escape to it—it is very small—and save my life.' He said to him, 'I grant your request: I will not overthrow this town you speak of. But flee there quickly, because I can do nothing until you are there.' That is why the place was called Zoar.^b The sun had risen over the land as Lot entered Zoar; and then the LORD rained down fire and brimstone from the skies on Sodom and Gomorrah. He overthrew those cities and destroyed all the Plain, with everyone living there and everything growing in the ground. But Lot's wife, behind him, looked back, and she turned into a pillar of salt.

Next morning Abraham rose early and went to the place where he had stood in the presence of the LORD. He looked down towards Sodom and Gomorrah and all the wide extent of the Plain, and there he saw thick smoke rising high from the earth like the smoke of a lime-kiln. Thus, when God destroyed the cities of the Plain, he thought of Abraham and rescued Lot from the disaster, the overthrow of the cities where he had been living.

- 30 Lot went up from Zoar and settled in the hill-country with his two daughters, because he was afraid to stay in Zoar; he lived with his two 31 daughters in a cave. The elder daughter said to the younger, 'Our father is old and there is not a man in the country to come to us in the usual way.
32 Come now, let us make our father drink wine and then lie with him and in this way keep the family alive through our father.' So that night they gave 33 him wine to drink, and the elder daughter came and lay with him, and he did not know when she lay down and when she got up. Next day the elder
34 said to the younger, 'Last night I lay with my father. Let us give him wine to drink again tonight; then you go in and lie with him. So we shall keep 35 the family alive through our father.' So they gave their father wine to drink again that night, and the younger daughter went and lay with him, and he
36 did not know when she lay down and when she got up. In this way both Lot's daughters came to be with child by their father. The elder daughter 37 bore a son and called him Moab; he was the ancestor of the present Moabites. The younger also bore a son, whom she called Ben-ammi; he was the 38 ancestor of the present Ammonites.

- 20 ABRAHAM JOURNEYED BY STAGES from there into the Negeb, and 2 settled between Kadesh and Shur, living as an alien in Gerar. He said that Sarah his wife was his sister, and Abimelech king of Gerar sent and took
3 her. But God came to Abimelech in a dream by night and said, 'You shall die because of this woman whom you have taken. She is a married woman.'
4 Now Abimelech had not gone near her; and he said, 'Lord, wilt thou destroy an innocent people? Did he not tell me himself that she was his sister,
5 and she herself said that he was her brother. It was with a clear conscience and in all innocence that I did this.' God said to him in the dream, 'Yes:
6 I know that you acted with a clear conscience. Moreover, it was I who held you back from committing a sin against me: that is why I did not let you
7 touch her. Send back the man's wife now; he is a prophet, and he will intercede on your behalf, and you shall live. But if you do not send her back,
8 I tell you that you are doomed to die, you and all that is yours.' So Abimelech rose early in the morning, summoned all his servants and told them
9 the whole story; the men were terrified. Abimelech then summoned Abraham and said to him, 'Why have you treated us like this? What harm
10 have I done to you that you should bring this great sin on me and my kingdom? You have done a thing that ought not to be done.' And he asked
11 Abraham, 'What was your purpose in doing this?' Abraham answered, 'I said to myself, There can be no fear of God in this place, and they will kill 12 me for the sake of my wife. She is in fact my sister, she is my father's daughter though not by the same mother; and she became my wife. When 13 God set me wandering from my father's house, I said to her, "There is a duty towards me which you must loyally fulfil: wherever we go, you must 14 say that I am your brother."' Then Abimelech took sheep and cattle, and male and female slaves, gave them to Abraham, and returned his wife 15 Sarah to him. Abimelech said, 'My country lies before you; settle wherever you please.' To Sarah he said, 'I have given your brother a thousand pieces 16 of silver, so that your own people may turn a blind eye on it all, and you will be completely vindicated.' Then Abraham interceded with God, and God 17 healed Abimelech, his wife, and his slave-girls, and they bore children; for 18

the LORD had made every woman in Abimelech's household barren on account of Abraham's wife Sarah.

The LORD showed favour to Sarah as he had promised, and made good 21 what he had said about her. She conceived and bore a son to Abraham for his old age, at the time which God had appointed. The son whom Sarah 2 bore to him, Abraham named Isaac.^a When Isaac was eight days old 3 Abraham circumcised him, as God had commanded. Abraham was 4 a hundred years old when his son Isaac was born. Sarah said, 'God has given 5 me good reason to laugh, and everybody who hears will laugh with me.' 6
She said, 'Whoever would have told Abraham that Sarah would suckle 7 children? Yet I have borne him a son for his old age.' The boy grew and 8 was weaned, and on the day of his weaning Abraham gave a feast. Sarah 9 saw the son whom Hagar the Egyptian had borne to Abraham laughing at him, and she said to Abraham, 'Drive out this slave-girl and her son; I 10 will not have this slave-girl's son sharing the inheritance with my son Isaac.' Abraham was vexed at this on his son Ishmael's account, but God 11 12 said to him, 'Do not be vexed on account of the boy and the slave-girl. Do what Sarah says, because you shall have descendants through Isaac. I will 13 make a great nation of the slave-girl's son too, because he is your own child.'

Abraham rose early in the morning, took some food and a waterskin full 14 of water and gave it to Hagar; he set the child on her shoulder and sent her away, and she went and wandered in the wilderness of Beersheba. When 15 the water in the skin was finished, she thrust the child under a bush, and 16 went and sat down some way off, about two bowshots away, for she said,
'How can I watch the child die?' So she sat some way off, weeping bitterly.
God heard the child crying, and the ^b angel of God called from heaven to 17 Hagar, 'What is the matter, Hagar? Do not be afraid: God has heard the child crying where you laid him. Get to your feet, lift the child up and hold 18 him in your arms, because I will make of him a great nation.' Then God 19 opened her eyes and she saw a well full of water; she went to it, filled her waterskin and gave the child a drink. God was with the child, and he grew 20-21 up and lived in the wilderness of Paran. He became an archer, and his mother found him a wife from Egypt.

Now about that time Abimelech, with Phicol the commander of his army, 22 addressed Abraham in these terms: 'God is with you in all that you do. Now 23 swear an oath to me in the name of God, that you will not break faith with me, my offspring, or my descendants. As I have kept faith with you, so shall you keep faith with me and with the country where you have come to live as an alien.' Abraham said, 'I swear.' It happened that Abraham had 24 25 a complaint against Abimelech about a well which Abimelech's men had seized. Abimelech said, 'I do not know who did this. You never told me, and I have heard nothing about it till now.' So Abraham took sheep and 26 cattle and gave them to Abimelech; and the two of them made a pact. 28 29 Abraham set seven ewe-lambs apart, and when Abimelech asked him why 30 he had set these lambs apart, he said, 'Accept these from me in token that 31 I dug this well.' Therefore that place was called Beersheba,^a because there 32 the two of them swore an oath. When they had made the pact at Beersheba, Abimelech and Phicol the commander of his army returned at once to the 33 country of the Philistines, and Abraham planted a strip of ground^b at 34 Beersheba. There he invoked the LORD, the everlasting God, by name, and he lived as an alien in the country of the Philistines for many a year.

22 THE TIME CAME when God put Abraham to the test. 'Abraham', he 2 called, and Abraham replied, 'Here I am.' God said, 'Take your son Isaac, your only son, whom you love, and go to the land of Moriah. There you 3 shall offer him as a sacrifice on one of the hills which I will show you.' So Abraham rose early in the morning and saddled his ass, and he took with 4 him two of his men and his son Isaac; and he split the firewood for the sacrifice, and set out for the place of which God had spoken. On the third day 5 Abraham looked up and saw the place in the distance. He said to his men, 'Stay here with the ass while I and the boy go over there; and when we have 6 worshipped we will come back to you.' So Abraham took the wood for the sacrifice and laid it on his son Isaac's shoulder; he himself carried the fire 7 and the knife, and the two of them went on together. Isaac said to Abraham, 'Father', and he answered, 'What is it, my son?' Isaac said, 'Here are the 8 fire and the wood, but where is the young beast for the sacrifice?' Abraham answered, 'God will provide himself with a young beast for a sacrifice, my 9 son.' And the two of them went on together and came to the place of which God had spoken. There Abraham built an altar and arranged the wood. 10 He bound his son Isaac and laid him on the altar on top of the wood. Then 11 he stretched out his hand and took the knife to kill his son; but the angel of the LORD called to him from heaven, 'Abraham, Abraham.' He answered, 12 'Here I am.' The angel of the LORD said, 'Do not raise your hand against the boy; do not touch him. Now I know that you are a God-fearing man. 13 You have not withheld from me your son, your only son.' Abraham looked up, and there he saw a ram caught by its horns in a thicket. So he went and 14 took the ram and offered it as a sacrifice instead of his son. Abraham named that place Jehovah-jireh;^c and to this day the saying is: 'In the mountain of 15 the LORD it was provided.' Then the angel of the LORD called from heaven a second time to Abraham, 'This is the word of the LORD: By my own self 16 I swear: inasmuch as you have done this and have not withheld your son, 17 your only son, I will bless you abundantly and greatly multiply your descendants until they are as numerous as the stars in the sky and the grains of sand on the sea-shore. Your descendants shall possess the cities of their 18 enemies. All nations on earth shall pray to be blessed as your descendants are blessed, and this because you have obeyed me.'

19 Abraham went back to his men, and together they returned to Beersheba; and there Abraham remained.

After this Abraham was told, 'Milcah has borne sons to your brother Nahor: Uz his first-born, then his brother Buz, and Kemuel father of Aram, and Kesed, Hazo, Pildash, Jidlah and Bethuel; and a daughter, Rebecca, has been born to Bethuel.' These eight Milcah bore to Abraham's brother Nahor. His concubine, whose name was Reumah, also bore him sons: Tebah, Gaham, Tahash and Maacah.

Sarah lived for a hundred and twenty-seven years, and died in Kiriath-arba, which is Hebron, in Canaan. Abraham went in to mourn over Sarah and to weep for her. At last he rose and left the presence of the dead. He said to the Hittites, 'I am an alien and a settler among you. Give me land enough for a burial-place, so that I can give my dead proper burial.' The Hittites answered Abraham, 'Do, pray, listen to what we have to say, sir. You are a mighty prince among us. Bury your dead in the best grave we have. There is not one of us who will deny you his grave or hinder you from burying your dead.' Abraham stood up and then bowed low to the Hittites, the people of that country. He said to them, 'If you are willing to let me give my dead proper burial, then listen to me and speak for me to Ephron son of Zohar, asking him to give me the cave that belongs to him at Machpelah, at the far end of his land. Let him give it to me for the full price, so that I may take possession of it as a burial-place within your territory.' Ephron the Hittite was sitting with the others, and he gave Abraham this answer in the hearing of everyone as they came into the city gate: 'No, sir; hear what I have to say. I will make you a gift of the land and I will also give you the cave which is on it. In the presence of all my kinsmen I give it to you; so bury your dead.' Abraham bowed low before the people of the country and said to Ephron in their hearing, 'If you really mean it—but do listen to me! I give you the price of the land: take it and I will bury my dead there.' And Ephron answered, 'Do listen to me, sir: the land is worth four hundred shekels of silver. But what is that between you and me? There you may bury your dead.' Abraham came to an agreement with him and weighed out the amount that Ephron had named in the hearing of the Hittites, four hundred shekels of the standard recognized by merchants. Thus the plot of land belonging to Ephron at Machpelah to the east of Mamre, the plot, the cave that is on it, every tree on the plot, within the whole area, became the legal possession of Abraham, in the presence of all the Hittites as they came into the city gate. After this Abraham buried his wife Sarah in the cave on the plot of land at Machpelah to the east of Mamre, which is Hebron, in Canaan. Thus the plot and the cave on it became Abraham's possession as a burial-place, by purchase from the Hittites.

By this time Abraham had become a very old man, and the LORD had blessed him in all that he did. Abraham said to his servant, who had been long in his service and was in charge of all his possessions, 'Put your hand under my thigh: I want you to swear by the LORD, the God of heaven and earth, that you will not take a wife for my son from the women of the Canaanites in whose land I dwell; you must go to my own country and to my own kindred to find a wife for my son Isaac.' The servant said to him, 'What if the woman is unwilling to come with me to this country? Must I

6 in that event take your son back to the land from which you came?' Abraham 7 said to him, 'On no account are you to take my son back there. The LORD the God of heaven who took me from my father's house and the land of my birth, the LORD who swore to me that he would give this land to my 8 descendants—he will send his angel before you, and from there you shall take a wife for my son. If the woman is unwilling to come with you, then 9 you will be released from your oath to me; but you must not take my son back there.' So the servant put his hand under his master Abraham's thigh and swore an oath in those terms.

10 The servant took ten camels from his master's herds, and also all kinds of gifts from his master; he set out for Aram-naharaim^a and arrived at the 11 city where Nahor lived. Towards evening, the time when the women come out to draw water, he made the camels kneel down by the well outside the 12 city. He said, 'O LORD God of my master Abraham, give me good fortune 13 this day; keep faith with my master Abraham. Here I stand by the spring, 14 and the women of the city are coming out to draw water. Let it be like this:
I shall say to a girl, "Please lower your jar so that I may drink"; and if she answers, "Drink, and I will water your camels also", that will be the girl whom thou dost intend for thy servant Isaac. In this way I shall know that thou hast kept faith with my master.'

15 Before he had finished praying silently, he saw Rebecca coming out with her water-jug on her shoulder. She was the daughter of Bethuel son of 16 Milcah, the wife of Abraham's brother Nahor. The girl was very beautiful, a virgin, who had had no intercourse with a man. She went down to the 17 spring, filled her jar and came up again. Abraham's servant hurried to meet her and said, 'Give me a sip of water from your jar.' 'Drink, sir', she 18 answered, and at once lowered her jar on to her hand to let him drink.
19 When she had finished giving him a drink, she said, 'Now I will draw water 20 for your camels until they have had enough.' So she quickly emptied her jar into the water-trough, hurried again to the well to draw water and 21 watered all the camels. The man was watching quietly to see whether or not 22 the LORD had made his journey successful. When the camels had finished drinking, the man took a gold nose-ring weighing half a shekel, and two 23 bracelets for her wrists weighing ten shekels, also of gold, and said, 'Tell me, please, whose daughter you are. Is there room in your father's house for 24 us to spend the night?' She answered, 'I am the daughter of Bethuel, the 25 son of Nahor and Milcah; and we have plenty of straw and fodder and also 26 room for you to spend the night.' So the man bowed down and prostrated 27 himself to the LORD. He said, 'Blessed be the LORD the God of my master Abraham, who has not failed to keep faith and truth with my master; for
I have been guided by the LORD to the house of my master's kinsman.'

28 The girl ran to her mother's house and told them what had happened.
30 Now Rebecca had a brother named Laban; and, when he saw the nose-ring, and also the bracelets on his sister's wrists, and heard his sister Rebecca tell what the man had said to her, he ran out to the man at the spring. When he came to him and found him still standing there by the 31 camels, he said, 'Come in, sir, whom the LORD has blessed. Why stay

outside? I have prepared the house, and there is room for the camels.' So he brought the man into the house, unloaded the camels and provided straw and fodder for them, and water for him and all his men to wash their feet. Food was set before him, but he said, 'I will not eat until I have delivered my message.' Laban said, 'Let us hear it.' He answered, 'I am the servant of Abraham. The LORD has greatly blessed my master, and he has become a man of power. The LORD has given him flocks and herds, silver and gold, male and female slaves, camels and asses. My master's wife Sarah in her old age bore him a son, to whom he has given all that he has. So my master made me swear an oath, saying, "You shall not take a wife for my son from the women of the Canaanites in whose land I dwell; but you shall go to my father's house and to my family to find a wife for him." So I said to my master, "What if the woman will not come with me?" He answered, "The LORD, in whose presence I have lived, will send his angel with you and will make your journey successful. You shall take a wife for my son from my family and from my father's house; then you shall be released from the charge I have laid upon you. But if, when you come to my family, they will not give her to you, you shall still be released from the charge." So I came to the spring today, and I said, "O LORD God of my master Abraham, if thou wilt make my journey successful, let it be like this. Here I stand by the spring. When a young woman comes out to draw water, I shall say to her, 'Give me a little water to drink from your jar.' If she answers, 'Yes, do drink, and I will draw water for your camels as well', she is the woman whom the LORD intends for my master's son." Before I had finished praying silently, I saw Rebecca coming out with her water-jar on her shoulder. She went down to the spring and drew some water, and I said to her, "Please give me a drink." She quickly lowered her jar from her shoulder and said, "Drink; and I will water your camels as well." So I drank, and she also gave my camels water. I asked her whose daughter she was, and she said, "I am the daughter of Bethuel, the son of Nahor and Milcah." Then I put the ring in her nose and the bracelets on her wrists, and I bowed low and prostrated myself before the LORD. I blessed the LORD the God of my master Abraham, who had led me by the right road to take my master's niece for his son. Now tell me if you will keep faith and truth with my master. If not, say so, and I will turn elsewhere.'

Laban and Bethuel answered, 'This is from the LORD; we can say nothing for or against. Here is Rebecca herself; take her and go. She shall be the wife of your master's son, as the LORD has decreed.' When Abraham's servant heard what they said, he prostrated himself on the ground before the LORD. Then he brought out gold and silver ornaments, and robes, and gave them to Rebecca, and he gave costly gifts to her brother and her mother. He and his men then ate and drank and spent the night there. When they rose in the morning, he said, 'Give me leave to go back to my master.' Her brother and her mother said, 'Let the girl stay with us for a few days, say ten days, and then she shall go.' But he said to them, 'Do not detain me, for the LORD has granted me success. Give me leave to return to my master.' They said, 'Let us call the girl and see what she says.' They called Rebecca and asked her if she would go with the man, and she said, 59 'Yes, I will go.' So they let their sister Rebecca and her nurse go with 60 Abraham's servant and his men. They blessed Rebecca and said to her:

'You are our sister, may you be the mother of myriads;
may your sons possess the cities of their enemies.'

61 Then Rebecca and her companions mounted their camels at once and followed the man. So the servant took Rebecca and went his way.

62 Isaac meanwhile had moved on as far as Beer-lahai-roi and was living in 63 the Negeb. One evening when he had gone out into the open country hoping 64 to meet them,^a he looked up and saw camels approaching. When Rebecca 65 raised her eyes and saw Isaac, she slipped hastily from her camel, saying to the servant, 'Who is that man walking across the open towards us?' The 66 67 servant answered, 'It is my master.' So she took her veil and covered herself. The servant related to Isaac all that had happened. Isaac conducted her into the tent^b and took her as his wife. So she became his wife, and he loved her and was consoled for the death of his mother.

5 1^c 2 ABRAHAM MARRIED ANOTHER WIFE, whose name was Keturah. She 3 bore him Zimran, Jokshan, Medan, Midian, Ishbak and Shuah. Jokshan became the father of Sheba and Dedan. The sons of Dedan were Asshurim, 4 Letushim and Leummim, and the sons of Midian were Ephah, Epher, Enoch, Abida and Eldaah. All these were descendants of Keturah.

5 6 Abraham had given all that he had to Isaac; and he had already in his lifetime given presents to the sons of his concubines, and had sent them 7 away eastwards, to a land of the east, out of his son Isaac's way. Abraham 8 had lived for a hundred and seventy-five years when he breathed his last.
He died at a good old age, after a very long life, and was gathered to his 9 father's kin. His sons, Isaac and Ishmael, buried him in the cave at Mach-10 pelah, on the land of Ephron son of Zohar the Hittite, east of Mamre, the plot which Abraham had bought from the Hittites. There Abraham was 11 buried with his wife Sarah. After the death of Abraham, God blessed his son Isaac, who settled close by Beer-lahai-roi.

12 This is the table of the descendants of Abraham's son Ishmael, whom 13^d Hagar the Egyptian, Sarah's slave-girl, bore to him. These are the names of the sons of Ishmael named in order of their birth: Nebaioth, Ishmael's 14 15 eldest son, then Kedar, Adbeel, Mibsam, Mishma, Dumah, Massa, Hadad, 16 Teman, Jetur, Naphish and Kedemah. These are the sons of Ishmael, after whom their hamlets and encampments were named, twelve princes 17 according to their tribal groups. Ishmael had lived for a hundred and thirty-seven years when he breathed his last. So he died and was gathered to his 18 father's kin. Ishmael's sons inhabited the land from Havilah to Shur, which is east of Egypt on the way to Asshur, having settled to the east of his brothers.

19 THIS IS THE TABLE of the descendants of Abraham's son Isaac. Isaac's 20 father was Abraham. When Isaac was forty years old he married Rebecca the daughter of Bethuel the Aramaean from Paddan-aram and the sister of Laban the Aramaean. Isaac appealed to the LORD on behalf of his wife because she was barren; the LORD yielded to his entreaty, and Rebecca conceived. The children pressed hard on each other in her womb, and she said, 'If this is how it is with me, what does it mean?' So she went to seek guidance of the LORD. The LORD said to her:

'Two nations in your womb,
two peoples, going their own ways from birth!
One shall be stronger than the other;
the older shall be servant to the younger.'

When her time had come, there were indeed twins in her womb. The first came out red, hairy all over like a hair-cloak, and they named him Esau.^a Immediately afterwards his brother was born with his hand grasping Esau's heel, and they called him Jacob.^b Isaac was sixty years old when they were born. The boys grew up; and Esau became skilful in hunting, a man of the open plains, but Jacob led a settled life and stayed among the tents. Isaac favoured Esau because he kept him supplied with venison, but Rebecca favoured Jacob. One day Jacob prepared a broth and when Esau came in from the country, exhausted, he said to Jacob, 'I am exhausted; let me swallow some of that red broth': this is why he was called Edom.^c Jacob said, 'Not till you sell me your rights as the first-born.' Esau replied, 'I am at death's door; what use is my birthright to me?' Jacob said, 'Not till you swear!'; so he swore an oath and sold his birthright to Jacob. Then Jacob gave Esau bread and the lentil broth, and he ate and drank and went away without more ado. Thus Esau showed how little he valued his birthright.

There came a famine in the land—not the earlier famine in Abraham's time—and Isaac went to Abimelech the Philistine king at Gerar. The LORD appeared to Isaac and said, 'Do not go down to Egypt, but stay in this country as I bid you. Stay in this country and I will be with you and bless you, for to you and to your descendants I will give all these lands. Thus shall I fulfil the oath which I swore to your father Abraham. I will make your descendants as many as the stars in the sky; I will give them all these lands, and all the nations of the earth will pray to be blessed as they are blessed—all because Abraham obeyed me and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws.' So Isaac lived in Gerar.

When the men of the place asked him about his wife, he told them that she was his sister; he was afraid to say that Rebecca was his wife, in case they killed him because of her; for she was very beautiful. When they had been there for some considerable time, Abimelech the Philistine king looked down from his window and saw Isaac and his wife Rebecca laughing together. He summoned Isaac and said, 'So she is your wife, is she? What made you say she was your sister?' Isaac answered, 'I thought I should be killed because of her.' Abimelech said, 'Why have you treated us like this? One of the people might easily have gone to bed with your wife, and then you would have made us liable to retribution.' So Abimelech warned all the people, threatening that whoever touched this man or his wife would be put to death.

12 Isaac sowed seed in that land, and that year he reaped a hundredfold, 13 and the LORD blessed him. He became more and more powerful, until he 14 was very powerful indeed. He had flocks and herds and many slaves, so 15 that the Philistines were envious of him. They had stopped up all the wells dug by the slaves in the days of Isaac's father Abraham, and filled them with 18 earth. Isaac dug them again, all those wells dug in his father Abraham's time, and stopped up by the Philistines after his death, and he called them by the names which his father had given them.

16 Then Abimelech said to him, 'Go away from here; you are too strong for 17 us.' So Isaac left that place and encamped in the valley of Gerar, and stayed 19^a there. Then Isaac's slaves dug in the valley and found a spring of running 20 water, but the shepherds of Gerar quarrelled with Isaac's shepherds, claiming the water as theirs. He called the well Esek,^b because they made diffi-21 culties for him. His men then dug another well, but the others quarrelled 22 with him over that also, so he called it Sitnah.^c He moved on from there and dug another well, but there was no quarrel over that one, so he called it Rehoboth,^d saying, 'Now the LORD has given us plenty of room and we shall be fruitful in the land.'

23 24 Isaac went up country from there to Beersheba. That same night the LORD appeared to him there and said, 'I am the God of your father Abraham. Fear nothing, for I am with you. I will bless you and give you many 25 descendants for the sake of Abraham my servant.' So Isaac built an altar there and invoked the LORD by name. Then he pitched his tent there, and 26 there also his slaves dug a well. Abimelech came to him from Gerar with 27 Ahuzzath his friend and Phicol the commander of his army. Isaac said to them, 'Why have you come here? You hate me and you sent me away.' 28 They answered, 'We have seen plainly that the LORD is with you, so we thought, "Let the two of us put each other to the oath and make a treaty 29 that will bind us." We have not attacked you, we have done you nothing but good, and we let you go away peaceably. Swear that you will do us no 30 harm, now that the LORD has blessed you.' So Isaac gave a feast and they 31 ate and drank. They rose early in the morning and exchanged oaths. Then 32 Isaac bade them farewell, and they parted from him in peace. The same day Isaac's slaves came and told him about a well that they had dug: 'We have 33 found water', they said. He named the well Shibah.^e This is why the city is called Beersheba^f to this day.

34 When Esau was forty years old he married Judith daughter of Beeri 35 the Hittite, and Basemath daughter of Elon the Hittite; this was a bitter grief to Isaac and Rebecca.

Jacob and Esau

WHEN ISAAC GREW OLD and his eyes became so dim that he could not see, he called his elder son Esau and said to him, 'My son', and he answered, 'Here I am.' Isaac said, 'Listen now: I am old and I do not know when I may die. Take your hunting gear, your quiver and your bow, and go out into the country and get me some venison. Then make me a savoury dish of the kind I like, and bring it to me to eat so that I may give you my blessing before I die.' Now Rebecca was listening as Isaac talked to his son Esau. When Esau went off into the country to find some venison and bring it home, she said to her son Jacob, 'I heard your father talking to your brother Esau, and he said, "Bring me some venison and make it into a savoury dish so that I may eat it and bless you in the presence of the LORD before I die." Listen to me, my son, and do what I tell you. Go to the flock and pick me out two fine young kids, and I will make them into a savoury dish for your father, of the kind he likes. Then take them in to your father, and he will eat them so that he may bless you before he dies.' Jacob said to his mother Rebecca, 'But my brother Esau is a hairy man, and my skin is smooth. Suppose my father feels me, he will know I am tricking him and I shall bring a curse upon myself instead of a blessing.' His mother answered him, 'Let the curse fall on me, my son, but do as I say; go and bring me the kids.' So Jacob fetched them and brought them to his mother, who made them into a savoury dish of the kind that his father liked. Then Rebecca took her elder son's clothes, Esau's best clothes which she kept by her in the house, and put them on her younger son Jacob. She put the goatskins on his hands and on the smooth nape of his neck; and she handed her son Jacob the savoury dish and the bread she had made. He came to his father and said, 'Father.' He answered, 'Yes, my son; who are you?' Jacob answered his father, 'I am Esau, your elder son. I have done as you told me. Come, sit up and eat some of my venison, so that you may give me your blessing.' Isaac said to his son, 'What is this that you found so quickly?', and Jacob answered, 'It is what the LORD your God put in my way.' Isaac then said to Jacob, 'Come close and let me feel you, my son, to see whether you are really my son Esau.' When Jacob came close to his father, Isaac felt him and said, 'The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau.' He did not recognize him because his hands were hairy like Esau's, and that is why he blessed him. He said, 'Are you really my son Esau?', and he answered, 'Yes.' Then Isaac said, 'Bring me some of your venison to eat, my son, so that I may give you my blessing.' Then Jacob brought it to him, and he ate it; he brought wine also, and he drank it. Then his father Isaac said to him, 'Come near, my son, and kiss me.' So he came near and kissed him, and when Isaac smelt the smell of his clothes, he blessed him and said:

'Ah! The smell of my son is like the smell of open country blessed by the LORD.

God give you dew from heaven
 and the richness of the earth,
 corn and new wine in plenty !

29 Peoples shall serve you,
nations bow down to you.
Be lord over your brothers;
may your mother's sons bow down to you.
A curse upon those who curse you;
a blessing on those who bless you!

30 Isaac finished blessing Jacob; and Jacob had scarcely left his father 31 Isaac's presence, when his brother Esau came in from his hunting. He too made a savoury dish and brought it to his father. He said, 'Come, father, 32 and eat some of my venison, so that you may give me your blessing.' His father Isaac said, 'Who are you?' He said, 'I am Esau, your elder son.' 33 Then Isaac became greatly agitated^a and said, 'Then who was it that hunted and brought me venison? I ate it all before you came in and I 34 blessed him, and the blessing will stand.' When Esau heard what his father 35 said, he gave a loud and bitter cry and said, 'Bless me too, father.' But Isaac said, 'Your brother came treacherously and took away your blessing.'
36 Esau said, 'He is rightly called Jacob.^b This is the second time he has supplanted me. He took away my right as the first-born and now he has taken 37 away my blessing. Have you kept back any blessing for me?' Isaac answered,
'I have made him lord over you, and I have given him all his brothers as 38 slaves. I have bestowed upon him corn and new wine for his sustenance.
What is there left that I can do for you, my son?' Esau asked his father, 'Had you then only one blessing, father? Bless me too, my father.' And 39 Esau cried bitterly. Then his father Isaac answered:

'Your dwelling shall be far from the richness of the earth,
far from the dew of heaven above.
40 By your sword shall you live,
and you shall serve your brother;
but the time will come when you grow restive
and break off his yoke from your neck.'

41 Esau bore a grudge against Jacob because of the blessing which his father had given him, and he said to himself, 'The time of mourning for my father 42 will soon be here; then I will kill my brother Jacob.' When Rebecca was told what her elder son Esau was saying, she called her younger son Jacob, 43 and she said to him, 'Esau your brother is threatening to kill you. Now, my 44 son, listen to me. Slip away at once to my brother Laban in Harran. Stay 45 with him for a while until your brother's anger cools. When it has subsided and he forgets what you have done to him, I will send and fetch you back.
Why should I lose you both in one day?'

46 Rebecca said to Isaac, 'I am weary to death of Hittite women! If Jacob marries a Hittite woman like those who live here, my life will not be worth 28 living.' Isaac called Jacob, blessed him and gave him instructions. He said, 2 'You must not marry one of these women of Canaan. Go at once to the house of Bethuel, your mother's father, in Paddan-aram, and there find 3 a wife, one of the daughters of Laban, your mother's brother. God Almighty bless you, make you fruitful and increase your descendants until they become a host of nations. May he bestow on you and your offspring the blessing of Abraham, and may you thus possess the country where you are now living, the land which God gave to Abraham!’ So Isaac sent Jacob away, and he went to Paddan-aram to Laban, son of Bethuel the Aramaean, and brother to Rebecca the mother of Jacob and Esau. Esau discovered that Isaac had given Jacob his blessing and had sent him away to Paddan-aram to find a wife there; and that when he blessed him he had forbidden him to marry a woman of Canaan, and that Jacob had obeyed his father and mother and gone to Paddan-aram. Then Esau, seeing that his father disliked the women of Canaan, went to Ishmael, and, in addition to his other wives, he married Mahalath sister of Nebaioth and daughter of Abraham’s son Ishmael.

Jacob set out from Beersheba and went on his way towards Harran. He came to a certain place and stopped there for the night, because the sun had set; and, taking one of the stones there, he made it a pillow for his head and lay down to sleep. He dreamt that he saw a ladder, which rested on the ground with its top reaching to heaven, and angels of God were going up and down upon it. The LORD was standing beside him^a and said, ‘I am the LORD, the God of your father Abraham and the God of Isaac. This land on which you are lying I will give to you and your descendants. They shall be countless as the dust upon the earth, and you shall spread far and wide, to north and south, to east and west. All the families of the earth shall pray to be blessed as you and your descendants are blessed. I will be with you, and I will protect you wherever you go and will bring you back to this land; for I will not leave you until I have done all that I have promised.’ Jacob woke from his sleep and said, ‘Truly the LORD is in this place, and I did not know it.’ Then he was afraid and said, ‘How fearsome is this place! This is no other than the house of God, this is the gate of heaven.’ Jacob rose early in the morning, took the stone on which he had laid his head, set it up as a sacred pillar and poured oil on the top of it. He named that place Beth-El;^b but the earlier name of the city was Luz.

Thereupon Jacob made this vow: ‘If God will be with me, if he will protect me on my journey and give me food to eat and clothes to wear, and I come back safely to my father’s house, then the LORD shall be my God, and this stone which I have set up as a sacred pillar shall be a house of God. And of all that thou givest me, I will without fail allot a tenth part to thee.’

JACOB CONTINUED HIS JOURNEY and came to the land of the eastern tribes. There he saw a well in the open country and three flocks of sheep lying beside it, because the flocks were watered from that well. Over its mouth was a huge stone, and all the herdsmen used to gather there and roll it off the mouth of the well and water the flocks; then they would put it back in its place over the well. Jacob said to them, ‘Where are you from, my friends?’ ‘We are from Harran’, they replied. He asked them if they knew Laban the grandson of Nahor. They answered, ‘Yes, we do.’ ‘Is he well?’ Jacob asked; and they answered, ‘Yes, he is well, and here is his

7 daughter Rachel coming with the flock.' Jacob said, 'The sun is still high,
8 and the time for folding the sheep has not yet come. Water the flocks and 9 then go and graze them.' But they replied, 'We cannot, until all the herd-10 men have gathered together and the stone is rolled away from the mouth of 11 the well; then we can water our flocks.' While he was talking to them, 12 Rachel came up with her father's flock, for she was a shepherdess. When 13 Jacob saw Rachel, the daughter of Laban his mother's brother, with 14 Laban's flock, he stepped forward, rolled the stone off the mouth of the 15 well and watered Laban's sheep. He kissed Rachel, and was moved to 16 tears. He told her that he was her father's kinsman and Rebecca's son; so 17 she ran and told her father. When Laban heard the news of his sister's son
18 Jacob, he ran to meet him, embraced him, kissed him warmly and welcomed
19 him to his home. Jacob told Laban everything, and Laban said, 'Yes, you 20 are my own flesh and blood.' So Jacob stayed with him for a whole month.
21 Laban said to Jacob, 'Why should you work for me for nothing simply 22 because you are my kinsman? Tell me what your wages ought to be.' Now
23 Laban had two daughters: the elder was called Leah, and the younger 24 Rachel. Leah was dull-eyed, but Rachel was graceful and beautiful. Jacob 25 had fallen in love with Rachel and he said, 'I will work seven years for your 26 younger daughter Rachel.' Laban replied, 'It is better that I should give her 27 to you than to anyone else; stay with me.' So Jacob worked seven years for 28 Rachel, and they seemed like a few days because he loved her. Then Jacob 29 said to Laban, 'I have served my time. Give me my wife so that we may 30 sleep together.' So Laban gathered all the men of the place together and 31 gave a feast. In the evening he took his daughter Leah and brought her to 32 Jacob, and Jacob slept with her. At the same time Laban gave his slave-33 girl Zilpah to his daughter Leah. But when morning came, Jacob saw that 34 it was Leah and said to Laban, 'What have you done to me? Did I not work 35 for Rachel? Why have you deceived me?' Laban answered, 'In our country 36 it is not right to give the younger sister in marriage before the elder. Go 37 through with the seven days' feast for the elder, and the younger shall be 38 given you in return for a further seven years' work.' Jacob agreed, and 39 completed the seven days for Leah.

40 Then Laban gave Jacob his daughter Rachel as wife; and he gave his 41 slave-girl Bilhah to serve his daughter Rachel. Jacob slept with Rachel also;
42 he loved her rather than Leah, and he worked for Laban for a further seven 43 years. When the LORD saw that Leah was not loved, he granted her a child;
44 but Rachel was childless. Leah conceived and bore a son; and she called 45 him Reuben,^a for she said, 'The LORD has seen my humiliation; now my 46 husband will love me.' Again she conceived and bore a son and said, 'The 47 LORD, hearing that I am not loved, has given me this child also'; and she 48 called him Simeon.^b She conceived again and bore a son; and she said, 49 'Now that I have borne him three sons my husband and I will surely be 50 united.' So she called him Levi.^c Once more she conceived and bore a son;
51 and she said, 'Now I will praise the LORD'; therefore she named him Judah.^d
52 Then for a while she bore no more children.

When Rachel found that she bore Jacob no children, she became jealous 30 of her sister and said to Jacob, 'Give me sons, or I shall die.' Jacob said 2 angrily to Rachel, 'Can I take the place of God, who has denied you children?' She said, 'Here is my slave-girl Bilhah. Lie with her, so that she may 3 bear sons to be laid upon my knees, and through her I too may build up a family.' So she gave him her slave-girl Bilhah as a wife, and Jacob lay with 4 her. Bilhah conceived and bore Jacob a son. Then Rachel said, 'God has 5 6 given judgement for me; he has indeed heard me and given me a son', so she named him Dan.^a Rachel's slave-girl Bilhah again conceived and bore 7 Jacob another son. Rachel said, 'I have played a fine trick on my sister, and it has succeeded'; so she named him Naphtali.^b When Leah found 9 that she was bearing no more children, she took her slave-girl Zilpah and gave her to Jacob as a wife, and Zilpah bore Jacob a son. Leah said, 'Good 10 11 fortune has come', and she named him Gad.^c Zilpah, Leah's slave-girl, bore Jacob another son, and Leah said, 'Happiness has come, for young 12 women will call me happy.' So she named him Asher.^d 13

In the time of wheat-harvest Reuben went out and found some man- 14 drakes in the open country and brought them to his mother Leah. Then Rachel asked Leah for some of her son's mandrakes, but Leah said, 'Is it 15 so small a thing to have taken away my husband, that you should take my son's mandrakes as well?' But Rachel said, 'Very well, let him sleep with you tonight in exchange for your son's mandrakes.' So when Jacob came 16 in from the country in the evening, Leah went out to meet him and said,
'You are to sleep with me tonight; I have hired you with my son's man-drakes.' That night he slept with her, and God heard Leah's prayer, and 17 she conceived and bore a fifth son. Leah said, 'God has rewarded me, 18 because I gave my slave-girl to my husband.' So she named him Issachar.^e Leah again conceived and bore a sixth son. She said, 'God has endowed 19 20 me with a noble dowry. Now my husband will treat me in princely style, because I have borne him six sons.' So she named him Zebulun.^f Later 21 she bore a daughter and named her Dinah. Then God thought of Rachel; 22 he heard her prayer and gave her a child; so she conceived and bore a 23 son and said, 'God has taken away my humiliation.' She named him 24
Joseph,^g saying, 'May the LORD add another son!'

When Rachel had given birth to Joseph, Jacob said to Laban, 'Let me 25 go, for I wish to return to my own home and country. Give me my wives 26 and my children for whom I have served you, and I will go; for you know what service I have done for you.' Laban said to him, 'Let me have my say, 27 if you please. I have become prosperous and the LORD has blessed me for your sake. So now tell me what I owe you in wages, and I will give it you.' 28 Jacob answered, 'You must know how I have served you, and how your herds have prospered under my care. You had only a few when I came, but 30 now they have increased beyond measure, and the LORD brought blessings to you wherever I went. But is it not time for me to provide for my family?'
Laban said, 'Then what shall I give you?', but Jacob answered, 'Give me 31

nothing; I will mind your flocks ^a as before, if you will do what I suggest.
 32 Today I will go over your flocks and pick out from them every black lamb, and all the brindled and the spotted goats, and they shall be my wages.
 33 This is a fair offer, and it will be to my own disadvantage later on, when we come to settling my wages: every goat amongst mine that is not spotted or 34 brindled and every lamb that is not black will have been stolen.' Laban 35 said, 'Agreed; let it be as you have said.' But that day he removed the he-goats that were striped and brindled and all the spotted and brindled she-goats, all that had any white on them, and every ram that was black, and 36 he handed them over to his own sons. Then he put a distance of three days' journey between himself and Jacob, while Jacob was left tending those of 37 Laban's flocks that remained. Thereupon Jacob took fresh rods of white poplar, almond, and plane tree, and peeled off strips of bark, exposing the 38 white of the rods. Then he fixed the peeled rods upright in the troughs at the watering-places where the flocks came to drink; they faced the she-39 goats that were on heat when they came to drink. They felt a longing for the rods and they gave birth to young that were striped and spotted and 40 brindled. As for the rams, Jacob divided them, and let the ewes run only with such of the rams in Laban's flock as were striped and black; and thus he bred separate flocks for himself, which he did not add to Laban's sheep.
 41 As for the goats, whenever the more vigorous were on heat, he put the rods 42 in front of them at the troughs so that they would long for the rods; he did not put them there for the weaker goats. Thus the weaker came to be 43 Laban's and the stronger Jacob's. So Jacob increased in wealth more and more until he possessed great flocks, male and female slaves, camels, and asses.

31 JACOB LEARNT that Laban's sons were saying, 'Jacob has taken everything that was our father's, and all his wealth has come from our father's 2 property.' He also noticed that Laban was not so well disposed to him as 3 he had once been. Then the LORD said to Jacob, 'Go back to the land of 4 your fathers and to your kindred. I will be with you.' So Jacob sent to 5 fetch Rachel and Leah to his flocks out in the country and said to them, 'I see that your father is not as well disposed to me as once he was; yet the 6 God of my father has been with me. You know how I have served your 7 father to the best of my power, but he has cheated me and changed my 8 wages ten times over. Yet God did not let him do me any harm. If Laban said, "The spotted ones shall be your wages", then all the flock bore spotted young; and if he said, "The striped ones shall be your wages", then all the 9 flock bore striped young. God has taken away your father's property and has given it to me. In the season when the flocks were on heat, I had a dream:
 I looked up and saw that the he-goats mounting the flock were striped and 11 spotted and dappled. The angel of God said to me in my dream, "Jacob", 12 and I replied, "Here I am", and he said, "Look up and see: all the he-goats mounting the flock are striped and spotted and dappled. I have seen 13 all that Laban is doing to you. I am the God who appeared to you at Bethel where you anointed a sacred pillar and where you made your vow. Now leave this country at once and return to the land of your birth.” Rachel and Leah answered him, “We no longer have any part or lot in our father’s house. Does he not look on us as foreigners, now that he has sold us and spent on himself the whole of the money paid for us? But all the wealth which God has saved from our father’s clutches is ours and our children’s. Now do everything that God has said.” Jacob at once set his sons and his wives on camels, and drove off all the herds and livestock which he had acquired in Paddan-aram, to go to his father Isaac in Canaan.

When Laban the Aramaean had gone to shear his sheep, Rachel stole her father’s household gods, and Jacob deceived Laban, keeping his departure secret. So Jacob ran away with all that he had, crossed the River and made for the hill-country of Gilead. Three days later, when Laban heard that Jacob had run away, he took his kinsmen with him, pursued Jacob for seven days and caught up with him in the hill-country of Gilead. But God came to Laban in a dream by night and said to him, ‘Be careful to say nothing to Jacob, either good or bad.’

When Laban overtook him, Jacob had pitched his tent in the hill-country of Gilead, and Laban pitched his in the company of his kinsmen in the same hill-country. Laban said to Jacob, ‘What have you done? You have deceived me and carried off my daughters as though they were captives taken in war. Why did you slip away secretly without telling me? I would have set you on your way with songs and the music of tambourines and harps. You did not even let me kiss my daughters and their children. In this you were at fault. It is in my power to do you an injury, but yesterday the God of your father spoke to me; he told me to be careful to say nothing to you, either good or bad. I know that you went away because you were homesick and pining for your father’s house, but why did you steal my gods?’

Jacob answered, ‘I was afraid; I thought you would take your daughters from me by force. Whoever is found in possession of your gods shall die for it. Let our kinsmen here be witnesses: point out anything I have that is yours, and take it back.’ Jacob did not know that Rachel had stolen the gods. So Laban went into Jacob’s tent and Leah’s tent and that of the two slave-girls, but he found nothing. When he came out of Leah’s tent he went into Rachel’s. Now she had taken the household gods and put them in the camel-bag and was sitting on them. Laban went through everything in the tent and found nothing. Rachel said to her father, ‘Do not take it amiss, sir, that I cannot rise in your presence: the common lot of woman is upon me.’ So for all his search Laban did not find his household gods.

Jacob was angry, and he expostulated with Laban, exclaiming, ‘What have I done wrong? What is my offence, that you have come after me in hot pursuit and gone through all my possessions? Have you found anything belonging to your household? If so, set it here in front of my kinsmen and yours, and let them judge between the two of us. In all the twenty years I have been with you, your ewes and she-goats have never miscarried; I have not eaten the rams of your flocks; I have never brought to you the body of any animal mangled by wild beasts, but I bore the loss myself; you claimed compensation from me for anything stolen by day or by night.

40 This was the way of it: by day the heat consumed me and the frost by night, 41 and sleep deserted me. For twenty years I have been in your household. I worked for you fourteen years to win your two daughters and six years for 42 your flocks, and you changed my wages ten times over. If the God of my father, the God of Abraham and the Fear of Isaac, had not been with me, you would have sent me away empty-handed. But God saw my labour and my hardships, and last night he rebuked you.^a 43 Laban answered Jacob, 'The daughters are my daughters, the children are my children, the flocks are my flocks; all that you see is mine. But as for my daughters, what can I do today about them and the children they 44 have borne? Come now, we will make an agreement, you and I, and let it stand as a witness between us.' So Jacob chose a great stone and set it up-45 right as a sacred pillar. Then he told his kinsmen to gather stones, and they 46 took them and built a cairn, and there beside the cairn they ate together.

 48 Laban called it Jegar-sahadutha,^a and Jacob called it Gal-ed.^b Laban said, 'This cairn is witness today between you and me.' For this reason it was 49 named Gal-ed; it was also named Mizpah,^c for Laban said, 'May the LORD 50 watch between you and me, when we are parted from each other's sight. If you ill-treat my daughters or take other wives beside them when no one is 51 there to see, then God be witness between us.' Laban said further to Jacob, 52 'Here is this cairn, and here the pillar which I have set up between us. This cairn is witness and the pillar is witness: I for my part will not pass beyond this cairn to your side, and you for your part shall not pass beyond this 53 cairn and this pillar to my side to do an injury, otherwise the God of Abraham and the God of Nahor will judge between us.' And Jacob swore this 54 oath in the name of the Fear of Isaac his father. He slaughtered an animal for sacrifice, there in the hill-country, and summoned his kinsmen to the feast. So they ate together and spent the night there.

55 Laban rose early in the morning, kissed his daughters and their child-56 ren, blessed them and went home again. Then Jacob continued his journey 2 and was met by angels of God. When he saw them, Jacob said, 'This is the company of God', and he called that place Mahanaim.^d

3 Jacob sent messengers on ahead to his brother Esau to the district of Seir 4 in the Edomite country, and this is what he told them to say to Esau, 'My lord, your servant Jacob says, I have been living with Laban and have 5 stayed there till now. I have oxen, asses, and sheep, and male and female slaves, and I have sent to tell you this, my lord, so that I may win your 6 favour.' The messengers returned to Jacob and said, 'We met your brother 7 Esau already on the way to meet you with four hundred men.' Jacob, much afraid and distressed, divided the people with him, as well as the sheep, 8 cattle, and camels, into two companies, thinking that, if Esau should come 9 upon one company and destroy it, the other company would survive. Jacob said, 'O God of my father Abraham, God of my father Isaac, O LORD at whose bidding I came back to my own country and to my kindred, and 10 who didst promise me prosperity, I am not worthy of all the true and steadfast love which thou hast shown to me thy servant. When I crossed the Jordan, I had nothing but the staff in my hand; now I have two companies. Save me, I pray, from my brother Esau, for I am afraid that he may come and destroy me, sparing neither mother nor child. But thou didst say, I will prosper you and will make your descendants like the sand of the sea, which is beyond all counting.’

Jacob spent that night there; and as a present for his brother Esau he chose from the herds he had with him two hundred she-goats, twenty he-goats, two hundred ewes and twenty rams, thirty milch-camels with their young, forty cows and ten young bulls, twenty she-asses and ten he-asses. He put each herd separately into the care of a servant and said to each, ‘Go on ahead of me, and leave gaps between the herds.’ Then he gave these instructions to the first: ‘When my brother Esau meets you and asks you to whom you belong and where you are going and who owns these beasts you are driving, you are to say, “They belong to your servant Jacob; he sends them as a present to my lord Esau, and he is behind us.”’ He gave the same instructions to the second, to the third, and all the drovers, telling them to say the same thing to Esau when they met him. And they were to add, ‘Your servant Jacob is behind us’; for he thought, ‘I will appease him with the present that I have sent on ahead, and afterwards, when I come into his presence, he will perhaps receive me kindly.’ So Jacob’s present went on ahead of him, but he himself spent that night at Mahaneh.

During the night Jacob rose, took his two wives, his two slave-girls, and his eleven sons, and crossed the ford of Jabbok. He took them and sent them across the gorge with all that he had. So Jacob was left alone, and a man wrestled with him there till^a daybreak. When the man saw that he could not throw Jacob, he struck him in the hollow of his thigh, so that Jacob’s hip was dislocated as they wrestled. The man said, ‘Let me go, for day is breaking’, but Jacob replied, ‘I will not let you go unless you bless me.’ He said to Jacob, ‘What is your name?’, and he answered, ‘Jacob.’ The man said, ‘Your name shall no longer be Jacob, but Israel,^b because you strove with God and with men, and prevailed.’ Jacob said, ‘Tell me, I pray, your name.’ He replied, ‘Why do you ask my name?’, but he gave him his blessing there. Jacob called the place Peniel,^c ‘because’, he said, ‘I have seen God face to face and my life is spared.’ The sun rose as Jacob passed through Peniel, limping because of his hip. This is why the Israelites to this day do not eat the sinew of the nerve that runs in the hollow of the thigh; for the man had struck Jacob on that nerve in the hollow of the thigh.

Jacob raised his eyes and saw Esau coming towards him with four hundred men; so he divided the children between Leah and Rachel and the two slave-girls. He put the slave-girls with their children in front, Leah with her children next, and Rachel with Joseph last. He then went on ahead of them, bowing low to the ground seven times as he approached his brother. Esau ran to meet him and embraced him; he threw his arms round him and kissed him, and they wept. When Esau looked up and saw the women and children, he said, ‘Who are these with you?’ Jacob replied, ‘The children whom God has graciously given to your servant.’ The slave-girls came near, each with her children, and they bowed low. Then Leah with her children came near and bowed low, and afterwards Joseph and Rachel came near and bowed low also. Esau said, 'What was all that company of yours that I met?' And he answered, 'It was meant to win favour with you, my lord.' Esau answered, 'I have more than enough. Keep what is yours, my brother.' But Jacob said, 'On no account: if I have won your favour, then, I pray, accept this gift from me; for, you see, I come into your presence as into that of a god, and you receive me favourably. Accept this gift which I bring you; for God has been gracious to me, and I have all I want.' So he urged him, and he accepted it.

Then Esau said, 'Let us set out, and I will go at your pace.' But Jacob answered him, 'You must know, my lord, that the children are small; the flocks and herds are suckling their young and I am concerned for them, and if the men overdrive them for a single day, all my beasts will die. I beg you, my lord, to go on ahead, and I will go by easy stages at the pace of the children and of the livestock that I am driving, until I come to my lord in Seir.' Esau said, 'Let me detail some of my own men to escort you', but he replied, 'Why should my lord be so kind to me?' That day Esau turned back towards Seir, but Jacob set out for Succoth; and there he built himself a house and made shelters for his cattle. Therefore he named that place Succoth.^a

On his journey from Paddan-aram, Jacob came safely to the city of Shechem in Canaan and pitched his tent to the east of it. The strip of country where he had pitched his tent he bought from the sons of Hamor father of Shechem for a hundred sheep.^b There he set up an altar and called it El-Elohey-Israel.^c

DINAH, THE DAUGHTER WHOM LEAH HAD BORNE to Jacob, went out to visit the women of the country, and Shechem, son of Hamor the Hivite the local prince, saw her; he took her, lay with her and dishonoured her. But he remained true to Jacob's daughter Dinah; he loved the girl and comforted her. So Shechem said to his father Hamor, 'Get me this girl for a wife.' When Jacob heard that Shechem had violated his daughter Dinah, his sons were with the herds in the open country, so he said nothing until they came home. Meanwhile Shechem's father Hamor came out to Jacob to discuss it with him. When Jacob's sons came in from the country and heard, they were grieved and angry, because in lying with Jacob's daughter he had done what the Israelites held to be an outrage, an intolerable thing. Hamor appealed to them in these terms: 'My son Shechem is in love with this girl; I beg you to let him have her as his wife. Let us ally ourselves in marriage; you shall give us your daughters, and you shall take ours in exchange. You must settle among us. The country is open to you; make your home in it, move about freely and acquire land of your own.' And Shechem said to the girl's father and brothers, 'I am eager to win your favour and I will give whatever you ask. Fix the bride-price and the gift as high as you like, and I will give whatever you ask; but you must give me the girl in marriage.'

^a That is Shelters.

^b Or pieces of money (cp. Josh. 24. 32; Job 42. 11).

^c That is God the God of Israel.

Jacob's sons gave a dishonest reply to Shechem and his father Hamor, laying a trap for them because Shechem had violated their sister Dinah: 'We cannot do this,' they said; 'we cannot give our sister to a man who is uncircumcised; for we look on that as a disgrace. There is one condition on which we will consent: if you will follow our example and have every male among you circumcised, we will give you our daughters and take yours for ourselves. Then we can live among you, and we shall all become one people. But if you refuse to listen to us and be circumcised, we will take the girl and go away.' Their proposal pleased Hamor and his son Shechem; and the young man, who was held in respect above anyone in his father's house, did not hesitate to do what they had said, because his heart was taken by Jacob's daughter.

So Hamor and Shechem went back to the city gate and addressed their fellow-citizens: 'These men are friendly to us; let them live in our country and move freely in it. The land has room enough for them. Let us marry their daughters and give them ours. But these men will agree to live with us and become one people on this one condition only: every male among us must be circumcised as they have been. Will not their herds, their livestock, and all their chattels then be ours? We need only consent to their condition, and then they are free to live with us.' All the able-bodied men agreed with Hamor and Shechem, and every single one of them was circumcised, every able-bodied male. Then two days later, while they were still in great pain, Jacob's two sons Simeon and Levi, full brothers to Dinah, armed themselves with swords, boldly entered the city and killed every male. They cut down Hamor and his son Shechem and took Dinah from Shechem's house and went off with her. Then Jacob's other sons came in over the dead bodies and plundered the city, to avenge their sister's dishonour. They seized flocks, cattle, asses, and everything, both inside the city and outside in the open country; they also carried off all their possessions, their dependants, and their women, and plundered everything in the houses.

Jacob said to Simeon and Levi, 'You have brought trouble on me, you have made my name stink among the people of the country, the Canaanites and the Perizzites. My numbers are few; if they muster against me and attack me, I shall be destroyed, I and my household with me.' They answered, 'Is our sister to be treated as a common whore?'

GOD SAID TO JACOB, 'Go up to Bethel and settle there; build an altar there to the God who appeared to you when you were running away from your brother Esau.' So Jacob said to his household and to all who were with him, 'Rid yourselves of the foreign gods which you have among you, purify yourselves, and see your clothes are mended.^a We are going to Bethel, so that I can set up an altar there to the God who answered me in the day of my distress, and who has been with me all the way that I have come.' So they handed over to Jacob all the foreign gods in their possession and the rings from their ears, and he buried them under the terebinth-tree near Shechem. Then they set out, and the cities round about were panic-stricken, and the inhabitants dared not pursue the sons of Jacob. Jacob and all the people with him came to Luz, that is Bethel, in Canaan. There he built an altar, and he called the place El-bethel, because it was there that God had revealed himself to him when he was running away from his brother. Rebecca's nurse Deborah died and was buried under the oak below Bethel, and he named it Allon-bakuth.^a God appeared again to Jacob when he came back from Paddan-aram and blessed him. God said to him:

'Jacob is your name,
but your name shall no longer be Jacob:
Israel shall be your name.'

So he named him Israel. And God said to him:

'I am God Almighty.
Be fruitful and increase as a nation;
a host of nations shall come from you,
and kings shall spring from your body.
The land which I gave to Abraham and Isaac I give to you;
and to your descendants after you I give this land.'

God then left him, and Jacob erected a sacred pillar in the place where God had spoken with him, a pillar of stone, and he offered a drink-offering over it and poured oil on it. Jacob called the place where God had spoken with him Bethel.

They set out from Bethel, and when there was still some distance to go to Ephrathah, Rachel was in labour and her pains were severe. While her pains were upon her, the midwife said, 'Do not be afraid, this is another son for you.' Then with her last breath, as she was dying, she named him Ben-oni,^b but his father called him Benjamin.^c So Rachel died and was buried by the side of the road to Ephrathah, that is Bethlehem. Jacob set up a sacred pillar over her grave; it is known to this day as the Pillar of Rachel's Grave. Then Israel journeyed on and pitched his tent on the other side of Migdal-eder. While Israel was living in that district, Reuben went and lay with his father's concubine Bilhah, and Israel came to hear of it.

The sons of Jacob were twelve. The sons of Leah: Jacob's first-born Reuben, then Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar and Zebulun. The sons of Rachel: Joseph and Benjamin. The sons of Rachel's slave-girl Bilhah: Dan and Naphtali. The sons of Leah's slave-girl Zilpah: Gad and Asher. These were Jacob's sons, born to him in Paddan-aram. Jacob came to his father Isaac at Mamre by Kiriath-arba, that is Hebron, where Abraham and Isaac had dwelt. Isaac had lived for a hundred and eighty years when he breathed his last. He died and was gathered to his father's kin at a very great age, and his sons Esau and Jacob buried him.

THIS IS THE TABLE of the descendants of Esau: that is Edom. Esau took Canaanite women in marriage, Adah daughter of Elon the Hittite and

Oholibamah daughter of Anah son of Zibeon the Horite,^a and Basemath, 3 Ishmael's daughter, sister of Nebaioth.

Adah bore Eliphaz to Esau; Basemath bore Reuel, and Oholibamah bore 4^b 5
Jeush, Jalam and Korah. These were Esau's sons, born to him in Canaan.
Esau took his wives, his sons and daughters and everyone in his household, 6 his herds, his cattle, and all the chattels that he had acquired in Canaan, and went to the district of Seir out of the way of his brother Jacob, because 7 they had so much stock that they could not live together; the land where they were staying could not support them because of their herds. So 8

Joseph in Egypt

SO JACOB LIVED IN CANAAN, the country in which his father had settled. And this is the story of the descendants of Jacob.

When Joseph was a boy of seventeen, he used to accompany his brothers, the sons of Bilhah and Zilpah, his father's wives, when they were in charge of the flock; and he brought their father a bad report of them. Now Israel loved Joseph more than any other of his sons, because he was a child of his old age, and he made him a long, sleeved robe. When his brothers saw that their father loved him more than any of them, they hated him and could not say a kind word to him.

Joseph had a dream; and when he told it to his brothers, they hated him still more. He said to them, 'Listen to this dream I have had. We were in the field binding sheaves, and my sheaf rose on end and stood upright, and your sheaves gathered round and bowed low before my sheaf.' His brothers answered him, 'Do you think you will one day be a king and lord it over us?' and they hated him still more because of his dreams and what he said. He had another dream, which he told to his father and his brothers. He said, 'Listen: I have had another dream. The sun and moon and eleven stars were bowing down to me.' When he told it to his father and his brothers, his father took him to task: 'What is this dream of yours?' he said. 'Must we come and bow low to the ground before you, I and your mother and your brothers?' His brothers were jealous of him, but his father did not forget.

Joseph's brothers went to mind their father's flocks in Shechem. Israel said to him, 'Your brothers are minding the flocks in Shechem; come, I will send you to them', and he said, 'I am ready.' He said to him, 'Go and see if all is well with your brothers and the sheep, and bring me back word.' So he sent off Joseph from the vale of Hebron and he came to Shechem. A man met him wandering in the open country and asked him what he was looking for. He replied, 'I am looking for my brothers. Tell me, please, where they are minding the flocks.' The man said, 'They have gone away from here; I heard them speak of going to Dothan.' So Joseph followed his brothers and he found them in Dothan. They saw him in the distance, and before he reached them, they plotted to kill him. They said to each other, 'Here comes that dreamer. Now is our chance; let us kill him and throw him into one of these pits and say that a wild beast has devoured him. Then we shall see what will come of his dreams.' When Reuben heard, he came to his rescue, urging them not to take his life. 'Let us have no bloodshed', he said. 'Throw him into this pit in the wilderness, but do him no bodily harm.' He meant to save him from them so as to restore him to his father. When Joseph came up to his brothers, they stripped him of the long, sleeved robe which he was wearing, took him and threw him into the pit. The pit was empty and had no water in it.

Then they sat down to eat some food and, looking up, they saw an Ishmaelite caravan coming in from Gilead on the way down to Egypt, with camels carrying gum tragacanth and balm and myrrh. Judah said to his brothers, 'What shall we gain by killing our brother and concealing his death? Why not sell him to the Ishmaelites? Let us do him no harm, for he is our brother, our own flesh and blood'; and his brothers agreed with him. Meanwhile some Midianite merchants passed by and drew Joseph up out of the pit. They sold him for twenty pieces of silver to the Ishmaelites, and they brought Joseph to Egypt. When Reuben went back to the pit, Joseph was not there. He rent his clothes and went back to his brothers and said, 'The boy is not there. Where can I go?'

Joseph's brothers took his robe, killed a goat and dipped it in the goat's blood. Then they tore the robe, the long, sleeved robe, brought it to their father and said, 'Look what we have found. Do you recognize it? Is this your son's robe or not?' Jacob did recognize it, and he replied, 'It is my son's robe. A wild beast has devoured him. Joseph has been torn to pieces.' Jacob rent his clothes, put on sackcloth and mourned his son for a long time. His sons and daughters all tried to comfort him, but he refused to be comforted. He said, 'I will go to my grave mourning for my son.' Thus Joseph's father wept for him. Meanwhile the Midianites had sold Joseph in Egypt to Potiphar, one of Pharaoh's eunuchs, the captain of the guard. ^a

ABOUT THAT TIME JUDAH LEFT HIS BROTHERS and went south and pitched his tent in company with an Adullamite named Hirah. There he saw Bathshua the daughter of a Canaanite and married her. He slept with her, and she conceived and bore a son, whom she called Er. She conceived again and bore a son whom she called Onan. Once more she conceived and bore a son whom she called Shelah, and she ceased to bear children ^b when

^b ceased . . . children: or was at Kezib.

6 she had given birth to him. Judah found a wife for his eldest son Er; her
7 name was Tamar. But Judah's eldest son Er was wicked in the LORD's 8 sight, and the LORD took his life. Then Judah told Onan to sleep with his 9 brother's wife, to do his duty as the husband's brother and raise up issue 10 for his brother. But Onan knew that the issue would not be his; so whenever 11 he slept with his brother's wife, he spilled his seed on the ground so as not 12 to raise up issue for his brother. What he did was wicked in the LORD's 13 sight, and the LORD took his life. Judah said to his daughter-in-law Tamar, 14 'Remain as a widow in your father's house until my son Shelah grows up';
15 for he was afraid that he too would die like his brothers. So Tamar went 16 and stayed in her father's house.

17 Time passed, and Judah's wife Bathshua died. When he had finished 18 mourning, he and his friend Hirah the Adullamite went up to Timnath at 19 sheep-shearing. When Tamar was told that her father-in-law was on his 20 way to shear his sheep at Timnath, she took off her widow's weeds, veiled 21 her face, perfumed herself and sat where the road forks in two directions 22 on the way to Timnath. She did this because she knew that Shelah had 23 grown up and she had not been given to him as a wife. When Judah saw 24 her, he thought she was a prostitute, although she had veiled her face. He 25 turned to her where she sat by the roadside and said, 'Let me lie with you', 26 not knowing that she was his daughter-in-law. She said 'What will you 27 give me to lie with me?' He answered, 'I will send you a kid from my flock', 28 but she said, 'Will you give me a pledge until you send it?' He asked what 29 pledge he should give her, and she replied, 'Your seal and its cord, and the 30 staff which you hold in your hand.' So he gave them to her and lay with her, 31 and she conceived. She then rose and went home, took off her veil and 32 resumed her widow's weeds. Judah sent the kid by his friend the Adullamite 33 in order to recover the pledge from the woman, but he could not find 34 her. He asked the men of that place, 'Where is that temple-prostitute, the 35 one who was sitting where the road forks?', but they answered, 'There is 36 no temple-prostitute here.' So he went back to Judah and told him that he 37 had not found her and that the men of the place had said there was no such 38 prostitute there. Judah said, 'Let her keep my pledge, or we shall get a 39 bad name. I did send a kid, but you could not find her.' About three months
40 later Judah was told that his daughter-in-law Tamar had behaved like a 41 common prostitute and through her wanton conduct was with child. Judah 42 said, 'Bring her out so that she may be burnt.' But when she was brought 43 out, she sent to her father-in-law and said, 'The father of my child is the 44 man to whom these things belong. See if you recognize whose they are,
45 the engraving on the seal, the pattern of the cord, and the staff.' Judah
46 recognized them and said, 'She is more in the right than I am, because I 47 did not give her to my son Shelah.' He did not have intercourse with her 48 again. When her time was come, there were twins in her womb, and while 49 she was in labour one of them put out a hand. The midwife took a scarlet 50 thread and fastened it round the wrist, saying, 'This one appeared first.'
51 No sooner had he drawn back his hand, than his brother came out and the 52 midwife said, 'What! you have broken out first!' So he was named Perez. ^a

Soon afterwards his brother was born with the scarlet thread on his wrist, 30 and he was named Zerah.^a

WHEN JOSEPH WAS TAKEN DOWN TO EGYPT, he was bought by Poti- 39
phar, one of Pharaoh's eunuchs, the captain of the guard, an Egyptian.
Potiphar bought him from the Ishmaelites who had brought him there.
The LORD was with Joseph and he prospered. He lived in the house of his 2
Egyptian master, who saw that the LORD was with him and was giving him 3 success in all that he undertook. Thus Joseph found favour with his master, 4 and he became his personal servant. Indeed, his master put him in charge of his household and entrusted him with all that he had. From the time that 5 he put him in charge of his household and all his property, the LORD blessed the Egyptian's household for Joseph's sake. The blessing of the 6 LORD was on all that was his in house and field. He left everything he 6 possessed in Joseph's care, and concerned himself with nothing but the food he ate.

Now Joseph was handsome and good-looking, and a time came when his 7 master's wife took notice of him and said, 'Come and lie with me.' But he 8 refused and said to her, 'Think of my master. He does not know as much as I do about his own house, and he has entrusted me with all he has. He has 9 given me authority in this house second only to his own, and has withheld nothing from me except you, because you are his wife. How can I do any- 10 thing so wicked, and sin against God?' She kept asking Joseph day after 11 day, but he refused to lie with her and be in her company. One day he came into the house as usual to do his work, when none of the men of the house- 12 hold were there indoors. She caught him by his cloak, saying, 'Come and lie with me', but he left the cloak in her hands and ran out of the house.
When she saw that he had left his cloak in her hands and had run out of the 13 house, she called out to the men of the household, 'Look at this! My husband has brought in a Hebrew to make a mockery of us. He came in 14 here to lie with me, but I gave a loud scream. When he heard me scream and call out, he left his cloak in my hand and ran off.' She kept his cloak with 15 her until his master came home, and then she repeated her tale. She said, 17
'That Hebrew slave whom you brought in to make a mockery of me, has been here with me. But when I screamed for help and called out, he left 18 his cloak in my hands and ran off.' When Joseph's master heard his wife's story of what his slave had done to her, he was furious. He took Joseph and 20 put him in the Round Tower, where the king's prisoners were kept;
and there he stayed in the Round Tower. But the LORD was with Joseph 21 and kept faith with him, so that he won the favour of the governor of the Round Tower. He put Joseph in charge of all the prisoners in the tower and 22 of all their work. He ceased to concern himself with anything entrusted to 23 Joseph, because the LORD was with Joseph and gave him success in everything.

It happened later that the king's butler and his baker offended their 40 master the king of Egypt. Pharaoh was angry with these two eunuchs, the chief butler and the chief baker, and he put them in custody in the house of 3

^a That is Redness.

the captain of the guard, in the Round Tower where Joseph was imprisoned.

4 The captain of the guard appointed Joseph as their attendant, and he 5 waited on them. One night, when they had been in prison for some time, they both had dreams, each needing its own interpretation—the king of Egypt's butler and his baker who were imprisoned in the Round Tower.
6 When Joseph came to them in the morning, he saw that they looked 7 dejected. So he asked these eunuchs, who were in custody with him in his 8 master's house, why they were so downcast that day. They replied, 'We have each had a dream and there is no one to interpret it for us.' Joseph 9 said to them, 'Does not interpretation belong to God? Tell me your dreams.' So the chief butler told Joseph his dream: 'In my dream', he said, 10 'there was a vine in front of me. On the vine there were three branches, and as soon as it budded, it blossomed and its clusters ripened into grapes.
11 Now I had Pharaoh's cup in my hand, and I plucked the grapes, crushed them into Pharaoh's cup and put the cup into Pharaoh's hand.' Joseph said 12 to him, 'This is the interpretation. The three branches are three days:
13 within three days Pharaoh will raise you and restore you to your post, and then you will put the cup into Pharaoh's hand as you used to do when you 14 were his butler. But when things go well with you, if you think of me, keep faith with me and bring my case to Pharaoh's notice and help me to get out 15 of this house. By force I was carried off^a from the land of the Hebrews, and I have done nothing here to deserve being put in this dungeon.'

16 When the chief baker saw that Joseph had given a favourable interpretation, he said to him, 'I too had a dream, and in my dream there were 17 three baskets of white bread on my head. In the top basket there was every kind of food which the baker prepares for Pharaoh, and the birds were 18 eating out of the top basket on my head.' Joseph answered, 'This is the 19 interpretation. The three baskets are three days: within three days Pharaoh will raise you and hang you up on a tree, and the birds of the air will eat your flesh.'

20 The third day was Pharaoh's birthday and he gave a feast for all his servants. He raised the chief butler and the chief baker in the presence of 21 his court. He restored the chief butler to his post, and the butler put the 22 cup into Pharaoh's hand; but he hanged the chief baker. All went as 23 Joseph had said in interpreting the dreams for them. Even so the chief butler did not remember Joseph, but forgot him.

41 Nearly two years later Pharaoh had a dream: he was standing by the 2 Nile, and there came up from the river seven cows, sleek and fat, and they
3 grazed on the reeds. After them seven other cows came up from the river, 4 gaunt and lean, and stood on the river-bank beside the first cows. The cows that were gaunt and lean devoured the cows that were sleek and fat. Then 5 Pharaoh woke up. He fell asleep again and had a second dream: he saw 6 seven ears of corn, full and ripe, growing on one stalk. Growing up after 7 them were seven other ears, thin and shrivelled by the east wind. The thin ears swallowed up the ears that were full and ripe. Then Pharaoh woke up 8 and knew that it was a dream. When morning came, Pharaoh was troubled in mind; so he summoned all the magicians and sages of Egypt. He told them his dreams, but there was no one who could interpret them for him. Then Pharaoh's chief butler spoke up and said, 'It is time for me to recall my faults. Once Pharaoh was angry with his servants, and he imprisoned me and the chief baker in the house of the captain of the guard. One night we both had dreams, each needing its own interpretation. We had with us a young Hebrew, a slave of the captain of the guard, and we told him our dreams and he interpreted them for us, giving each man's dream its own interpretation. Each dream came true as it had been interpreted to us: I was restored to my position, and he was hanged.'

Pharaoh thereupon sent for Joseph, and they hurriedly brought him out of the dungeon. He shaved and changed his clothes, and came in to Pharaoh. Pharaoh said to him, 'I have had a dream, and no one can interpret it to me. I have heard it said that you can understand and interpret dreams.' Joseph answered, 'Not I, but God, will answer for Pharaoh's welfare.' Then Pharaoh said to Joseph, 'In my dream I was standing on the bank of the Nile, and there came up from the river seven cows, fat and sleek, and they grazed on the reeds. After them seven other cows came up that were poor, very gaunt and lean; I have never seen such gaunt creatures in all Egypt. These lean, gaunt cows devoured the first cows, the fat ones. They were swallowed up, but no one could have guessed that they were in the bellies of the others, which looked as gaunt as before. Then I woke up. After I had fallen asleep again, I saw in a dream seven ears of corn, full and ripe, growing on one stalk. Growing up after them were seven other ears, shrivelled, thin, and blighted by the east wind. The thin ears swallowed up the seven ripe ears. When I told all this to the magicians, no one could explain it to me.'

Joseph said to Pharaoh, 'Pharaoh's dreams are one dream. God has told Pharaoh what he is going to do. The seven good cows are seven years, and the seven good ears of corn are seven years. It is all one dream. The seven lean and gaunt cows that came up after them are seven years, and the empty ears of corn blighted by the east wind will be seven years of famine. It is as I have said to Pharaoh: God has let Pharaoh see what he is going to do. There are to be seven years of great plenty throughout the land. After them will come seven years of famine; all the years of plenty in Egypt will be forgotten, and the famine will ruin the country. The good years will not be remembered in the land because of the famine that follows; for it will be very severe. The doubling of Pharaoh's dream means that God is already resolved to do this, and he will very soon put it into effect. Pharaoh should now look for a shrewd and intelligent man, and put him in charge of the country. This is what Pharaoh should do: appoint controllers over the land, and take one fifth of the produce of Egypt during the seven years of plenty. They should collect all this food produced in the good years that are coming and put the corn under Pharaoh's control in store in the cities, and keep it under guard. This food will be a reserve for the country against the seven years of famine which will come upon Egypt. Thus the country will not be devastated by the famine.'

The plan pleased Pharaoh and all his courtiers, and he said to them, 'Can 39 we find a man like this man, one who has the spirit of a god^a in him?' He 40 said to Joseph, 'Since a god^b has made all this known to you, there is no one so shrewd and intelligent as you. You shall be in charge of my house-41 hold, and all my people will depend on your every word. Only my royal throne shall make me greater than you.' Pharaoh said to Joseph, 'I hereby 42 give you authority over the whole land of Egypt.' He took off his signet-ring and put it on Joseph's finger, he had him dressed in fine linen, and hung a 43 gold chain round his neck. He mounted him in his viceroy's chariot and men cried 'Make way!' before him. Thus Pharaoh made him ruler over all 44 Egypt and said to him, 'I am the Pharaoh. Without your consent no man shall lift hand or foot throughout Egypt.' Pharaoh named him Zaphenath-45 paneah, and he gave him as wife Asenath the daughter of Potiphra priest of On. And Joseph's authority extended over the whole of Egypt.

46 Joseph was thirty years old when he entered the service of Pharaoh king of Egypt. When he took his leave of the king, he made a tour of inspection 47 through the country. During the seven years of plenty there were abundant 48 harvests, and Joseph gathered all the food produced in Egypt during those years and stored it in the cities, putting in each the food from the surround-49 ing country. He stored the grain in huge quantities; it was like the sand of the sea, so much that he stopped measuring: it was beyond all measure.

50 Before the years of famine came, two sons were born to Joseph by 51 Asenath the daughter of Potiphra priest of On. He named the elder Manasseh,^c 'for', he said, 'God has caused me to forget all my troubles and 52 my father's family.' He named the second Ephraim,^d 'for', he said, 'God 53 has made me fruitful in the land of my hardships.' When the seven years 54 of plenty in Egypt came to an end, seven years of famine began, as Joseph had foretold. There was famine in every country, but throughout Egypt 55 there was bread. So when the famine spread through all Egypt, the people appealed to Pharaoh for bread, and he ordered them to go to Joseph and do 56 as he told them. In every region there was famine, and Joseph opened all the granaries and sold corn to the Egyptians, for the famine was severe.
 57 The whole world came to Egypt to buy corn from Joseph, so severe was the famine everywhere.

12 WHEN JACOB SAW that there was corn in Egypt, he said to his sons, 'Why
 2 do you stand staring at each other? I have heard that there is corn in Egypt.
 Go down and buy some so that we may keep ourselves alive and not starve.'
 3 So Joseph's brothers, ten of them, went down to buy grain from Egypt, 4 but Jacob did not let Joseph's brother Benjamin go with them, for fear that he might come to harm.

5 So the sons of Israel came down with everyone else to buy corn, because 6 of the famine in Canaan. Now Joseph was governor of all Egypt, and it was he who sold the corn to all the people of the land. Joseph's brothers came 7 and bowed to the ground before him, and when he saw his brothers, he recognized them but pretended not to know them and spoke harshly to them. 'Where do you come from?' he asked. 'From Canaan,' they answered, 8 'to buy food.' Although Joseph had recognized his brothers, they did not recognize him. He remembered also the dreams he had had about them; 9 so he said to them, 'You are spies; you have come to spy out the weak 10 points in our defences.' They answered, 'No, sir: your servants have come 11 to buy food. We are all sons of one man. Your humble servants are honest 12 men, we are not spies.' 'No,' he insisted, 'it is to spy out our weaknesses that 13 you have come.' They answered him, 'Sir, there are twelve of us, all 14 brothers, sons of one man in Canaan. The youngest is still with our father, 15 and one has disappeared.' But Joseph said again to them, 'No, as I said before, you are spies. This is how you shall be put to the proof: unless your 16 youngest brother comes here, by the life of Pharaoh, you shall not leave 17 this place. Send one of your number to bring your brother; the rest will 18 be kept in prison. Thus your story will be tested, and we shall see whether 19 you are telling the truth. If not, then, by the life of Pharaoh, you must be 20 spies.' So he kept them in prison for three days.

^a Or of God.^b Or God.^c That is Causing to forget.^d That is Fruit.

On the third day Joseph said to the brothers, 'Do what I say and your 17 lives will be spared; for I am a God-fearing man: if you are honest men, 18 your brother there shall be kept in prison, and the rest of you shall take 19 corn for your hungry households and bring your youngest brother to me; 20 thus your words will be proved true, and you will not die.' ^a

They said to one another, 'No doubt we deserve to be punished because 21 of our brother, whose suffering we saw; for when he pleaded with us we 22 refused to listen. That is why these sufferings have come upon us.' But 23 Reuben said, 'Did I not tell you not to do the boy a wrong? But you would 24 not listen, and his blood is on our heads, and we must pay.' They did not 25 know that Joseph understood, because he had used an interpreter. Joseph 26 turned away from them and wept. Then, turning back, he played a trick 27 on them. First he took Simeon and bound him before their eyes; then he 28 gave orders to fill their bags with grain, to return each man's silver, putting 29 it in his sack, and to give them supplies for the journey. All this was done; 30 and they loaded the corn on to their asses and went away. When they 31 stopped for the night, one of them opened his sack to give fodder to his ass, 32 and there he saw his silver at the top of the pack. He said to his brothers, 'My 33 silver has been returned to me, and here it is in my pack.' Bewildered and 34 trembling, they said to each other, 'What is this that God has done to us?'

When they came to their father Jacob in Canaan, they told him all that 29 had happened to them. They said, 'The man who is lord of the country 30 spoke harshly to us and made out that we were spies. We said to him, "We 31 are honest men, we are not spies. There are twelve of us, all brothers, sons 32 of one father. One has disappeared, and the youngest is with our father in 33 Canaan." This man, the lord of the country, said to us, "This is how I shall 34 find out if you are honest men. Leave one of your brothers with me, take 35 food for your hungry households and go. Bring your youngest brother to 36 me, and I shall know that you are not spies, but honest men. Then I will 37 restore your brother to you, and you can move about the country freely."'
 But on emptying their sacks, each of them found his silver inside, and when 38 they and their father saw the bundles of silver, they were afraid. Their 39 father Jacob said to them, 'You have robbed me of my children. Joseph has disappeared; Simeon has disappeared; and now you are taking Benjamin. Everything is against me.’ Reuben said to his father, ‘You may kill both my sons if I do not bring him back to you. Put him in my charge, and I shall bring him back.’ But Jacob said, ‘My son shall not go with you, for his brother is dead and he alone is left. If he comes to any harm on the journey, you will bring down my grey hairs in sorrow to the grave.’

3 1 2 The famine was still severe in the country. When they had used up the corn they had brought from Egypt, their father said to them, ‘Go back and buy a little more corn for us to eat.’ But Judah replied, ‘The man plainly warned us that we must not go into his presence unless our brother was with us. If you let our brother go with us, we will go down and buy food for you. But if you will not let him, we will not go; for the man said to us, “You shall not come into my presence, unless your brother is with you.”’ Israel said, ‘Why have you treated me so badly? Why did you tell the man that you had yet another brother?’ They answered, ‘He questioned us closely about ourselves and our family: “Is your father still alive?” he asked, “Have you a brother?”, and we answered his questions. How could we possibly know that he would tell us to bring our brother to Egypt?’ Judah said to his father Israel, ‘Send the boy with me; then we can start at once. By doing this we shall save our lives, ours, yours, and our dependants’, and none of us will starve. I will go surety for him and you may hold me responsible. If I do not bring him back and restore him to you, you shall hold me guilty all my life. If we had not wasted all this time, by now we could have gone back twice over.’

11 Their father Israel said to them, ‘If it must be so, then do this: take in your baggage, as a gift for the man, some of the produce for which our country is famous: a little balsam, a little honey, gum tragacanth, myrrh, pistachio nuts, and almonds. Take double the amount of silver and restore what was returned to you in your packs; perhaps it was a mistake. Take your brother with you and go straight back to the man. May God Almighty make him kindly disposed to you, and may he send back the one whom you left behind, and Benjamin too. As for me, if I am bereaved, then I am bereaved.’ So they took the gift and double the amount of silver, and with Benjamin they started at once for Egypt, where they presented themselves to Joseph.

16 When Joseph saw Benjamin with them, he said to his steward, ‘Bring these men indoors, kill a beast and make dinner ready, for they will eat with me at noon.’ He did as Joseph told him and brought the men into the house. When they came in they were afraid, for they thought, ‘We have been brought in here because of that affair of the silver which was replaced in our packs the first time. He means to trump up some charge against us and victimize us, seize our asses and make us his slaves.’ So they approached Joseph’s steward and spoke to him at the door of the house. They said, ‘Please listen, my lord. After our first visit to buy food, when we reached the place where we were to spend the night, we opened our packs and each of us found his silver in full weight at the top of his pack. We have brought it back with us, and have added other silver to buy food. We do not know who put the silver in our packs.’ He answered, ‘Set your minds at rest; do not be afraid. It was your God, the God of your father, who hid treasure for you in your packs. I did receive the silver.' Then he brought Simeon out to them.

The steward brought them into Joseph's house and gave them water to wash their feet, and provided fodder for their asses. They had their gifts ready when Joseph arrived at noon, for they had heard that they were to eat there. When Joseph came into the house, they presented him with the gifts which they had brought, bowing to the ground before him. He asked them how they were and said, 'Is your father well, the old man of whom you spoke? Is he still alive?' They answered, 'Yes, my lord, our father is still alive and well.' And they bowed low and prostrated themselves. Joseph looked and saw his own mother's son, his brother Benjamin, and asked, 'Is this your youngest brother, of whom you told me?', and to Benjamin he said, 'May God be gracious to you, my son!' Joseph was overcome; his feelings for his brother mastered him, and he was near to tears. So he went into the inner room and wept. Then he washed his face and came out; and, holding back his feelings, he ordered the meal to be served. They served him by himself, and the brothers by themselves, and the Egyptians who were at dinner were also served separately; for Egyptians hold it an abomination to eat with Hebrews. The brothers were seated in his presence, the eldest first according to his age and so on down to the youngest: they looked at one another in astonishment. Joseph sent them each a portion from what was before him, but Benjamin's was five times larger than any of the other portions. Thus they drank with him and all grew merry.

Joseph gave his steward this order: 'Fill the men's packs with as much food as they can carry and put each man's silver at the top of his pack. And put my goblet, my silver goblet, at the top of the youngest brother's pack with the silver for the corn.' He did as Joseph said. At daybreak the brothers were allowed to take their asses and go on their journey; but before they had gone very far from the city, Joseph said to his steward, 'Go after those men at once, and when you catch up with them, say, "Why have you repaid good with evil? Why have you stolen the silver goblet? It is the one from which my lord drinks, and which he uses for divination. You have done a wicked thing."' When he caught up with them, he repeated all this to them, but they replied, 'My lord, how can you say such things? No, sir, God forbid that we should do any such thing! You remember the silver we found at the top of our packs? We brought it back to you from Canaan. Why should we steal silver or gold from your master's house? If any one of us is found with the goblet, he shall die; and, what is more, my lord, we will all become your slaves.' He said, 'Very well, then; I accept what you say. The man in whose possession it is found shall be my slave, but the rest of you shall go free.' Each man quickly lowered his pack to the ground and opened it. The steward searched them, beginning with the eldest and finishing with the youngest, and the goblet was found in Benjamin's pack.

At this they rent their clothes; then each man loaded his ass and they returned to the city. Joseph was still in the house when Judah and his brothers came in. They threw themselves on the ground before him, and Joseph said, 'What have you done? You might have known that a man like myself would practise divination.’ Judah said, ‘What shall we say, my lord? What can we say to prove our innocence? God has found out our sin. Here we are, my lord, ready to be made your slaves, we ourselves as well as the one who was found with the goblet.’ Joseph answered, ‘God forbid that I should do such a thing! The one who was found with the goblet shall become my slave, but the rest of you can go home to your father in peace.’

Then Judah went up to him and said, ‘Please listen, my lord. Let me say a word to your lordship, I beg. Do not be angry with me, for you are as great as Pharaoh. You, my lord, asked us whether we had a father or a brother. We answered, “We have an aged father, and he has a young son born in his old age; this boy’s full brother is dead and he alone is left of his mother’s children, he alone, and his father loves him.” Your lordship answered, “Bring him down to me so that I may set eyes on him.” We told you, my lord, that the boy could not leave his father, and that his father would die if he left him. But you answered, “Unless your youngest brother comes here with you, you shall not enter my presence again.” We went back to your servant our father, and told him what your lordship had said. When our father told us to go and buy food, we answered, “We cannot go down; for without our youngest brother we cannot enter the man’s presence; but if our brother is with us, we will go.” Our father, my lord, then said to us, “You know that my wife bore me two sons. One left me, and I said, ‘He must have been torn to pieces.’ I have not seen him to this day. If you take this one from me as well, and he comes to any harm, then you will bring down my grey hairs in trouble to the grave.” Now, my lord, when I return to my father without the boy—and remember, his life is bound up with the boy’s—what will happen is this: he will see that the boy is not with us and will die, and your servants will have brought down our father’s grey hairs in sorrow to the grave. Indeed, my lord, it was I who went surety for the boy to my father. I said, “If I do not bring him back to you, then you shall hold me guilty all my life.” Now, my lord, let me remain in place of the boy as your lordship’s slave, and let him go with his brothers. How can I return to my father without the boy? I could not bear to see the misery which my father would suffer.’

Joseph could no longer control his feelings in front of his attendants, and he called out, ‘Let everyone leave my presence.’ So there was nobody present when Joseph made himself known to his brothers, but so loudly did he weep that the Egyptians and Pharaoh’s household heard him. Joseph said to his brothers, ‘I am Joseph; can my father be still alive?’ His brothers were so dumbfounded at finding themselves face to face with Joseph that they could not answer. Then Joseph said to his brothers, ‘Come closer’, and so they came close. He said, ‘I am your brother Joseph whom you sold into Egypt. Now do not be distressed or take it amiss that you sold me into slavery here; it was God who sent me ahead of you to save men’s lives. For there have now been two years of famine in the country, and there will be another five years with neither ploughing nor harvest. God sent me ahead of you to ensure that you will have descendants on earth, and to preserve you all, a great band of survivors. So it was not you who sent me here, but God, and he has made me a father ^a to Pharaoh, and lord over all his household and ruler of all Egypt. Make haste and go back to my father and give him this message from his son Joseph: "God has made me lord of all Egypt. Come down to me; do not delay. You shall live in the land of Goshen and be near me, you, your sons and your grandsons, your flocks and herds and all that you have. I will take care of you there, you and your household and all that you have, and see that you are not reduced to poverty; there are still five years of famine to come." You can see for yourselves, and so can my brother Benjamin, that it is Joseph himself who is speaking to you. Tell my father of all the honour which I enjoy in Egypt, tell him all you have seen, and make haste to bring him down here.' Then he threw his arms round his brother Benjamin and wept, and Benjamin too embraced him weeping. He kissed all his brothers and wept over them, and afterwards his brothers talked with him.

When the report that Joseph's brothers had come reached Pharaoh's house, he and all his courtiers were pleased. Pharaoh said to Joseph, 'Say to your brothers: "This is what you are to do. Load your beasts and go to Canaan. Fetch your father and your households and bring them to me. I will give you the best that there is in Egypt, and you shall enjoy the fat of the land." You shall also tell them: "Take wagons from Egypt for your dependants and your wives and fetch your father and come. Have no regrets at leaving your possessions, for all the best that there is in Egypt is yours."' The sons of Israel did as they were told, and Joseph gave them wagons, according to Pharaoh's orders, and food for the journey. He provided each of them with a change of clothing, but to Benjamin he gave three hundred pieces of silver and five changes of clothing. Moreover he sent his father ten asses carrying the best that there was in Egypt, and ten she-asses loaded with grain, bread, and provisions for his journey. So he dismissed his brothers, telling them not to quarrel among themselves on the road, and they set out. Thus they went up from Egypt and came to their father Jacob in Canaan. There they gave him the news that Joseph was still alive and that he was ruler of all Egypt. He was stunned and could not believe it, but they told him all that Joseph had said; and when he saw the wagons which Joseph had sent to take him away, his spirit revived. Israel said, 'It is enough. Joseph my son is still alive; I will go and see him before I die.'

SO ISRAEL SET OUT with all that he had and came to Beersheba where he offered sacrifices to the God of his father Isaac. God said to Israel in a vision by night, 'Jacob, Jacob', and he answered, 'I am here.' God said, 'I am God, the God of your father. Do not be afraid to go down to Egypt, for there I will make you a great nation. I will go down with you to Egypt, and I myself will bring you back again without fail; and Joseph shall close your eyes.' So Jacob set out from Beersheba. Israel's sons conveyed their father Jacob, their dependants, and their wives in the wagons which Pharaoh had sent to carry them. They took the herds and the stock which they had acquired in Canaan and came to Egypt, Jacob and all his

7 descendants with him, his sons and their sons, his daughters and his sons' daughters: he brought all his descendants to Egypt.

8^a These are the names of the Israelites who entered Egypt: Jacob and 9 his sons, as follows: Reuben, Jacob's eldest son. The sons of Reuben:
10 Enoch, Pallu, Hezron and Carmi. The sons of Simeon: Jemuel, Jamin, Ohad, Jachin, Zohar, and Saul, who was the son of a Canaanite woman.
12 The sons of Levi: Gershon, Kohath and Merari. The sons of Judah: Er, Onan, Shelah, Perez and Zerah; of these Er and Onan died in Canaan.
13 The sons of Perez were Hezron and Hamul. The sons of Issachar: Tola, 14 Pua, Iob and Shimron. The sons of Zebulun: Sered, Elon and Jahleel.
15 These are the sons of Leah whom she bore to Jacob in Paddan-aram, and there was also his daughter Dinah. His sons and daughters numbered thirty-three in all.

16 The sons of Gad: Ziphion, Haggi, Shuni, Ezbon, Eri, Arodi and Areli.
17 The sons of Asher: Imnah, Ishvah, Ishvi, Beriah, and their sister Serah.
18 The sons of Beriah: Heber and Malchiel. These are the descendants of Zilpah whom Laban gave to his daughter Leah; sixteen in all, born to Jacob.

20 The sons of Jacob's wife Rachel: Joseph and Benjamin. Manasseh and Ephraim were born to Joseph in Egypt. Asenath daughter of Potiphera 21 priest of On bore them to him. The sons of Benjamin: Bela, Becher and Ashbel; and the sons of Bela: Gera, Naaman, Ehi, Rosh, Muppim, Huppim 22 and Ard. These are the descendants of Rachel; fourteen in all, born to Jacob.

24 The son^b of Dan: Hushim. The sons of Naphtali: Jahzeel, Guni, Jezer 25 and Shillem. These are the descendants of Bilhah whom Laban gave to his daughter Rachel; seven in all, born to Jacob.

26 The persons belonging to Jacob who came to Egypt, all his direct 27 descendants, not counting the wives of his sons, were sixty-six in all. Two sons were born to Joseph in Egypt. Thus the house of Jacob numbered seventy when it entered Egypt.

28 Judah was sent ahead that he might appear before Joseph in Goshen, 29 and so they entered Goshen. Joseph had his chariot made ready and went up to meet his father Israel in Goshen. When they met, he threw his arms 30 round him and wept, and embraced him for a long time, weeping. Israel said to Joseph, 'I have seen your face again, and you are still alive. Now I 31 am ready to die.' Joseph said to his brothers and to his father's household,
'I will go and tell Pharaoh; I will say to him, "My brothers and my father's 32 household who were in Canaan have come to me." Now his brothers were shepherds, men with their own flocks and herds, and they had brought 33 them with them, their flocks and herds and all that they possessed. So Joseph said, 'When Pharaoh summons you and asks you what your 34 occupation is, you must say, "My lord, we have been herdsmen all our lives, as our fathers were before us." You must say this if you are to settle in the land of Goshen, because all shepherds are an abomination to the Egyptians.'

^a Verses 8-25: cp. Exod. 6. 14-16; Num. 26. 5-50; 1 Chr. 4. 1, 24; 5. 3; 6. 1; 7. 1, 6, 13, 30; 8. 1-5. ^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. sons.

Joseph came and told Pharaoh, 'My father and my brothers have arrived from Canaan, with their flocks and their cattle and all that they have, and they are now in Goshen.' Then he chose five of his brothers and presented them to Pharaoh, who asked them what their occupation was, and they answered, 'My lord, we are shepherds, we and our fathers before us, and we have come to stay in this land; for there is no pasture in Canaan for our sheep, because the famine there is so severe. We beg you, my lord, to let us settle now in Goshen.' Pharaoh said to Joseph, 'So your father and your brothers have come to you. The land of Egypt is yours; settle them in the best part of it. Let them live in Goshen, and if you know of any capable men among them, make them chief herdsmen over my cattle.'

Then Joseph brought his father in and presented him to Pharaoh, and Jacob gave Pharaoh his blessing. Pharaoh asked Jacob his age, and he answered, 'The years of my earthly sojourn are one hundred and thirty; hard years they have been and few, not equal to the years that my fathers lived in their time.' Jacob then blessed Pharaoh and went out from his presence. So Joseph settled his father and his brothers, and gave them lands in Egypt, in the best part of the country, in the district of Rameses, as Pharaoh had ordered. He supported his father, his brothers, and all his father's household with all the food they needed.

There was no bread in the whole country, so very severe was the famine, and Egypt and Canaan were laid low by it. Joseph collected all the silver in Egypt and Canaan in return for the corn which the people bought, and deposited it in Pharaoh's treasury. When all the silver in Egypt and Canaan had been used up, the Egyptians came to Joseph and said, 'Give us bread, or we shall die before your eyes. Our silver is all spent.' Joseph said, 'If your silver is spent, give me your herds and I will give you bread in return.' So they brought their herds to Joseph, who gave them bread in exchange for their horses, their flocks of sheep and herds of cattle, and their asses. He maintained them that year with bread in exchange for their herds. The year came to an end, and the following year they came to him again and said, 'My lord, we cannot conceal it from you: our silver is all gone and our herds of cattle are yours. Nothing is left for your lordship but our bodies and our lands. Why should we perish before your eyes, we and our land as well? Take us and our land in payment for bread, and we and our land alike will be in bondage to Pharaoh. Give us seed-corn to keep us alive, or we shall die and our land will become desert.' So Joseph bought all the land in Egypt for Pharaoh, because the Egyptians sold all their fields, so severe was the famine; the land became Pharaoh's. As for the people, Pharaoh set them to work as slaves from one end of the territory of Egypt to the other. But Joseph did not buy the land which belonged to the priests; they had a fixed allowance from Pharaoh and lived on this, so that they had no need to sell their land.

Joseph said to the people, 'Listen; I have today bought you and your land for Pharaoh. Here is seed-corn for you. Sow the land, and give one fifth of the crop to Pharaoh. Four fifths shall be yours to provide seed for your fields and food for yourselves, your households, and your dependants.' The people said, 'You have saved our lives. If it please your lordship, we 26 will be Pharaoh's slaves.' Joseph established it as a law in Egypt that one fifth should belong to Pharaoh, and this is still in force. It was only the priests' land that did not pass into Pharaoh's hands.

27 Thus Israel settled in Egypt, in Goshen; there they acquired land, and 28 were fruitful and increased greatly. Jacob stayed in Egypt for seventeen 29 years and lived to be a hundred and forty-seven years old. When the time of his death drew near, he summoned his son Joseph and said to him, 'If I may now claim this favour from you, put your hand under my thigh and swear by the LORD that you will deal loyally and truly with me and not bury 30 me in Egypt. When I die like my forefathers, you shall carry me from Egypt 31 and bury me in their grave.' He answered, 'I will do as you say'; but Jacob said, 'Swear it.' So he swore the oath, and Israel sank down over the end of the bed.

48 The time came when Joseph was told that his father was ill, so he took
2 with him his two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim. Jacob heard that his son Joseph was coming to him, and he summoned his strength and sat up on 3 the bed. Jacob said to Joseph, 'God Almighty appeared to me at Luz in 4 Canaan and blessed me. He said to me, "I will make you fruitful and increase your descendants until they become a host of nations. I will give this 5 land to your descendants after you as a perpetual possession." Now, your two sons, who were born to you in Egypt before I came here, shall be counted as my sons; Ephraim and Manasseh shall be mine as Reuben and 6 Simeon are. Any children born to you after them shall be counted as yours, but in respect of their tribal territory they shall be reckoned under their 7 elder brothers' names. As I was coming from Paddan-aram I was bereaved of Rachel your mother on the way, in Canaan, whilst there was still some distance to go to Ephrath, and I buried her there by the road to Ephrath, that is Bethlehem.'

8 9 When Israel saw Joseph's sons, he said, 'Who are these?' Joseph replied to his father, 'They are my sons whom God has given me here.' Israel said, 10 'Bring them to me, I beg you, so that I may take them on my knees.'^a Now Israel's eyes were dim with age, and he could not see; so Joseph brought 11 the boys close to his father, and he kissed them and embraced them. He said to Joseph, 'I had not expected to see your face again, and now God has 12 granted me to see your sons also.' Joseph took them from his father's knees 13 and bowed to the ground. Then he took the two of them, Ephraim on his right at Israel's left and Manasseh on his left at Israel's right, and brought 14 them close to him. Israel stretched out his right hand and laid it on Ephraim's head, although he was the younger, and, crossing his hands, 15 laid his left hand on Manasseh's head; but Manasseh was the elder. He blessed Joseph and said:

'The God in whose presence my forefathers lived,
my forefathers Abraham and Isaac,
the God who has been my shepherd all my life until this day, 16 the angel who ransomed me from all misfortune,
may he bless these boys;

^a Or may bless them.

they shall be called by my name,
and by that of my forefathers, Abraham and Isaac;
may they grow into a great people on earth.'

When Joseph saw that his father was laying his right hand on Ephraim's head, he was displeased; so he took hold of his father's hand to move it from Ephraim's head to Manasseh's. He said, 'That is not right, my father. This is the elder; lay your right hand on his head.' But his father refused; he said, 'I know, my son, I know. He too shall become a people; he too shall become great, but his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his descendants shall be a whole nation in themselves.' That day he blessed them and said:

'When a blessing is pronounced in Israel,
men shall use your names and say,
God make you like Ephraim and Manasseh', thus setting Ephraim before Manasseh. Then Israel said to Joseph, 'I am dying. God will be with you and will bring you back to the land of your fathers. I give you one ridge of land more than your brothers: I took it from the Amorites with my sword and my bow.'

JACOB SUMMONED HIS SONS and said, 'Come near, and I will tell you what will happen to you in days to come.

Gather round me and listen, you sons of Jacob;
listen to Israel your father. 2

Reuben, you are my first-born,
my strength and the first fruit of my vigour,

 Benjamin is a ravening wolf: 27
 in the morning he devours the prey,
 in the evening he snatches a share of the spoil.'

These, then, are the twelve tribes of Israel, and this is what their father 28
 Jacob said to them, when he blessed them each in turn. He gave them 29 his last charge and said, 'I shall soon be gathered to my father's kin; bury me with my forefathers in the cave on the plot of land which belonged to Ephron the Hittite, that is the cave on the plot of land at 30 Machpelah east of Mamre in Canaan, the field which Abraham bought from Ephron the Hittite for a burial-place. There Abraham was buried 31 with his wife Sarah; there Isaac and his wife Rebecca were buried; and there I buried Leah. The land and the cave on it were bought from the 32 Hittites.' When Jacob had finished giving his last charge to his sons, he 33 drew his feet up on to the bed, breathed his last, and was gathered to his father's kin.

Then Joseph threw himself upon his father, weeping and kissing his 50 face. He ordered the physicians in his service to embalm his father Israel, and they did so, finishing the task in forty days, which was the usual time 2 for embalming. The Egyptians mourned him for seventy days; and then, 3 when the days of mourning for Israel were over, Joseph approached mem- 4 bers of Pharaoh's household and said, 'If I can count on your goodwill, then speak for me to Pharaoh; tell him that my father made me take an oath, 5 saying, "I am dying. Bury me in the grave that I bought ^c for myself in Canaan." Ask him to let me go up and bury my father, and afterwards I will return.' Pharaoh answered, 'Go and bury your father, as he has made 6 you swear to do.' So Joseph went to bury his father, accompanied by all 7 Pharaoh's courtiers, the elders of his household, and all the elders of Egypt, together with all Joseph's own household, his brothers, and his father's 8 household; only their dependants, with the flocks and herds, were left in Goshen. He took with him chariots and horsemen; they were a very great 9 company. When they came to the threshing-floor of Atad beside the river 10 Jordan, they raised a loud and bitter lament; and there Joseph observed seven days' mourning for his father. When the Canaanites who lived there 11 saw this mourning at the threshing-floor of Atad, they said, 'How bitterly the Egyptians are mourning!'; accordingly they named the place beside the Jordan Abel-mizraim. ^d

Thus Jacob's sons did what he had told them to do. They took him to 12 13 Canaan and buried him in the cave on the plot of land at Machpelah, the land which Abraham had bought as a burial-place from Ephron the Hittite,

- 15 When their father was dead Joseph's brothers were afraid and said, 16 'What if Joseph should bear a grudge against us and pay us out for all the 17 harm that we did to him?' They therefore approached Joseph with these 18 words: 'In his last words to us before he died, your father gave us this mes-
19 sage for you: "I ask you to forgive your brothers' crime and wickedness; 20 I know they did you harm." So now forgive our crime, we beg; for we are 21 servants of your father's God.' When they said this to him, Joseph wept.
22 His brothers also wept^a and prostrated themselves before him; they said, 23 'You see, we are your slaves.' But Joseph said to them, 'Do not be afraid.
24 Am I in the place of God? You meant to do me harm; but God meant to 25 bring good out of it by preserving the lives of many people, as we see today.
26 Do not be afraid. I will provide for you and your dependants.' Thus he comforted them and set their minds at rest.
- 22 Joseph remained in Egypt, he and his father's household. He lived there 23 to be a hundred and ten years old and saw Ephraim's children to the third
24 generation; he also recognized as his the children of Manasseh's son
25 Machir. He said to his brothers, 'I am dying; but God will not fail to come 26 to your aid and take you from here to the land which he promised on oath to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.' He made the sons of Israel take an oath, saying, 'When God thus comes to your aid, you must take my bones with you from here.' So Joseph died at the age of a hundred and ten. He was embalmed and laid in a coffin in Egypt.

EXODUS

Israel enslaved in Egypt

- 1 THESSE ARE THE NAMES of the Israelites who entered Egypt
2 with Jacob, each with his household: Reuben, Simeon, Levi and
3 4 Judah; Issachar, Zebulun and Benjamin; Dan and Naphtali, Gad
5 and Asher. There were seventy of them all told, all direct descendants of Jacob. Joseph was already in Egypt.
- 6 In course of time Joseph died, he and all his brothers and that whole 7 generation. Now the Israelites were fruitful and prolific; they increased in 8 numbers and became very powerful,^b so that the country was overrun by 9 them. Then a new king ascended the throne of Egypt, one who knew 10 nothing of Joseph. He said to his people, 'These Israelites have become 11 too many and too strong for us. We must take precautions to see that they do not increase any further; or we shall find that, if war breaks out, they will join the enemy and fight against us, and they will become masters of the country.' So they were made to work in gangs with officers set over them, to break their spirit with heavy labour. This is how Pharaoh's store-cities, Pithom and Rameses, were built. But the more harshly they were treated, the more their numbers increased beyond all bounds, until the Egyptians came to loathe the sight of them. So they treated their Israelite slaves with ruthless severity, and made life bitter for them with cruel servitude, setting them to work on clay and brick-making, and all sorts of work in the fields. In short they made ruthless use of them as slaves in every kind of hard labour.

Then the king of Egypt spoke to the Hebrew midwives, whose names were Shiphrah and Puah. 'When you are attending the Hebrew women in childbirth,' he told them, 'watch as the child is delivered and if it is a boy, kill him; if it is a girl, let her live.' But they were God-fearing women. They did not do what the king of Egypt had told them to do, but let the boys live. So he summoned those Hebrew midwives and asked them why they had done this and let the boys live. They told Pharaoh that Hebrew women were not like Egyptian women. When they were in labour they gave birth before the midwife could get to them. So God made the midwives prosper, and the people increased in numbers and in strength. God gave the midwives homes and families of their own, because they feared him. Pharaoh then ordered all his people to throw every new-born Hebrew boy into the Nile, but to let the girls live.

A descendant of Levi married a Levite woman who conceived and bore a son. When she saw what a fine child he was, she hid him for three months, but she could conceal him no longer. So she got a rush basket for him, made it watertight with clay and tar, laid him in it, and put it among the reeds by the bank of the Nile. The child's sister took her stand at a distance to see what would happen to him. Pharaoh's daughter came down to bathe in the river, while her ladies-in-waiting walked along the bank. She noticed the basket among the reeds and sent her slave-girl for it. She took it from her and when she opened it, she saw the child. It was crying, and she was filled with pity for it. 'Why,' she said, 'it is a little Hebrew boy.' Thereupon the sister said to Pharaoh's daughter, 'Shall I go and fetch one of the Hebrew women as a wet-nurse to suckle the child for you?' Pharaoh's daughter told her to go; so the girl went and called the baby's mother. Then Pharaoh's daughter said to her, 'Here is the child, suckle him for me, and I will pay you for it myself.' So the woman took the child and suckled him. When the child was old enough, she brought him to Pharaoh's daughter, who adopted him and called him Moses,^a 'because', she said, 'I drew^b him out of the water.'

ONE DAY WHEN MOSES WAS GROWN UP, he went out to his own kinsmen and saw them at their heavy labour. He saw an Egyptian strike one of his fellow-Hebrews. He looked this way and that, and, seeing there was no one about, he struck the Egyptian down and hid his body in the sand. When he went out next day, two Hebrews were fighting together. He asked the man who was in the wrong, 'Why are you striking him?' 'Who set you up as an officer and judge over us?' the man replied. 'Do you mean to 15 murder me as you murdered the Egyptian?’ Moses was alarmed. ‘The thing must have become known’, he said to himself. When Pharaoh heard of it, he tried to put Moses to death, but Moses made good his escape and settled in the land of Midian.

16 Now the priest of Midian had seven daughters. One day as Moses sat by a well, they came to draw water and filled the troughs to water their 17 father’s sheep. Some shepherds came and drove them away; but Moses 18 got up, took the girls’ part and watered their sheep himself. When the girls came back to their father Reuel, he asked, ‘How is it that you are back so 19 quickly today?’ ‘An Egyptian rescued us from the shepherds,’ they answered; ‘and he even drew the water for us and watered the sheep.’
20 ‘But where is he then?’ he said to his daughters. ‘Why did you leave him
21 behind? Go and invite him to eat with us.’ So it came about that Moses agreed to live with the man, and he gave Moses his daughter Zipporah in 22 marriage. She bore him a son, and Moses called him Gershom, ‘because’, he said, ‘I have become an alien ^a living in a foreign land.’

23 YEARS PASSED, and the king of Egypt died, but the Israelites still groaned in slavery. They cried out, and their appeal for rescue from their slavery
24 rose up to God. He heard their groaning, and remembered his covenant
25 with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; he saw the plight of Israel, and he took heed of it.

3 Moses was minding the flock of his father-in-law Jethro, priest of Midian. He led the flock along the side of the wilderness and came to Horeb, the 2 mountain of God. There the angel of the LORD appeared to him in the flame of a burning bush. Moses noticed that, although the bush was on 3 fire, it was not being burnt up; so he said to himself, ‘I must go across to 4 see this wonderful sight. Why does not the bush burn away?’ When the LORD saw that Moses had turned aside to look, he called to him out of the 5 bush, ‘Moses, Moses.’ And Moses answered, ‘Yes, I am here.’ God said, ‘Come no nearer; take off your sandals; the place where you are standing
6 is holy ground.’ Then he said, ‘I am the God of your forefathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, the God of Jacob.’ Moses covered his face, for he was afraid to gaze on God.

7 The LORD said, ‘I have indeed seen the misery of my people in Egypt. I have heard their outcry against their slave-masters. I have taken heed of 8 their sufferings, and have come down to rescue them from the power of Egypt, and to bring them up out of that country into a fine, broad land; it is a land flowing with milk and honey, the home of Canaanites, Hittites, 9 Amorites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites. The outcry of the Israelites has now reached me; yes, I have seen the brutality of the Egyptians towards 10 them. Come now; I will send you to Pharaoh and you shall bring my people
11 Israel out of Egypt.’ ‘But who am I,’ Moses said to God, ‘that I should go 12 to Pharaoh, and that I should bring the Israelites out of Egypt?’ God answered, ‘I am ^b with you. This shall be the proof that it is I who have sent you: when you have brought the people out of Egypt, you shall all worship God here on this mountain.’

^a Heb. ger.^b Or I will be; Heb. chych.

Then Moses said to God, 'If I go to the Israelites and tell them that the God of their forefathers has sent me to them, and they ask me his name, what shall I say?' God answered, 'I AM; that is who I am.^a Tell them that I AM has sent you to them.' And God said further, 'You must tell the Israelites this, that it is JEHOVAH^b the God of their forefathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, the God of Jacob, who has sent you to them. This is my name for ever; this is my title in every generation. Go and assemble the elders of Israel and tell them that JEHOVAH the God of their forefathers, the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, has appeared to you and has said, "I have indeed turned my eyes towards you; I have marked all that has been done to you in Egypt, and I am resolved to bring you up out of your misery in Egypt, into the country of the Canaanites, Hittites, Amorites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites, a land flowing with milk and honey." They will listen to you, and then you and the elders of Israel must go to the king of Egypt. Tell him, "It has happened that the LORD the God of the Hebrews met us. So now give us leave to go a three days' journey into the wilderness to offer sacrifice to the LORD our God." I know well that the king of Egypt will not give you leave unless he is compelled. I shall then stretch out my hand and assail the Egyptians with all the miracles I shall work among them. After that he will send you away. Further, I will bring this people into such favour with the Egyptians that, when you go, you will not go empty-handed. Every woman shall ask her neighbour or any woman who lives in her house for jewellery of silver and gold and for clothing. Load your sons and daughters with them, and plunder Egypt.'

Moses answered, 'But they will never believe me or listen to me; they will say, "The LORD did not appear to you."' The LORD said, 'What have you there in your hand?' 'A staff', Moses answered. The LORD said, 'Throw it on the ground.' Moses threw it down and it turned into a snake. He ran away from it, but the LORD said, 'Put your hand out and seize it by the tail.' He did so and gripped it firmly, and it turned back into a staff in his hand. 'This is to convince the people that the LORD the God of their forefathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, the God of Jacob, has appeared to you.' Then the LORD said, 'Put your hand inside the fold of your cloak.' He did so, and when he drew it out the skin was diseased, white as snow. The LORD said, 'Put it back again', and he did so. When he drew it out this time it was as healthy as the rest of his body. 'Now,' said the LORD, 'if they do not believe you and do not accept the evidence of the first sign, they may accept the evidence of the second. But if they are not convinced even by these two signs, and will not accept what you say, then fetch some water from the Nile and pour it out on the dry ground, and the water you take from the Nile will turn to blood on the ground.'

But Moses said, 'O LORD, I have never been a man of ready speech, never in my life, not even now that thou hast spoken to me; I am slow and hesitant of speech.' The LORD said to him, 'Who is it that gives man speech? Who makes him dumb or deaf? Who makes him clear-sighted or blind? Is it not I, the LORD? Go now; I will help your speech and tell you what to

^a I AM . . . I am: or I will be what I will be. ^b The Hebrew consonants are YHWH, probably pronounced Yahweh, but traditionally read Jehovah.

13 14 say.' But Moses still protested, 'No, Lord, send whom thou wilt.' At this the LORD grew angry with Moses and said, 'Have you not a brother, Aaron the Levite? He, I know, will do all the speaking. He is already on 15 his way out to meet you, and he will be glad indeed to see you. You shall speak to him and put the words in his mouth; I will help both of you to 16 speak and tell you both what to do. He will do all the speaking to the people for you, he will be the mouthpiece, and you will be the god he speaks for.
17 But take this staff, for with it you are to work the signs.'

18 At length Moses went back to Jethro his father-in-law and said, 'Let me return to my kinsfolk in Egypt and see if they are still alive.' Jethro told him to go and wished him well.

19 THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES in Midian and said to him, 'Go back to 20 Egypt, for all those who wished to kill you are dead.' So Moses took his wife and children, mounted them on an ass and set out for Egypt with the staff of God in his hand. The LORD said to Moses, 'While you are on your way back to Egypt, keep in mind all the portents I have given you power to show. You shall display these before Pharaoh, but I will make him
22 obstinate and he will not let the people go. Then tell Pharaoh that these are the words of the LORD: "Israel is my first-born son. I have told you to let 23 my son go, so that he may worship me. You have refused to let him go, so I will kill your first-born son."'

24 During the journey, while they were encamped for the night, the LORD met Moses, meaning to kill him, but Zipporah picked up a sharp flint, cut off her son's foreskin, and touched him with it, saying, 'You are my blood-
25 bridegroom.' So the LORD let Moses alone. Then she said, 'Blood-bridegroom by circumcision.'

27 Meanwhile the LORD had ordered Aaron to go and meet Moses in the wilderness. Aaron went and met him at the mountain of God, and he kissed
28 him. Then Moses told Aaron everything, the words the LORD had sent him to say and the signs he had commanded him to perform. Moses and Aaron 29 went and assembled all the elders of Israel. Aaron told them everything that the LORD had said to Moses; he performed the signs before the people,
30 and they were convinced. They heard that the LORD had shown his concern for the Israelites and seen their misery; and they bowed themselves to the ground in worship.

5 After this, Moses and Aaron came to Pharaoh and said, 'These are the words of the LORD the God of Israel: "Let my people go so that they may
2 keep my pilgrim-feast in the wilderness."' 'Who is the LORD,' asked Pharaoh, 'that I should obey him and let Israel go? I care nothing for the
3 LORD: and I tell you I will not let Israel go.' They replied, 'It has happened that the God of the Hebrews met us. So let us go three days' journey
4 into the wilderness to offer sacrifice to the LORD our God, or else he will attack us with pestilence or sword.' But the king of Egypt said, 'Moses and Aaron, what do you mean by distracting the people from their work? Back
5 to your labours! Your people already outnumber the native Egyptians; yet you would have them stop working!'

^a Or Therefore women say.

That very day Pharaoh ordered the people's overseers and their foremen 6 not to supply the people with the straw used in making bricks, as they had 7 done hitherto. 'Let them go and collect their own straw, but see that they 8 produce the same tally of bricks as before. On no account reduce it. They are a lazy people, and that is why they are clamouring to go and offer 9 sacrifice to their god. Keep the men hard at work; let them attend to that and take no notice of a pack of lies.' The overseers and foremen went out 10 and said to the people, 'Pharaoh's orders are that no more straw is to be supplied. Go and get it for yourselves wherever you can find it; but there 11 will be no reduction in your daily task.' So the people scattered all over 12
 Egypt to gather stubble for straw, while the overseers kept urging them on, 13 bidding them complete, day after day, the same quantity as when straw was supplied. Then the Israelite foremen were flogged because they were held 14 responsible by Pharaoh's overseers, who asked them, 'Why did you not complete the usual number of bricks yesterday or today?' So the foremen 15 came and appealed to Pharaoh: 'Why do you treat your servants like this?'
 they said. 'We are given no straw, yet they keep on telling us to make 16 bricks. Here are we being flogged, but it is your people's fault.' But 17 Pharaoh replied, 'You are lazy, you are lazy. That is why you talk about going to offer sacrifice to the LORD. Now go; get on with your work. You 18 will be given no straw, but you must produce the tally of bricks.' When they 19 were told that they must not let the daily tally of bricks fall short, the Israelite foremen saw that they were in trouble. As they came out from Pharaoh's 20 presence they found Moses and Aaron waiting to meet them, and said, 'May 21 this bring the LORD's judgement down upon you: you have made us stink in the nostrils of Pharaoh and his subjects; you have put a sword in their hands to kill us.'

Moses went back to the LORD, and said, 'Why, O Lord, hast thou brought 22 misfortune on this people? And why didst thou ever send me? Since I first 23 went to Pharaoh to speak in thy name he has heaped misfortune on thy people, and thou hast done nothing at all to rescue them.' The LORD 6 answered, 'Now you shall see what I will do to Pharaoh. In the end Pharaoh will let them go with a strong hand, nay, will drive them from his country with an outstretched arm.'

God spoke to Moses and said, 'I am the LORD. I appeared to Abraham, 2 3 Isaac, and Jacob as God Almighty. But I did not let myself be known to them by my name JEHOVAH.^a Moreover, I made a covenant with them to 4 give them Canaan, the land where they settled for a time as foreigners. And 5 now I have heard the groaning of the Israelites, enslaved by the Egyptians, and I have called my covenant to mind. Say therefore to the Israelites, "I 6 am the LORD. I will release you from your labours in Egypt. I will rescue you from slavery there. I will redeem you with arm outstretched and with 7 mighty acts of judgement. I will adopt you as my people, and I will become your God. You shall know that I, the LORD, am your God, the God who 8 releases you from your labours in Egypt. I will lead you to the land which I swore with uplifted hand to give to Abraham, to Isaac and to Jacob. I will give it you for your possession. I am the LORD."'

^a See note on 3. 15.

9 Moses repeated these words to the Israelites, but they did not listen to him; they had become impatient because of their cruel slavery.

10 11 Then the LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'Go and tell Pharaoh king of 12 Egypt to set the Israelites free to leave his country.' Moses made answer in the presence of the LORD, 'If the Israelites do not listen to me, how will Pharaoh listen to such a halting speaker as I am?'

13 Thus the LORD spoke to Moses and Aaron and gave them their commission to the Israelites and to Pharaoh, namely that they should bring the Israelites out of Egypt.

14^a THESE WERE THE HEADS of fathers' families:

Sons of Reuben, Israel's eldest son: Enoch, Pallu, Hezron and Carmi; these were the families of Reuben.

15 Sons of Simeon: Jemuel, Jamin, Ohad, Jachin, Zohar, and Saul, who was the son of a Canaanite woman; these were the families of Simeon.

16 These were the names of the sons of Levi in order of seniority: Gershon, Kohath and Merari. Levi lived to be a hundred and thirty-seven.

17 Sons of Gershon, family by family: Libni and Shimei.

18 Sons of Kohath: Amram, Izhar, Hebron and Uzziel. Kohath lived to be a hundred and thirty-three.

19 Sons of Merari: Mahli and Mushi.

20 These were the families of Levi in order of seniority. Amram married his father's sister Jochebed, and she bore him Aaron and Moses. Amram lived to be a hundred and thirty-seven.

21 Sons of Izhar: Korah, Nepheg and Zichri.

22 Sons of Uzziel: Mishael, Elzaphan and Sithri.

23 Aaron married Elisheba, who was the daughter of Amminadab and the sister of Nahshon, and she bore him Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar.

24 Sons of Korah: Assir, Elkanah and Abiasaph; these were the Korahite families.

25 Eleazar son of Aaron married one of the daughters of Putiel, and she bore him Phinehas. These were the heads of the Levite families, family by family.

26 It was this Aaron, together with Moses, to whom the LORD said, 'Bring 27 the Israelites out of Egypt, mustered in their tribal hosts.' These were the men who told Pharaoh king of Egypt to let the Israelites leave Egypt. It was this same Moses and Aaron.

28 29 WHEN THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES in Egypt he said, 'I am the LORD.

30 Tell Pharaoh king of Egypt all that I say to you.' Moses made answer in the presence of the LORD, 'I am a halting speaker; how will Pharaoh listen to me?'

7 The LORD answered Moses, 'See now, I have made you like a god for 2 Pharaoh, with your brother Aaron as your spokesman. You must tell your brother Aaron all I bid you say, and he will tell Pharaoh, and Pharaoh will

3 let the Israelites go out of his country; but I will make him stubborn. Then will I show sign after sign and portent after portent in the land of Egypt.

4 But Pharaoh will not listen to you, so I will assert my power in Egypt, and with mighty acts of judgement I will bring my people, the Israelites, out of Egypt in their tribal hosts. When I put forth my power against the Egyptians and bring the Israelites out from them, then Egypt will know that I am the LORD.' So Moses and Aaron did exactly as the LORD had commanded. At the time when they spoke to Pharaoh, Moses was eighty years old and Aaron eighty-three.

The LORD said to Moses and Aaron, 'If Pharaoh demands some portent from you, then you, Moses, must say to Aaron, "Take your staff and throw it down in front of Pharaoh, and it will turn into a serpent."' When Moses and Aaron came to Pharaoh, they did as the LORD had told them. Aaron threw down his staff in front of Pharaoh and his courtiers, and it turned into a serpent. At this, Pharaoh summoned the wise men and the sorcerers, and the Egyptian magicians too did the same thing by their spells. Every man threw his staff down, and each staff turned into a serpent; but Aaron's staff swallowed up theirs. Pharaoh, however, was obstinate; as the LORD had foretold, he would not listen to Moses and Aaron.

Then the LORD said to Moses, 'Pharaoh is obdurate: he has refused to set the people free. Go to him in the morning on his way out to the river. Stand and wait on the bank of the Nile to meet him, and take with you the staff that turned into a snake. Say this to him: "The LORD the God of the Hebrews sent me to bid you let his people go in order to worship him in the wilderness. So far you have not listened to his words; so now the LORD says, 'By this you shall know that I am the LORD.' With this rod that I have in my hand, I shall now strike the water in the Nile and it will be changed into blood. The fish will die and the river will stink, and the Egyptians will be unable to drink water from the Nile."' The LORD then told Moses to say to Aaron, 'Take your staff and stretch your hand out over the waters of Egypt, its rivers and its streams, and over every pool and cistern, to turn them into blood. There shall be blood throughout the whole of Egypt, blood even in their wooden bowls and jars of stone.' So Moses and Aaron did as the LORD had commanded. He lifted up his staff and struck the water of the Nile in the sight of Pharaoh and his courtiers, and all the water was changed into blood. The fish died and the river stank, and the Egyptians could not drink water from the Nile. There was blood everywhere in Egypt. But the Egyptian magicians did the same thing by their spells; and still Pharaoh remained obstinate, as the LORD had foretold, and did not listen to Moses and Aaron. He turned away, went into his house and dismissed the matter from his mind. Then the Egyptians all dug for drinking water round about the river, because they could not drink from the waters of the Nile itself. This lasted for seven days from the time when the LORD struck the Nile.

The LORD then told Moses to go into Pharaoh's presence and say to him, 'These are the words of the LORD: "Let my people go in order to worship me. If you refuse to let them go, I will plague the whole of your territory with frogs. The Nile shall swarm with them. They shall come up from the river into your house, into your bedroom and on to your bed, into the houses of your courtiers and your people, into your ovens and your kneading-troughs. The frogs shall clamber over you, your people, and your

5 courtiers.” Then the LORD told Moses to say to Aaron, ‘Take your staff
6 in your hand and stretch it out over the rivers, streams, and pools, to bring 7 up frogs upon the land of Egypt.’ So Aaron stretched out his hand over the 8 waters of Egypt, and the frogs came up and covered all the land. The 9 magicians did the same thing by their spells: they too brought up frogs 10 upon the land of Egypt. Then Pharaoh summoned Moses and Aaron. ‘Pray 11 to the LORD’, he said, ‘to take the frogs away from me and my people, and 12 I will let the people go to sacrifice to the LORD.’ Moses said, ‘Of your royal
13 favour, appoint a time when I may intercede for you and your courtiers
14 and people, so that you and your houses may be rid of the frogs, and none
15 be left except in the Nile.’ ‘Tomorrow’, Pharaoh said. ‘It shall be as you 16 say,’ replied Moses, ‘so that you may know there is no one like our God, 17 the LORD. The frogs shall depart from you, from your houses, your 18 courtiers, and your people: none shall be left except in the Nile.’ Moses and 19 Aaron left Pharaoh’s presence, and Moses appealed to the LORD to remove 20 the frogs which he had brought on Pharaoh. The LORD did as Moses had 21 asked, and in house and courtyard and in the open the frogs all perished.
22 They piled them into countless heaps and the land stank; but when 23 Pharaoh found that he was given relief he became obdurate; as the LORD 24 had foretold, he did not listen to Moses and Aaron.

25 The LORD then told Moses to say to Aaron, ‘Stretch out your staff and 26 strike the dust on the ground, and it will turn into maggots throughout the 27 land of Egypt’, and they obeyed. Aaron stretched out his staff and struck 28 the dust, and it turned into maggots on man and beast. All the dust turned 29 into maggots throughout the land of Egypt. The magicians tried to produce 30 maggots in the same way by their spells, but they failed. The maggots were 31 everywhere, on man and beast. ‘It is the finger of God’, said the magicians 32 to Pharaoh, but Pharaoh remained obstinate; as the LORD had foretold, he 33 did not listen to them.

34 The LORD told Moses to rise early in the morning and stand in Pharaoh’s 35 path as he went out to the river and to say to him, ‘These are the words of 36 the LORD: “Let my people go in order to worship me. If you do not let my 37 people go, I will send swarms of flies upon you, your courtiers, your 38 people, and your houses. The houses of the Egyptians shall be filled with 39 the swarms and so shall all the land they live in, but on that day I will make 40 an exception of Goshen, the land where my people live: there shall be no 41 swarms there. Thus you shall know that I, the LORD, am here in the land.
42 I will make a distinction between my people and yours. Tomorrow this 43 sign shall appear.”’ The LORD did this; dense swarms of flies infested 44 Pharaoh’s house and those of his courtiers; throughout Egypt the land was 45 threatened with ruin by the swarms. Pharaoh summoned Moses and Aaron 46 and said to them, ‘Go and sacrifice to your God, but in this country.’ ‘That 47 we cannot do,’ replied Moses, ‘because the victim we shall sacrifice to the 48 LORD our God is an abomination to the Egyptians. If the Egyptians see us 49 offer such an animal, will they not stone us to death? We must go a three 50 days’ journey into the wilderness to sacrifice to the LORD our God, as he 51 commands us.’ ‘I will let you go,’ said Pharaoh, ‘and you shall sacrifice to 52 your God in the wilderness; only do not go far. Now intercede for me.’

Moses answered, 'As soon as I leave you I will intercede with the LORD. 29 Tomorrow the swarms will depart from Pharaoh, his courtiers, and his people. Only let not Pharaoh trifle any more with the people by preventing 30 them from going to sacrifice to the LORD.' Then Moses left Pharaoh and 31 interceded with the LORD. The LORD did as Moses had said; he removed the swarms from Pharaoh, his courtiers, and his people; not one was left.
But once again Pharaoh became obdurate and did not let the people go. 32

The LORD said to Moses, 'Go into Pharaoh's presence and say to him, 9
"These are the words of the LORD the God of the Hebrews: 'Let my people go in order to worship me.' If you refuse to let them go and still keep 2 your hold on them, the LORD will strike your grazing herds, your horses 3 and asses, your camels, cattle, and sheep with a terrible pestilence. But 4 the LORD will make a distinction between Israel's herds and those of the Egyptians. Of all that belong to Israel not a single one shall die.'" The 5
LORD fixed a time and said, 'Tomorrow I will do this throughout the land.'
The next day the LORD struck. All the herds of Egypt died, but from the 6 herds of the Israelites not one single beast died. Pharaoh inquired and was 7 told that not a beast from the herds of Israel had died; and yet he remained obdurate and did not let the people go.

The LORD said to Moses and Aaron, 'Take handfuls of soot from a kiln. 8
Moses shall toss it into the air in Pharaoh's sight, and it will turn into a fine 9 dust over the whole of Egypt. All over Egypt it will become festering boils on man and beast.' They took the soot from the kiln and stood before 10 Pharaoh. Moses tossed it into the air and it produced festering boils on man and beast. The magicians were no match for Moses because of the 11 boils, which attacked them and all the Egyptians. But the LORD made 12 Pharaoh obstinate; as the LORD had foretold to Moses, he did not listen to Moses and Aaron.

The LORD then told Moses to rise early in the morning, present himself 13 before Pharaoh, and say to him, 'These are the words of the LORD the God of the Hebrews: "Let my people go in order to worship me. This time I 14 will strike home with all my plagues against you, your courtiers, and your people, so that you may know that there is none like me in all the earth. By 15 now I could have stretched out my hand, and struck you and your people with pestilence, and you would have vanished from the earth. I have let 16 you live only to show you my power and to spread my fame throughout the land. Since you still obstruct my people and will not let them go, tomorrow 17 18 at this time I will send a violent hailstorm, such as has never been in Egypt from its first beginnings until now. Send now and bring your herds under 19 cover, and everything you have out in the open field. If anything, whether man or beast, which happens to be in the open, is not brought in, the hail will fall on it, and it will die.'" Those of Pharaoh's subjects who feared the 20 word of the LORD hurried their slaves and cattle into their houses. But those 21 who did not take to heart the word of the LORD left their slaves and cattle in the open.

The LORD said to Moses, 'Stretch out your hand towards the sky to 22 bring down hail on the whole land of Egypt, on man and beast and every growing thing throughout the land.' Moses stretched out his staff towards 23

the sky, and the LORD sent thunder and hail, with fire flashing down to the 24 ground. The LORD rained down hail on the land of Egypt, hail and fiery flashes through the hail, so heavy that there had been nothing like it in all 25 Egypt from the time that Egypt became a nation. Throughout Egypt the hail struck everything in the fields, both man and beast; it beat down every 26 growing thing and shattered every tree. Only in the land of Goshen, where the Israelites lived, was there no hail.

27 Pharaoh sent and summoned Moses and Aaron. 'This time I have sinned,' he said; 'the LORD is in the right; I and my people are in the wrong.
28 Intercede with the LORD, for we can bear no more of this thunder and hail.
29 I will let you go; you need wait no longer.' Moses said, 'When I leave the city I will spread out my hands in prayer to the LORD. The thunder shall cease, and there shall be no more hail, so that you may know that the earth 30 is the LORD's. But you and your subjects—I know that you do not yet fear 31 the LORD God.' (The flax and barley were destroyed because the barley was 32 in the ear and the flax in bud, but the wheat and spelt were not destroyed 33 because they come later.) Moses left Pharaoh's presence, went out of the city and lifted up his hands to the LORD in prayer: the thunder and hail 34 ceased, and no more rain fell. When Pharaoh saw that the downpour, the hail, and the thunder had ceased, he sinned again, he and his courtiers, and 35 became obdurate. So Pharaoh remained obstinate; as the LORD had foretold through Moses, he did not let the people go.

10 Then the LORD said to Moses, 'Go into Pharaoh's presence. I have made him and his courtiers obdurate, so that I may show these my signs among 2 them, and so that you can tell your children and grandchildren the story:
how I made sport of the Egyptians, and what signs I showed among them.
3 Thus you will know that I am the LORD.' Moses and Aaron went in to Pharaoh and said to him, 'These are the words of the LORD the God of the Hebrews: "How long will you refuse to humble yourself before me? Let 4 my people go in order to worship me. If you refuse to let my people go, 5 tomorrow I will bring locusts into your country. They shall cover the face of the land so that it cannot be seen. They shall eat up the last remnant left 6 you by the hail. They shall devour every tree that grows in your countryside. Your houses and your courtiers' houses, every house in Egypt, shall be full of them; your fathers never saw the like nor their fathers before them; such a thing has not happened on their time until now." ' He turned 7 and left Pharaoh's presence. Pharaoh's courtiers said to him, 'How long must we be caught in this man's toils? Let their menfolk go and worship 8 the LORD their God. Do you not know by now that Egypt is ruined?' So Moses and Aaron were brought back to Pharaoh, and he said to them, 'You 9 may go and worship the LORD your God; but who exactly is to go?' 'All,' said Moses, 'young and old, boys and girls, sheep and cattle; for we have 10 to keep the LORD's pilgrim-feast.' Pharaoh replied, 'Very well then; take your dependants with you when you go; and the LORD be with you. But 11 beware, there is trouble in store for you. No, your menfolk may go and worship the LORD, for that is all you asked.' So they were driven out from Pharaoh's presence.

12 Then the LORD said to Moses, 'Stretch out your hand over Egypt so that the locusts may come and invade the land and devour all the vegetation in it, everything the hail has left.' Moses stretched out his staff over the land of Egypt, and the LORD sent a wind roaring in from the east all that day and all that night. When morning came, the east wind had brought the locusts. They invaded the whole land of Egypt, and settled on all its territory in swarms so dense that the like of them had never been seen before, nor ever will be again. They covered the surface of the whole land till it was black with them. They devoured all the vegetation and all the fruit of the trees that the hail had spared. There was no green left on tree or plant throughout all Egypt. Pharaoh hastily summoned Moses and Aaron. 'I have sinned against the LORD your God and against you', he said. 'Forgive my sin, I pray, just this once. Intercede with the LORD your God and beg him only to remove this deadly plague from me.' Moses left Pharaoh and interceded with the LORD. The LORD changed the wind into a westerly gale, which carried the locusts away and swept them into the Red Sea.⁴ There was not a single locust left in all the territory of Egypt. But the LORD made Pharaoh obstinate, and he did not let the Israelites go.

Then the LORD said to Moses, 'Stretch out your hand towards the sky so that there may be darkness over the land of Egypt, darkness that can be felt.' Moses stretched out his hand towards the sky, and it became pitch dark throughout the land of Egypt for three days. Men could not see one another; for three days no one stirred from where he was. But there was no darkness wherever the Israelites lived. Pharaoh summoned Moses. 'Go', he said, 'and worship the LORD. Your dependants may go with you; but your flocks and herds must be left with us.' But Moses said, 'No, you must yourself supply us with animals for sacrifice and whole-offering to the LORD our God; and our own flocks must go with us too—not a hoof must be left behind. We may need animals from our own flocks to worship the LORD our God; we ourselves cannot tell until we are there how we are to worship the LORD.' The LORD made Pharaoh obstinate, and he refused to let them go. 'Out! Pester me no more!' he said to Moses. 'Take care you do not see my face again, for on the day you do, you die.' 'You are right,' said Moses; 'I shall never see your face again.'

Then the LORD said to Moses, 'One last plague I will bring upon Pharaoh and Egypt. After that he will let you go; he will send you packing, as a man dismisses a rejected bride. Let the people be told that men and women alike should ask their neighbours for jewellery of silver and gold.' The LORD made the Egyptians well-disposed towards them, and, moreover, Moses was a very great man in Egypt in the eyes of Pharaoh's courtiers and of the people.

Moses then said, 'These are the words of the LORD: "At midnight I will go out among the Egyptians. Every first-born creature in the land of Egypt shall die: the first-born of Pharaoh who sits on his throne, the first-born of the slave-girl at the handmill, and all the first-born of the cattle.
 All Egypt will send up a great cry of anguish, a cry the like of which has never been heard before, nor ever will be again. But among all Israel not a dog's tongue shall be so much as scratched, no man or beast be hurt."

⁴ Or the Sea of Reeds.

8 Thus you shall know that the LORD does make a distinction between Egypt and Israel. Then all these courtiers of yours will come down to me, prostrate themselves and cry, "Go away, you and all the people who follow at your heels." After that I will go away.' Then Moses left Pharaoh's presence hot with anger.

9 The LORD said to Moses, 'Pharaoh will not listen to you; I will therefore show still more portents in the land of Egypt.' All these portents had Moses and Aaron shown in the presence of Pharaoh, and yet the LORD made him obstinate, and he did not let the Israelites leave the country.

The institution of the Passover

2 1 2 THE LORD SAID TO MOSES and Aaron in Egypt: This month is for you
3 the first of months; you shall make it the first month of the year. Speak
4 to the whole community of Israel and say to them: On the tenth day of 5 this month let each man take a lamb or a kid for his family, one for each 6 household, but if a household is too small for one lamb or one kid, then the 7 man and his nearest neighbour may take one between them. They shall 8 share the cost, taking into account both the number of persons and the 9 amount each of them eats. Your lamb or kid must be without blemish, a 10 yearling male. You may take equally a sheep or a goat. You must have 11 it in safe keeping until the fourteenth day of this month, and then all the 12 assembled community of Israel shall slaughter the victim between dusk 13 and dark. They must take some of the blood and smear it on the two door-14 posts and on the lintel of every house in which they eat the lamb. On 15 that night they shall eat the flesh roast on the fire; they shall eat it with un-16 leavened cakes and bitter herbs. You are not to eat any of it raw or even boiled in water, but roasted, head, shins, and entrails. You shall not leave any of it till morning; if anything is left over until morning, it must be destroyed by fire.

11 This is the way in which you must eat it: you shall have your belt fastened, 12 your sandals on your feet and your staff in your hand, and you must eat in 13 urgent haste. It is the LORD's Passover. On that night I shall pass through 14 the land of Egypt and kill every first-born of man and beast. Thus will I 15 execute judgement, I the LORD, against all the gods of Egypt. And as for 16 you, the blood will be a sign on the houses in which you are: when I see the blood I will pass over^a you; the mortal blow shall not touch you, when I strike the land of Egypt.

14 You shall keep this day as a day of remembrance, and make it a pilgrim-15 feast, a festival of the LORD; you shall keep it generation after generation as 16 a rule for all time. For seven days you shall eat unleavened cakes. On the very first day you shall rid your houses of leaven; from the first day to the seventh anyone who eats leavened bread shall be outlawed from Israel. On the first day there shall be a sacred assembly and on the seventh day there shall be a sacred assembly: on these days no work shall be done, except what must be done to provide food for everyone; and that will be allowed

You shall observe these commandments because this was the very day on which I brought you out of Egypt in your tribal hosts. You shall observe this day from generation to generation as a rule for all time. 17

You shall eat unleavened cakes in the first month from the evening which begins the fourteenth day until the evening which begins the twenty-first day. For seven days no leaven may be found in your houses, for anyone who eats anything fermented shall be outlawed from the community of Israel, be he foreigner or native. You must eat nothing fermented. Wherever you live you must eat your cakes unleavened. 18

Moses summoned all the elders of Israel and said to them, 'Go at once and get sheep for your families and slaughter the Passover. Then take a bunch of marjoram,^a dip it in the blood in the basin^b and smear some blood from the basin^c on the lintel and the two door-posts. Nobody may go out through the door of his house till morning. The LORD will go through Egypt and strike it, but when he sees the blood on the lintel and the two door-posts, he will pass over that door and will not let the destroyer enter your houses to strike you. You shall keep this as a rule for you and your children for all time. When you enter the land which the LORD will give you as he promised, you shall observe this rite. Then, when your children ask you, "What is the meaning of this rite?" you shall say, "It is the LORD's Passover, for he passed over the houses of the Israelites in Egypt when he struck the Egyptians but spared our houses." The people bowed down and prostrated themselves. 21

The Israelites went and did all that the LORD had commanded Moses and Aaron; and by midnight the LORD had struck down every first-born in Egypt, from the first-born of Pharaoh on his throne to the first-born of the captive in the dungeon, and the first-born of cattle. Before night was over Pharaoh rose, he and all his courtiers and all the Egyptians, and a great cry of anguish went up, because not a house in Egypt was without its dead. Pharaoh summoned Moses and Aaron while it was still night and said, 'Up with you! Be off, and leave my people, you and your Israelites. Go and worship the LORD, as you ask; take your sheep and cattle, and go; and ask God's blessing on me also.' The Egyptians urged on the people and hurried them out of the country, 'or else', they said, 'we shall all be dead.' The people picked up their dough before it was leavened, wrapped their kneading-troughs in their cloaks, and slung them on their shoulders. Meanwhile the Israelites had done as Moses had told them, asking the Egyptians for jewellery of silver and gold and for clothing. As the LORD had made the Egyptians well-disposed towards them, they let them have what they asked; in this way they plundered the Egyptians. 28

The exodus from Egypt

THE ISRAELITES SET OUT from Rameses on the way to Succoth, about six hundred thousand men on foot, not counting dependants. And with them too went a large company of every kind, and cattle in great numbers, 37
38

39 both flocks and herds. The dough they had brought from Egypt they baked into unleavened cakes, because there was no leaven; for they had been driven out of Egypt and allowed no time even to get food ready for themselves.

40 The Israelites had been settled in Egypt for four hundred and thirty 41 years. At the end of four hundred and thirty years, on this very day, all the 42 tribes of the LORD came out of Egypt. This was a night of vigil as the LORD waited to bring them out of Egypt. It is the LORD's night; all Israelites keep their vigil generation after generation.

43 The LORD said to Moses and Aaron: These are the rules for the Passover.
44 No foreigner may partake of it; any bought slave may eat it if you have 45 46 circumcised him; no stranger or hired man may eat it. Each lamb must be eaten inside the one house, and you must not take any of the flesh outside
47 the house. You must not break a single bone of it. The whole community 48 of Israel shall keep this feast. If there are aliens living with you and they are to keep the Passover to the LORD, every male of them must be circumcised, and then he can take part; he shall rank as native-born. No one who 49 is uncircumcised may eat of it. The same law shall apply both to the native-born and to the alien who is living among you.

50 The Israelites did all that the LORD had commanded Moses and Aaron;
51 and on this very day the LORD brought the Israelites out of Egypt mustered in their tribal hosts.

3 1 2 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'Every first-born, the first birth of every womb among the Israelites, you must dedicate to me, both man and beast; it is mine.'

3 Then Moses said to the people, 'Remember this day, the day on which you have come out of Egypt, the land of slavery, because the LORD by the strength of his hand has brought you out. No leaven may be eaten this day,
4 5 for today, in the month of Abib, is the day of your exodus; and when the LORD has brought you into the country of the Canaanites, Hittites, Amorites, Hivites, and Jebusites, the land which he swore to your forefathers to give you, a land flowing with milk and honey, then you must observe
6 this rite in this same month. For seven days you shall eat unleavened cakes,
7 and on the seventh day there shall be a pilgrim-feast of the LORD. Only unleavened cakes shall be eaten during the seven days; nothing fermented
8 and no leaven shall be seen throughout your territory. On that day you shall tell your son, "This commemorates what the LORD did for me when 9 I came out of Egypt." You shall have the record of it as a sign upon your hand, and upon your forehead as a reminder, to make sure that the law of the LORD is always on your lips, because the LORD with a strong hand 10 brought you out of Egypt. This is a rule, and you shall keep it at the appointed time from year to year.

11 'When the LORD has brought you into the land of the Canaanites as he 12 swore to you and to your forefathers, and given it to you, you shall surrender to the LORD the first birth of every womb; and of all first-born offspring of your cattle the males belong to the LORD. Every first-born male 13 ass you may redeem with a kid or lamb, but if you do not redeem it, you must break its neck. Every first-born among your sons you must redeem.

When in time to come your son asks you what this means, you shall say to him, "By the strength of his hand the LORD brought us out of Egypt, out of the land of slavery. When Pharaoh proved stubborn and refused to let us go, the LORD killed all the first-born in Egypt both man and beast. That is why I sacrifice to the LORD the first birth of every womb if it is a male and redeem every first-born of my sons. You shall have the record of it as a sign upon your hand, and upon your forehead as a phylactery, because by the strength of his hand the LORD brought us out of Egypt."

NOW WHEN PHARAOH LET THE PEOPLE GO, God did not guide them by the road towards the Philistines, although that was the shortest; for he said, 'The people may change their minds when they see war before them, and turn back to Egypt.' So God made them go round by way of the wilderness towards the Red Sea; and the fifth generation of Israelites departed from Egypt.

Moses took the bones of Joseph with him, because Joseph had exacted an oath from the Israelites: 'Some day', he said, 'God will show his care for you, and then, as you go, you must take my bones with you.'

They set out from Succoth and encamped at Etham on the edge of the wilderness. And all the time the LORD went before them, by day a pillar of cloud to guide them on their journey, by night a pillar of fire to give them light, so that they could travel night and day. The pillar of cloud never left its place in front of the people by day, nor the pillar of fire by night.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'Speak to the Israelites: they are to turn back and encamp before Pi-hahiroth,^a between Migdol and the sea to the east of Baal-zephon; your camp shall be opposite, by the sea. Pharaoh will then think that the Israelites are finding themselves in difficult country, and are hemmed in by the wilderness. I will make Pharaoh obstinate, and he will pursue them, so that I may win glory for myself at the expense of Pharaoh and all his army; and the Egyptians shall know that I am the LORD.' The Israelites did as they were bidden.

When the king of Egypt was told that the Israelites had slipped away, he and his courtiers changed their minds completely, and said, 'What have we done? We have let our Israelite slaves go free!' So Pharaoh put horses to his chariot, and took his troops with him. He took six hundred picked chariots and all the other chariots of Egypt, with a commander in each. Then Pharaoh king of Egypt, made obstinate by the LORD, pursued the Israelites as they marched defiantly away. The Egyptians, all Pharaoh's chariots and horses, cavalry and infantry, pursued them and overtook them encamped beside the sea by Pi-hahiroth to the east of Baal-zephon. Pharaoh was almost upon them when the Israelites looked up and saw the Egyptians close behind. In their terror they clamoured to the LORD for help and said to Moses, 'Were there no graves in Egypt, that you should have brought us here to die in the wilderness? See what you have done to us by bringing us out of Egypt! Is not this just what we meant when we said in Egypt, "Leave us alone; let us be slaves to the Egyptians"?' We would rather be slaves to the Egyptians than die here in the wilderness.' 13 'Have no fear,' Moses answered; 'stand firm and see the deliverance that the LORD will bring you this day; for as sure as you see the Egyptians now, 14 you will never see them again. The LORD will fight for you; so hold your peace.'

^a Or where the desert tracks begin.

15 The LORD said to Moses, 'What is the meaning of this clamour? Tell the 16 Israelites to strike camp. And you shall raise high your staff, stretch out your hand over the sea and cleave it in two, so that the Israelites can pass 17 through the sea on dry ground. For my part I will make the Egyptians obstinate and they will come after you; thus will I win glory for myself at the expense of Pharaoh and his army, chariots and cavalry all together.
18 The Egyptians will know that I am the LORD when I win glory for myself at the expense of their Pharaoh, his chariots and cavalry.'

19 The angel of God, who had kept in front of the Israelites, moved away to the rear. The pillar of cloud moved from the front and took its place 20 behind them and so came between the Egyptians and the Israelites. And the cloud brought on darkness and early nightfall, so that contact was lost throughout the night.

21 Then Moses stretched out his hand over the sea, and the LORD drove the sea away all night with a strong east wind and turned the sea-bed into 22 dry land. The waters were torn apart, and the Israelites went through the sea on the dry ground, while the waters made a wall for them to right and 23 to left. The Egyptians went in pursuit of them far into the sea, all Pharaoh's 24 horse, his chariots, and his cavalry. In the morning watch the LORD looked down on the Egyptian army through the pillar of fire and cloud, and he 25 threw them into a panic. He clogged their chariot wheels and made them lumber along heavily, so that the Egyptians said, 'It is the LORD fighting 26 for Israel against Egypt; let us flee.' Then the LORD said to Moses, 'Stretch out your hand over the sea, and let the water flow back over the Egyptians, 27 their chariots and their cavalry.' So Moses stretched out his hand over the sea, and at daybreak the water returned to its accustomed place; but the Egyptians were in flight as it advanced, and the LORD swept them out into 28 the sea. The water flowed back and covered all Pharaoh's army, the chariots and the cavalry, which had pressed the pursuit into the sea. Not one man 29 was left alive. Meanwhile the Israelites had passed along the dry ground through the sea, with the water making a wall for them to right and 30 to left. That day the LORD saved Israel from the power of Egypt, and the 31 Israelites saw the Egyptians lying dead on the sea-shore. When Israel saw the great power which the LORD had put forth against Egypt, all the people feared the LORD, and they put their faith in him and in Moses his servant.

15 Then Moses and the Israelites sang this song to the LORD:

I will sing to the LORD, for he has risen up in triumph;
the horse and his rider he has hurled into the sea.

2 The LORD is my refuge and my defence,
he has shown himself my deliverer.
He is my God, and I will glorify him;
he is my father's God, and I will exalt him.

The LORD is a warrior: the LORD is his name.
The chariots of Pharaoh and his army
he has cast into the sea;
the flower of his officers are engulfed in the Red Sea.
The watery abyss has covered them,
they sank into the depths like a stone.
Thy right hand, O LORD, is majestic in strength:
thy right hand, O LORD, shattered the enemy.
In the fullness of thy triumph
thou didst cast the rebels down:
thou didst let loose thy fury;
it consumed them like chaff.
At the blast of thy anger the sea piled up:
the waters stood up like a bank:
out at sea the great deep congealed.
The enemy said, 'I will pursue, I will overtake;
I will divide the spoil,
I will glut my appetite upon them;
I will draw my sword,
I will rid myself of them.'
Thou didst blow with thy blast; the sea covered them.
They sank like lead in the swelling waves.
Who is like thee, O LORD, among the gods ^a?
Who is like thee, majestic in holiness,
worthy of awe and praise, who workest wonders?
Thou didst stretch out thy right hand,
earth engulfed them.
In thy constant love thou hast led the people whom thou didst ransom:
thou hast guided them by thy strength
to thy holy dwelling-place.
Nations heard and trembled;
agony seized the dwellers in Philistia.
Then the chieftains of Edom were dismayed, trembling seized the leaders of Moab,
all the inhabitants of Canaan were in turmoil;
terror and dread fell upon them:
through the might of thy arm they stayed stone-still,
while thy people passed, O LORD,
while the people whom thou madest thy own ^b passed by.
Thou broughtest them in and didst plant them in the mount that is thy possession,
the dwelling-place, O LORD, of thy own making,
the sanctuary, O LORD, which thy own hands prepared.
The LORD shall reign for ever and for ever.

^a Or in might.^b madest thy own: or didst create.

19 For Pharaoh's horse, both chariots and cavalry, went into the sea, and the LORD brought back the waters over them, but Israel had passed through 20 the sea on dry ground. And Miriam the prophetess, Aaron's sister, took up her tambourine, and all the women followed her, dancing to the sound 21 of tambourines; and Miriam sang them this refrain:

Sing to the LORD, for he has risen up in triumph;
the horse and his rider he has hurled into the sea.

22 MOSES LED ISRAEL FROM THE RED SEA out into the wilderness of Shur.
For three days they travelled through the wilderness without finding water.
23 They came to Marah, but could not drink the Marah water because it was 24 bitter; that is why the place was called Marah. The people complained to 25 Moses and asked, 'What are we to drink?' Moses cried to the LORD, and the LORD showed him a log which he threw into the water, and then the water became sweet.

It was there that the LORD laid down a precept and rule of life; there he 26 put them to the test. He said, 'If only you will obey the LORD your God, if you will do what is right in his eyes, if you will listen to his commands and keep all his statutes, then I will never bring upon you any of the sufferings which I brought on the Egyptians; for I the LORD am your healer.'

27 They came to Elim, where there were twelve springs and seventy palm-trees, and there they encamped beside the water.

16 The whole community of the Israelites set out from Elim and came into the wilderness of Sin, which lies between Elim and Sinai. This was on the fifteenth day of the second month after they had left Egypt.

2 3 The Israelites complained to Moses and Aaron in the wilderness and said, 'If only we had died at the LORD's hand in Egypt, where we sat round the fleshpots and had plenty of bread to eat! But you have brought us out 4 into this wilderness to let this whole assembly starve to death.' The LORD said to Moses, 'I will rain down bread from heaven for you. Each day the people shall go out and gather a day's supply, so that I can put them to 5 the test and see whether they will follow my instructions or not. But on the sixth day, when they prepare what they bring in, it shall be twice as much 6 as they have gathered on other days.' Moses and Aaron then said to all the Israelites, 'In the evening you will know that it was the LORD who brought 7 you out of Egypt, and in the morning you will see the glory of the LORD, because he has heeded your complaints against him; it is not against us 8 that you bring your complaints; we are nothing.' 'You shall know this', Moses said, 'when the LORD, in answer to your complaints, gives you flesh to eat in the evening, and in the morning bread in plenty. What are we?
It is against the LORD that you bring your complaints, and not against us.'

9 Moses told Aaron to say to the whole community of Israel, 'Come into 10 the presence of the LORD, for he has heeded your complaints.' While Aaron was speaking to the community of the Israelites, they looked towards the wilderness, and there was the glory of the LORD appearing in the cloud.
11 12 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'I have heard the complaints of the Israelites. Say to them, "Between dusk and dark you will have flesh to eat and in the morning bread in plenty. You shall know that I the LORD am your God.”¹³

That evening a flock of quails flew in and settled all over the camp, and in the morning a fall of dew lay all around it. When the dew was gone, there in the wilderness, fine flakes appeared, fine as hoar-frost on the ground. When the Israelites saw it, they said to one another, ‘What is that?’,¹⁴ because they did not know what it was. Moses said to them, ‘That is the bread which the LORD has given you to eat. This is the command the LORD has given: “Each of you is to gather as much as he can eat: let every man take an omer a head for every person in his tent.”’ The Israelites did this, and they gathered, some more, some less, but when they measured it by the omer, those who had gathered more had not too much, and those who had gathered less had not too little. Each had just as much as he could eat. Moses said, ‘No one may keep any of it till morning.’ Some, however, did not listen to Moses; they kept part of it till morning, and it became full of maggots and stank, and Moses was angry with them. Each morning every man gathered as much as he could eat, and when the sun grew hot, it melted away. On the sixth day they gathered twice as much food, two omers each. All the chiefs of the community came and told Moses. ‘This’, he answered, ‘is what the LORD has said: “Tomorrow is a day of sacred rest, a sabbath holy to the LORD.” So bake what you want to bake now, and boil what you want to boil; put aside what remains over and keep it safe till morning.’ So they put it aside till morning as Moses had commanded, and it did not stink, nor did maggots appear in it. ‘Eat it today,’ said Moses, ‘because today is a sabbath of the LORD. Today you will find none outside. For six days you may gather it, but on the seventh day, the sabbath, there will be none.’¹⁵

Some of the people did go out to gather it on the seventh day, but they found none. The LORD said to Moses, ‘How long will you refuse to obey my commands and instructions? The LORD has given you the sabbath, and so he gives you two days’ food every sixth day. Let each man stay where he is; no one may stir from his home on the seventh day.’ And the people kept the sabbath on the seventh day.²⁷

Israel called the food manna; it was white, like coriander seed, and it tasted like a wafer made with honey.³¹

‘This’, said Moses, ‘is the command which the LORD has given: “Take a full omer of it to be kept for future generations, so that they may see the bread with which I fed you in the wilderness when I brought you out of Egypt.”’ So Moses said to Aaron, ‘Take a jar and fill it with an omer of manna, and store it in the presence of the LORD to be kept for future generations.’ Aaron did as the LORD had commanded Moses, and stored it before the Testimony for safe keeping. The Israelites ate the manna for forty years until they came to a land where they could settle; they ate it until they came to the border of Canaan. (An omer is one tenth of an ephah.)³²

The whole community of Israel set out from the wilderness of Sin and travelled by stages as the LORD told them. They encamped at Rephidim, where there was no water for the people to drink, and a dispute arose between them and Moses. When they said, ‘Give us water to drink’, Moses¹⁷ said, 'Why do you dispute with me? Why do you challenge the LORD?'

3 There the people became so thirsty that they raised an outcry against Moses: 'Why have you brought us out of Egypt with our children and our 4 herds to let us all die of thirst?' Moses cried to the LORD, 'What shall I do
 5 with these people? In a moment they will be stoning me.' The LORD answered, 'Go forward ahead of the people; take with you some of the 6 elders of Israel and the staff with which you struck the Nile, and go. You will find me waiting for you there, by a rock in Horeb. Strike the rock; water will pour out of it, and the people shall drink.' Moses did this in the 7 sight of the elders of Israel. He named the place Massah^a and Meribah,^b because the Israelites had disputed with him and challenged the LORD with their question, 'Is the LORD in our midst or not?'

8 9 The Amalekites came and attacked Israel at Rephidim. Moses said to Joshua, 'Pick your men, and march out tomorrow to fight for us against Amalek; and I will take my stand on the hill-top with the staff of God in 10 my hand.' Joshua carried out his orders and fought against Amalek while 11 Moses, Aaron and Hur climbed to the top of the hill. Whenever Moses raised his hands Israel had the advantage, and when he lowered his hands 12 Amalek had the advantage. But when his arms grew heavy they took a stone and put it under him and, as he sat, Aaron and Hur held up his hands, 13 one on each side, so that his hands remained steady till sunset. Thus Joshua defeated Amalek and put its people to the sword.

14 The LORD said to Moses, 'Record this in writing, and tell it to Joshua in these words: "I am resolved to blot out all memory of Amalek from 15 16 under heaven."' Moses built an altar, and named it Jehovah-nissi and said,
 'My oath upon it: the LORD is at war with Amalek generation after generation.'

18 JETHRO PRIEST OF MIDIAN, father-in-law of Moses, heard all that God had done for Moses and Israel his people, and how the LORD had brought 2 Israel out of Egypt. When Moses had dismissed his wife Zipporah, Jethro 3 his father-in-law had received her and her two sons. The name of the one was Gershom, 'for', said Moses, 'I have become an alien^c living in a 4 foreign land'; the other's name was Eliezer,^d 'for', he said, 'the God of my father was my help and saved me from Pharaoh's sword.'

5 Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, now came to him with his sons and his wife, to the wilderness where he was encamped at the mountain of God.
 6 Moses was told, 'Here is Jethro, your father-in-law, coming to you with 7 your wife and her two sons.' Moses went out to meet his father-in-law, bowed low to him and kissed him, and they greeted one another. When 8 they came into the tent Moses told him all that the LORD had done to Pharaoh and to Egypt for Israel's sake, and about all their hardships on the 9 journey, and how the LORD had saved them. Jethro rejoiced at all the good 10-11 the LORD had done for Israel in saving them from the power of Egypt. He said, 'Blessed be the LORD who has saved you from the power of Egypt and of Pharaoh. Now I know that the LORD is the greatest of all gods, because he has delivered the people from the power of the Egyptians who dealt so arrogantly with them.' Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, brought a whole-offering and sacrifices for God; and Aaron and all the elders of Israel came and shared the meal with Jethro in the presence of God. 12

The next day Moses took his seat to settle disputes among the people, and they were standing round him from morning till evening. When Jethro saw all that he was doing for the people, he said, 'What are you doing for all these people? Why do you sit alone with all of them standing round you from morning till evening?' 'The people come to me', Moses answered, 'to seek God's guidance. Whenever there is a dispute among them, they come to me, and I decide between man and man. I declare the statutes and laws of God.' But his father-in-law said to Moses, 'This is not the best way to do it. You will only wear yourself out and wear out all the people who are here. The task is too heavy for you; you cannot do it by yourself. Now listen to me: take my advice, and God be with you. It is for you to be the people's representative before God, and bring their disputes to him. You must instruct them in the statutes and laws, and teach them how they must behave and what they must do. But you must yourself search for capable, God-fearing men among all the people, honest and incorruptible men, and appoint them over the people as officers over units of a thousand, of a hundred, of fifty or of ten. They shall sit as a permanent court for the people; they must refer difficult cases to you but decide simple cases themselves. In this way your burden will be lightened, and they will share it with you. If you do this, God will give you strength, and you will be able to go on. And, moreover, this whole people will here and now regain peace and harmony.' Moses listened to his father-in-law and did all he had suggested. He chose capable men from all Israel and appointed them leaders of the people, officers over units of a thousand, of a hundred, of fifty or of ten. They sat as a permanent court, bringing the difficult cases to Moses but deciding simple cases themselves. Moses set his father-in-law on his way, and he went back to his own country. 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27

Israel at Mount Sinai

IN THE THIRD MONTH after Israel had left Egypt,^a they came to the wilderness of Sinai. They set out from Rephidim and entered the wilderness of Sinai, where they encamped, pitching their tents opposite the mountain. Moses went up the mountain of God, and the LORD called to him from the mountain and said, 'Speak thus to the house of Jacob, and tell this to the sons of Israel: You have seen with your own eyes what I did to Egypt, and how I have carried you on eagles' wings and brought you here to me. If only you will now listen to me and keep my covenant, then out of all peoples you shall become my special possession; for the whole earth is mine. You shall be my kingdom of priests, my holy nation. These are the words you shall speak to the Israelites.' 19 2 3 4 5 6

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds on this day.

7 Moses came and summoned the elders of the people and set before them
 8 all these commands which the LORD had laid upon him. The people all answered together, 'Whatever the LORD has said we will do.' Moses brought 9 this answer back to the LORD. The LORD said to Moses, 'I am now coming to you in a thick cloud, so that I may speak to you in the hearing of the people, and their faith in you may never fail.' Moses told the LORD what 10 the people had said, and the LORD said to him, 'Go to the people and hallow them today and tomorrow and make them wash their clothes. They 11 must be ready by the third day, because on the third day the LORD will 12 descend upon Mount Sinai in the sight of all the people. You must put barriers round the mountain and say, "Take care not to go up the mountain or even to touch the edge of it." Any man who touches the mountain must 13 be put to death. No hand shall touch him; ^a he shall be stoned or shot dead: ^b neither man nor beast may live. But when the ram's horn sounds, they 14 may go up the mountain.' Moses came down from the mountain to the 15 people. He hallowed them and they washed their clothes. He said to the 16 people, 'Be ready by the third day; do not go near a woman.' On the third day, when morning came, there were peals of thunder and flashes of lightning, dense cloud on the mountain and a loud trumpet blast; the people in the camp were all terrified.

17 Moses brought the people out from the camp to meet God, and they 18 took their stand at the foot of the mountain. Mount Sinai was all smoking because the LORD had come down upon it in fire; the smoke went up like 19 the smoke of a kiln; all the people were terrified, and the sound of the trumpet grew ever louder. Whenever Moses spoke, God answered him in 20 a peal of thunder. ^c The LORD came down upon the top of Mount Sinai 21 and summoned Moses to the mountain-top, and Moses went up. The LORD said to Moses, 'Go down; warn the people solemnly that they must not force their way through to the LORD to see him, or many of them will perish.
 22 Even the priests, who have access to the LORD, must hallow themselves, 23 for fear that the LORD may break out against them.' Moses answered the LORD, 'The people cannot come up Mount Sinai, because thou thyself didst solemnly warn us to set a barrier to the mountain and so to keep it 24 holy.' The LORD therefore said to him, 'Go down; then come up and bring Aaron with you, but let neither priests nor people force their way up to the 25 LORD, for fear that he may break out against them.' So Moses went down to the people and spoke to them.

20 God spoke, and these were his words:

2 I am the LORD your God who brought you out of Egypt, out of the land of slavery.

3 You shall have no other god ^d to set against me.

4 You shall not make a carved image for yourself nor the likeness of anything in the heavens above, or on the earth below, or in the waters under the earth.

5 You shall not bow down to them or worship ^e them; for I, the LORD your God, am a jealous god. I punish the children for the sins of the fathers to the third and fourth generations of those who hate me. But I keep faith with thousands, with^a those who love me and keep my commandments. 6

You shall not make wrong use of the name of the LORD your God; the LORD will not leave unpunished the man who misuses his name. 7

Remember to keep the sabbath day holy. You have six days to labour and do all your work. But the seventh day is a sabbath of the LORD your God; that day you shall not do any work, you, your son or your daughter, your slave or your slave-girl, your cattle or the alien within your gates; for in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that is in them, and on the seventh day he rested. Therefore the LORD blessed the sabbath day and declared it holy. 8 9 10 11

Honour your father and your mother, that you may live long in the land which the LORD your God is giving you. 12

You shall not commit murder. 13

You shall not commit adultery. 14

You shall not steal. 15

You shall not give false evidence against your neighbour. 16

You shall not covet your neighbour's house; you shall not covet your neighbour's wife, his slave, his slave-girl, his ox, his ass, or anything that belongs to him. 17

When all the people saw how it thundered and the lightning flashed, when they heard the trumpet sound and saw the mountain smoking, they trembled and stood at a distance. 'Speak to us yourself,' they said to Moses,
'and we will listen; but if God speaks to us we shall die.' Moses answered,
'Do not be afraid. God has come only to test you, so that the fear of him may remain with you and keep you from sin.' So the people stood at a distance, while Moses approached the dark cloud where God was. 18 19 20 21

THE LORD SAID TO MOSES, Say this to the Israelites: You know now that I have spoken to you from heaven. You shall not make gods of silver to be worshipped as well as me, nor shall you make yourselves gods of gold.
You shall make an altar of earth for me, and you shall sacrifice on it both your whole-offerings and your shared-offerings, your sheep and your cattle. Wherever I cause my name to be invoked, I will come to you and bless you. If you make an altar of stones for me, you must not build it of hewn stones, for if you use a chisel on it, you will profane it. You must not mount up to my altar by steps, in case your private parts be exposed
on it. 22 23 24 25 26

These are the laws you shall set before them: 21

When you buy a Hebrew slave, he shall be your slave for six years, but in the seventh year he shall go free and pay nothing. 2

If he comes to you alone, he shall go away alone; but if he is married, his wife shall go away with him. 3

If his master gives him a wife, and she bears him sons or daughters, the woman and her children shall belong to her master, and the man shall go away alone. But if the slave should say, 'I love my master, my wife, and my children; I will not go free', then his master shall bring him to God: 4 5 6

^a with . . . with: or for a thousand generations with . . .

he shall bring him to the door or the door-post, and his master shall pierce his ear with an awl, and the man shall be his slave for life.

7 When a man sells his daughter into slavery, she shall not go free as a 8 male slave may. If her master has not had intercourse with her and she 9 does not please him, he shall let her be ransomed. He has treated her 10 unfairly and therefore has no right to sell her to strangers. If he assigns her 11 to his son, he shall allow her the rights of a daughter. If he takes another 12 woman, he shall not deprive the first of meat, clothes, and conjugal rights.
13 If he does not provide her with these three things, she shall go free without 14 any payment.

12 13 Whoever strikes another man and kills him shall be put to death. But 14 if he did not act with intent, but they met by act of God, the slayer may 15 flee to a place which I will appoint for you. But if a man has the presumption 16 to kill another by treachery, you shall take him even from my altar to 17 be put to death.

15 Whoever strikes his father or mother shall be put to death.

16 Whoever kidnaps a man shall be put to death, whether he has sold him, 17 or the man is found in his possession.

17 Whoever reviles his father or mother shall be put to death.

18 When men quarrel and one hits another with a stone or with a spade,^u
19 and the man is not killed but takes to his bed; if he recovers so as to walk 20 about outside with a stick, then the one who struck him has no liability, 21 except that he shall pay for loss of time and shall see that he is cured.

20 When a man strikes his slave or his slave-girl with a stick and the slave 21 dies on the spot, he must be punished. But he shall not be punished if the 22 slave survives for one day or two, because he is worth money to his master.

22 When, in the course of a brawl, a man knocks against a pregnant woman
23 so that she has a miscarriage but suffers no further hurt, then the offender 24 must pay whatever fine the woman's husband demands after assessment.

23 24 Wherever hurt is done, you shall give life for life, eye for eye, tooth for 25 tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot, burn for burn, bruise for bruise, 26 wound for wound.

26 When a man strikes his slave or slave-girl in the eye and destroys it, he 27 shall let the slave go free in compensation for the eye. When he knocks 28 out the tooth of a slave or a slave-girl, he shall let the slave go free in com-29 pensation for the tooth.

28 When an ox gores a man or a woman to death, the ox shall be stoned, and 29 its flesh may not be eaten; the owner of the ox shall be free from liability.

29 If, however, the ox has for some time past been a vicious animal, and the 30 owner has been duly warned but has not kept it under control, and the ox 31 kills a man or a woman, then the ox shall be stoned, and the owner shall 32 be put to death as well. If, however, the penalty is commuted for a money 33 payment, he shall pay in redemption of his life whatever is imposed upon 34 him. If the ox gores a son or a daughter, the same rule shall apply. If the 35 ox gores a slave or slave-girl, its owner shall pay thirty shekels of silver to 36 their master, and the ox shall be stoned.

33 When a man removes the cover of a well^b or digs a well^b and leaves it uncovered, then if an ox or an ass falls into it, the owner of the well shall 34 make good the loss. He shall repay the owner of the beast in silver, and the dead beast shall be his.

When one man's ox butts another's and kills it, they shall sell the live 35 ox, share the price and also share the dead beast. But if it is known that the 36 ox has for some time past been vicious and the owner has not kept it under control, he shall make good the loss, ox for ox, but the dead beast is his.

When a man steals an ox or a sheep and slaughters or sells it, he shall repay 22 five beasts for the ox and four sheep for the sheep. He shall pay in full; 2-4^a if he has no means, he shall be sold to pay for the theft. But if the animal is found alive in his possession, be it ox, ass, or sheep, he shall repay two.

If a burglar is caught in the act and is fatally injured, it is not murder;
but if he breaks in after sunrise and is fatally injured, then it is murder.

When a man burns off a field or a vineyard and lets the fire spread so that 5
it burns another man's field,^b he shall make restitution from his own field according to the yield expected; and if the whole field is laid waste, he shall make restitution from the best part of his own field or vineyard.

When a fire starts and spreads to a heap of brushwood, so that sheaves, 6 or standing corn, or a whole field is destroyed, he who started the fire shall make full restitution.

When one man gives another silver or chattels for safe keeping, and they 7 are stolen from that man's house, the thief, if he is found, shall restore 8 twofold. But if the thief is not found, the owner of the house shall appear before God, to make a declaration that he has not touched his neighbour's property. In every case of law-breaking involving an ox, an ass, or a sheep, 9 a cloak, or any lost property which may be claimed, each party shall bring his case before God; he whom God declares to be in the wrong shall restore twofold to his neighbour.

When a man gives an ass, an ox, a sheep or any beast into his neighbour's 10 keeping, and it dies or is injured or is carried off, there being no witness, the neighbour shall swear by the LORD that he has not touched the man's 11 property. The owner shall accept this, and no restitution shall be made.
If it has been stolen from him, he shall make restitution to the owner. If 12 13 it has been mauled by a wild beast, he shall bring it in as evidence; he shall not make restitution for what has been mauled.

When a man borrows a beast from his neighbour and it is injured or dies 14
while its owner is not with it, the borrower shall make full restitution; but 15 if the owner is with it, the borrower shall not make restitution. If it was hired, only the hire shall be due.

When a man seduces a virgin who is not yet betrothed, he shall pay the 16 bride-price for her to be his wife. If her father refuses to give her to him, 17 the seducer shall pay in silver a sum equal to the bride-price for virgins.

You shall not allow a witch to live. 18

Whoever has unnatural connection with a beast shall be put to death. 19

Whoever sacrifices to any god but the LORD shall be put to death under 20 solemn ban.

^a Verses 2-4 rearranged thus: 3b, 4, 2, 3a.

^b Or When a man uses his field or vineyard for grazing, and lets his beast loose, and it feeds in another man's field.

21 You shall not wrong an alien, or be hard upon him; you were yourselves 22 23 aliens in Egypt. You shall not ill-treat any widow or fatherless child. If 24 you do, be sure that I will listen if they appeal to me; my anger will be roused and I will kill you with the sword; your own wives shall become widows and your children fatherless.

25 If you advance money to any poor man amongst my people, you shall not act like a money-lender: you must not exact interest in advance from him.

26 If you take your neighbour's cloak in pawn, you shall return it to him
27 by sunset, because it is his only covering. It is the cloak in which he wraps his body; in what else can he sleep? If he appeals to me, I will listen, for
I am full of compassion.

28 You shall not revile God, nor curse a chief of your own people.

29 You shall not hold back the first of your harvest, whether corn or wine.
30 You shall give me your first-born sons. You shall do the same with your oxen and your sheep. They shall stay with the mother for seven days; on the eighth day you shall give them to me.

31 You shall be holy to me: you shall not eat the flesh of anything in the open country killed by beasts, but you shall throw it to the dogs.

23 You shall not spread a baseless rumour. You shall not make common cause with a wicked man by giving malicious evidence.

2 You shall not be led into wrongdoing by the majority, nor, when you give evidence in a lawsuit, shall you side with the majority to pervert 3 justice; nor shall you favour the poor man in his suit.

4 When you come upon your enemy's ox or ass straying, you shall take it
5 back to him. When you see the ass of someone who hates you lying helpless under its load, however unwilling you may be to help it, you must give him a hand with it.

6 7 You shall not deprive the poor man of justice in his suit. Avoid all lies, and do not cause the death of the innocent and the guiltless; for I the LORD 8 will never acquit the guilty. You shall not accept a bribe, for bribery makes the discerning man blind and the just man give a crooked answer.

9 You shall not oppress the alien, for you know how it feels to be an alien;
you were aliens yourselves in Egypt.

10 11 For six years you may sow your land and gather its produce; but in the seventh year you shall let it lie fallow and leave it alone. It shall provide food for the poor of your people, and what they leave the wild animals may eat. You shall do likewise with your vineyard and your olive-grove.

12 For six days you may do your work, but on the seventh day you shall abstain from work, so that your ox and your ass may rest, and your home-born slave and the alien may refresh themselves.

13 Be attentive to every word of mine. You shall not invoke other gods:
your lips shall not speak their names.

14 15 Three times a year you shall keep a pilgrim-feast to me. You shall celebrate the pilgrim-feast of Unleavened Bread for seven days; you shall eat unleavened cakes as I have commanded you, at the appointed time in the month of Abib, for in that month you came out of Egypt.

16 No one shall come into my presence empty-handed. You shall celebrate the pilgrim-feast of Harvest, with the firstfruits of your work in sowing the land, and the pilgrim-feast of Ingathering at the end^a of the year, when you bring in the fruits of all your work on the land. These three times a year shall all your males come into the presence of the LORD GOD. 17

You shall not offer the blood of my sacrifice at the same time as anything leavened. 18

The fat of my festal offering shall not remain overnight till morning.

You shall bring the choicest firstfruits of your soil to the house of the LORD your God. 19

You shall not boil a kid in its mother's milk.

And now I send an angel before you to guard you on your way and to bring you to the place I have prepared. Take heed of him and listen to his voice. Do not defy him; he will not pardon your rebelliousness, for my authority rests in him. If you will only listen to his voice and do all I tell you, then I will be an enemy to your enemies, and I will harass those who harass you. My angel will go before you and bring you to the Amorites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Canaanites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites, and I will make an end of them. You are not to bow down to their gods, nor worship them, nor observe their rites, but you shall tear down all their images and smash their sacred pillars. Worship the LORD your God, and he will bless your bread and your water. I will take away all sickness out of your midst. None shall miscarry or be barren in your land. I will grant you a full span of life. 20

I will send my terror before you and throw into confusion all the peoples whom you find in your path. I will make all your enemies turn their backs. I will spread panic before you to drive out in front of you the Hivites, the Canaanites and the Hittites. I will not drive them out all in one year, or the land would become waste and the wild beasts too many for you. I will drive them out little by little until your numbers have grown enough to take possession of the whole country. I will establish your frontiers from the Red Sea to the sea of the Philistines, and from the wilderness to the River. I will give the inhabitants of the country into your power, and you shall drive them out before you. You shall make no covenant with them and their gods. They shall not stay in your land for fear they make you sin against me; for then you would worship their gods, and in this way you would be ensnared. 27

THEN HE SAID TO MOSES, 'Come up to the LORD, you and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel. While you are still at a distance, you are to bow down; and then Moses shall approach the LORD by himself, but not the others. The people may not go up with him at all.' 24

Moses came and told the people all the words of the LORD, all his laws. The whole people answered with one voice and said, 'We will do all that the LORD has told us.' Moses wrote down all the words of the LORD. He rose early in the morning and built an altar at the foot of the mountain, and put up twelve sacred pillars, one for each of the twelve tribes of Israel. He 3

then sent the young men of Israel and they sacrificed bulls to the LORD 6 as whole-offerings and shared-offerings. Moses took half the blood and put 7 it in basins and the other half he flung against^a the altar. Then he took the book of the covenant and read it aloud for all the people to hear. They said, 8 'We will obey, and do all that the LORD has said.' Moses then took the blood and flung it over the people, saying, 'This is the blood of the covenant which the LORD has made with you on the terms of this book.'

9 Moses went up with Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy of the elders
 10 of Israel, and they saw^b the God of Israel. Under his feet there was, as it 11 were, a pavement of sapphire,^c clear blue as the very heavens; but the LORD did not stretch out his hand towards the leaders of Israel. They 12 stayed there before God;^d they ate and they drank. The LORD said to Moses, 'Come up to me on the mountain, stay there and let me give you the tablets of stone, the law and the commandment, which I have written 13 down that you may teach them.' Moses arose with Joshua his assistant and 14 went up the mountain of God; he said to the elders, 'Wait for us here until we come back to you. You have Aaron and Hur; if anyone has a dispute, 15 let him go to them.' So Moses went up the mountain and a cloud covered 16 it. The glory of the LORD rested upon Mount Sinai, and the cloud covered the mountain for six days; on the seventh day he called to Moses out of 17 the cloud. The glory of the LORD looked to the Israelites like a devouring 18 fire on the mountain-top. Moses entered the cloud and went up the mountain; there he stayed forty days and forty nights.

5 1 2 THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES AND SAID: Tell the Israelites to set aside a contribution for me; you shall accept whatever contribution each 3 man shall freely offer. This is what you shall accept: gold, silver, copper;
 4 5 violet, purple, and scarlet yarn; fine linen and goats' hair; tanned rams' 6 skins, porpoise^e -hides, and acacia-wood; oil for the lamp, balsam for the 7 anointing oil and for the fragrant incense; cornelian and other stones ready 8 for setting in the ephod and the breast-piece.^f Make me a sanctuary, and 9 I will dwell among them. Make it exactly according to the design I show you, the design for the Tabernacle and for all its furniture. This is how you must make it:

10 Make an Ark, a chest of acacia-wood, two and a half cubits long, one 11 cubit and a half wide, and one cubit and a half high. Overlay it with pure 12 gold both inside and out, and put a band of gold all round it. Cast four gold 13 rings for it, and fasten them to its four feet, two rings on each side. Make 14 poles of acacia-wood and plate them with gold, and insert the poles in the 15 rings at the sides of the Ark to lift it. The poles shall remain in the rings of 16 the Ark and never be removed. Put into the Ark the Tokens of the Cove-
 17 nant,^g which I shall give you. Make a cover of pure gold, two and a half 18 cubits long and one cubit and a half wide. Make two gold cherubim of 19 beaten work at the ends of the cover, one at each end; make each cherub of one piece with the cover. They shall be made with wings outspread and pointing upwards, and shall screen the cover with their wings. They shall be face to face, looking inwards over the cover. Put the cover above the Ark, and put into the Ark the Tokens that I shall give you. It is there that I shall meet you, and from above the cover, between the two cherubim over the Ark of the Tokens, I shall deliver to you all my commands for the Israelites.

Make a table of acacia-wood, two cubits long, one cubit wide, and one cubit and a half high. Overlay it with pure gold, and put a band of gold all round it. Make a rim round it a hand's breadth wide, and a gold band round the rim. Make four gold rings for the table, and put the rings at the four corners by the legs. The rings, which are to receive the poles for carrying the table, must be adjacent to the rim. Make the poles of acacia-wood and plate them with gold; they are to be used for carrying the table. Make its dishes and saucers, and its flagons and bowls from which drink-offerings may be poured: make them of pure gold. Put the Bread of the Presence^a on the table, to be always before me.

Make a lamp-stand of pure gold. The lamp-stand, stem and branches, shall be of beaten work, its cups, both calyxes and petals, shall be of one piece with it. There are to be six branches springing from its sides; three branches of the lamp-stand shall spring from the one side and three branches from the other side. There shall be three cups shaped like almond blossoms, with calyx and petals, on the first branch, three cups shaped like almond blossoms, with calyx and petals, on the next branch, and similarly for all six branches springing from the lamp-stand. On the main stem of the lamp-stand there are to be four cups shaped like almond blossoms, with calyx and petals, and there shall be calyxes of one piece with it under the six branches which spring from the lamp-stand, a single calyx under each pair of branches. The calyxes and the branches are to be of one piece with it, all a single piece of beaten work of pure gold. Make seven lamps for this and mount them to shed light over the space in front of it. Its tongs and firepans shall be of pure gold. The lamp-stand and all these fittings shall be made from one talent of pure gold. See that you work to the design which you were shown on the mountain.

Make the Tabernacle of ten hangings of finely woven linen, and violet, purple, and scarlet yarn, with cherubim worked on them, all made by a seamster. The length of each hanging shall be twenty-eight cubits and the breadth four cubits; all are to be of the same size. Five of the hangings shall be joined together, and similarly the other five. Make violet loops along the edge of the last hanging in each set, fifty for each set; they must be opposite one another. Make fifty gold fasteners, join the hangings one to another with them, and the Tabernacle will be a single whole.

Make hangings of goats' hair, eleven in all, to form a tent over the Tabernacle; each hanging is to be thirty cubits long and four wide; all eleven are to be of the same size. Join five of the hangings together, and similarly the other six; then fold the sixth hanging double at the front of the tent. Make fifty loops on the edge of the last hanging in the first set and ^a Or Shewbread.

11 make fifty loops on the joining edge of the second set. Make fifty bronze ^a 12 fasteners, insert them into the loops and join up the tent to make it a single 13 whole. The additional length of the tent hanging ^b is to fall over the back 14 of the Tabernacle. On each side there will be an additional cubit in the length of the tent hangings; this shall fall over the two sides of the Tabernacle to cover it. Make for the tent a cover of tanned rams' skins and an outer covering of porpoise-hides.

15 16 Make for the Tabernacle planks of acacia-wood as uprights, each plank 17 ten cubits long and a cubit and a half wide, and two tenons for each plank joined to each other. You shall do the same for all the planks of the Taber-18 nacle. Arrange the planks thus: twenty planks for the south side, facing 19 southwards, with forty silver sockets under them, two sockets under each 20 plank for its two tenons; and for the second or northern side of the Taber-21 nacle, twenty planks, with forty silver sockets, two under each plank. Make 22 six planks for the far end of the Tabernacle on the west. Make two planks 23 for the corners of the Tabernacle at the far end; at the bottom they shall be 24 alike, and at the top, both alike, they shall fit into a single ring. Do the same 25 for both of them; they shall be for the two corners. There shall be eight planks with their silver sockets, sixteen sockets in all, two sockets under each plank severally.

26 Make bars of acacia-wood: five for the planks on the one side of the 27 Tabernacle, five for the planks on the other side and five for the planks on 28 the far end of the Tabernacle on the west. The middle bar is to run along 29 from end to end half-way up the planks. Overlay the planks with gold, make 30 rings of gold on them to hold the bars, and plate the bars with gold. Set up the Tabernacle according to the design you were shown on the mountain.

31 Make a Veil of finely woven linen and violet, purple, and scarlet yarn, 32 with cherubim worked on it, all made by a seamster. Fasten it with hooks of gold to four posts of acacia-wood overlaid with gold, standing in four 33 silver sockets. Hang the Veil below the fasteners and bring the Ark of the Tokens inside the Veil. Thus the Veil will make a clear separation for you 34 between the Holy Place and the Holy of Holies. Place the cover over the 35 Ark of the Tokens in the Holy of Holies. Put the table outside the Veil and the lamp-stand at the south side of the Tabernacle, opposite the table which 36 you shall put at the north side. For the entrance of the tent make a screen 37 of finely woven linen, embroidered with violet, purple, and scarlet. Make five posts of acacia-wood for the screen and overlay them with gold; make golden hooks for them and cast five bronze sockets for them.

27 Make the altar of acacia-wood; it shall be square, five cubits long by 2 five cubits broad and three cubits high. Let its horns at the four corners be
 3 of one piece with it, and overlay it with bronze. Make for it pots to take away
 4 the fat and the ashes, with shovels, tossing bowls, forks, and firepans, all 4 of bronze. Make a grating for it of bronze network, and fit four bronze rings
 5 on the network at its four corners. Put it below the ledge of the altar, so that 6 the network comes half-way up the altar. Make poles of acacia-wood for 7 the altar and overlay them with bronze. They shall be inserted in the rings

^a Or copper and so throughout the description of the Tabernacle.

at both sides of the altar to carry it. Leave the altar a hollow shell. As you were shown on the mountain, so shall it be made. 8

Make the court of the Tabernacle. For the one side, the south side facing southwards, the court shall have hangings of finely woven linen a hundred cubits long, with twenty posts and twenty sockets of bronze; the hooks and bands on the posts shall be of silver. Similarly all along the north side there shall be hangings a hundred cubits long, with twenty posts and twenty sockets of bronze; the hooks and bands on the posts shall be of silver. For the breadth of the court, on the west side, there shall be hangings fifty cubits long, with ten posts and ten sockets. On the east side, towards the sunrise, which was fifty cubits, hangings shall extend fifteen cubits from one corner, with three posts and three sockets, and hangings shall extend fifteen cubits from the other corner, with three posts and three sockets. At the gateway of the court, there shall be a screen twenty cubits long of finely woven linen embroidered with violet, purple, and scarlet, with four posts and four sockets. The posts all round the court shall have bands of silver, with hooks of silver, and sockets of bronze. The length of the court shall be a hundred cubits, and the breadth fifty, and the height five cubits, with finely woven linen and bronze sockets throughout. All the equipment needed for serving the Tabernacle, all its pegs and those of the court, shall be of bronze. 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19

You yourself are to command the Israelites to bring you pure oil of pounded olives ready for the regular mounting of the lamp. In the Tent of the Presence^a outside the Veil that hides the Tokens, Aaron and his sons shall keep the lamp in trim from dusk to dawn before the LORD. This is a rule binding on their descendants among the Israelites for all time. 20 21

You yourself are to summon to your presence your brother Aaron and his sons out of all the Israelites to serve as my priests: Aaron and his sons Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar. For your brother Aaron make sacred vestments, to give him dignity and grandeur. Tell all the craftsmen whom I have endowed with skill to make the vestments for the consecration of Aaron as my priest. These are the vestments they shall make: a breast-piece, an ephod, a mantle, a chequered tunic, a turban, and a sash. They shall make sacred vestments for Aaron your brother and his sons to wear when they serve as my priests, using gold; violet, purple, and scarlet yarn; and fine linen. 28 2 3 4 5

The ephod shall be made of gold, and with violet, purple, and scarlet yarn, and with finely woven linen worked by a seamster. It shall have two shoulder-pieces joined back and front. The waist-band on it shall be of the same workmanship and material as the fabric of the ephod, and shall be of gold, with violet, purple, and scarlet yarn, and finely woven linen. You shall take two cornelians and engrave on them the names of the sons of Israel: six of their names on the one stone, and the six other names on the second, all in order of seniority. With the skill of a craftsman, a seal-cutter, you shall engrave the two stones with the names of the sons of Israel; you shall set them in gold rosettes, and fasten them on the shoulders 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 of the ephod, as reminders of the sons of Israel. Aaron shall bear their names on his two shoulders as a reminder before the LORD.

13 14 Make gold rosettes and two chains of pure gold worked into the form of 15 ropes, and fix them on the rosettes. Make the breast-piece of judgement;
 16 it shall be made, like the ephod, by a seamster in gold, with violet, purple, 17 and scarlet yarn, and finely woven linen. It shall be a square folded, a span 18 long and a span wide. Set in it four rows of precious stones: the first row, 19 20 sardin, chrysolite and green felspar; the second row, purple garnet, lapis 21 lazuli and jade; the third row, turquoise, agate and jasper; the fourth row, 22 topaz, cornelian and green jasper, all set in gold rosettes. The stones shall correspond to the twelve sons of Israel name by name; each stone shall bear the name of one of the twelve tribes engraved as on a seal.

22 23 Make for the breast-piece chains of pure gold worked into a rope. Make 24 two gold rings, and fix them on the two upper corners of the breast-piece.
 25 Fasten the two gold ropes to the two rings at those corners of the breast-26 piece, and the other ends of the ropes to the two rosettes, thus binding the 27 breast-piece to the shoulder-pieces on the front of the ephod. Make two 28 gold rings and put them at the two lower corners of the breast-piece on the 29 inner side next to the ephod. Make two gold rings and fix them on the two 30 shoulder-pieces of the ephod, low down in front, along its seam above the waist-band of the ephod. Then the breast-piece shall be bound by its rings to the rings of the ephod with violet braid, just above the waist-band of the ephod, so that the breast-piece will not be detached from the ephod.
 Thus, when Aaron enters the Holy Place, he shall carry over his heart in the breast-piece of judgement the names of the sons of Israel, as a constant reminder before the LORD.

30 Finally, put the Urim and the Thummim into the breast-piece of judgement, and they will be over Aaron's heart when he enters the presence of the LORD. So shall Aaron bear these symbols of judgement upon the sons of Israel over his heart constantly before the LORD.

31 32 Make the mantle of the ephod a single piece of violet stuff. There shall 33 be a hole for the head in the middle of it. All round the hole there shall be a 34 hem of woven work, with an oversewn edge, so that it cannot be torn. All 35 round its skirts make pomegranates of violet, purple, and scarlet stuff, with golden bells between them, a golden bell and a pomegranate alternately the whole way round the skirts of the mantle. Aaron shall wear it when he ministers, and the sound of it shall be heard when he enters the Holy Place before the LORD and when he comes out; and so he shall not die.

36 Make a rosette of pure gold and engrave on it as on a seal, 'Holy to the 37 LORD'.^a Fasten it on a violet braid and set it on the very front of the turban.
 38 It shall be on Aaron's forehead; he has to bear the blame for shortcomings in the rites with which the Israelites offer their sacred gifts, and the rosette shall be always on his forehead so that they may be acceptable to the LORD.

39 Make the chequered tunic and the turban of fine linen, but the sash of 40 embroidered work. For Aaron's sons make tunics and sashes; and make tall 41 head-dresses to give them dignity and grandeur. With these invest your brother Aaron and his sons, anoint them, install them and consecrate

^a as . . . LORD: or 'JEHOVAH' as on a seal in sacred characters.

them; so shall they serve me as priests. Make for them linen drawers 42 reaching to the thighs to cover their private parts; and Aaron and his sons 43 shall wear them when they enter the Tent of the Presence or approach the altar to minister in the Holy Place. Thus they will not incur guilt and die.
 This is a rule binding on him and his descendants for all time.

In consecrating them to be my priests this is the rite to be observed. Take 29 a young bull and two rams without blemish. Take unleavened loaves, un- 2 leavened cakes mixed with oil, and unleavened wafers smeared with oil, all made of wheaten flour; put them in a single basket and bring them in it. 3 Bring also the bull and the two rams. Bring Aaron and his sons to the 4 entrance of the Tent of the Presence, and wash them with water. Take the 5 vestments and invest Aaron with the tunic, the mantle of the ephod, the ephod itself and the breast-piece, and fasten the ephod to him with its waist-band. Set the turban on his head, and the symbol of holy dedication 6 on the turban. Take the anointing oil, pour it on his head and anoint him. 7
 Then bring his sons forward, invest them with tunics, gird them with the 8 9 sashes and tie their tall head-dresses on them. They shall hold the priesthood by a rule binding for all time.

Next you shall install Aaron and his sons. Bring the bull to the front of the 10 Tent of the Presence, and they shall lay their hands on its head. Slaughter 11 the bull before the LORD at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence. Take 12 some of its blood, and put it with your finger on the horns of the altar. Pour all the rest of it at the base of the altar. Then take the fat covering the entrails, 13 the long lobe of the liver, and the two kidneys with the fat upon them, and burn it on the altar; but the flesh of the bull, and its skin and offal, you shall 14 destroy by fire outside the camp. It is a sin-offering.

Take one of the rams, and Aaron and his sons shall lay their hands on its 15 head. Then slaughter it, take its blood and fling it against the sides of the 16 altar. Cut the ram up; wash its entrails and its shins, lay them with the 17 pieces and the head, and burn the whole ram on the altar: it is a whole- 18 offering to the LORD; it is a soothing odour, a food-offering to the LORD.

Take the second ram, and let Aaron and his sons lay their hands on its 19 head. Then slaughter it, take some of its blood, and put it on the lobes of 20 the right ears of Aaron and his sons, and on their right thumbs and big toes.
 Fling the rest of the blood against the sides of the altar. Take some of the 21 blood which is on the altar and some of the anointing oil, and sprinkle it on Aaron and his vestments, and on his sons and their vestments. So shall he 22 and his vestments, and his sons and their vestments become holy. Take the fat from the ram, the fat-tail, the fat covering the entrails, the long lobe of 23
 the liver, the two kidneys with the fat upon them, and the right leg: for it is a ram of installation. Take also one round loaf of bread, one cake cooked 24 with oil, and one wafer from the basket of unleavened bread that is before the LORD. Set all these on the hands of Aaron and of his sons and present 25 them as a special gift before the LORD. Then take them out of their hands, and burn them on the altar with the whole-offering for a soothing odour to 26
 the LORD: it is a food-offering to the LORD. Take the breast of Aaron's ram of installation, present it as a special gift before the LORD, and it shall be your perquisite.

27 Hallow the breast of the special gift and the leg of the contribution, that 28 which is presented and that which is set aside from the ram of installation, that which is for Aaron and that which is for his sons; and they shall belong to Aaron and his sons, by a rule binding for all time, as a gift from the Israelites, for it is a contribution, set aside from their shared-offerings, their contribution to the LORD.

29 Aaron's sacred vestments shall be kept for the anointing and installation 30 of his sons after him. The priest appointed in his stead from among his sons, the one who enters^a the Tent of the Presence to minister in the Holy Place, shall wear them for seven days.

31 32 Take the ram of installation, and boil its flesh in a sacred place; Aaron and his sons shall eat the ram's flesh and the bread left in the basket, at the 33 entrance to the Tent of the Presence. They shall eat the things with which expiation was made at their installation and their consecration. No un-34 qualified person may eat them, for they are holy. If any of the flesh of the installation, or any of the bread, is left over till morning, you shall destroy it by fire; it shall not be eaten, for it is holy.

35 Do this with Aaron and his sons as I have commanded you, spending seven days over their installation.

36 Offer a bull daily, a sin-offering as expiation for sin; offer the sin-offering on the altar when you make expiation for it, and consecrate it by 37 anointing. For seven days you shall make expiation for the altar, and consecrate it, and it shall be most holy. Whatever touches the altar shall be forfeit as sacred.

38 This is what you shall offer on the altar: two yearling rams regularly 39 every day. You shall offer the one ram at dawn, and the second between 40 dusk and dark, a tenth of an ephah of flour mixed with a quarter of a hin of pure oil of pounded olives, and a drink-offering of a quarter of a hin of wine 41 for the first ram. You shall offer the second ram between dusk and dark, and with it the same grain-offering and drink-offering as at dawn, for a 42 soothing odour: it is a food-offering to the LORD, a regular whole-offering in every generation; you shall make the offering at the entrance to the Tent 43 of the Presence before the LORD, where I meet you and speak to you. I shall meet the Israelites there, and the place will be hallowed by my glory.
 44 I shall hallow the Tent of the Presence and the altar; and Aaron and his 45 sons I shall consecrate to serve me as priests. I shall dwell in the midst of 46 the Israelites, I shall become their God, and by my dwelling among them they will know that I am the LORD their God who brought them out of Egypt. I am the LORD their God.

0 1 2 Make an altar on which to burn incense; make it of acacia-wood. It shall be square, a cubit long by a cubit broad and two cubits high; the horns of 3 one piece with it. Overlay it with pure gold, the top, the sides all round, and 4 the horns; and put round it a band of gold. Make pairs of gold rings for it; put them under the band at the two corners on both sides to receive the 5 poles by which it is to be carried. Make the poles of acacia-wood and over-6 lay them with gold. Put it before the Veil in front of the Ark of the Tokens 7 where I will meet you. On it Aaron shall burn fragrant incense; every morning when he tends the lamps he shall burn the incense, and when he 8 mounts the lamps between dusk and dark, he shall burn the incense; so there shall be a regular burning of incense before the LORD for all time.

^a Or when he enters.

 You shall not offer on it any unauthorized incense, nor any whole-offering 9 or grain-offering; and you shall not pour a drink-offering over it. Aaron 10 shall make expiation with blood on its horns once a year; with blood from the sin-offering of the yearly Expiation^a he shall do this for all time. It is most holy to the LORD.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said: When you number the Israelites 11 12 for the purpose of registration, each man shall give a ransom for his life to the LORD, to avert plague among them during the registration. As each 13 man crosses over to those already counted he shall give half a shekel by the sacred standard (twenty gerahs to the shekel) as a contribution to the LORD.
 Everyone from twenty years old and upwards who has crossed over to those 14 already counted shall give a contribution to the LORD. The rich man shall 15 give no more than the half-shekel, and the poor man shall give no less, when you give the contribution to the LORD to make expiation for your lives. The 16 money received from the Israelites for expiation you shall apply to the service of the Tent of the Presence. The expiation for your lives shall be a reminder of the Israelites to the LORD.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said: Make a bronze basin for ablution 17 18 with its stand of bronze; put it between the Tent of the Presence and the altar, and fill it with water with which Aaron and his sons shall wash their 19 hands and feet. When they enter the Tent of the Presence they shall wash 20 with water, lest they die. So also when they approach the altar to minister, to burn a food-offering to the LORD, they shall wash their hands and 21 feet, lest they die. It shall be a rule for all time binding on him and his descendants in every generation.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said: You yourself shall take spices as 22 23 follows: five hundred shekels of sticks of myrrh, half that amount (two hundred and fifty shekels) of fragrant cinnamon, two hundred and fifty 24 shekels of aromatic cane, five hundred shekels of cassia by the sacred standard, and a hin of olive oil. From these prepare sacred anointing oil, 25 a perfume compounded by the perfumer's art. This shall be the sacred anointing oil. Anoint with it the Tent of the Presence and the Ark of the 26 Tokens, the table and all its vessels, the lamp-stand and its fittings, the 27 altar of incense, the altar of whole-offering and all its vessels, the basin and 28 its stand. You shall consecrate them, and they shall be most holy; whatever 29 touches them shall be forfeit as sacred. Anoint Aaron and his sons, and 30 consecrate them to be my priests. Speak to the Israelites and say: This shall 31 be the holy anointing oil for my service in every generation. It shall not be 32 used for anointing the human body, and you must not prepare any oil like it after the same prescription. It is holy, and you shall treat it as holy.
 The man who compounds perfume like it, or who puts any of it on any 33 unqualified person, shall be cut off from his father's kin.

The LORD said to Moses, Take fragrant spices: gum resin,^b aromatic 34 shell, galbanum; add pure frankincense to the spices in equal proportions.

^a Or Atonement.^b Or mastic.

35 Make it into incense, perfume made by the perfumer's craft, salted and 36 pure, a holy thing. Pound some of it into fine powder, and put it in front of the Tokens in the Tent of the Presence, where I shall meet you; you shall 37 treat it as most holy. The incense prepared according to this prescription you shall not make for your own use. You shall treat it as holy to the LORD.
 38 The man who makes any like it for his own pleasure shall be cut off from his father's kin.

1 1 2 THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES AND SAID, Mark this: I have specially 3 chosen Bezalel son of Uri, son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah. I have filled him with divine spirit, making him skilful and ingenious, expert in every craft, 4 5 and a master of design, whether in gold, silver, copper, or cutting stones 6 to be set, or carving wood, for workmanship of every kind. Further, I have appointed Aholiab^a son of Ahisamach of the tribe of Dan to help him, and I have endowed every skilled craftsman with the skill which he has. They 7 shall make everything that I have commanded you: the Tent of the Presence, the Ark for the Tokens, the cover over it, and all the furnishings of 8 the tent; the table and its vessels, the pure lamp-stand and all its fittings, 9 the altar of incense, the altar of whole-offering and all its vessels, the basin 10 and its stand; the stitched vestments, that is the sacred vestments for Aaron the priest and the vestments for his sons when they minister as 11 priests, the anointing oil and the fragrant incense for the Holy Place. They shall carry out all I have commanded you.

12 13 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to the Israelites, you yourself, and say to them: Above all you shall observe my sabbaths, for the sabbath is a sign between me and you in every generation that you may know that 14 I am the LORD who hallows you. You shall keep the sabbath, because it is a holy day for you. If anyone profanes it he must be put to death. Anyone 15 who does work on it shall be cut off from his father's kin. Work may be done on six days, but on the seventh day there is a sabbath of sacred rest, holy to the LORD. Whoever does work on the sabbath day must be put to 16 death. The Israelites shall keep the sabbath, they shall keep it in every 17 generation as a covenant for ever. It is a sign for ever between me and the Israelites, for in six days the LORD made the heavens and the earth, but on the seventh day he ceased work and refreshed himself.

18 When he had finished speaking with Moses on Mount Sinai, the LORD gave him the two tablets of the Tokens, tablets of stone written with the finger of God.

32 WHEN THE PEOPLE SAW that Moses was so long in coming down from the mountain, they confronted Aaron and said to him, 'Come, make us gods to go ahead of us. As for this fellow Moses, who brought us up from 2 Egypt, we do not know what has become of him.' Aaron answered them, 'Strip the gold rings from the ears of your wives and daughters, and bring 3 them to me.' So all the people stripped themselves of their gold earrings 4 and brought them to Aaron. He took them out of their hands, cast the metal in a mould, and made it into the image of a bull-calf. 'These', he said, 'are your gods, O Israel, that brought you up from Egypt.' Then Aaron 5 was afraid and built an altar in front of it and issued this proclamation, 'Tomorrow there is to be a pilgrim-feast to the LORD.' Next day the people 6 rose early, offered whole-offerings, and brought shared-offerings. After this they sat down to eat and drink and then gave themselves up to revelry.

^a Or Oholiab.

 But the LORD said to Moses, 'Go down at once, for your people, the people 7 you brought up from Egypt, have done a disgraceful thing; so quickly have 8 they turned aside from the way I commanded them. They have made themselves an image of a bull-calf, they have prostrated themselves before it, sacrificed to it and said, "These are your gods, O Israel, that brought you up from Egypt." ' So the LORD said to Moses, 'I have considered this 9 people, and I see that they are a stubborn people. Now, let me alone to vent my anger upon them, so that I may put an end to them and make a great 10 nation spring from you.' But Moses set himself to placate the LORD his 11 God: 'O LORD,' he said, 'why shouldst thou vent thy anger upon thy people, whom thou didst bring out of Egypt with great power and a strong 12 hand? Why let the Egyptians say, "So he meant evil when he took them out, to kill them in the mountains and wipe them off the face of the earth"?
 Turn from thy anger, and think better of the evil thou dost intend against thy people. Remember Abraham, Isaac and Israel, thy servants, to whom thou didst swear by thy own self: "I will make your posterity countless as the stars in the sky, and all this land, of which I have spoken, I will give to them, and they shall possess it for ever." ' So the LORD relented, and spared 14 his people the evil with which he had threatened them.

Moses turned and went down the mountain with the two tablets of the 15
 Tokens in his hands, inscribed on both sides; on the front and on the back they were inscribed. The tablets were the handiwork of God, and the 16 writing was God's writing, engraved on the tablets. Joshua, hearing the uproar the people were making, said to Moses, 'Listen! There is fighting 17 in the camp.' Moses replied, 18

'This is not the clamour of warriors,
 nor the clamour of a defeated people;
 it is the sound of singing that I hear.'

As he approached the camp, Moses saw the bull-calf and the dancing, and 19
 he was angry; he flung the tablets down, and they were shattered to pieces at the foot of the mountain. Then he took the calf they had made and burnt 20 it; he ground it to powder, sprinkled it on water, and made the Israelites drink it. He demanded of Aaron, 'What did this people do to you that you 21 should have brought such great guilt upon them?' Aaron replied, 'Do not be angry, sir. The people were deeply troubled; that you well know. And 23 they said to me, "Make us gods to go ahead of us, because, as for this fellow Moses, who brought us up from Egypt, we do not know what has become of him." So I said to them, "Those of you who have any gold, strip it off." 24
 They gave it me, I threw it in the fire, and out came this bull-calf.' Moses 25 saw that the people were out of control and that Aaron had laid them open to the secret malice of their enemies. He took his place at the gate of the 26 camp and said, 'Who is on the LORD's side? Come here to me'; and the 27 Levites all rallied to him. He said to them, "These are the words of the LORD the God of Israel: "Arm yourselves, each of you, with his sword. Go through the camp from gate to gate and back again. Each of you kill his brother, his friend, his neighbour." The Levites obeyed, and about three thousand of the people died that day. Moses then said, "Today you have consecrated yourselves to the LORD completely, because you have turned each against his own son and his own brother and so have this day brought a blessing upon yourselves."

30 The next day Moses said to the people, "You have committed a great sin. I shall now go up to the LORD; perhaps I may be able to secure pardon for your sin." So Moses returned to the LORD and said, "O hear me! This people has committed a great sin: they have made themselves gods of gold. If thou wilt forgive them, forgive. But if not, blot out my name, I pray, from thy book which thou hast written." The LORD answered Moses, "It is the man who has sinned against me that I will blot out from my book. But go now, lead the people to the place which I have told you of. My angel shall go ahead of you, but a day will come when I shall punish them for their sin." And the LORD smote the people for worshipping the bull-calf which Aaron had made.

33 THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES: "Come, go up from here, you and the people you have brought up from Egypt, to the land which I swore to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob that I would give to their posterity. I will send an angel ahead of you, and will drive out the Canaanites, the Amorites and the Hittites and the Perizzites, the Hivites and the Jebusites. I will bring you to a land flowing with milk and honey, but I will not journey in your company, for fear that I annihilate you on the way; for you are a stubborn people." When the people heard this harsh sentence they went about like mourners, and no man put on his ornaments. The LORD said to Moses, "Tell the Israelites, "You are a stubborn people: at any moment, if I journey in your company, I may annihilate you. Put away your ornaments now, and I will determine what to do to you." And so the Israelites stripped off their ornaments, and wore them no more from Mount Horeb onwards.

7 Moses used to take a^a tent and pitch it at a distance outside the camp. He called it the Tent of the Presence, and everyone who sought the LORD would go out to the Tent of the Presence outside the camp. Whenever Moses went out to the tent, all the people would rise and stand, each at the entrance to his tent, and follow Moses with their eyes until he entered the tent. When Moses entered it, the pillar of cloud came down, and stayed at the entrance to the tent while the LORD spoke with Moses. As soon as the people saw the pillar of cloud standing at the entrance to the tent, they would all prostrate themselves, every man at the entrance to his tent. The LORD would speak with Moses face to face, as one man speaks to another. Then Moses would return to the camp, but his young assistant, Joshua son of Nun, never moved from inside the tent.

12 Moses said to the LORD, "Thou bidst me lead this people up, but thou hast not told me whom thou wilt send with me. Thou hast said to me, "I know you by name, and, further, you have found favour with me." If I have indeed won thy favour, then teach me to know thy way, so that I can know thee and continue in favour with thee, for this nation is thy own people.' The LORD answered, 'I will go with you in person and set your mind at rest.' Moses said to him, 'Indeed if thou dost not go in person, do not send us up from here; for how can it ever be known that I and thy people have found favour with thee, except by thy going with us? So shall we be distinct, I and thy people, from all the peoples on earth.' The LORD said to Moses, 'I will do this thing that you have asked, because you have found favour with me, and I know you by name.'

And Moses prayed, 'Show me thy glory.' The LORD answered, 'I will make all my goodness^a pass before you, and I will pronounce in your hearing the Name JEHOVAH.^b I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion.' But he added,
 'My face you cannot see, for no mortal man may see me and live.' The LORD said, 'Here is a place beside me. Take your stand on the rock and when my glory passes by, I will put you in a crevice of the rock and cover you with my hand until I have passed by. Then I will take away my hand, and you shall see my back, but my face shall not be seen.'

The LORD said to Moses, 'Cut two stone tablets like the first, and I will write on the tablets the words which were on the first tablets, which you broke in pieces. Be ready by morning. Then in the morning go up Mount Sinai; stand and wait for me there on the top. No man shall go up with you, no man shall even be seen anywhere on the mountain, nor shall flocks or herds graze within sight of that mountain.' So Moses cut two stone tablets like the first, and he rose early in the morning and went up Mount Sinai as the LORD had commanded him, taking the two stone tablets in his hands.
 And the LORD came down in the cloud and took his place beside him and pronounced the Name JEHOVAH. Then the LORD passed in front of him and called aloud, 'JEHOVAH, the LORD, a god compassionate and gracious, long-suffering, ever constant and true, maintaining constancy to thousands, forgiving iniquity, rebellion, and sin, and not sweeping the guilty clean away; but one who punishes sons and grandsons to the third and fourth generation for the iniquity of their fathers!' Moses made haste, bowed to the ground and prostrated himself. He said, 'If I have indeed won thy favour, O Lord, then may the Lord go in our company. However stubborn a people they are, forgive our iniquity and our sin and take us as thy own possession.'

The LORD said, Here and now I make a covenant. In full view of all your people I will do such miracles as have never been performed in all the world or in any nation. All the surrounding peoples shall see the work of the LORD, for fearful is that which I will do for you. ^c Observe all I command you this day; and I for my part will drive out before you the Amorites and the Canaanites and the Hittites and the Perizzites and the Hivites and the Jebusites. Be careful not to make a covenant with the natives of the land against which you are going, or they will prove a snare in your midst. No:

^a Or character.

^b See note on 3. 15.

^c for fearful . . . for you: or (for he is to be feared) which I will do for you.

14 you shall demolish their altars, smash their sacred pillars and cut down their 15 sacred poles. You shall not prostrate yourselves to any other god. For the 16 LORD's name is the Jealous God, and a jealous god he is. Be careful not to 17 make a covenant with the natives of the land, or, when they go wantonly 18 after their gods and sacrifice to them, you may be invited, any one of you, 19 to partake of their sacrifices, and marry your sons to their daughters, and 20 when their daughters go wantonly after their gods, they may lead your sons 21 astray too.

17 You shall not make yourselves gods of cast metal.

18 You shall observe the pilgrim-feast of Unleavened Bread: for seven days, 19 as I have commanded you, you shall eat unleavened cakes at the appointed 20 time, in the month of Abib, because in the month of Abib you went out 21 from Egypt.

19 Every first birth of the womb belongs to me, and the males of all your 20 herds, both cattle and sheep. You may buy back the first birth of an ass by 21 giving a sheep instead, but if you do not buy it, you must break its neck.
22 You shall buy back all the first-born of your sons, and no one shall come 23 into my presence empty-handed.

21 For six days you shall work, but on the seventh day you shall cease work;
22 even at ploughing time and harvest you shall cease work.

22 You shall observe the pilgrim-feast of Weeks, the firstfruits of the wheat 23 harvest, and the pilgrim-feast of Ingathering at the turn of the year. Three 24 times a year all your males shall come into the presence of the Lord, the 25 LORD the God of Israel; for after I have driven out the nations before you 26 and extended your frontiers, there will be no danger from covetous neigh-
27 bours when you go up these three times to enter the presence of the LORD 28 your God.

25 You shall not offer the blood of my sacrifice at the same time as anything
26 leavened, nor shall any portion of the victim of the pilgrim-feast of Pass-27 over remain overnight till morning.

26 You shall bring the choicest firstfruits of your soil to the house of the 27 LORD your God.

You shall not boil a kid in its mother's milk.

27 The LORD said to Moses, 'Write these words down, because the cove-28 nant I make with you and with Israel is in these words.' So Moses stayed 29 there with the LORD forty days and forty nights, neither eating nor drinking, 30 and wrote down the words of the covenant, the Ten Words,^a on the tablets.
31 At length Moses came down from Mount Sinai with the two stone tablets
32 of the Tokens in his hands, and when he descended, he did not know that 33 the skin of his face shone because he had been speaking with the LORD.
34 When Aaron and the Israelites saw how the skin of Moses' face shone, they 35 were afraid to approach him. He called out to them, and Aaron and all the 36 chiefs in the congregation turned towards him. Moses spoke to them, and 37 afterwards all the Israelites drew near. He gave them all the commands 38 with which the LORD had charged him on Mount Sinai, and finished what 39 he had to say.

34 Then Moses put a veil over his face, and whenever he went in before the

^a Or Ten Commandments.

LORD to speak with him, he removed the veil until he came out. Then he would go out and tell the Israelites all the commands he had received. Whenever the skin of Moses' face shone in the sight of the Israelites, he would put the veil back over his face until he went in again to speak with the LORD. 35

MOSES CALLED THE WHOLE COMMUNITY of Israelites together and thus addressed them: These are the LORD's commands to you: On six days you may work, but the seventh you are to keep as a sabbath of sacred rest, holy to the LORD. Whoever works on that day shall be put to death. You are not even to light your fire at home on the sabbath day. 35 2 3

These words Moses spoke to all the community of Israelites: This is the command the LORD has given: Each of you set aside a contribution to the LORD. Let all who wish, bring a contribution to the LORD: gold, silver, copper; violet, purple, and scarlet yarn; fine linen and goats' hair; tanned rams' skins, porpoise-hides, and acacia-wood; oil for the lamp, perfume for the anointing oil and for the fragrant incense; cornelians and other stones ready for setting in the ephod and the breast-piece. Let every craftsman among you come and make everything the LORD has commanded. The Tabernacle, its tent and covering, fasteners, planks, bars, posts, and sockets, the Ark and its poles, the cover and the Veil of the screen, the table, its poles, and all its vessels, and the Bread of the Presence, the lamp-stand for the light, its fittings, lamps and the lamp oil; the altar of incense and its poles, the anointing oil, the fragrant incense, and the screen for the entrance of the Tabernacle, the altar of whole-offering, its bronze grating, poles, and all appurtenances, the basin and its stand; the hangings of the court, its posts and sockets, and the screen for the gateway of the court; the pegs of the Tabernacle and court and their cords, the stitched vestments for ministering in the Holy Place, that is the sacred vestments for Aaron the priest and the vestments for his sons when they minister as priests. 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19

The whole community of the Israelites went out from Moses' presence, and everyone who was so minded brought of his own free will a contribution to the LORD for the making of the Tent of the Presence and all its service, and for the sacred vestments. Men and women alike came and freely brought clasps, earrings, finger-rings, and pendants, gold ornaments of every kind, every one of them presenting a special gift of gold to the LORD. And every man brought what he possessed of violet, purple, and scarlet yarn, fine linen and goats' hair, tanned rams' skins and porpoise-hides. Every man, setting aside a contribution of silver or copper, brought it as a contribution to the LORD, and all who had acacia-wood suitable for any part of the work brought it. Every woman with the skill spun and brought the violet, purple, and scarlet yarn, and fine linen. All the women whose skill moved them spun the goats' hair. The chiefs brought cornelians and other stones ready for setting in the ephod and the breast-piece, the perfume and oil for the light, for the anointing oil, and for the fragrant incense. Every Israelite man and woman who was minded to bring offerings 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28 29

to the LORD for all the work which he had commanded through Moses did so freely.

30 Moses said to the Israelites, 'Mark this: the LORD has specially chosen 31 Bezalel son of Uri, son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah. He has filled him with 32 divine spirit, making him skilful and ingenious, expert in every craft, and 33 a master of design, whether in gold, silver, and copper, or cutting precious 34 stones for setting, or carving wood, in every kind of design. He has inspired 35 both him and Aholiab son of Ahisamach of the tribe of Dan to instruct 36 workers and designers of every kind, engravers, seamsters, embroiderers in violet, purple, and scarlet yarn and fine linen, and weavers, fully endowing them with skill to execute all kinds of work. Bezalel and Aholiab shall work exactly as the LORD has commanded, and so also shall every craftsman whom the LORD has made skilful and ingenious in these matters, to know how to execute every kind of work for the service of the sanctuary.'

2 Moses summoned Bezalel, Aholiab, and every craftsman to whom the LORD had given skill and who was willing, to come forward and set to work.
3 They received from Moses every contribution which the Israelites had brought for the work of the service of the sanctuary, but the people still 4 brought freewill offerings morning after morning, so that the craftsmen at work on the sanctuary left what they were doing, every one of them, and 5 came to Moses and said, 'The people are bringing much more than we 6 need for doing the work which the LORD has commanded.' So Moses sent word round the camp that no man or woman should prepare anything more as a contribution for the sanctuary. So the people stopped bringing gifts;
7 what was there already was more than enough for all the work they had to do.

8 Then all the craftsmen among the workers made the Tabernacle of ten hangings of finely woven linen, and violet, purple, and scarlet yarn, with 9 cherubim worked on them, all made by a seamster. The length of each hanging was twenty-eight cubits and the breadth four cubits, all of the 10 same size. They joined five of the hangings together, and similarly the other 11 five. They made violet loops on the outer edge of the one set of hangings 12 and they did the same for the outer edge of the other set of hangings. They made fifty loops for each hanging; they made also fifty loops for the end 13 hanging in the second set, the loops being opposite each other. They made fifty gold fasteners, with which they joined the hangings one to another.
and the Tabernacle became a single whole.

14 They made hangings of goats' hair, eleven in all, to form a tent over the 15 Tabernacle; each hanging was thirty cubits long and four cubits wide, all 16 eleven of the same size. They joined five of the hangings together, and 17 similarly the other six. They made fifty loops on the edge of the outer hanging in the first set and fifty loops on the joining edge of the second set, 18 and fifty bronze fasteners to join up the tent and make it a single whole.
19 They made for the tent a cover of tanned rams' skins and an outer covering of porpoise-hides.

20 21 They made for the Tabernacle planks of acacia-wood as uprights, each 22 plank ten cubits long and a cubit and a half wide, and two tenons for each plank joined to each other. They did the same for all the planks of the 23 Tabernacle. They arranged the planks thus: twenty planks for the south side, facing southwards, with forty silver sockets under them, two sockets 24 under each plank for its two tenons; and for the second or northern side 25 of the Tabernacle twenty planks with forty silver sockets, two under each 26 plank. They made six planks for the far end of the Tabernacle on the west. 27

 They made two planks for the corners of the Tabernacle at the far end; at 28 29 the bottom they were alike, and at the top, both alike, they fitted into a single ring. They did the same for both of them at the two corners. There 30 were eight planks with their silver sockets, sixteen sockets in all, two sockets under each plank.

They made bars of acacia-wood: five for the planks on the one side of 31
 the Tabernacle, five bars for the planks on the second side of the Taber- 32
 nacle, and five bars for the planks on the far end of the Tabernacle on the west. They made the middle bar to run along from end to end half-way up 33 the frames. They overlaid the frames with gold, made rings of gold on them 34 to hold the bars and plated the bars with gold.

They made the Veil of finely woven linen and violet, purple, and scarlet 35 yarn, with cherubim worked on it, all made by a seamster. And they made 36 for it four posts of acacia-wood overlaid with gold, with gold hooks, and cast four silver sockets for them. For the entrance of the tent a screen of 37 finely woven linen was made, embroidered with violet, purple, and scarlet, and five posts of acacia-wood with their hooks. They overlaid the tops of 38
 the posts and the bands round them with gold; the five sockets for them were of bronze.

Bezalel then made the Ark, a chest of acacia-wood, two and a half cubits 37 long, one cubit and a half wide, and one cubit and a half high. He overlaid 2 it with pure gold, both inside and out, and put a band of gold all round it.
 He cast four gold rings to be on its four feet, two rings on each side of it. 3
 He made poles of acacia-wood and plated them with gold, and inserted the 4 5 poles in the rings at the sides of the Ark to lift it. He made a cover of pure 6 gold, two and a half cubits long and one cubit and a half wide. He made 7 two gold cherubim of beaten work at the ends of the cover, one at each end; 8 he made each cherub of one piece with the cover. They had wings outspread 9 and pointing upwards, screening the cover with their wings; they stood face to face, looking inwards over the cover.

He made the table of acacia-wood, two cubits long, one cubit wide, and 10
 one cubit and a half high. He overlaid it with pure gold and put a band of 11 gold all round it. He made a rim round it a hand's breadth wide, and a gold 12 band round the rim. He cast four gold rings for it, and put the rings at the 13 four corners by the four legs. The rings, which were to receive the poles 14 for carrying the table, were close to the rim. These carrying-poles he made 15 of acacia-wood and plated them with gold. He made the vessels for the 16 table, its dishes and saucers, and its flagons and bowls from which drink-offerings were to be poured; he made them of pure gold.

He made the lamp-stand of pure gold. The lamp-stand, stem, and 17 branches, were of beaten work, its cups, both calyxes and petals, were of 18 one piece with it. There were six branches springing from its sides; three 18 branches of the lamp-stand sprang from one side and three branches from 19 the other side. There were three cups shaped like almond blossoms, with calyx and petals, on the first branch, three cups shaped like almond blossoms, with calyx and petals, on the next branch, and similarly for all six branches springing from the lamp-stand. On the main stem of the lamp-stand there were four cups shaped like almond blossoms, with calyx and petals, and there were calyxes of one piece with it under the six branches which sprang from the lamp-stand, a single calyx under each pair of branches. The calyxes and the branches were of one piece with it, all a single piece of beaten work of pure gold. He made its seven lamps, its tongs and firepans of pure gold. The lamp-stand and all these fittings were made from one talent of pure gold.

He made the altar of incense of acacia-wood, square, a cubit long by a cubit broad and two cubits high, the horns of one piece with it. He overlaid it with pure gold, the top, the sides all round, and the horns, and he put round it a band of gold. He made pairs of gold rings for it; he put them under the band at the two corners on both sides to receive the poles by which it was to be carried. He made the poles of acacia-wood and overlaid them with gold.

He prepared the sacred anointing oil and the fragrant incense, pure, compounded by the perfumer's art.

38 He made the altar of whole-offering of acacia-wood, square, five cubits long by five cubits broad and three cubits high. Its horns at the four corners were of one piece with it, and he overlaid it with bronze. He made all the vessels for the altar, its pots, shovels, tossing bowls, forks, and firepans, all of bronze. He made for the altar a grating of bronze network under the ledge, coming half-way up. He cast four rings for the four corners of the bronze grating to receive the poles, and he made the poles of acacia-wood and overlaid them with bronze. He inserted the poles in the rings at the sides of the altar to carry it. He left the altar a hollow shell.

The basin and its stand of bronze he made out of the bronze mirrors of the women who were on duty at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence.

He made the court. For the south side facing southwards the hangings of the court were of finely woven linen a hundred cubits long, with twenty posts and twenty sockets of bronze; the hooks and bands on the posts were of silver. Along the north side there were hangings of a hundred cubits, with twenty posts and twenty sockets of bronze; the hooks and bands on the posts were of silver. On the west side there were hangings fifty cubits long, with ten posts and ten sockets; the hooks and bands on the posts were of silver. On the east side, towards the sunrise, fifty cubits, there were hangings on either side of the gateway of the court; they extended fifteen cubits to one corner, with their three posts and their three sockets, and fifteen cubits to the second corner, with their three posts and their three sockets. The hangings of the court all round were of finely woven linen. The sockets for the posts were of bronze, the hooks and bands on the posts of silver, the tops of them overlaid with silver, and all the posts of the court were bound with silver. The screen at the gateway of the court was of finely woven linen, embroidered with violet, purple, and scarlet, twenty cubits long and five cubits high to correspond to the hangings of the court, with four posts and four sockets of bronze, their hooks of silver, and the tops of them and their bands overlaid with silver. All the pegs for the Tabernacle and those for the court were of bronze. 20

These were the appointments of the Tabernacle, that is the Tabernacle of the Tokens which was assigned by Moses to the charge of the Levites under Ithamar son of Aaron the priest. Bezalel son of Uri, son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah made everything the LORD had commanded Moses. He was assisted by Aholiab son of Ahisamach of the tribe of Dan, an engraver, a scamster, and an embroiderer in fine linen with violet, purple, and scarlet yarn. 21 22 23

The gold of the special gift used for the work of the sanctuary amounted in all to twenty-nine talents seven hundred and thirty shekels, by the sacred standard. The silver contributed by the community when registered was one hundred talents one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five shekels, by the sacred standard. 24 25

This amounted to a beka a head, that is half a shekel by the sacred standard, for every man from twenty years old and upwards, who had been registered, a total of six hundred and three thousand five hundred and fifty men. The hundred talents of silver were for casting the sockets for the sanctuary and for the Veil, a hundred sockets to a hundred talents, a talent to a socket. With the one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five shekels he made hooks for the posts, overlaid the tops of the posts and put bands round them. The bronze of the special gift came to seventy talents two thousand four hundred shekels; with this he made sockets for the entrance to the Tent of the Presence, the bronze altar and its bronze grating, all the vessels for the altar, the sockets all round the court, the sockets for the posts at the gateway of the court, all the pegs for the Tabernacle, and the pegs all round the court. 26 27 28 29 30 31

They used violet, purple, and scarlet yarn in making the stitched vestments for ministering in the sanctuary and in making the sacred vestments for Aaron, as the LORD had commanded Moses. 39

They made the ephod of gold, with violet, purple, and scarlet yarn, and finely woven linen. The gold was beaten into thin plates, cut and twisted into braid to be worked in by a seamster with the violet, purple, and scarlet yarn, and fine linen. They made shoulder-pieces for it, joined back and front. The waist-band on it was of the same workmanship and material as the fabric of the ephod; it was gold, with violet, purple, and scarlet yarn, and finely woven linen, as the LORD commanded Moses. 2 3 4 5

They prepared the cornelians, fixed in gold rosettes, engraved by the art of a seal-cutter with the names of the sons of Israel, and fastened them on the shoulders of the ephod as reminders of the sons of Israel, as the LORD had commanded Moses. 6 7

They made the breast-piece; it was worked like the ephod by a seamster, in gold, with violet, purple, and scarlet yarn, and finely woven linen. They made the breast-piece square, folded, a span long and a span wide. They set in it four rows of precious stones: the first row, sardin, chrysolite and green felspar; the second row, purple garnet, lapis lazuli and jade; the third row, turquoise, agate and jasper; the fourth row, topaz, cornelian and green jasper, all set in gold rosettes. The stones corresponded to the twelve 8 9 10 11 12 13 14

sons of Israel, name by name, each bearing the name of one of the twelve tribes engraved as on a seal. They made for the breast-piece twisted cords of pure gold worked into a rope. They made two gold rosettes and two gold rings, and they fixed the two rings on the two corners of the breast-piece. They fastened the two gold ropes to the two rings at those corners of the breast-piece, and the other ends of the two ropes to the two rosettes, thus binding them to the shoulder-pieces on the front of the ephod. They made two gold rings and put them at the two corners of the breast-piece on the inner side next to the ephod. They made two gold rings and fixed them on the two shoulder-pieces of the ephod, low down and in front, close to its seam above the waist-band on the ephod. They bound the breast-piece by its rings to the rings of the ephod with a violet braid, just above the waist-band on the ephod, so that the breast-piece would not become detached from the ephod; so the LORD had commanded Moses. They made the mantle of the ephod a single piece of woven violet stuff, with a hole in the middle of it which had a hem round it, with an oversewn edge so that it could not be torn. All round its skirts they made pomegranates of violet, purple, and scarlet stuff, and finely woven linen. They made bells of pure gold and put them all round the skirts of the mantle between the pomegranates, a bell and a pomegranate alternately the whole way round the skirts of the mantle, to be worn when ministering, as the LORD commanded Moses.

They made the tunics of fine linen, woven work, for Aaron and his sons, the turban of fine linen, the tall head-dresses and their bands all of fine linen, the drawers of finely woven linen, and the sash of finely woven linen, embroidered in violet, purple, and scarlet, as the LORD had commanded Moses.

They made a rosette of pure gold as the symbol of their holy dedication and inscribed on it as the engraving on a seal, 'Holy to the LORD',^a and they fastened on it a violet braid to fix it on the turban at the top, as the LORD had commanded Moses.

Thus all the work of the Tabernacle of the Tent of the Presence was completed, and the Israelites did everything exactly as the LORD had commanded Moses. They brought the Tabernacle to Moses, the tent and all its furnishings, its fasteners, planks, bars, posts and sockets, the covering of tanned rams' skins and the outer covering of porpoise-hides, the Veil of the screen, the Ark of the Tokens and its poles, the cover, the table and its vessels, and the Bread of the Presence, the pure lamp-stand with its lamps in a row and all its fittings, and the lamp oil, the gold altar, the anointing oil, the fragrant incense, and the screen at the entrance of the tent, the bronze altar, the bronze grating attached to it, its poles and all its furnishings, the basin and its stand, the hangings of the court, its posts and sockets, the screen for the gateway of the court, its cords and pegs, and all the equipment for the service of the Tabernacle for the Tent of the Presence, the stitched vestments for ministering in the sanctuary, that is the sacred vestments for Aaron the priest and the vestments for his sons when they minister as priests. As the LORD had commanded Moses, so the Israelites carried out the whole work. Moses inspected all the work, and saw that they had carried it out according to the command of the LORD; and he blessed them.

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES AND SAID: On the first day of the first month you shall set up the Tabernacle, the Tent of the Presence. You shall put the Ark of the Tokens in it and screen the Ark with the Veil. You shall bring in the table and lay it; then you shall bring in the lamp-stand and mount its lamps. You shall then set the gold altar of incense in front of the Ark of the Tokens and put the screen of the entrance of the Tabernacle in place. You shall put the altar of whole-offering in front of the entrance of the Tabernacle, the Tent of the Presence. You shall put the basin between the Tent of the Presence and the altar and put water in it. You shall set up the court all round and put in place the screen of the gateway of the court. You shall take the anointing oil and anoint the Tabernacle and everything in it; thus you shall consecrate it and all its furnishings, and it shall be holy. You shall anoint the altar of whole-offering and all its vessels; thus shall you consecrate it, and it shall be most holy. You shall anoint the basin and its stand and consecrate it. You shall bring Aaron and his sons to the entrance of the Tent of the Presence and wash them with the water. Then you shall clothe Aaron with the sacred vestments, anoint him and consecrate him; so shall he be my priest. You shall then bring forward his sons, clothe them in tunics, anoint them as you anointed their father, and they shall be my priests. Their anointing shall inaugurate a hereditary priesthood for all time.

Exactly as the LORD had commanded him, so Moses did. In the first month of the second year, on the first day of that month, the Tabernacle was set up.

Moses set up the Tabernacle. He put the sockets in place, inserted the planks, fixed the crossbars and set up the posts. He spread the tent over the Tabernacle and fixed the covering of the tent above it, as the LORD had commanded him. He took the Tokens and put them in the Ark, inserted the poles in the Ark, and put the cover over the top of the Ark. He brought the Ark into the Tabernacle, set up the Veil of the screen and so screened the Ark of the Tokens, as the LORD had commanded him. He put the table in the Tent of the Presence on the north side of the Tabernacle outside the Veil and arranged bread on it before the LORD, as the LORD had commanded him. He set the lamp-stand in the Tent of the Presence opposite the table at the south side of the Tabernacle and mounted the lamps before the LORD, as the LORD had commanded him. He set up the gold altar in the Tent of the Presence in front of the Veil and burnt fragrant incense on it, as the LORD had commanded him. He set up the screen at the entrance of the Tabernacle, fixed the altar of whole-offering at the entrance of the Tabernacle, the Tent of the Presence, and offered on it whole-offerings and grain-offerings, as the LORD had commanded him. He set up the basin between the Tent of the Presence and the altar and put water there for washing, and Moses and Aaron and his sons used to wash their hands and feet when they entered the Tent of the Presence or

- 33 approached the altar, as the LORD had commanded Moses. He set up the court all round the Tabernacle and the altar, and put a screen at the gateway of the court.
- 34 Thus Moses completed the work, and the cloud covered the Tent of the Presence, and the glory of the LORD filled the Tabernacle. Moses was unable to enter the Tent of the Presence, because the cloud had settled on it
- 36 and the glory of the LORD filled the Tabernacle. At every stage of their journey, when the cloud lifted from the Tabernacle, the Israelites broke camp; but if the cloud did not lift from the Tabernacle, they did not break camp until the day it lifted. For the cloud of the LORD hovered over the Tabernacle by day, and there was fire in the cloud by night, and the Israelites could see it at every stage of their journey.

LEVITICUS

Laws concerning offerings and sacrifices

- 1 THE LORD SUMMONED MOSES and spoke to him from 2 the Tent of the Presence, and said, Say this to the Israelites: When any man among you presents an animal as an offering to the LORD, the offering may be presented either from the herd or from the flock.
- 3 If his offering is a whole-offering from the cattle, he shall present a male without blemish; he shall present it at the entrance to the Tent of the 4 Presence before the LORD so as to secure acceptance for himself. He shall lay his hand on the head of the victim and it will be accepted on his behalf^a 5 to make expiation for him. He shall slaughter the bull before the LORD, and the Aaronite priests shall present the blood and fling it against the altar
 6 all round at the entrance of the Tent of the Presence. He shall then flay
 7 the victim and cut it up. The sons of Aaron the priest shall kindle a fire
 8 on the altar and arrange wood on the fire. The Aaronite priests shall arrange the pieces, including the head and the suet, on the wood on the altar-9 fire, the entrails and shins shall be washed in water, and the priest shall burn it all on the altar as a whole-offering, a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD.
- 10 If the man's whole-offering is from the flock, either from the rams or 11 from the goats, he shall present a male without blemish. He shall slaughter it before the LORD at the north side of the altar, and the Aaronite priests 12 shall fling the blood against the altar all round. He shall cut it up, and the priest shall arrange the pieces, together with the head and the suet, on the 13 wood on the altar-fire, the entrails and shins shall be washed in water, and the priest shall present and burn it all on the altar: it is a whole-offering, a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD.
- 14 If a man's offering to the LORD is a whole-offering of birds, he shall present turtle-doves or young pigeons as his offering. The priest shall present it at the altar, and shall wrench off the head and burn it on the altar; and the blood shall be drained out against the side of the altar. He shall take away the crop and its contents in one piece, and throw it to the east side of the altar where the ashes are. He shall tear it by its wings without severing them completely, and shall burn it on the altar, on top of the wood of the altar-fire: it is a whole-offering, a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD.

When any person presents a grain-offering to the LORD, his offering shall be of flour. He shall pour oil on it and add frankincense to it. He shall bring it to the Aaronite priests, one of whom shall scoop up a handful of the flour and oil with all the frankincense. The priest shall burn this as a token on the altar, a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD. The remainder of the grain-offering belongs to Aaron and his sons: it is most sacred, it is taken from the food-offerings of the LORD.

When you present as a grain-offering something baked in an oven, it shall consist of unleavened cakes of flour mixed with oil and unleavened wafers smeared with oil. If your offering is a grain-offering cooked on a griddle, it shall be an unleavened cake of flour mixed with oil. Crumble it in pieces and pour oil on it. This is a grain-offering.

If your offering is a grain-offering cooked in a pan, it shall be made of flour with oil. Bring an offering made up in this way to the LORD and present it to the priest, who shall bring it to the altar; then he shall set aside part of the grain-offering as a token and burn it on the altar, a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD. The remainder of the grain-offering belongs to Aaron and his sons: it is most sacred, it is taken from the food-offerings of the LORD.

No grain-offering which you present to the LORD shall be made of anything that ferments; you shall not burn any leaven or any honey as a food-offering to the LORD. As for your offering of firstfruits, you shall present them to the LORD, but they shall not be offered up at the altar as a soothing odour. Every offering of yours which is a grain-offering shall be salted; you shall not fail to put the salt of your covenant with God on your grain-offering. Salt shall accompany all offerings.

If you present to the LORD a grain-offering of first-ripe grain, you must present fresh corn roasted, crushed meal from fully ripened corn. You shall add oil to it and put frankincense upon it. This is a grain-offering. The priest shall burn as its token some of the crushed meal, some of the oil, and all the frankincense as a food-offering to the LORD.

If a man's offering is a shared-offering from the cattle, male or female, he shall present it without blemish before the LORD. He shall lay his hand on the head of the victim and slaughter it at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence. The Aaronite priests shall fling the blood against the altar all round. One of them shall present part of the shared-offering as a food-offering to the LORD: he shall remove the fat covering the entrails and all the fat upon the entrails, the two kidneys with the fat on them beside the haunches, and the long lobe of the liver with the kidneys. The Aaronites shall burn it on the altar on top of the whole-offering which is upon the wood on the fire, a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD.

6 If a man's offering as a shared-offering to the LORD is from the flock,
7 male or female, he shall present it without blemish. If he is presenting a 8 ram as his offering, he shall present it before the LORD, lay his hand on the head of the victim and slaughter it in front of the Tent of the Presence. The 9 Aaronites shall then fling its blood against the altar all round. He shall present part of the shared-offering as a food-offering to the LORD; he shall remove its fat, the entire fat-tail cut off close by the spine, the fat 10 covering the entrails and all the fat upon the entrails, the two kidneys with the fat on them beside the haunches, and the long lobe of the liver 11 with the kidneys. The priest shall burn it at the altar, as food offered to the LORD.

12 13 If the man's offering is a goat, he shall present it before the LORD, lay his hand on its head and slaughter it in front of the Tent of the Presence.
14 The Aaronites shall then fling its blood against the altar all round. He shall present part of the victim as a food-offering to the LORD; he shall remove 15 the fat covering the entrails and all the fat upon the entrails, the two kidneys
with the fat on them beside the haunches, and the long lobe of the liver 16 with the kidneys. The priest shall burn this at the altar, as a food-offering 17 of soothing odour. All fat belongs to the LORD. This is a rule for all time from generation to generation wherever you live: you shall not eat any fat or any blood.

4 1 2 THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and said, Say this to the Israelites: These are the rules for any man who inadvertently transgresses any of the commandments of the LORD and does anything prohibited by them:

3 If the anointed priest sins so as to bring guilt on the people, for the sin he has committed he shall present to the LORD a young bull without blem-4 ish as a sin-offering. He shall bring the bull to the entrance of the Tent of the Presence before the LORD, lay his hand on its head and slaughter it 5 before the LORD. The anointed priest shall then take some of its blood and 6 bring it to the Tent of the Presence. He shall dip his finger in the blood and sprinkle some of the blood in front of the sacred Veil seven times before 7 the LORD. The priest shall then put some of the blood before the LORD in the Tent of the Presence on the horns of the altar where fragrant incense is burnt, and he shall pour the rest of the bull's blood at the base of the altar 8 of whole-offering at the entrance of the Tent of the Presence. He shall set aside all the fat from the bull of the sin-offering; he shall set aside the fat 9 covering the entrails and all the fat upon the entrails, the two kidneys with the fat on them beside the haunches, and the long lobe of the liver with the 10 kidneys. It shall be set aside as the fat from the ox at the shared-offering is set aside. The priest shall burn the pieces of fat on the altar of whole-11 offering. But the skin of the bull and all its flesh, including head and shins, 12 its entrails and offal, the whole of it, he shall take away outside the camp to a place ritually clean, where the ash-heap is, and destroy it on a wood-fire on top of the ash-heap.

13 If the whole community of Israel sins inadvertently and the matter is not known to the assembly, if they do what is forbidden in any commandment of the LORD and so incur guilt, then, when the sin they have committed is notified to them, the assembly shall present a young bull as a sin-offering and shall bring it in front of the Tent of the Presence. The elders of the community shall lay their hands on the victim's head before the LORD, and it shall be slaughtered before the LORD. The anointed priest shall then bring some of the blood to the Tent of the Presence, dip his finger in it and sprinkle it in front of the Veil seven times before the LORD. He shall put some of the blood on the horns of the altar before the LORD in the Tent of the Presence and pour all the rest at the base of the altar of whole-offering at the entrance of the Tent of the Presence. He shall then set aside all the fat from the bull and burn it on the altar. He shall deal with this bull as he deals with the bull of the sin-offering, and in this way the priest shall make expiation for their guilt and they shall be forgiven. He shall take the bull outside the camp and burn it as the other bull was burnt. This is a sin-offering for the assembly.

When a man of standing sins by doing inadvertently what is forbidden in any commandment of the LORD his God, thereby incurring guilt, and the sin he has committed is made known to him, he shall bring as his offering a he-goat without blemish. He shall lay his hand on the goat's head and shall slaughter it before the LORD in the place where the whole-offering is slaughtered. It is a sin-offering. The priest shall then take some of the blood of the victim with his finger and put it on the horns of the altar of whole-offering. He shall pour out the rest of the blood at the base of the altar of whole-offering. He shall burn all the fat at the altar in the same way as the fat of the shared-offering. Thus the priest shall make expiation for that man's sin, and it shall be forgiven him.

If any person among the common people sins inadvertently and does what is forbidden in any commandment of the LORD, thereby incurring guilt, and the sin he has committed is made known to him, he shall bring as his offering for the sin which he has committed a she-goat without blemish. He shall lay his hand on the head of the victim and slaughter it in the place where the whole-offering is slaughtered. The priest shall then take some of its blood with his finger and put it on the horns of the altar of whole-offering. All the rest of the blood he shall pour at the base of the altar. He shall remove all its fat as the fat of the shared-offering is removed, and the priest shall burn it on the altar as a soothing odour to the LORD. So the priest shall make expiation for that person's guilt, and it shall be forgiven him.

If the man brings a sheep as his offering for sin, it shall be a ewe without blemish. He shall lay his hand on the head of the victim and slaughter it as a sin-offering in the place where the whole-offering is slaughtered. The priest shall then take some of the blood of the victim with his finger and put it on the horns of the altar of whole-offering. All the rest of the blood he shall pour out at the base of the altar. He shall remove all the fat, as the fat of the sheep is removed from the shared-offering. The priest shall burn the pieces of fat at the altar on top of the food-offerings to the LORD, and shall make expiation for the sin that the man has committed, and it shall be forgiven him.

5 IF A PERSON HEARS a solemn adjuration to give evidence as a witness to something he has seen or heard and does not declare what he knows, he commits a sin and must accept responsibility.

2 If a person touches anything unclean, such as the dead body of an unclean animal, whether wild or domestic, or of an unclean reptile, or if he touches anything unclean in a man, whatever that uncleanness may be, and 3 it is concealed by him although he is aware of it, he shall incur guilt. Or if 4 a person rashly utters an oath to do something evil or good, in any matter in which such a man may swear a rash oath, and it is concealed by him 5 although he is aware of it, he shall in either case incur guilt. Whenever a man incurs guilt in any of these cases and confesses how he has sinned 6 therein, he shall bring to the LORD, as his penalty for the sin that he has committed, a female of the flock, either a ewe or a she-goat, as a sin-offering, and the priest shall make expiation for him on account of his sin which he has committed, and he shall be pardoned.

7 But if he cannot afford as much as a young animal, he shall bring to the LORD for the sin he has committed two turtle-doves or two young pigeons, 8 one for a sin-offering and the other for a whole-offering. He shall bring them to the priest, and present first the one intended for the sin-offering. 9 He shall wrench its head back without severing it. He shall sprinkle some of the blood of the victim against the side of the altar, and what is left of the blood shall be drained out at the base of the altar: it is a sin-offering. 10 He shall deal with the second bird as a whole-offering according to custom, and the priest shall make expiation for the sin the man has committed, and it shall be forgiven him.

11 If the man cannot afford two turtle-doves or two young pigeons, for his sin he shall bring as his offering a tenth of an ephah of flour, as a sin-offering. He shall add no oil to it nor put frankincense on it, because it is a sin-offering. 12 He shall bring it to the priest, who shall scoop up a handful from it as a token and burn it on the altar on the food-offerings to the LORD: it is a sin-offering. The priest shall make expiation for the sin the man has committed in any one of these cases, and it shall be forgiven him. The remainder belongs to the priest, as with the grain-offering.

15 The LORD spoke to Moses and said: When any person commits an offence by inadvertently defaulting in dues sacred to the LORD, he shall bring as his guilt-offering to the LORD a ram without blemish from the flock, the value to be determined by you in silver shekels according to the sacred standard, for a guilt-offering; he shall make good his default in sacred dues, adding one fifth. He shall give it to the priest, who shall make expiation for his sin with the ram of the guilt-offering, and it shall be forgiven him.

17 If and when any person sins unwittingly and does what is forbidden by any commandment of the LORD, thereby incurring guilt, he must accept responsibility. He shall bring to the priest as a guilt-offering a ram without blemish from the flock, valued by you, and the priest shall make expiation for the error into which he has unwittingly fallen, and it shall be forgiven 18 him. It is a guilt-offering; he has been guilty of an offence against the LORD.

2 The LORD spoke to Moses and said: When any person sins and commits a grievous fault against the LORD, whether he lies to a fellow-countryman about a deposit or contract, or a theft, or wrongs him by extortion, or finds lost property and then lies about it, and swears a false oath in regard to any sin of this sort that he commits—if he does this, thereby incurring guilt, he shall restore what he has stolen or gained by extortion, or the deposit left with him or the lost property which he found, or anything at all concerning which he swore a false oath. He shall make full restitution, adding one fifth to it, and give it back to the aggrieved party on the day when he offers his guilt-offering. He shall bring to the LORD as his guilt-offering a ram without blemish from the flock, valued by you, as a guilt-offering. The priest shall make expiation for his guilt before the LORD, and he shall be forgiven for any act which has brought guilt upon him.

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and said, Give this command to Aaron and his sons: This is the law of the whole-offering. The whole-offering shall remain on the altar-hearth all night till morning, and the altar-fire shall be kept burning there. Then the priest, having donned his linen robe and put on linen drawers to cover himself, shall remove the ashes to which the fire reduces the whole-offering on the altar and put them beside the altar. He shall then change into other garments and take the ashes outside the camp to a ritually clean place. The fire shall be kept burning on the altar; it shall never go out. Every morning the priest shall have fresh wood burning thereon, arrange the whole-offering on it, and on top burn the fat from the shared-offerings. Fire shall always be kept burning on the altar; it shall not go out.

This is the law of the grain-offering. The Aaronites shall present it before the LORD in front of the altar. The priest shall set aside a handful of the flour from it, with the oil of the grain-offering, and all the frankincense on it. He shall burn this token of it on the altar as a soothing odour to the LORD. The remainder Aaron and his sons shall eat. It shall be eaten in the form of unleavened cakes and in a holy place. They shall eat it in the court of the Tent of the Presence. It shall not be baked with leaven. I have allotted this to them as their share of my food-offerings. Like the sin-offering and the guilt-offering, it is most sacred. Any male descendant of Aaron may eat it, as a due from the food-offerings to the LORD, for generation after generation for all time. Whatever touches them is to be forfeit as sacred.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said: This is the offering which Aaron and his sons shall present to the LORD: ^a one tenth of an ephah of flour, the usual grain-offering, half of it in the morning and half in the evening. It shall be cooked with oil on a griddle; you shall bring it well-mixed, and so present it crumbled in small pieces as a grain-offering, a soothing odour to the LORD. The anointed priest in the line of Aaron shall offer it. This is a rule binding for all time. It shall be burnt in sacrifice to the LORD as a complete offering. Every grain-offering of a priest shall be a complete offering; it shall not be eaten.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to Aaron and his sons in these words: This is the law of the sin-offering. The sin-offering shall be slaughtered before the LORD in the place where the whole-offering is slaughtered; it is most sacred. The priest who officiates shall eat of the flesh; it shall be eaten in a sacred place, in the court of the Tent of the Presence. Whatever touches its flesh is to be forfeit as sacred. If any of the blood is splashed on a garment, that shall be washed in a sacred place. An earthenware vessel in which the sin-offering is boiled shall be smashed. If it has been boiled in a copper vessel, that shall be scoured and rinsed with water. Any male of priestly family may eat of this offering; it is most sacred. If, however, part of the blood is brought to the Tent of the Presence to make expiation in the holy place, the sin-offering shall not be eaten; it shall be destroyed by fire.

7 1 2 This is the law of the guilt-offering: it is most sacred. The guilt-offering shall be slaughtered in the place where the whole-offering is slaughtered, and its blood shall be flung against the altar all round. The priest shall set aside and present all the fat from it: the fat-tail and the fat covering the entrails, the two kidneys with the fat on them beside the haunches, and the long lobe of the liver with the kidneys. The priest shall burn these pieces on the altar as a food-offering to the LORD; it is a guilt-offering. Any male of priestly family may eat it. It shall be eaten in a sacred place; it is most sacred. There is one law for both sin-offering and guilt-offering: they shall belong to the priest who performs the rite of expiation. The skin of any man's whole-offering shall belong to the priest who presents it. Every grain-offering baked in an oven and everything that is cooked in a pan or on a griddle shall belong to the priest who presents it. Every grain-offering, whether mixed with oil or dry, shall be shared equally among all the Aaronites.

11 12 This is the law of the shared-offering presented to the LORD. If a man presents it as a thank-offering, then, in addition to the thank-offering, he shall present unleavened cakes mixed with oil, wafers of unleavened flour smeared with oil, and well-mixed flour and flat cakes mixed with oil. He shall present flat cakes of leavened bread in addition to his shared thank-offering. One part of every offering he shall present as a contribution for the LORD: it shall belong to the priest who flings the blood of the shared-offering against the altar. The flesh shall be eaten on the day of its presentation; none of it shall be put aside till morning.

16 If a man's sacrifice is a votive offering or a freewill offering, it may be eaten on the day it is presented or on the next day. Any flesh left over on the third day shall be destroyed by fire. If any flesh of his shared-offering is eaten on the third day, the man who has presented it shall not be accepted. It will not be counted to his credit, it shall be reckoned as tainted and the person who eats any of it shall accept responsibility. No flesh which comes into contact with anything unclean shall be eaten; it shall be destroyed by fire.

20 The flesh may be eaten by anyone who is clean, but the person who, while unclean, eats flesh from a shared-offering presented to the LORD shall be cut off from his father's kin. When any person is contaminated by contact with anything unclean, be it man, beast, or reptile, and then eats any of the flesh from the shared-offerings presented to the LORD, that person shall be cut off from his father's kin.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to the Israelites in these words: 22 23
You shall not eat the fat of any ox, sheep, or goat. The fat of an animal that 24 has died a natural death or has been mauled by wild beasts may be put to any other use, but you shall not eat it. Every man who eats fat from a beast 25 of which he has presented any part as a food-offering to the LORD shall be cut off from his father's kin.

You shall eat none of the blood, whether of bird or of beast, wherever you 26 may live. Every person who eats any of the blood shall be cut off from his 27 father's kin.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to the Israelites in these 28 29 words: Whoever comes to present a shared-offering shall set aside part of it as an offering to the LORD. With his own hands he shall bring the food- 30 offerings to the LORD. He shall also bring the fat together with the breast which is to be presented as a special gift before the LORD; the priest shall 31 burn the fat on the altar, but the breast shall belong to Aaron and his descendants. You shall give the right hind-leg of your shared-offerings as 32 a contribution for the priest; it shall be the perquisite of the Aaronite who presents the blood and the fat of the shared-offering. I have taken from the 33 Israelites the breast of the special gift and the leg of the contribution made out of the shared-offerings, and have given them as a due from the Israelites 34 to Aaron the priest and his descendants for all time. This is the portion 35 prescribed for Aaron and his descendants out of the LORD's food-offerings, appointed on the day when they were presented as priests to the LORD;
and on the day when they were anointed, the LORD commanded that these 36 prescribed portions should be given to them by the Israelites. This is a rule binding on their descendants for all time.

This, then, is the law of the whole-offering, the grain-offering, the sin- 37 offering, the guilt-offering, the installation-offerings, and the shared-offerings, with which the LORD charged Moses on Mount Sinai on the day 38 when he commanded the Israelites to present their offerings to the LORD in the wilderness of Sinai.

The hallowing and installation of the priests

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and said, 'Take Aaron and his sons with 8 1 2 him, the vestments, the anointing oil, the ox for a sin-offering, the two rams, and the basket of unleavened cakes, and assemble all the community at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence.' Moses did as the LORD had 3 commanded him, and the community assembled at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence. He told the community that this was what the LORD 4 had commanded. He presented Aaron and his sons and washed them in water. He invested Aaron with the tunic, girded him with the sash, robed 5 him with the mantle, put the ephod on him, tied it with its waist-band and fastened the ephod to him with the band. He put the breast-piece ^a on him 6 8

^a Or pouch.

9 and set the Urim and Thummim in it. He then put the turban upon his head and set the gold rosette as a symbol of holy dedication on the front of 10 the turban, as the LORD had commanded him. Moses then took the anointing oil, anointed the Tabernacle and all that was within it and consecrated 11 them. He sprinkled some of the oil seven times on the altar, anointing the altar, all its vessels, the basin and its stand, to consecrate them. He poured 12 some of the anointing oil on Aaron's head and so consecrated him. Moses 13 then brought the sons of Aaron forward, invested them with tunics, girded them with sashes and tied their tall head-dresses on them, as the LORD had commanded him.

14 He then brought up the ox for the sin-offering; Aaron and his sons laid 15 their hands on its head, and he slaughtered it. Moses took some of the blood and put it with his finger on the horns round the altar. Thus he purified the 16 altar, and when he had poured out the rest of the blood at the base of the altar, he consecrated it by making expiation for it. He took all the fat upon 17 the entrails, the long lobe of the liver, and the two kidneys with their fat, and burnt them on the altar, but the ox, its skin, its flesh, and its offal, he destroyed by fire outside the camp, as the LORD had commanded him.

18 Moses then brought forward the ram of the whole-offering; Aaron and 19 his sons laid their hands on the ram's head, and he slaughtered it. Moses 20 flung its blood against the altar all round. He cut the ram up and burnt 21 the head, the pieces, and the suet. He washed the entrails and the shins in water and burnt the whole on the altar. This was a whole-offering, a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD, as the LORD had commanded Moses.

22 Moses then brought forward the second ram, the ram for the installation 23 of priests. Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon its head, and he slaughtered it. Moses took some of its blood and put it on the lobe of Aaron's right ear, on his right thumb, and on the big toe of his right foot.
24 He then brought forward the sons of Aaron, put some of the blood on the lobes of their right ears, on their right thumbs, and on the big toes of their 25 right feet. He flung the rest of the blood against the altar all round; he took the fat, the fat-tail, the fat covering the entrails, the long lobe of the 26 liver, the two kidneys with their fat, and the right leg. Then from the basket of unleavened cakes before the LORD he took one unleavened cake, one cake of bread made with oil, and one wafer, and laid them on the fatty 27 parts and the right leg. He put the whole on the hands of Aaron and of his sons, and he presented it as a special gift before the LORD. He took it from 28 their hands and burnt it on the altar on top of the whole-offering. This was an installation-offering, it was a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD.

29 Moses then took the breast and presented it as a special gift before the LORD; it was his portion of the ram of installation, as the LORD had com-30 manded him. He took some of the anointing oil and some of the blood on the altar and sprinkled it on Aaron and his vestments, and on his sons and their vestments with him. Thus he consecrated Aaron and his vestments, and with him his sons and their vestments.

31 Moses said to Aaron and his sons, 'Boil the flesh of the ram at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence, and eat it there, together with the bread in the installation-basket, in accordance with the command: "Aaron and his sons shall eat it." The remainder of the flesh and bread you shall destroy by fire. 32

You shall not leave the entrance to the Tent of the Presence for seven days, 33 until the day which completes the period of your installation, for it lasts seven days. What was done this day followed the LORD's command to 34 make expiation for you. You shall stay at the entrance to the Tent of the 35 Presence day and night for seven days, keeping vigil to the LORD, so that you do not die, for so I was commanded.'

Aaron and his sons did everything that the LORD had commanded 36 through Moses.

On the eighth day Moses summoned Aaron and his sons and the 9 Israelite elders. He said to Aaron, 'Take for yourself a bull-calf for a sin- 2 offering and a ram for a whole-offering, both without blemish, and present them before the LORD. Then bid the Israelites take a he-goat for a sin- 3 offering, a calf and a lamb, both yearlings without blemish, for a whole-offering, and a bull and a ram for shared-offerings to be sacrificed before the 4
LORD, together with a grain-offering mixed with oil. This day the LORD will appear to you.'

They brought what Moses had commanded to the front of the Tent of 5 the Presence, and all the community approached and stood before the LORD. Moses said, 'This is what the LORD has commanded you to do, so 6 that the glory of the LORD may appear to you. Come near to the altar,' he 7 said to Aaron; 'prepare your sin-offering and your whole-offering and make expiation for yourself and for your household. Then prepare the offering of the people and make expiation for them, as the LORD has 8 commanded.'

So Aaron came near to the altar and slaughtered the calf, which was his 8 sin-offering. The sons of Aaron presented the blood to him, and he dipped his finger in the blood and put it on the horns of the altar. The rest of the 9 blood he poured out at the base of the altar. Part of the sin-offering, the fat, the kidneys, and the long lobe of the liver, he burnt on the altar as 10 the LORD had commanded Moses, but the flesh and the skin he destroyed by fire outside the camp. Then he slaughtered the whole-offering; his sons 11 handed him the blood, and he flung it against the altar all round. They handed him the pieces of the whole-offering and the head, and he burnt 12 them on the altar. He washed the entrails and the shins and burnt them on the altar, on top of the whole-offering. 14

He then brought forward the offering of the people. He took the he-goat, 15 the people's sin-offering, slaughtered it and performed the rite of the sin-offering as he had previously done for himself. He presented the whole- 16 offering and prepared it in the manner prescribed. He brought forward the grain-offering, took a handful of it and burnt it on the altar, in addition to 17 the morning whole-offering. He slaughtered the bull and the ram, the shared-offerings of the people. His sons handed him the blood, and he 18 flung it against the altar all round. But the fatty parts of the bull, the fat-tail of the ram, the fat covering the entrails, and the two kidneys with the 19 fat upon them, and the long lobe of the liver, all this fat they first put on 20 the breasts of the animals and then burnt it on the altar. Aaron presented 21

the breasts and the right leg as a special gift before the LORD, as Moses had commanded.

- 22 Then Aaron lifted up his hands towards the people and pronounced the blessing over them. He came down from performing the rites of the sin-offering, the whole-offering, and the shared-offerings. Moses and Aaron entered the Tent of the Presence, and when they came out, they blessed the people, and the glory of the LORD appeared to all the people. Fire came out from before the LORD and consumed the whole-offering and the fatty parts on the altar. All the people saw, and they shouted and fell on their faces.

- 10 NOW NADAB AND ABIHU, sons of Aaron, took their firepans, put fire in them, threw incense on the fire and presented before the LORD illicit fire which he had not commanded. Fire came out from before the LORD and destroyed them; and so they died in the presence of the LORD. Then Moses said to Aaron, 'This is what the LORD meant when he said: Among those who approach me, I must be treated as holy; in the presence of all the people I must be given honour.' Aaron was dumbfounded. Moses sent for Mishael and Elzaphan, the sons of Aaron's uncle Uzziel, and said to them, 'Come and carry your cousins outside the camp away from the holy place.' They came and carried them away in their tunics outside the camp, as Moses had told them. Moses then said to Aaron and to his sons Eleazar and Ithamar, 'You shall not leave your hair dishevelled or tear your clothes in mourning, lest you die and the LORD be angry with the whole community. Your kinsmen, all the house of Israel, shall weep for the destruction by fire which the LORD has kindled. You shall not leave the entrance to the Tent of the Presence lest you die, because the LORD's anointing oil is on you.' They did as Moses had said.

- 8 9 THE LORD SPOKE TO AARON and said: You and your sons with you shall not drink wine or strong drink when you are to enter the Tent of the Presence, lest you die. This is a rule binding on your descendants for all time, to make a distinction between sacred and profane, between clean and unclean, and to teach the Israelites all the decrees which the LORD has spoken to them through Moses.

- 12 Moses said to Aaron and his surviving sons Eleazar and Ithamar, 'Take what is left over of the grain-offering out of the food-offerings of the LORD, and eat it without leaven beside the altar; it is most sacred. You shall eat it in a sacred place; it is your due and that of your sons out of the LORD's food-offerings, for so I was commanded. You shall eat the breast of the special gift and the leg of the contribution in a clean place, you and your sons and daughters; for they have been given to you and your children as your due out of the shared-offerings of the Israelites. The leg of the contribution and the breast of the special gift shall be brought, along with the food-offerings of fat, to be presented as a special gift before the LORD, and it shall belong to you and your children together, a due for all time; for so the LORD has commanded.'

- 16 Moses made searching inquiry about the goat of the sin-offering and found that it had been burnt. He was angry with Eleazar and Ithamar, Aaron's surviving sons, and said, 'Why did you not eat the sin-offering in the sacred place? It is most sacred. It was given to you to take away the guilt of the community by making expiation for them before the LORD. If the blood is not brought within the sacred precincts, you shall eat the sin-offering there as I was commanded.' But Aaron replied to Moses, 'See, they have today presented their sin-offering and their whole-offering before the LORD, and this is what has befallen me; if I eat a sin-offering today, will it be right in the eyes of the LORD?' When Moses heard this, he deemed it right.

Laws of purification and atonement

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and Aaron and said, Speak to the Israelites in these words: Of all animals on land these are the creatures you may eat: you may eat any animal which has a parted foot or a cloven hoof and also chews the cud; those which have only a cloven hoof or only chew the cud you may not eat. These are: the camel, because it chews the cud but has not a cloven hoof; you shall regard it as unclean; the rock-badger,^a because it chews the cud but has not a parted foot; you shall regard it as unclean; the hare, because it chews the cud but has not a parted foot; you shall regard it as unclean; the pig, because it has a parted foot and a cloven hoof but does not chew the cud; you shall regard it as unclean. You shall not eat their flesh or even touch their dead bodies; you shall regard them as unclean.

Of creatures that live in water these you may eat: all those that have fins and scales, whether in salt water or fresh; but all that have neither fins nor scales, whether in salt or fresh water, including both small creatures in shoals and larger creatures, you shall regard as vermin. They shall be vermin to you; you shall not eat their flesh, and their dead bodies you shall treat as those of vermin. Every creature in the water that has neither fins nor scales shall be vermin to you.

These are the birds you shall regard as vermin, and for this reason they shall not be eaten: the griffon-vulture,^b the black vulture, and the bearded vulture;^c the kite and every kind of falcon; every kind of crow,^d the desert-owl, the short-eared owl, the long-eared owl, and every kind of hawk; the tawny owl, the fisher-owl, and the screech-owl; the little owl, the horned owl, the osprey, the stork,^e every kind of cormorant, the hoopoe, and the bat.

All teeming winged creatures that go on four legs shall be vermin to you, except those which have legs jointed above their feet for leaping on the ground. Of these you may eat every kind of great locust, every kind of long-headed locust, every kind of green locust, and every kind of desert locust. Every other teeming winged creature that has four legs you shall regard as vermin; you would make yourselves unclean with them: whoever ^f touches their dead bodies shall be unclean till evening. Whoever picks up their dead bodies shall wash his clothes but remain unclean till evening.

^a Or rock-rabbit.

^b Or eagle.

^c Or ossifrage.

^d Or raven.

^e Or heron.

^f Or whatever.

26 You shall regard as unclean every animal which has a parted foot but 27 has not a cloven hoof and does not chew the cud: whoever^a touches them shall be unclean. You shall regard as unclean all four-footed wild animals that go on flat paws; whoever^a touches their dead bodies shall be unclean 28 till evening. Whoever takes up their dead bodies shall wash his clothes but remain unclean till evening. You shall regard them as unclean.

29 You shall regard these as unclean among creatures that teem on the ground: the mole-rat,^b the jerboa, and every kind of thorn-tailed lizard; 30 the gecko, the sand-gecko, the wall-gecko, the great lizard, and the chameleon. You shall regard these as unclean among teeming creatures;
 31 whoever^a touches them when they are dead shall be unclean till evening.

32 Anything on which any of them falls when they are dead shall be unclean, any article of wood or garment or skin or sacking, any article in regular use;
 it shall be plunged into water but shall remain unclean till evening, when it 33 shall be clean. If any of these falls into an earthenware vessel, its contents 34 shall be unclean and it shall be smashed. Any food on which water from such a vessel is poured shall be unclean, and any drink in such a vessel shall 35 be unclean. Anything on which the dead body of such a creature falls shall be unclean; an oven or a stove shall be broken, for they are unclean and you 36 shall treat them as such; but a spring or a cistern where water collects shall remain clean, though whatever^c touches the dead body shall be unclean.
 37 When any of their dead bodies falls on seed intended for sowing, it remains 38 clean; but if the seed has been soaked in water and any dead body falls on it, you shall treat it as unclean.

39 When any animal allowed as food dies, all that touch the carcass shall be 40 unclean till evening. Whoever eats any of the carcass shall wash his clothes but remain unclean till evening; whoever takes up the carcass shall wash 41 his clothes and be unclean till evening. All creatures that teem on the ground 42 are vermin; they shall not be eaten. All creatures that teem on the ground, crawl on their bellies, go on all fours or have many legs, you shall not eat, 43 because they are vermin which contaminate. You shall not contaminate yourselves through any teeming creature. You shall not defile yourselves 44 with them and make yourselves unclean by them. For I am the LORD your God; you shall make yourselves holy and keep yourselves holy, because I am holy. You shall not defile yourselves with any teeming creature that 45 creeps on the ground. I am the LORD who brought you up from Egypt to become your God. You shall keep yourselves holy, because I am holy.

46 This, then, is the law concerning beast and bird, every living creature that swims in the water and every living creature that teems on the land.
 47 It is to make a distinction between the unclean and the clean, between living creatures that may be eaten and living creatures that may not be eaten.

2 1 2 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to the Israelites in these words: When a woman conceives and bears a male child, she shall be unclean for seven days, as in the period of her impurity through menstruation.
 3 On the eighth day, the child shall have the flesh of his foreskin circumcised.
 4 The woman shall wait for thirty-three days because her blood requires purification; she shall touch nothing that is holy, and shall not enter the sanctuary till her days of purification are completed. If she bears a female child, she shall be unclean for fourteen days as for her menstruation and shall wait for sixty-six days because her blood requires purification. When her days of purification are completed for a son or a daughter, she shall bring a yearling ram for a whole-offering and a young pigeon or a turtle-dove for a sin-offering to the priest at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence. He shall present it before the LORD and make expiation for her, and she shall be clean from the issue of her blood. This is the law for the woman who bears a child, whether male or female. If she cannot afford a ram, she shall bring two turtle-doves or two young pigeons, one for a whole-offering and the other for a sin-offering. The priest shall make expiation for her and she shall be clean.

^a Or whatever.^b Or weasel.^c Or whoever.

The LORD spoke to Moses and Aaron and said: When any man has a discoloration on the skin of his body, a pustule or inflammation, and it may develop into the sores of a malignant skin-disease, he shall be brought to the priest, either to Aaron or to one of his sons. The priest shall examine the sore on the skin; if the hairs on the sore have turned white and it appears to be deeper than the skin, it shall be considered the sore of a malignant skin-disease, and the priest, after examination, shall pronounce him ritually unclean. But if the inflammation on his skin is white and seems no deeper than the skin, and the hairs have not turned white, the priest shall isolate the affected person for seven days. If, when he examines him on the seventh day, the sore remains as it was and has not spread in the skin, he shall keep him in isolation for another seven days. When the priest examines him again on the seventh day, if the sore has faded and has not spread in the skin, the priest shall pronounce him ritually clean. It is only a scab; the man shall wash his clothes and so be clean. But if the scab spreads on the skin after he has been to the priest to be pronounced ritually clean, the man shall show himself a second time to the priest. The priest shall examine him again, and if it continues to spread, he shall pronounce him ritually unclean; it is a malignant skin-disease.

When anyone has the sores of a malignant skin-disease, he shall be brought to the priest, and the priest shall examine him. If there is a white mark on the skin, turning the hairs white, and an ulceration appears in the mark, it is a chronic skin-disease on the body, and the priest shall pronounce him ritually unclean; there is no need for isolation because he is unclean already. If the skin-disease breaks out and covers the affected person from head to foot as far as the priest can see, the priest shall examine him, and if he finds the condition spread all over the body, he shall pronounce him ritually clean. It has all gone white; he is clean. But from the moment when raw flesh appears, the man shall be considered unclean. When the priest sees it, he shall pronounce him unclean. Raw flesh is to be considered unclean; it is a malignant skin-disease. On the other hand, when the raw flesh heals and turns white, the man shall go to the priest, who shall examine him, and if the sores have gone white, he shall pronounce him clean. He is ritually clean.

When a fester appears on the skin and heals up, but is followed by a 20 white mark or reddish-white inflammation on the site of the fester, the man shall show himself to the priest. The priest shall examine him; if it seems to be beneath the skin and the hairs have turned white, the priest shall pronounce him ritually unclean. It is a malignant skin-disease which has broken out on the site of the fester. But if the priest on examination finds that it has no white hairs, is not beneath the skin and has faded, he shall isolate him for seven days. If the affection has spread at all in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean; for it is a malignant skin-disease. 23 But if the inflammation is no worse and has not spread, it is only the scar of the fester, and the priest shall pronounce him ritually clean.

24 Again, in the case of a burn on the skin, if the raw spot left by the burn becomes a reddish-white or white inflammation, the priest shall examine it. If the hairs on the inflammation have turned white and it is deeper than the skin, it is a malignant skin-disease which has broken out at the site of the burn. The priest shall pronounce the man ritually unclean; it is a malignant skin-disease. But if the priest on examination finds that there is no white hair on the inflammation and it is not beneath the skin and has faded, he shall keep him in isolation for seven days. When the priest examines him on the seventh day, if the inflammation has spread at all in the skin, the priest shall pronounce him unclean; it is a malignant skin-disease. But if the inflammation is no worse, has not spread and has faded, it is only a mark from the burn. The priest shall pronounce him ritually clean because it is the scar of the burn.

29 30 When a man, or woman, has a sore on the head or chin, the priest shall examine it; and if it seems deeper than the skin and the hair is yellow and sparse, the priest shall pronounce him ritually unclean; it is a scurf, a malignant skin-disease of the head or chin. But when the priest sees the sore, if it appears to be no deeper than the skin and yet there is no yellow hair on the place, the priest shall isolate the affected person for seven days. 32 He shall examine the sore on the seventh day: if the scurf has not spread and there are no yellow hairs on it and it seems no deeper than the skin, the man shall get himself shaved except for the scurfy part, and the priest shall keep him in isolation for another seven days. The priest shall examine it again on the seventh day, and if the scurf has not spread on the skin and appears to be no deeper than the skin, the priest shall pronounce him clean. 35 The man shall wash his clothes and so be ritually clean. But if the scurf spreads at all in the skin after the man has been pronounced clean, the priest shall examine him again. If it has spread in the skin, the priest need not even look for yellow hair; the man is unclean. If, however, the scurf remains as it was but black hair has begun to grow on it, it has healed. The man is ritually clean and the priest shall pronounce him so.

38 When a man, or woman, has inflamed patches on the skin and they are white, the priest shall examine them. If they are white and fading, it is dull-white leprosy that has broken out on the skin. The man is ritually clean.

40 When a man's hair falls out from his head, he is bald behind but not ritually unclean. If the hair falls out from the front of the scalp, he is bald on the forehead but clean. But if on the bald patch behind or on the forehead there is a reddish-white sore, it is a malignant skin-disease breaking out on those parts. The priest shall examine him, and if the discoloured sore on the bald patch behind or on the forehead is reddish-white, similar in appearance to a malignant skin-disease on the body, the man is suffering from such a disease; he is ritually unclean and the priest must not fail to pronounce him so. The symptoms are in this case on his head.

One who suffers from a malignant skin-disease shall wear his clothes torn, leave his hair dishevelled, conceal his upper lip, and cry, 'Unclean, unclean.' So long as the sore persists, he shall be considered ritually unclean. The man is unclean: he shall live apart and must stay outside the settlement.

When there is a stain of mould, whether in a garment of wool or linen, or in the warp or weft of linen or wool, or in a skin or anything made of skin; if the stain is greenish or reddish in the garment or skin, or in the warp or weft, or in anything made of skin, it is a stain of mould which must be shown to the priest. The priest shall examine it and put the stained material aside for seven days. On the seventh day he shall examine it again. If the stain has spread in the garment, warp, weft, or skin, whatever the use of the skin, the stain is a rotting mould: it is ritually unclean. He shall burn the garment or the warp or weft, whether wool or linen, or anything of skin which is stained; because it is a rotting mould, it must be destroyed by fire. But if the priest sees that the stain has not spread in the garment, warp or weft, or anything made of skin, he shall give orders for the stained material to be washed, and then he shall put it aside for another seven days. After it has been washed the priest shall examine the stain; if it has not changed its appearance, although it has not spread, it is unclean and you shall destroy it by fire, whether the rot is on the right side or the wrong. If the priest examines it and finds the stain faded after being washed, he shall tear it out of the garment, skin, warp, or weft. If, however, the stain reappears in the garment, warp or weft, or in anything of skin, it is breaking out afresh and you shall destroy by fire whatever is stained. If you wash the garment, warp, weft, or anything of skin and the stain disappears, it shall be washed a second time and then it shall be ritually clean.

This is the law concerning stain of mould in a garment of wool or linen, in warp or weft, or in anything made of skin; by it they shall be pronounced clean or unclean.

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and said: This is the law concerning a man suffering from a malignant skin-disease. On the day when he is to be cleansed he shall be brought to the priest. The priest shall go outside the camp and examine him. If the man is healed of his disease, then the priest shall order two clean small birds to be brought alive for the man who is to be cleansed, together with cedar-wood, scarlet thread, and marjoram.^a He shall order one of the birds to be killed over an earthenware bowl containing fresh water. He shall then take the living bird and the cedar-wood, scarlet thread, and marjoram and dip them and the living bird in the blood of the bird that has been killed over the fresh water. He shall sprinkle the blood seven times on the man who is to be cleansed from his skin-disease and so cleanse him; the living bird he shall release to fly away over the open 8 country. The man to be cleansed shall wash his clothes, shave off all his hair, bathe in water and so be ritually clean. He may then enter the camp 9 but must stay outside his tent for seven days. On the seventh day he shall shave off all the hair on his head, his beard, and his eyebrows, and then shave the rest of his hair, wash his clothes and bathe in water; then he shall be ritually clean.

10 On the eighth day he shall bring two yearling rams and one yearling ewe, all three without blemish, a grain-offering of three tenths of an ephah 11 of flour mixed with oil, and one log of oil. The officiating priest shall place the man to be cleansed and his offerings before the LORD at the entrance 12 to the Tent of the Presence. He shall then take one of the rams and offer it with the log of oil as a guilt-offering, presenting them as a special gift 13 before the LORD. The ram shall be slaughtered where the sin-offerings and the whole-offerings are slaughtered, within the sacred precincts, because the guilt-offering, like the sin-offering, belongs to the priest. It is 14 most sacred. The priest shall then take some of the blood of the guilt-offering and put it on the lobe of the right ear of the man to be cleansed, and 15 on his right thumb and the big toe of his right foot. He shall next take the log of oil and pour some of it on the palm of his own left hand, dip his right 16 forefinger into the oil on his left palm and sprinkle some of it with his finger seven times before the LORD. He shall then put some of the oil 17 remaining on his palm on the lobe of the right ear of the man to be cleansed, on his right thumb and on the big toe of his right foot, on top of the blood 18 of the guilt-offering. The remainder of the oil on the priest's palm shall be put upon the head of the man to be cleansed, and thus the priest shall make 19 expiation for him before the LORD. The priest shall then perform the sin-offering and make expiation for the uncleanness of the man who is to be 20 cleansed. After this he shall slaughter the whole-offering and offer it and the grain-offering on the altar. Thus the priest shall make expiation for him, and then he shall be clean.

21 If the man is poor and cannot afford these offerings, he shall bring one young ram as a guilt-offering to be a special gift making expiation for him, and a grain-offering of a tenth of an ephah of flour mixed with oil, and a log 22 of oil, also two turtle-doves or two young pigeons, whichever he can afford, 23 one for a sin-offering and the other for a whole-offering. He shall bring them to the priest for his cleansing on the eighth day, at the entrance to the 24 Tent of the Presence before the LORD. The priest shall take the ram for the guilt-offering and the log of oil, and shall present them as a special gift 25 before the LORD. The ram for the guilt-offering shall then be slaughtered, and the priest shall take some of the blood of the guilt-offering, and put it on the lobe of the right ear of the man to be cleansed and on his right thumb 26 and on the big toe of his right foot. He shall pour some of the oil on the palm of his own left hand and sprinkle some of it with his right forefinger 27 seven times before the LORD. He shall then put some of the oil remaining on his palm on the lobe of the right ear of the man to be cleansed, and on his 28 right thumb and on the big toe of his right foot exactly where the blood of the guilt-offering was put. The remainder of the oil on the priest's palm 29 shall be put upon the head of the man to be cleansed to make expiation for him before the LORD. Of the birds which the man has been able to afford, 30 turtle-doves or young pigeons, whichever it may be, the priest shall deal 31 with one as a sin-offering and with the other as a whole-offering and shall make the grain-offering with them. Thus the priest shall make expiation before the LORD for the man who is to be cleansed. This is the law for the 32 man with a malignant skin-disease who cannot afford the regular offering for his cleansing.

The LORD spoke to Moses and Aaron and said: When you have entered 33 34
 the land of Canaan which I give you to occupy, if I inflict a fungous infection upon a house in the land you have occupied, its owner shall come and report to the priest that there appears to him to be a patch of infection in his house. The priest shall order the house to be cleared before he goes in to examine the infection, or everything in it will become unclean. After this 35 the priest shall go in to inspect the house. If on inspection he finds the 36 patch on the walls consists of greenish or reddish depressions, apparently going deeper than the surface, he shall go out of the house and, standing 37 at the entrance, shall put it in quarantine for seven days. On the seventh 38 day he shall come back and inspect the house, and if the patch has spread 39 in the walls, he shall order the infected stones to be pulled out and thrown away outside the city in an unclean place. He shall then have the house scraped inside throughout, and all the daub^a they have scraped off shall 40 be tipped outside the city in an unclean place. They shall take fresh stones 41 to replace the others and replaster the house with fresh daub. 42

If the infection reappears in the house and spreads after the stones have 43 been pulled out and the house scraped and redaubed, the priest shall come 44 and inspect it. If the infection has spread in the house, it is a corrosive growth; the house is unclean. The house shall be demolished, stones, 45 timber, and daub, and it shall all be taken away outside the city to an unclean place. Anyone who has entered the house during the time it has been 46 in quarantine shall be unclean till evening. Anyone who has slept or eaten 47 a meal in the house shall wash his clothes. But if, when the priest goes 48 into the house and inspects it, he finds that the infection has not spread after the redaubing, then he shall pronounce the house ritually clean, because the infection has been cured.

In order to rid the house of impurity, he shall take two small birds, cedar- 49 wood, scarlet thread, and marjoram. He shall kill one of the birds over an 50 earthenware bowl containing fresh water. He shall then take the cedar- 51 wood, marjoram, and scarlet thread, together with the living bird, dip them in the blood of the bird that has been killed and in the fresh water, and sprinkle the house seven times. Thus he shall purify the house, using 52 the blood of the bird, the fresh water, the living bird, the cedar-wood, the marjoram, and the scarlet thread. He shall set the living bird free outside 53 the city to fly away over the open country, and make expiation for the house;
 and then it shall be clean.

This is the law for all malignant skin-diseases, and for scurf, for mould 54 55 in clothes and fungus in houses, for a discoloration of the skin, scab, and 56

^a Or mud.

- 57 inflammation, to declare when these are pronounced unclean and when clean. This is the law for skin-disease, mould, and fungus.
- 1 2 THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and Aaron and said, Speak to the Israelites and say to them: When any man has a discharge from his body, the discharge is ritually unclean. This is the law concerning the uncleanness
- 3 due to his discharge whether it continues or has been stopped; in either case he is unclean.
- 4 Every bed on which the man with a discharge lies down shall be ritually unclean, and everything on which he sits shall be unclean. Any man who
- 5 touches the bed shall wash his clothes, bathe in water and remain unclean till evening. Whoever sits on anything on which the man with a discharge
- 6 has sat shall wash his clothes, bathe in water and remain unclean till evening. Whoever touches the body of the man with a discharge shall wash his
- 7 clothes, bathe in water and remain unclean till evening. If the man spits on one who is ritually clean, the latter shall wash his clothes, bathe in water
- 8 and remain unclean till evening. Everything on which the man sits when riding shall be unclean. Whoever touches anything that has been under
- 9 him shall be unclean till evening, and whoever handles such things shall wash his clothes, bathe in water and remain unclean till evening. Anyone
- 10 whom the man with a discharge touches without having rinsed his hands in water shall wash his clothes, bathe in water and remain unclean till evening. Any earthenware bowl touched by the man shall be smashed, and every wooden bowl shall be rinsed with water.
- 11 When the man is cleansed from his discharge, he shall reckon seven days to his cleansing, wash his clothes, bathe his body in fresh water and be ritually clean. On the eighth day he shall obtain two turtle-doves or two young pigeons and, coming before the LORD at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence, shall give them to the priest. The priest shall deal with one as a sin-offering and the other as a whole-offering, and shall make for him before the LORD the expiation required by the discharge.
- 12 When a man has emitted semen, he shall bathe his whole body in water and be unclean till evening. Every piece of clothing or skin on which there
- 13 is any semen shall be washed and remain unclean till evening. This applies also to the woman with whom a man has had intercourse; they shall both bathe themselves in water and remain unclean till evening.
- 14 When a woman has a discharge of blood, her impurity shall last for seven days; anyone who touches her shall be unclean till evening. Everything on which she lies or sits during her impurity shall be unclean. Anyone who touches her bed shall wash his clothes, bathe in water and remain unclean till evening. Whoever touches anything on which she sits shall
- 15 wash his clothes, bathe in water and remain unclean till evening. If he is on the bed or seat where she is sitting, by touching it he shall become unclean till evening. If a man goes so far as to have intercourse with her and any of her discharge gets on to him, then he shall be unclean for seven days, and every bed on which he lies down shall be unclean.
- 16 When a woman has a prolonged discharge of blood not at the time of her menstruation, or when her discharge continues beyond the period of menstruation, her impurity shall last all the time of her discharge; she shall be unclean as during the period of her menstruation. Any bed on which she lies during the time of her discharge shall be like that which she used during menstruation, and everything on which she sits shall be unclean as in her menstrual uncleanness. Every person who touches them shall be unclean; he shall wash his clothes, bathe in water and remain unclean till evening. If she is cleansed from her discharge, she shall reckon seven days and after that she shall be ritually clean. On the eighth day she shall obtain two turtle-doves or two young pigeons and bring them to the priest at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence. The priest shall deal with one as a sin-offering and with the other as a whole-offering, and make for her before the LORD the expiation required by her unclean discharge.

In this way you shall warn the Israelites against uncleanness, in order that they may not bring uncleanness upon the Tabernacle where I dwell among them, and so die.

This is the law for the man who has a discharge, or who has an emission of semen and is thereby unclean, and for the woman who is suffering her menstruation—for everyone, male or female, who has a discharge, and for the man who has intercourse with a woman who is unclean.

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES after the death of Aaron's two sons, who died when they offered illicit fire before the LORD. He said to him: Tell your brother Aaron that he must not enter the sanctuary within the Veil, in front of the cover over the Ark, except at the appointed time, on pain of death; for I appear in the cloud above the cover. When Aaron enters the sanctuary, this is what he shall do. He shall bring a young bull for a sin-offering and a ram for a whole-offering. He shall wear a sacred linen tunic and linen drawers to cover himself, and he shall put a linen sash round his waist and wind a linen turban round his head; all these are sacred vestments, and he shall bathe in water before putting them on. He shall take for the community of the Israelites two he-goats for a sin-offering and a ram for a whole-offering. He shall present the bull as a sin-offering and make expiation for himself and his household. Then he shall take the two he-goats and set them before the LORD at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence. He shall cast lots over the two goats, one to be for the LORD and the other for the Precipice.^a He shall present the goat on which the lot for the LORD has fallen and deal with it as a sin-offering; but the goat on which the lot for the Precipice has fallen shall be made to stand alive before the LORD, for expiation to be made over it before it is driven away into the wilderness to the Precipice.

Aaron shall present his bull as a sin-offering, making expiation for himself and his household, and then slaughter the bull as a sin-offering. He shall take a firepan full of glowing embers from the altar before the LORD, and two handfuls of powdered fragrant incense, and bring them within the Veil. He shall put the incense on the fire before the LORD, and the cloud of incense will hide the cover over the Tokens so that he shall not die. He shall take some of the bull's blood and sprinkle it with his finger

both on the surface of the cover, eastwards, and seven times in front of the cover.

15 He shall then slaughter the people's goat as a sin-offering, bring its blood within the Veil and do with its blood as he did with the bull's blood, 16 sprinkling it on the cover and in front of it. He shall make for the sanctuary the expiation required by the ritual uncleanness of the Israelites and their acts of rebellion, that is by all their sins; and he shall do the same for the Tent of the Presence, which dwells among them in the midst of all their 17 uncleanness. No other man shall be within the Tent of the Presence from the time when he enters the sanctuary to make expiation until he comes out, and he shall make expiation for himself, his household, and the whole assembly of Israel.

18 He shall then come out to the altar which is before the LORD and make expiation for it. He shall take some of the bull's blood and some of the 19 goat's blood and put it all over the horns of the altar; he shall sprinkle some of the blood on the altar with his finger seven times. So he shall purify it from all the uncleanness of the Israelites and hallow it.

20 When Aaron has finished making expiation for the sanctuary, for the Tent of the Presence, and for the altar, he shall bring forward the live goat.
21 He shall lay both his hands on its head and confess over it all the iniquities of the Israelites and all their acts of rebellion, that is all their sins; he shall lay them on the head of the goat and send it away into the wilderness in 22 charge of a man who is waiting ready. The goat shall carry all their iniquities upon itself into some barren waste and the man shall let it go, there in the wilderness.

23 Aaron shall then enter the Tent of the Presence, take off the linen clothes which he had put on when he entered the sanctuary, and leave them there.
24 He shall bathe in water in a consecrated place and put on his vestments;
then he shall go out and perform his own whole-offering and that of the 25 people, thus making expiation for himself and for the people. He shall burn the fat of the sin-offering upon the altar. The man who drove the 26 goat away to the Precipice shall wash his clothes and bathe in water, and not till then may he enter the camp. The two sin-offerings, the bull 27 and the goat, the blood of which was brought within the Veil to make expiation in the sanctuary, shall be taken outside the camp and 28 destroyed by fire—skin, flesh, and offal. The man who burns them shall wash his clothes and bathe in water, and not till then may he enter the camp.

29 This shall become a rule binding on you for all time. On the tenth day of the seventh month you shall mortify yourselves; you shall do no work, 30 whether native Israelite or alien settler, because on this day expiation shall be made on your behalf to cleanse you, and so make you clean before the 31 LORD from all your sins. This is a sabbath of sacred rest for you, and you shall mortify yourselves; it is a rule binding for all time. Expiation shall be 32 made by the priest duly anointed and installed to serve in succession to his 33 father; he shall put on the sacred linen clothes and shall make expiation for the holy sanctuary, the Tent of the Presence, and the altar, on behalf of the 34 priests and the whole assembly of the people. This shall become a rule binding on you for all time, to make for the Israelites once a year the expiation required by all their sins.

And Moses carried out the LORD's commands.

The law of holiness

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and said, Speak to Aaron, his sons, and 17 1 2
 all the Israelites in these words: This is what the LORD has commanded.
 Any Israelite who slaughters an ox, a sheep, or a goat, either inside or 3 outside the camp, and does not bring it to the entrance of the Tent of the 4 Presence to present it as an offering to the LORD before the Tabernacle of the LORD shall be held guilty of bloodshed: that man has shed blood and shall be cut off from his people. The purpose is that the Israelites should 5 bring to the LORD the animals which they slaughter in the open country;
 they shall bring them to the priest at the entrance to the Tent of the 6 Presence and sacrifice them as shared-offerings to the LORD. The priest shall fling the blood against the altar of the LORD at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence, and burn the fat as a soothing odour to the LORD.
 They shall no longer sacrifice their slaughtered beasts to the demons^a whom 7 they wantonly follow. This shall be a rule binding on them and their descendants for all time.

You shall say to them: Any Israelite or alien settled in Israel who offers 8
 a whole-offering or a sacrifice and does not bring it to the entrance of the 9 Tent of the Presence to sacrifice it to the LORD shall be cut off from his father's kin.

If any Israelite or alien settled in Israel eats any blood, I will set my face 10 against the eater and cut him off from his people, because the life of a 11 creature is the blood, and I appoint it to make expiation on the altar for yourselves: it is the blood, that is the life, that makes expiation. Therefore 12
 I have told the Israelites that neither you, nor any alien settled among you, shall eat blood.

Any Israelite or alien settled in Israel who hunts beasts or birds that may 13 lawfully be eaten shall drain out the blood and cover it with earth, because 14 the life of every living creature is the blood, and I have forbidden the Israelites to eat the blood of any creature, because the life of every creature is its blood: every man who eats it shall be cut off.

Every person, native or alien, who eats that which has died a natural 15 death or has been mauled by wild beasts shall wash his clothes and bathe in water, and remain ritually unclean till evening; then he shall be 16 clean. If he does not wash his clothes and bathe his body, he must accept responsibility.

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and said, Speak to the Israelites in these 18 1 2 words: I am the LORD your God. You shall not do as they do in Egypt 3 where you once dwelt, nor shall you do as they do in the land of Canaan to which I am bringing you; you shall not conform to their institutions. You 4

^a Or satyrs.

must keep my laws and conform to my institutions without fail: I am the 5 LORD your God. You shall observe my institutions and my laws: the man who keeps them shall have life through them. I am the LORD.

6 No man shall approach a blood-relation for intercourse. I am the LORD.
7 You shall not bring shame on your father by intercourse with your mother:
8 she is your mother; you shall not bring shame upon her. You shall not have intercourse with your father's wife: that is to bring shame upon your father.
9 You shall not have intercourse with your sister, your father's daughter, or your mother's daughter, whether brought up in the family or in another 10 home; you shall not bring shame upon them. You shall not have intercourse with your son's daughter or your daughter's daughter: that is to 11 bring shame upon yourself. You shall not have intercourse with a daughter of your father's wife, begotten by your father: she is your sister, and you 12 shall not bring shame upon her. You shall not have intercourse with your 13 father's sister: she is a blood-relation of your father. You shall not have intercourse with your mother's sister: she is a blood-relation of your 14 mother. You shall not bring shame upon your father's brother by approach-15 ing his wife: she is your aunt. You shall not have intercourse with your daughter-in-law: she is your son's wife; you shall not bring shame upon her.
16 You shall not have intercourse with your brother's wife: that is to bring 17 shame upon him. You shall not have intercourse with both a woman and her daughter, nor shall you take her son's daughter or her daughter's daughter to 18 have intercourse with them: they are her blood-relations, and such conduct is lewdness. You shall not take a woman who is your wife's sister to make her a rival-wife, and to have intercourse with her during her sister's lifetime.

19 You shall not approach a woman to have intercourse with her during 20 her period of menstruation. You shall not have sexual intercourse with the wife of your fellow-countryman and so make yourself unclean with her.
21 You shall not surrender any of your children to Molech and thus profane 22 the name of your God: I am the LORD. You shall not lie with a man as with 23 a woman: that is an abomination. You shall not have sexual intercourse with any beast to make yourself unclean with it, nor shall a woman submit 24 herself to intercourse with a beast: that is a violation of nature. You shall not make yourselves unclean in any of these ways; for in these ways the heathen, whom I am driving out before you, made themselves unclean.
25 This is how the land became unclean, and I punished it for its iniquity so 26 that it spewed out its inhabitants. You, unlike them, shall keep my laws and my rules: none of you, whether natives or aliens settled among you, 27 shall do any of these abominable things. The people who were there before 28 you did these abominable things and the land became unclean. So the land 29 will not spew you out for making it unclean as it spewed them out; for anyone who does any of these abominable things shall be cut off from his 30 people. Observe my charge, therefore, and follow none of the abominable institutions customary before your time; do not make yourselves unclean with them. I am the LORD your God.

1 2 THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and said, Speak to all the community of the Israelites in these words: You shall be holy, because I, the LORD your God, am holy. You shall revere, every man of you, his mother and his father. You shall keep my sabbaths. I am the LORD your God. Do not resort to idols; you shall not make gods of cast metal for yourselves. I am the LORD your God.

When you sacrifice a shared-offering to the LORD, you shall slaughter it so as to win acceptance for yourselves. It must be eaten on the day of your sacrifice or the next day. Whatever is left over till the third day shall be destroyed by fire; it is tainted, and if any of it is eaten on the third day, it will not be acceptable. He who eats it must accept responsibility, because he has profaned the holy-gift to the LORD: that person shall be cut off from his father's kin.

When you reap the harvest of your land, you shall not reap right into the edges of your field; neither shall you glean the loose ears of your crop; you shall not completely strip your vineyard nor glean the fallen grapes. You shall leave them for the poor and the alien. I am the LORD your God.

You shall not steal; you shall not cheat or deceive a fellow-countryman. You shall not swear in my name with intent to deceive and thus profane the name of your God. I am the LORD. You shall not oppress your neighbour, nor rob him. You shall not keep back a hired man's wages till next morning. You shall not treat the deaf with contempt, nor put an obstruction in the way of the blind. You shall fear your God. I am the LORD.

You shall not pervert justice, either by favouring the poor or by subservience to the great. You shall judge your fellow-countryman with strict justice. You shall not go about spreading slander among your father's kin, nor take sides against your neighbour on a capital charge. I am the LORD. You shall not nurse hatred against your brother. You shall reprove your fellow-countryman frankly and so you will have no share in his guilt.^a You shall not seek revenge, or cherish anger towards your kinsfolk; you shall love your neighbour as a man like yourself. I am the LORD.

You shall keep my rules. You shall not allow two different kinds of beast to mate together. You shall not plant your field with two kinds of seed. You shall not put on a garment woven with two kinds of yarn.

When a man has intercourse with a slave-girl who has been assigned to another man and neither ransomed nor given her freedom, inquiry shall be made. They shall not be put to death, because she has not been freed. The man shall bring his guilt-offering, a ram, to the LORD to the entrance of the Tent of the Presence, and with it the priest shall make expiation for him before the LORD for his sin, and he shall be forgiven the sin he has committed.

When you enter the land, and plant any kind of tree for food, you shall treat it as bearing forbidden fruit. For three years it shall be forbidden and may not be eaten. In the fourth year all its fruit shall be a holy-gift to the LORD, and this releases it for use. In the fifth year you may eat its fruit, and thus the yield it gives you shall be increased. I am the LORD your God.

You shall not eat meat with the blood in it. You shall not practise divination or soothsaying. You shall not round off your hair from side to side, and you shall not shave the edge of your beards. You shall not gash yourselves in mourning for the dead; you shall not tattoo yourselves. I am the LORD.

^a Or and for that you will incur no blame.

Do not prostitute your daughter and so make her a whore; thus the land shall not play the prostitute and be full of lewdness. You shall keep my sabbaths, and revere my sanctuary. I am the LORD.

Do not resort to ghosts and spirits, nor make yourselves unclean by seeking them out. I am the LORD your God.

You shall rise in the presence of grey hairs, give honour to the aged, and fear your God. I am the LORD.

When an alien settles with you in your land, you shall not oppress him. He shall be treated as a native born among you, and you shall love him as a man like yourself, because you were aliens in Egypt. I am the LORD your God.

You shall not pervert justice in measurement of length, weight, or quantity. You shall have true scales, true weights, true measures dry and liquid. I am the LORD your God who brought you out of Egypt. You shall observe all my rules and laws and carry them out. I am the LORD.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Say to the Israelites: Any Israelite or alien settled in Israel who gives any of his children to Molech shall be put to death: the common people shall stone him. I, for my part, set my face against that man and cut him off from his people, because he has given a child of his to Molech, thus making my sanctuary unclean and profaning my holy name. If the common people connive at it when a man has given a child of his to Molech and do not put him to death, I will set my face against man and family, and both him and all who follow him in his wanton following after Molech,^a I will cut off from their people.

I will set my face against the man who wantonly resorts to ghosts and spirits, and I will cut that person off from his people. Hallow yourselves and be holy, because I the LORD your God am holy. You shall keep my rules and obey them: I am the LORD who hallows you.

When any man reviles his father and his mother, he shall be put to death. He has reviled his father and his mother; his blood shall be on his own head. If a man commits adultery with his neighbour's wife, both adulterer and adulteress shall be put to death. The man who has intercourse with his father's wife has brought shame on his father. They shall both be put to death; their blood shall be on their own heads. If a man has intercourse with his daughter-in-law, they shall both be put to death. Their deed is a violation of nature; their blood shall be on their own heads. If a man has intercourse with a man as with a woman, they both commit an abomination. They shall be put to death; their blood shall be on their own heads. If a man takes both a woman and her mother, that is lewdness. Both he and they shall be burnt; thus there shall be no lewdness in your midst. A man who has sexual intercourse with any beast shall be put to death, and you shall kill the beast. If a woman approaches any animal to have intercourse with it, you shall kill both woman and beast. They shall be put to death; their blood shall be on their own heads. If a man takes his sister, his father's daughter or his mother's daughter, and they see one another naked, it is a scandalous disgrace. They shall be cut off in the presence of their people.

The man has had intercourse with his sister and he shall accept responsibility. If a man lies with a woman during her monthly period and brings shame upon her, he has exposed her discharge and she has uncovered the source of her discharge; they shall both be cut off from their people. You shall not have intercourse with your mother's sister or your father's sister: it is the exposure of a blood-relation. They shall accept responsibility. A man who has intercourse with his uncle's wife has brought shame upon his uncle. They shall accept responsibility for their sin and shall be proscribed and put to death. If a man takes his brother's wife, it is impurity. He has brought shame upon his brother; they shall be proscribed.

You shall keep all my rules and my laws and carry them out, that the land into which I am bringing you to live may not spew you out. You shall not conform to the institutions of the nations whom I am driving out before you: they did all these things and I abhorred them, and I told you that you should occupy their land, and I would give you possession of it, a land flowing with milk and honey. I am the LORD your God: I have made a clear separation between you and the nations, and you shall make a clear separation between clean beasts and unclean beasts and between unclean and clean birds. You shall not make yourselves vile through beast or bird or anything that creeps on the ground, for I have made a clear separation between them and you, declaring them unclean. You shall be holy to me, because I the LORD am holy. I have made a clear separation between you and the heathen, that you may belong to me. Any man or woman among you who calls up ghosts or spirits shall be put to death. The people shall stone them; their blood shall be on their own heads.

THE LORD SAID TO MOSES, Say to the priests, the sons of Aaron: A priest shall not render himself unclean for the death of any of his kin except for a near blood-relation, that is for mother, father, son, daughter, brother, or full sister who is unmarried and a virgin; nor shall he make himself unclean for any married woman^a among his father's kin, and so profane himself.

Priests shall not make bald patches on their heads as a sign of mourning, nor cut the edges of their beards, nor gash their bodies. They shall be holy to their God, and they shall not profane the name of their God, because they present the food-offerings of the LORD, the food of their God, and they shall be holy. A priest shall not marry a prostitute or a girl who has lost her virginity, nor shall he marry a woman divorced from her husband; for he is holy to his God. You shall keep him holy because he presents the food of your God; you shall regard him as holy because I the LORD, I who hallow them, am holy. When a priest's daughter profanes herself by becoming a prostitute, she profanes her father. She shall be burnt to death.

The high priest, the one among his fellows who has had the anointing oil poured on his head and has been consecrated to wear the vestments, shall neither leave his hair dishevelled nor tear his clothes. He shall not enter the place where any man's dead body lies; not even for his father or his mother shall he render himself unclean. He shall not go out of the sanctuary for fear that he dishonour the sanctuary of his God, because the consecration of the anointing oil of his God is upon him. I am the LORD. He shall marry a woman who is still a virgin. He shall not marry a widow, a divorced woman, a woman who has lost her virginity, or a prostitute, but only a virgin from his father's kin; he shall not dishonour his descendants among his father's kin, for I am the LORD who hallows him.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to Aaron in these words: No man among your descendants for all time who has any physical defect shall come and present the food of his God. No man with a defect shall come, whether a blind man, a lame man, a man stunted or overgrown, a man deformed in foot or hand, or with mis-shapen brows or a film over his eye or a discharge from it, a man who has a scab or eruption or has had a testicle ruptured. No descendant of Aaron the priest who has any defect in his body shall approach to present the food-offerings of the LORD; because he has a defect he shall not approach to present the food of his God. He may eat the bread of God both from the holy-gifts and from the holiest of holy-gifts, but he shall not come up to the Veil nor approach the altar, because he has a defect in his body. Thus he shall not profane my sanctuaries, because I am the LORD who hallows them.

Thus did Moses speak to Aaron and his sons and to all the Israelites.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Tell Aaron and his sons that they must be careful in the handling of the holy-gifts of the Israelites which they hallow to me, lest they profane my holy name. I am the LORD. Say to them: Any man of your descent for all time who while unclean approaches the holy-gifts which the Israelites hallow to the LORD shall be cut off from my presence. I am the LORD. No man descended from Aaron who suffers from a malignant skin-disease, or has a discharge, shall eat of the holy-gifts until he is cleansed. A man who touches anything which makes him unclean or who has an emission of semen, a man who touches any vermin which makes him unclean or any human being who makes him unclean: any person who touches such a thing shall be unclean till sunset and unless he washes his body shall not eat of the holy-gifts. When the sun goes down, he shall be clean, and after that he may eat from the holy-gifts, because they are his food. He shall not eat an animal that has died a natural death or has been mauled by wild beasts, thereby making himself unclean. I am the LORD. The priests shall observe my charge, lest they make themselves guilty and die for profaning my name. I am the LORD who hallows them. No unqualified person may eat any holy-gift; nor may a stranger lodging with a priest or a hired man eat a holy-gift. A slave bought by a priest with his own money may do so, and slaves born in his household may also share his food. When a priest's daughter marries an unqualified person, she shall not eat any of the contributions of holy-gifts; but if she is widowed or divorced and is childless and comes back to her father's house as in her childhood, she shall share her father's food. No unqualified person may eat any of it.

When a man inadvertently eats a holy-gift, he shall make good the holy-gift to the priest, adding a fifth to its value. The priests shall not profane the holy-gifts of the Israelites which they set aside for the LORD; they shall not let men eat their holy-gifts and so incur guilt and its penalty, because I am the LORD who hallows them.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to Aaron and his sons and to all the Israelites in these words: When any man of the house of Israel or any alien in Israel presents, whether in fulfilment of a vow or for a freewill offering, such an offering as is presented to the LORD for a whole-offering so as to win acceptance for yourselves, it shall be a male without defect, of cattle, sheep, or goats. You shall not present anything which is defective, because it will not be acceptable on your behalf. When a man presents a shared-offering to the LORD, whether cattle or sheep, to fulfil a special^a vow or as a freewill offering, if it is to be acceptable it must be perfect; there shall be no defect in it. You shall present to the LORD nothing blind, disabled, mutilated, with running sore, scab, or eruption, nor set any such creature on the altar as a food-offering to the LORD. If a bull or a sheep is overgrown or stunted, you may make of it a freewill offering, but it will not be acceptable in fulfilment of a vow. If its testicles have been crushed or bruised, torn or cut, you shall not present it to the LORD; this is forbidden in your land.

You shall not procure any such creature from a foreigner and present it as food for your God. Their deformity is inherent in them, a permanent defect, and they will not be acceptable on your behalf.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said: When a calf, a lamb, or a kid is born, it must not be taken from its mother for seven days. From the eighth day onwards it will be acceptable when offered as a food-offering to the LORD. You shall not slaughter a cow or sheep at the same time as its young. When you make a thank-offering to the LORD, you shall sacrifice it so as to win acceptance for yourselves; it shall be eaten that same day, and none be left till morning. I am the LORD.

You shall observe my commandments and perform them. I am the LORD. You shall not profane my holy name; I will be hallowed among the Israelites. I am the LORD who hallows you, who brought you out of Egypt to become your God. I am the LORD.

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES AND SAID, Speak to the Israelites in these words: These are the appointed seasons of the LORD, and you shall proclaim them as sacred assemblies; these are my appointed seasons. On six days work may be done, but every seventh day is a sabbath of sacred rest, a day of sacred assembly, on which you shall do no work. Wherever you live, it is the LORD's sabbath.

These are the appointed seasons of the LORD, the sacred assemblies which you shall proclaim in their appointed order. In the first month on the fourteenth day between dusk and dark is the LORD's Passover. On the fifteenth day of this month begins the LORD's pilgrim-feast of Unleavened Bread; for seven days you shall eat unleavened cakes. On the first day there shall be a sacred assembly; you shall not do your daily work. For seven days you shall present your food-offerings to the LORD. On the seventh day also there shall be a sacred assembly; you shall not do your daily work.

^a fulfil a special: or discharge a . . .

10 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to the Israelites in these 11 words: When you enter the land which I give you, and you reap its harvest, 12 you shall bring the first sheaf of your harvest to the priest. He shall present
13 the sheaf as a special gift before the LORD on ^a the day after the sabbath, so 14 as to gain acceptance for yourselves. On the day you present the sheaf, you 15 shall prepare a perfect yearling ram for a whole-offering to the LORD, with 16 the proper grain-offering, two tenths of an ephah of flour mixed with oil, 17 as a food-offering to the LORD, of soothing odour, and also with the proper 18 drink-offering, a quarter of a hin of wine. You shall eat neither bread, nor 19 grain, parched or fully ripened, during that day, the day on which you bring 20 your God his offering; this is a rule binding on your descendants for all 21 time wherever you live.

15 From the day after the sabbath, the day on which you bring your sheaf
16 as a special gift, you shall count seven full weeks. The day after the seventh 17 sabbath will make fifty days, and then you shall present to the LORD a 18 grain-offering from the new crop. You shall bring from your homes two 19 loaves as a special gift; they shall contain two tenths of an ephah of flour 20 and shall be baked with leaven. They are the LORD's firstfruits. In addition 21 to the bread you shall present seven perfect yearling sheep, one young bull, 22 and two rams. They shall be a whole-offering to the LORD with the proper 23 grain-offering and the proper drink-offering, a food-offering of soothing 24 odour to the LORD. You shall also prepare one he-goat for a sin-offering 25 and two yearling sheep for a shared-offering, and the priest shall present 26 them in addition to the bread of the firstfruits as a special gift before the 27 LORD. They shall be a holy-gift to the LORD for the priest. On that same day 28 you shall proclaim a sacred assembly for yourselves; you shall not do your 29 daily work. This is a rule binding on your descendants for all time wherever 30 you live.

22 When you reap the harvest in your land, you shall not reap right into the 23 edges of your field, neither shall you glean the fallen ears. You shall leave 24 them for the poor and for the alien. I am the LORD your God.

24 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to the Israelites in these words:
25 In the seventh month you shall keep the first day as a sacred rest, a day of 26 remembrance and acclamation, a day of sacred assembly. You shall not 27 do your daily work; you shall present a food-offering to the LORD.

27 The LORD spoke to Moses and said: Further, the tenth day of this 28 seventh month is the Day of Atonement. There shall be a sacred assembly; 29 you shall mortify yourselves and present a food-offering to the LORD. On 30 that same day you shall do no work because it is a day of expiation, to make 31 expiation for you before the LORD your God. Therefore every person who 32 does not mortify himself on that day shall be cut off from his father's kin.
33 I will extirpate any person who does any work on that day. You shall do 34 no work; it is a rule binding on your descendants for all time wherever you 35 live. It is for you a sabbath of sacred rest, and you shall mortify yourselves.
36 From the evening of the ninth day to the following evening you shall keep 37 your sabbath-rest.

34 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to the Israelites in these words: On the fifteenth day of this seventh month the LORD's pilgrim-feast of Tabernacles^a begins, and it lasts for seven days. On the first day there shall be a sacred assembly; you shall not do your daily work. For seven days you shall present a food-offering to the LORD; and on the eighth day there shall be a sacred assembly, and you shall present a food-offering to the LORD. It is the closing ceremony; you shall not do your daily work.

These are the appointed seasons of the LORD which you shall proclaim as sacred assemblies for presenting food-offerings to the LORD, whole-offerings and grain-offerings, shared-offerings and drink-offerings, each on its day, besides the LORD's sabbaths and all your gifts, your vows, and your freewill offerings to the LORD.

Further, from the fifteenth day of the seventh month, when the harvest has been gathered, you shall keep the LORD's pilgrim-feast for seven days. The first day is a sacred rest and so is the eighth day. On the first day you shall take the fruit of citrus-trees, palm fronds, and leafy branches, and willows^b from the riverside, and you shall rejoice before the LORD your God for seven days. You shall keep this as a pilgrim-feast in the LORD's honour for seven days every year. It is a rule binding for all time on your descendants; in the seventh month you shall hold this pilgrim-feast. You shall live in arbours for seven days, all who are native Israelites, so that your descendants may be reminded how I made the Israelites live in arbours when I brought them out of Egypt. I am the LORD your God.

Thus Moses announced to the Israelites the appointed seasons of the LORD.

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and said: Command the Israelites to take pure oil of pounded olives ready for the regular mounting of the lamp outside the Veil of the Tokens in the Tent of the Presence. Aaron shall keep the lamp in trim regularly from dusk to dawn before the LORD: this is a rule binding on your descendants for all time. The lamps on the lamp-stand, ritually clean, shall be regularly kept in trim by him before the LORD.

You shall take flour and bake it into twelve loaves, two tenths of an ephah to each. You shall arrange them in two rows, six to a row on the table, ritually clean, before the LORD. You shall sprinkle pure frankincense on the rows, and this shall be a token of the bread, offered to the LORD as a food-offering. Sabbath after sabbath he shall arrange it regularly before the LORD as a gift from the Israelites. This is a covenant for ever; it is the privilege of Aaron and his sons, and they shall eat the bread in a holy place, because it is the holiest of holy-gifts. It is his due out of the food-offerings of the LORD for all time.

Now there was in the Israelite camp a man whose mother was an Israelite and his father an Egyptian; his mother's name was Shelomith daughter of Dibri of the tribe of Dan; and he went out and became involved in a brawl with an Israelite of pure descent. He uttered the Holy Name in blasphemy, so they brought him to Moses; and they kept him in custody until the LORD's will should be clearly made known to them.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Take the man who blasphemed out of the camp. Everyone who heard him shall put a hand^a on his head, and then all the community shall stone him to death. You shall say to the Israelites: When any man whatever blasphemes his God, he shall accept responsibility for his sin. Whoever utters the Name of the LORD shall be put to death: all the community shall stone him; alien or native, if he utters the Name, he shall be put to death.

When one man strikes another and kills him, he shall be put to death. Whoever strikes a beast and kills it shall make restitution, life for life. When one man injures and disfigures his fellow-countryman, it shall be done to him as he has done; fracture for fracture, eye for eye, tooth for tooth; the injury and disfigurement that he has inflicted upon another shall in turn be inflicted upon him.

Whoever strikes a beast and kills it shall make restitution, but whoever strikes a man and kills him shall be put to death. You shall have one penalty for alien and native alike. For I am the LORD your God.

Thus did Moses speak to the Israelites, and they took the man who blasphemed out of the camp and stoned him to death. The Israelites did as the LORD had commanded Moses.

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES on Mount Sinai and said, Speak to the Israelites in these words: When you enter the land which I give you, the land shall keep sabbaths to the LORD. For six years you may sow your fields and for six years prune your vineyards and gather the harvest, but in the seventh year the land shall keep a sabbath of sacred rest, a sabbath to the LORD. You shall not sow your field nor prune your vineyard. You shall not harvest the crop that grows from fallen grain, nor gather in the grapes from the unpruned vines. It shall be a year of sacred rest for the land. Yet what the land itself produces in the sabbath year shall be food for you, for your male and female slaves, for your hired man, and for the stranger lodging under your roof, for your cattle and for the wild animals in your country. Everything it produces may be used for food.

You shall count seven sabbaths of years, that is seven times seven years, forty-nine years, and in the seventh month on the tenth day of the month, on the Day of Atonement, you shall send the ram's horn round. You shall send it through all your land to sound a blast, and so you shall hallow the fiftieth year and proclaim liberation in the land for all its inhabitants. You shall make this your year of jubilee. Every man of you shall return to his patrimony, every man to his family. The fiftieth year shall be your jubilee. You shall not sow, and you shall not harvest the self-sown crop, nor shall you gather in the grapes from the unpruned vines, because it is a jubilee, to be kept holy by you. You shall eat the produce direct from the land.

In this year of jubilee you shall return, every one of you, to his patrimony. When you sell or buy land amongst yourselves, neither party shall drive a hard bargain. You shall pay your fellow-countryman according to the number of years since the jubilee, and he shall sell to you according to the number of annual crops. The more years there are to run, the higher the price, the fewer the years, the lower, because he is selling you a series of crops. You must not victimize one another, but you shall fear your God, 17 because I am the LORD your God. Observe my statutes, keep my judgements 18 and carry them out; and you shall live in the land in security. The land 19 shall yield its harvest; you shall eat your fill and live there secure. If you 20 ask what you are to eat during the seventh year, seeing that you will neither sow nor gather the harvest, I will ordain my blessing for you in the sixth 21 year and the land shall produce a crop to carry over three years. When you 22 sow in the eighth year, you will still be eating from the earlier crop; you shall eat the old until the new crop is gathered in the ninth year.

No land shall be sold outright, because the land is mine, and you are 23 coming into it as aliens and settlers. Throughout the whole land of your 24 patrimony, you shall allow land which has been sold to be redeemed.

When one of you is reduced to poverty and sells part of his patrimony, 25
his next-of-kin who has the duty of redemption shall come and redeem what his kinsman has sold. When a man has no such next-of-kin and him- 26 self becomes able to afford its redemption, he shall take into account the 27 years since the sale and pay the purchaser the balance up to the jubilee.
Then he may return to his patrimony. But if the man cannot afford to buy 28 back the property, it shall remain in the hands of the purchaser till the year of jubilee. It shall then revert to the original owner, and he shall return to his patrimony.

When a man sells a dwelling-house in a walled town, he shall retain the 29 right of redemption till the end of the year of the sale; for a time he shall have the right of redemption. If it is not redeemed before a full year is out, 30 the house in the walled town shall vest in perpetuity in the buyer and his descendants; it shall not revert at the jubilee. Houses in unwalled hamlets 31 shall be treated as property in the open country: the right of redemption shall hold good, and in any case the house shall revert at the jubilee.
Levites shall have the perpetual right to redeem houses of their own patri- 32 mony in towns belonging to them. If one of the Levites does not redeem his 33 house in such a town, then it shall still revert to him at the jubilee, because the houses in Levite towns are their patrimony in Israel. The common land 34 surrounding their towns shall not be sold, because it is their property in perpetuity.

When your brother-Israelite is reduced to poverty and cannot support 35 himself in the community, you shall assist him as you would an alien or a stranger, and he shall live with you. You shall not charge him interest on 36 a loan, either by deducting it in advance from the capital sum, or by adding it on repayment. You shall fear your God, and your brother shall live with you; you shall not deduct interest when advancing him money nor add 37 interest to the payment due for food supplied on credit. I am the LORD 38 your God who brought you out of Egypt to give you the land of Canaan and to become your God.

When your brother is reduced to poverty and sells himself to you, you 39 shall not use him to work for you as a slave. His status shall be that of a hired man or a stranger lodging with you; he shall work for you until the 40 year of jubilee. He shall then leave your service, with his children, and go back to his family and to his ancestral property: because they are my slaves 41 42

43 whom I brought out of Egypt, they shall not be sold as slaves are sold. You shall not drive him with ruthless severity, but you shall fear your God.
44 Such slaves as you have, male or female, shall come from the nations round 45 about you; from them you may buy slaves. You may also buy the children 46 of those who have settled and lodge with you and such of their family as are born in the land. These may become your property, and you may leave them to your sons after you; you may use them as slaves permanently. But your fellow-Israelites you shall not drive with ruthless severity.
47 When an alien or a stranger living with you becomes rich, and your brother becomes poor and sells himself to the alien or stranger or to a 48 member of some alien family, he shall have the right of redemption after 49 he has sold himself. One of his brothers may redeem him, or his uncle, his cousin, or any blood-relation of his family, or, if he can afford it, he may 50 redeem himself. He and his purchaser together shall reckon from the year when he sold himself to the year of jubilee, and the price shall be adjusted to the number of years. His period of service with his owner shall be 51 reckoned at the rate of a hired man. If there are still many years to run to the year of jubilee, he must repay for his redemption a proportionate 52 amount of the sum for which he sold himself; if there are few, he shall 53 reckon and repay accordingly. He shall have the status of a labourer hired from year to year, and you shall not let him be driven with ruthless severity 54 by his owner. If the man is not redeemed in the intervening years, he and 55 his children shall be released in the year of jubilee; for it is to me that the Israelites are slaves, my slaves whom I brought out of Egypt. I am the LORD your God.

26 YOU SHALL NOT MAKE IDOLS for yourselves; you shall not erect a carved image or a sacred pillar; you shall not put a figured stone on your land to 2 prostrate yourselves upon, because I am the LORD your God. You shall keep my sabbaths and revere my sanctuary. I am the LORD.

3 If you conform to my statutes, if you observe my commandments and 4 carry them out, I will give you rain at the proper time; the land shall yield 5 its produce and the trees of the country-side their fruit. Threshing shall last till vintage and vintage till sowing; you shall eat your fill and live 6 secure in your land. I will give peace in the land, and you shall lie down to sleep with no one to terrify you. I will rid your land of dangerous beasts 7 and it shall not be ravaged by war. You shall put your enemies to flight and 8 they shall fall in battle before you. Five of you shall pursue a hundred and a hundred of you ten thousand; so shall your enemies fall in battle before 9 you. I will look upon you with favour, I will make you fruitful and increase 10 your numbers: I will give my covenant with you its full effect. Your old harvest shall last you in store until you have to clear out the old to make 11 room for the new. I will establish my Tabernacle among you and will not 12 spurn you. I will walk to and fro among you; I will become your God and 13 you shall become my people. I am the LORD your God who brought you out of Egypt and let you be their slaves no longer; I broke the bars of your yoke and enabled you to walk upright.

14 But if you do not listen to me, if you fail to keep all these commandments of mine, if you reject my statutes, if you spurn my judgements, and do not obey all my commandments, but break my covenant, then be sure that this is what I will do: I will bring upon you sudden terror, wasting disease, recurrent fever, and plagues that dim the sight and cause the appetite to fail. You shall sow your seed to no purpose, for your enemies shall eat the crop. I will set my face against you, and you shall be routed by your enemies.

 Those that hate you shall hound you on until you run when there is no pursuit.

If after all this you do not listen to me, I will go on to punish you seven times over for your sins. I will break down your stubborn pride. I will make the sky above you like iron and the earth beneath you like bronze. Your strength shall be spent in vain; your land shall not yield its produce nor the trees of the land their fruit.

If you still defy me and refuse to listen, I will multiply your calamities seven times, as your sins deserve. I will send wild beasts among you; they shall tear your children from you, destroy your cattle and bring your numbers low; and your roads shall be deserted. If after all this you have not learnt discipline but still defy me, I in turn will defy you and scourge you seven times over for your sins. I will bring war in vengeance upon you, vengeance irrevocable under covenant; you shall be herded into your cities, I will send pestilence among you, and you shall be given over to the enemy. I will cut short your daily bread until ten women can bake your bread in a single oven; they shall dole it out by weight, and though you eat, you shall not be satisfied.

If in spite of this you do not listen to me and still defy me, I will defy you in anger, and I myself will punish you seven times over for your sins.
 Instead of meat you shall eat your sons and your daughters. I will destroy your hill-shrines and demolish your incense-altars. I will pile your rotting carcasses on the rotting logs^a that were your idols, and I will spurn you.
 I will make your cities desolate and destroy your sanctuaries; the soothing odour of your offerings I will not accept. I will destroy your land, and the enemies who occupy it shall be appalled. I will scatter you among the heathen, and I will pursue you with the naked sword; your land shall be desolate and your cities heaps of rubble. Then, all the time that it lies desolate, while you are in exile in the land of your enemies, your land shall enjoy its sabbaths to the full. All the time of its desolation it shall have the sabbath rest which it did not have when you lived there. And I will make those of you who are left in the land of your enemies so ridden with fear that, when a leaf flutters behind them in the wind, they shall run as if it were the sword behind them; they shall fall with no one in pursuit. Though no one pursues them they shall stumble over one another, as if the sword were behind them, and there shall be no stand made against the enemy.
 You shall meet your end among the heathen, and your enemies' land shall swallow you up. Those who are left shall pine away in an enemy land under their own iniquities; and with their fathers' iniquities upon them too, they shall pine away as they did.

But though they confess their iniquity, their own and their fathers',

^a rotting logs: or effigies.

41 their treachery, and even their defiance of me, I will defy them in my turn 42 and carry them off into their enemies' land. Yet if then their stubborn spirit is broken and they accept their punishment in full, I will remember my covenant with Jacob and my covenant with Isaac, yes, and my covenant 43 with Abraham, and I will remember the land. The land shall be rid of its people and enjoy in full its sabbaths while it lies desolate, and they shall pay in full the penalty because they rejected my judgements and spurned 44 my statutes. Yet even then, in their enemies' land, I shall not have rejected nor spurned them, bringing them to an end and so breaking my covenant 45 with them, because I am the LORD their God. I will remember on their behalf the covenant with the men of former times whom I brought out of Egypt in full sight of all the nations, that I might be their God. I am the LORD.

46 These are the statutes, the judgements, and the laws which the LORD established between himself and the Israelites on Mount Sinai through Moses.

1 2 THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and said, Speak to the Israelites in these words: When a man makes a special^d vow to the LORD which requires 3 your valuation of living persons, a male between twenty and sixty years old shall be valued at fifty silver shekels, that is shekels by the sacred standard.
 4 5 If it is a female, she shall be valued at thirty shekels. If the person is between five years old and twenty, the valuation shall be twenty shekels for a male 6 and ten for a female. If the person is between a month and five years old, 7 the valuation shall be five shekels for a male and three for a female. If the person is over sixty and a male, the valuation shall be fifteen shekels, but 8 if a female, ten shekels. If the man is too poor to pay the amount of your valuation, the person shall be set before the priest, and the priest shall value him according to the sum which the man who makes the vow can afford: the priest shall make the valuation.

9 If the vow concerns a beast such as may be offered as an offering to the 10 LORD, then every gift shall be holy to the LORD. He shall not change it for another, or substitute good for bad or bad for good. But if a substitution is in fact made of one beast for another, then both the original beast and its 11 substitute shall be holy to the LORD. If the vow concerns any unclean beast such as may not be offered as an offering to the LORD, then the animal shall 12 be brought before the priest, and he shall value it whether good or bad. The priest's valuation shall be decisive; in case of redemption the payment shall 13 be increased by one fifth.

14 When a man dedicates his house as holy to the LORD, the priest shall value it whether good or bad, and the priest's valuation shall be decisive.
 15 If the donor redeems his house, he shall pay the amount of the valuation increased by one fifth, and the house shall be his.

16 If a man dedicates to the LORD part of his ancestral land, you shall value it according to the amount of seed-corn it can carry, at the rate of fifty 17 shekels of silver for a homer of barley seed. If he dedicates his land from 18 the year of jubilee, it shall stand at your valuation; but if he dedicates it

^d makes a special: or discharges a . . .

after the year of jubilee, the priest shall estimate the price in silver according to the number of years remaining till the next year of jubilee, and this shall be deducted from your valuation. If the man who dedicates his field should redeem it, he shall pay the amount of your valuation in silver, increased by one fifth, and it shall be his. If he does not redeem it but sells the land to another man, it shall no longer be redeemable; when the land reverts at the year of jubilee, it shall be like land that has been devoted, holy to the LORD. It shall belong to the priest as his patrimony.

If a man dedicates to the LORD land which he has bought, land which is not part of his ancestral land, the priest shall estimate the amount of the value for the period until the year of jubilee, and the man shall give the amount fixed as at that day; it is holy to the LORD. At the year of jubilee the land shall revert to the man from whom he bought it, whose patrimony it is. Every valuation you make shall be made by the sacred standard (twenty gerahs to the shekel).

Notwithstanding, no man may dedicate to the LORD the first-born of a beast which in any case has to be offered as a first-born, whether an ox or a sheep. It is the LORD's. If it is any unclean beast, he may redeem it at your valuation and shall add one fifth; but if it is not redeemed, it shall be sold at your valuation. Notwithstanding, nothing which a man devotes to the LORD irredeemably from his own property, whether man or beast or ancestral land, may be sold or redeemed. Everything so devoted is most holy to the LORD. No human being thus devoted may be redeemed, but he shall be put to death.

Every tithe on land, whether from grain or from the fruit of a tree, belongs to the LORD; it is holy to the LORD. If a man wishes to redeem any of his tithe, he shall pay its value increased by one fifth. Every tenth creature that passes under the counting rod shall be holy to the LORD; this applies to all tithes of cattle and sheep. There shall be no inquiry whether it is good or bad, and no substitution. If any substitution is made, then both the tithe-animal and its substitute shall be forfeit as holy; it shall not be redeemed.

These are the commandments which the LORD gave Moses for the Israelites on Mount Sinai.

NUMBERS

Israel in the wilderness of Sinai

1 ON THE FIRST DAY OF THE SECOND MONTH in the second year after the Israelites came out of Egypt, the LORD spoke to Moses at the Tent of the Presence in the wilderness of 2 Sinai in these words: 'Number the whole community of Israel by families
3 in the father's line, recording the name of every male person aged twenty 4 years and upwards fit for military service. You and Aaron are to make a 5 detailed list of them by their tribal hosts, and you shall have to assist you one head of family from each tribe. These are their names:

- 6 of Reuben, Elizur son of Shedeur;
- 7 of Simeon, Shelumiel son of Zurishaddai;
- 8 of Judah, Nahshon son of Amminadab;
- 9 of Issachar, Nethaneel son of Zuar;
- 10 of Zebulun, Eliab son of Helon;
- 11 of Joseph: of Ephraim, Elishama son of Ammihud;
- 12 of Manasseh, Gamaliel son of Pedahzur;
- 13 of Benjamin, Abidan son of Gideoni;
- 14 of Dan, Ahiezer son of Ammishaddai;
- 15 of Asher, Pagiel son of Ocran;
- 16 of Gad, Eliasaph son of Reuel;
- 17 of Naphtali, Ahira son of Enan.'

18 These were the conveners of the whole community, chiefs of their fathers' 19 tribes and heads of Israelite clans. So Moses and Aaron took these men who 20 had been indicated by name. They summoned the whole community on 21 the first day of the second month, and they registered their descent by 22 families in the father's line, recording every male person aged twenty years
23 and upwards, as the LORD had told Moses to do. Thus it was that he drew 24 up the detailed lists in the wilderness of Sinai:

25 The tribal list of Reuben, Israel's eldest son, by families in the father's line, with the name of every male person aged twenty years and upwards fit for service, the number in the list of the tribe of Reuben being forty-six thousand five hundred.

The tribal list of Simeon, by families in the father's line, with the name of every male person aged twenty years and upwards fit for service, the number in the list of the tribe of Simeon being fifty-nine thousand three hundred.

The tribal list of Gad, by families in the father's line, with the names of all men aged twenty years and upwards fit for service, the number in the list of the tribe of Gad being forty-five thousand six hundred and fifty.

The tribal list of Judah, by families in the father's line, with the names of all men aged twenty years and upwards fit for service, the number in the list of the tribe of Judah being seventy-four thousand six hundred.

The tribal list of Issachar, by families in the father's line, with the names of all men aged twenty years and upwards fit for service, the number in the list of the tribe of Issachar being fifty-four thousand four hundred.

The tribal list of Zebulun, by families in the father's line, with the names of all men aged twenty years and upwards fit for service, the number in the list of the tribe of Zebulun being fifty-seven thousand four hundred.

The tribal lists of Joseph: that of Ephraim, by families in the father's line, with the names of all men aged twenty years and upwards fit for service, the number in the list of the tribe of Ephraim being forty thousand five hundred; that of Manasseh, by families in the father's line, with the names of all men aged twenty years and upwards fit for service, the number in the list of the tribe of Manasseh being thirty-two thousand two hundred.

The tribal list of Benjamin, by families in the father's line, with the names of all men aged twenty years and upwards fit for service, the number in the list of the tribe of Benjamin being thirty-five thousand four hundred.

The tribal list of Dan, by families in the father's line, with the names of all men aged twenty years and upwards fit for service, the number in the list of the tribe of Dan being sixty-two thousand seven hundred.

The tribal list of Asher, by families in the father's line, with the names of all men aged twenty years and upwards fit for service, the number in the list of the tribe of Asher being forty-one thousand five hundred.

The tribal list of Naphtali, by families in the father's line, with the names of all men aged twenty years and upwards fit for service, the number in the list of the tribe of Naphtali being fifty-three thousand four hundred.

These were the numbers recorded in the detailed lists by Moses and Aaron and the twelve chiefs of Israel, each representing one tribe and being the head of a family. The total number of Israelites aged twenty years and upwards fit for service, recorded in the lists of fathers' families, was six hundred and three thousand five hundred and fifty. A list of the Levites by their fathers' families was not made.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'You shall not record the total number of the Levites or make a detailed list of them among the Israelites. You shall put the Levites in charge of the Tabernacle of the Tokens, with its equipment and everything in it. They shall carry the Tabernacle and all its equipment; they alone shall be its attendants and shall pitch their tents round it. The Levites shall take the Tabernacle down when it is due to move and shall put it up when it halts; any unqualified person who comes near it shall be put to death. All other Israelites shall pitch their tents, each tribal host in its proper camp and under its own standard. But the Levites shall encamp round the Tabernacle of the Tokens, so that divine wrath may not follow the whole community of Israel; the Tabernacle of the Tokens shall be in their keeping.'

The Israelites did exactly as the LORD had told Moses to do.

The LORD spoke to Moses and Aaron and said, 'The Israelites shall encamp each under his own standard by the emblems of his father's family; they shall pitch their tents round the Tent of the Presence, facing it.

3 'In front of it, on the east, the division of Judah shall be stationed under the standard of its camp by tribal hosts. The chief of Judah shall be Nahshon 4 son of Amminadab. His host, with its members as detailed, numbers seventy-four thousand six hundred men. Next to Judah the tribe of 5 Issachar shall be stationed. Its chief shall be Nethaneel son of Zuar; his 6 host, with its members as detailed, numbers fifty-four thousand four 7 hundred. Then the tribe of Zebulun: its chief shall be Eliab son of Helon;
8 his host, with its members as detailed, numbers fifty-seven thousand four 9 hundred. The number listed in the camp of Judah, by hosts, is one hundred and eighty-six thousand four hundred. They shall be the first to march.

10 'To the south the division of Reuben shall be stationed under the standard of its camp by tribal hosts. The chief of Reuben shall be Elizur son 11 of Shedeur; his host, with its members as detailed, numbers forty-six 12 thousand five hundred. Next to him the tribe of Simeon shall be stationed.
13 Its chief shall be Shelumiel son of Zurishaddai; his host, with its members
14 as detailed, numbers fifty-nine thousand three hundred. Then the tribe
15 of Gad: its chief shall be Eliasaph son of Reuel; his host, with its members 16 as detailed, numbers forty-five thousand six hundred and fifty. The number listed in the camp of Reuben, by hosts, is one hundred and fifty-one thousand four hundred and fifty. They shall be the second to march.

17 'When the Tent of the Presence moves, the camp of the Levites shall keep its station in the centre of the other camps; they shall all move in the order of their encamping, each man in his proper place under his standard.

18 'To the west the division of Ephraim shall be stationed under the standard of its camp by tribal hosts. The chief of Ephraim shall be Elishama 19 son of Ammihud; his host, with its members as detailed, numbers 20 forty thousand five hundred. Next to him the tribe of Manasseh shall be 21 stationed. Its chief shall be Gamaliel son of Pedahzur; his host, with its 22 members as detailed, numbers thirty-two thousand two hundred. Then 23 the tribe of Benjamin: its chief shall be Abidan son of Gideon; his host, with its members as detailed, numbers thirty-five thousand four hundred.
24 The number listed in the camp of Ephraim, by hosts, is one hundred and eight thousand one hundred. They shall be the third to march.

25 'To the north the division of Dan shall be stationed under the standard of its camp by tribal hosts. The chief of Dan shall be Ahiezer son of 26 Ammishaddai; his host, with its members as detailed, numbers sixty-two 27 thousand seven hundred. Next to him the tribe of Asher shall be stationed.
28 Its chief shall be Pagiel son of Ocran; his host, with its members as detailed, 29 numbers forty-one thousand five hundred. Then the tribe of Naphtali: its 30 chief shall be Ahira son of Enan; his host, with its members as detailed, 31 numbers fifty-three thousand four hundred. The number listed in the camp of Dan is a hundred and fifty-seven thousand six hundred. They shall march, under their standards, last.'

32 These were the Israelites listed by their fathers' families. The total number in the camp, recorded by tribal hosts, was six hundred and three thousand five hundred and fifty.

The Levites were not included in the detailed lists with their fellow-Israelites, for so the LORD had commanded Moses. The Israelites did exactly as the LORD had commanded Moses, pitching and breaking camp standard by standard, each man according to his family in his father's line.

THESE WERE THE DESCENDANTS OF AARON and Moses at the time when the LORD spoke to Moses on Mount Sinai. The names of the sons of Aaron were Nadab the eldest, Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar. These were the names of Aaron's sons, the anointed priests who had been installed in the priestly office. Nadab and Abihu fell dead before the LORD because they had presented illicit fire before the LORD in the wilderness of Sinai. They left no sons; Eleazar and Ithamar continued to perform the priestly office in their father's presence.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'Bring forward the tribe of Levi and appoint them to serve Aaron the priest and to minister to him. They shall be in attendance on him and on the whole community before the Tent of the Presence, undertaking the service of the Tabernacle. They shall be in charge of all the equipment in the Tent of the Presence, and be in attendance on the Israelites, undertaking the service of the Tabernacle. You shall assign the Levites to Aaron and his sons as especially dedicated to him out of all the Israelites. To Aaron and his line you shall commit the priestly office and they shall perform its duties; any unqualified person who intrudes upon it shall be put to death.'

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'I take the Levites for myself out of all the Israelites as a substitute for the eldest male child of every woman; the Levites shall be mine. For every eldest child, if a boy, became mine when I destroyed all the eldest sons in Egypt. So I have consecrated to myself all the first-born in Israel, both man and beast. They shall be mine. I am the LORD.'

The LORD spoke to Moses in the wilderness of Sinai and said, 'Make a detailed list of all the Levites by their families in the father's line, every male from the age of one month and upwards.'

Moses made a detailed list of them in accordance with the command given him by the LORD. Now these were the names of the sons of Levi:

Gershon, Kohath and Merari.

Descendants of Gershon, by families: Libni and Shimei.

Descendants of Kohath, by families: Amram, Izhar, Hebron and Uzziel.

Descendants of Merari, by families: Mahli and Mushi.

These were the families of Levi, by fathers' families:

Gershon: the family of Libni and the family of Shimei. These were the families of Gershon, and the number of males in their list as detailed, from the age of one month and upwards, was seven thousand five hundred. The families of Gershon were stationed on the west, behind the Tabernacle. Their chief was Eliasaph son of Lael, and in the service of the Tent of the Presence they were in charge of the Tabernacle and its coverings, of the screen at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence, the hangings of the court, the screen at the entrance to the court all round the Tabernacle and the altar, and of all else needed for its maintenance.

27 Kohath: the family of Amram, the family of Izhar, the family of Heb-28 ron, the family of Uzziel. These were the families of Kohath, and the number of males, from the age of one month and upwards, was eight 29 thousand six hundred. They were the guardians of the holy things. The families of Kohath were stationed on the south, at the side of the Taber-31 nacle. Their chief was Elizaphan son of Uzziel; they were in charge of the Ark, the table, the lamp-stands and the altars, together with the sacred vessels used in their service, and the screen with everything needed for its 32 maintenance. The chief over all the chiefs of the Levites was Eleazar son of Aaron the priest, who was appointed overseer of those in charge of the sanctuary.

33 Merari: the family of Mahli, the family of Mushi. These were the 34 families of Merari, and the number of males in their list as detailed from 35 the age of one month and upwards was six thousand two hundred. Their chief was Zuriel son of Abihail; they were stationed on the north, at the 36 side of the Tabernacle. The Merarites were in charge of the planks, bars, posts, and sockets of the Tabernacle, together with its vessels and all the 37 equipment needed for its maintenance, the posts, sockets, pegs, and cords of the surrounding court.

38 In front of the Tabernacle on the east, Moses was stationed, with Aaron and his sons, in front of the Tent of the Presence eastwards. They were in charge of the sanctuary on behalf of the Israelites; any unqualified person who came near would be put to death.

39 The number of Levites recorded by Moses on the detailed list by families at the command of the LORD was twenty-two thousand males aged one month and upwards.

40 The LORD said to Moses, 'Make a detailed list of all the male first-born in Israel aged one month and upwards, and count the number of persons.
41 You shall reserve the Levites for me—I am the LORD—in substitution for the eldest sons of the Israelites, and in the same way the Levites' cattle in 42 substitution for the first-born cattle of the Israelites.' As the LORD had told 43 him to do, Moses made a list of all the eldest sons of the Israelites, and the total number of first-born males recorded by name in the register, aged one month and upwards, was twenty-two thousand two hundred and seventy-three.

44 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'Take the Levites as a substitute for all the eldest sons in Israel and the cattle of the Levites as a substitute 45 for their cattle. The Levites shall be mine. I am the LORD. The eldest sons in Israel will outnumber the Levites by two hundred and seventy-three.
46 This remainder must be ransomed, and you shall accept five shekels for each of them, taking the sacred shekel and reckoning twenty gerahs to the 47 shekel; you shall give the money with which they are ransomed to Aaron and his sons.'

48 Moses took the money paid as ransom for those who remained over when 49 the substitution of Levites was complete. The amount received was one 50 thousand three hundred and sixty-five shekels of silver by the sacred standard. In accordance with what the LORD had said, he gave the money 51 to Aaron and his sons, doing what the LORD had told him to do.

The LORD spoke to Moses and Aaron and said, 'Among the Levites, 4 1 2 make a count of the descendants of Kohath between the ages of thirty and 3 fifty, by families in the father's line, comprising everyone who comes to 3 take duty in the service of the Tent of the Presence.

'This is the service to be rendered by the Kohathites in the Tent of the 4 Presence; it is most sacred. When the camp is due to move, Aaron and his 5 sons shall come and take down the Veil of the screen and cover the Ark of 6
the Tokens with it; over this they shall put a covering of porpoise-hide^a 6 and over that again a violet cloth all of one piece; they shall then put its 7 poles in place. Over the Table of the Presence they shall spread a violet 7 cloth and lay on it the dishes, saucers, and flagons, and the bowls for drink- 8 offerings; the Bread regularly presented shall also lie upon it; then they 8 shall spread over them a scarlet cloth and over that a covering of porpoise- 9 hide, and put the poles in place. They shall take a violet cloth and cover 9 the lamp-stand, its lamps, tongs, firepans, and all the containers for the 10 oil used in its service; they shall put it with all its equipment in a sheet of 10 porpoise-hide slung from a pole. Over the gold altar they shall spread a 11 violet cloth, cover it with a porpoise-hide covering, and put its poles in 11 place. They shall take all the articles used for the service of the sanctuary, 12 put them on a violet cloth, cover them with a porpoise-hide covering, and 12 sling them from a pole. They shall clear the altar of the fat and ashes, spread 13 a purple cloth over it, and then lay on it all the equipment used in its service, 14
the firepans, forks, shovels, tossing-bowls, and all the equipment of the 14 altar, spread a covering of porpoise-hide over it and put the poles in place. 15
Once Aaron and his sons have finished covering the sanctuary and all the 15 sacred equipment, when the camp is due to move, the Kohathites shall 15 come to carry it; they must not touch it on pain of death. All these things 16 are the load to be carried by the Kohathites, the things connected with the 16 Tent of the Presence. Eleazar son of Aaron the priest shall have charge of 16 the lamp-oil, the fragrant incense, the regular grain-offering, and the 16 anointing oil, with the general oversight of the whole Tabernacle and its 16 contents, the sanctuary and its equipment.'

The LORD spoke to Moses and Aaron and said, 'You must not let the 17 18 families of Kohath be extirpated, and lost to the tribe of Levi. If they are 19 to live and not die when they approach the most holy things, this is what 19 you must do: Aaron and his sons shall come and set each man to his 20 appointed task and to his load, and the Kohathites themselves shall not 20 enter to cast even a passing glance on the sanctuary, on pain of death.'

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'Number the Gershonites by 21 22 families in the father's line. Make a detailed list of all those between the 23 ages of thirty and fifty who come on duty to perform service in the Tent 23 of the Presence.

'This is the service to be rendered by the Gershonite families, comprising 24 their general duty and their loads. They shall carry the hangings of the 25 Tabernacle, the Tent of the Presence, its covering, that is the covering of ^a Strictly hide of sea-cow.

26 porpoise-hide which is over it, the screen at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence, the hangings of the court, the screen at the entrance to the court surrounding the Tabernacle and the altar, their cords and all the equipment for their service; and they shall perform all the tasks connected with them. These are the acts of service they shall render. All the service of the Gershonites, their loads and their other duties, shall be directed by Aaron and his sons; you shall assign them the loads for which they shall be responsible. This is the service assigned to the Gershonite families in connection with the Tent of the Presence; Ithamar son of Aaron shall be in charge of them.

29 'You shall make a detailed list of the Merarites by families in the father's line, all those between the ages of thirty and fifty, who come on duty to perform service in the Tent of the Presence.

31 'These are the loads for which they shall be responsible in virtue of their service in the Tent of the Presence: the planks of the Tabernacle with its bars, posts, and sockets, the posts of the surrounding court with their sockets, pegs, and cords, and all that is needed for the maintenance of them; you shall assign to each man by name the load for which he is responsible. 33 These are the duties of the Merarite families in virtue of their service in the Tent of the Presence. Ithamar son of Aaron the priest shall be in charge of them.'

34 Moses and Aaron and the chiefs of the community made a detailed list of the Kohathites by families in the father's line, taking all between the ages of thirty and fifty who came on duty to perform service in the Tent of the Presence. The number recorded by families in the detailed lists was two thousand seven hundred and fifty. This was the total number in the detailed lists of the Kohathite families who did duty in the Tent of the Presence; they were recorded by Moses and Aaron as the LORD had told them to do through Moses.

39 The Gershonites between the ages of thirty and fifty, who came on duty for service in the Tent of the Presence, were recorded in detailed lists by families in the father's line. Their number, by families in the father's line, was two thousand six hundred and thirty. This was the total recorded in the lists of the Gershonite families who came on duty in the Tent of the Presence, and were recorded by Moses and Aaron as the LORD had told them to do.

43 The families of Merari, between the ages of thirty and fifty, who came on duty to perform service in the Tent of the Presence, were recorded in detailed lists by families in the father's line. Their number by families was three thousand two hundred. These were recorded in the Merarite families by Moses and Aaron as the LORD had told them to do through Moses.

46 Thus Moses and Aaron and the chiefs of Israel made a detailed list of all the Levites by families in the father's line, between the ages of thirty and fifty years; these were all who came to perform their various duties and carry their loads in the service of the Tent of the Presence. Their number was eight thousand five hundred and eighty. They were recorded one by one by Moses at the command of the LORD, according to their general duty and the loads they carried.^a For so the LORD had told Moses to do.

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and said: Command the Israelites to expel 5 1 2 from the camp everyone who suffers from a malignant skin-disease or a discharge, and everyone ritually unclean from contact with a corpse. You 3 shall put them outside the camp, both male and female, so that they will not defile your camps in which I dwell among you. The Israelites did this: 4 they put them outside the camp. As the LORD had said when he spoke to Moses, so the Israelites did.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Say to the Israelites: When anyone, 5 6 man or woman, wrongs another and thereby breaks faith with the LORD, that person has incurred guilt which demands reparation. He shall confess 7 the sin he has committed, make restitution in full with the addition of one fifth, and give it to the man to whom compensation is due. If there is no 8 next-of-kin to whom compensation can be paid, the compensation payable in that case shall be the LORD's, for the use of the priest, in addition to the ram of expiation with which the priest makes expiation for him.

Every contribution made by way of holy-gift which the Israelites bring 9 to the priest shall be the priest's. The priest shall have the holy-gifts which 10 a man gives; whatever is given to him shall be his.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to the Israelites in these 11 12 words: When a married woman goes astray, is unfaithful to her husband, and has sexual intercourse with another man, and this happens without 13
the husband's knowledge, and the crime is undetected, because, though she has been defiled, there is no direct evidence against her and she was not caught in the act, but when in such a case a fit of jealousy comes over 14 the husband which causes him to suspect his wife, she being in fact defiled; or when, on the other hand, a fit of jealousy comes over a husband which causes him to suspect his wife, when she is not in fact defiled; then in either 15 case, the husband shall bring his wife to the priest together with the prescribed offering for her, a tenth of an ephah of barley meal. He shall not pour oil on it nor put frankincense on it, because it is a grain-offering for jealousy, a grain-offering of protestation conveying an imputation of guilt.
The priest shall bring her forward and set her before the LORD. He shall 16 17 take clean^b water in an earthenware vessel, and shall take dust from the floor of the Tabernacle and add it to the water. He shall set the woman 18 before the LORD, uncover her head, and place the grain-offering of pro-testation in her hands; it is a grain-offering for jealousy. The priest shall hold in his own hand the water of contention which brings out the truth.
He shall then put the woman on oath and say to her, 'If no man has had 19 intercourse with you, if you have not gone astray and let yourself become defiled while owing obedience to your husband, then may your innocence be established by the water of contention which brings out the truth. But 20 if, while owing him obedience, you have gone astray and let yourself become defiled, if any man other than your husband has had intercourse with you' (the priest shall here put the woman on oath with an adjuration, 21

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds and his registered ones.

^b Or holy.

and shall continue), 'may the LORD make an example of you among your people in adjurations and in swearing of oaths by bringing upon you miscarriage and untimely birth; and this water that brings out the truth shall enter your body, bringing upon you miscarriage and untimely birth.' The woman shall respond, 'Amen, Amen.' The priest shall write these curses on a scroll and wash them off into the water of contention; he shall make the woman drink the water that brings out the truth, and the water shall enter her body. The priest shall take the grain-offering for jealousy from the woman's hand, present it as a special gift before the LORD, and offer it at the altar. He shall take a handful from the grain-offering by way of token, and burn it at the altar; after this he shall make the woman drink the water. If she has let herself become defiled and has been unfaithful to her husband, then when the priest makes her drink the water that brings out the truth and the water has entered her body, she will suffer a miscarriage or untimely birth, and her name will become an example in adjuration among her kin. But if the woman has not let herself become defiled and is pure, then her innocence is established and she will bear her child.

Such is the law for cases of jealousy, where a woman, owing obedience to her husband, goes astray and lets herself become defiled, or where a fit of jealousy comes over a man which causes him to suspect his wife. He shall set her before the LORD, and the priest shall deal with her as this law prescribes. No guilt will attach to the husband, but the woman shall bear the penalty of her guilt.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to the Israelites in these words: When anyone, man or woman, makes a special^a vow dedicating himself to the LORD as a Nazirite,^b he shall abstain from wine and strong drink. These he shall not drink, nor anything made from the juice of grapes; nor shall he eat grapes, fresh or dried. During the whole term of his vow he shall eat nothing that comes from the vine, nothing whatever, shoot or berry. During the whole term of his vow no razor shall touch his head; he shall let his hair grow long and plait it until he has completed the term of his dedication: he shall keep himself holy to the LORD. During the whole term of his vow he shall not go near a corpse, not even when his father or mother, brother or sister, dies; he shall not make himself ritually unclean for them, because the Nazirite vow to his God is on his head. He shall keep himself holy to the LORD during the whole term of his Nazirite vow.

If someone suddenly falls dead by his side touching him and thereby making his hair, which has been dedicated, ritually unclean, he shall shave his head seven days later, on the day appointed for his ritual cleansing. On the eighth day he shall bring two turtle-doves or two young pigeons to the priest at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence. The priest shall offer one as a sin-offering and the other as a whole-offering and shall make expiation for him for the sin he has incurred through contact with the dead body; and he shall consecrate his head afresh on that day. The man shall re-dedicate himself to the LORD for the term of his vow and bring a yearling ram as a guilt-offering. The previous period shall not be reckoned, because the hair which he dedicated became unclean.

^b That is separated one or dedicated one.

The law for the Nazirite, when the term of his dedication is completed, shall be this. He shall be brought to the entrance to the Tent of the Presence and shall present his offering to the LORD: one yearling ram without blemish as a whole-offering, one yearling ewe without blemish as a sin-offering, one ram without blemish as a shared-offering, and a basket of cakes made of flour mixed with oil, and of wafers smeared with oil, both unleavened, together with the proper grain-offerings and drink-offerings. The priest shall present all these before the LORD and offer the man's sin-offering and whole-offering; the ram he shall offer as a shared-offering to the LORD, together with the basket of unleavened cakes and the proper grain-offering and drink-offering. The Nazirite shall shave his head at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence, take the hair which had been dedicated and put it on the fire where the shared-offering is burning. The priest shall take the shoulder of the ram, after boiling it, and take also one unleavened cake from the basket and one unleavened wafer, and put them on the palms of the Nazirite's hands, his hair which had been dedicated having been shaved. The priest shall then present them as a special gift before the LORD; these, together with the breast of the special gift and the leg of the contribution, are holy and belong to the priest. When this has been done, the Nazirite is again free to drink wine.

Such is the law for the Nazirite who has made his vow. Such is the offering he must make to the LORD for his dedication, apart from anything else that he can afford. He must carry out his vow in full according to the law governing his dedication.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to Aaron and his sons in these words: These are the words with which you shall bless the Israelites:

The LORD bless you and watch over you;
 the LORD make his face shine upon^a you and be gracious to you;
 the LORD look kindly on you and give you peace.

They shall pronounce my name over the Israelites, and I will bless them.

ON THE DAY THAT MOSES COMPLETED the setting up of the Tabernacle, he anointed and consecrated it; he also anointed and consecrated its equipment, and the altar and its vessels. The chief men of Israel, heads of families—that is the chiefs of the tribes, who had assisted in preparing the detailed lists—came forward and brought their offering before the LORD, six covered wagons and twelve oxen, one wagon from every two chiefs and from each one an ox.^b These they brought forward before the Tabernacle; and the LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'Accept these from them: they shall be used for the service of the Tent of the Presence. Assign them to the Levites as their several duties require.'

So Moses accepted the wagons and oxen and assigned them to the Levites. He gave two wagons and four oxen to the Gershonites as required for their service; four wagons and eight oxen to the Merarites as required for their service, in charge of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest. He gave none to the Kohathites because the service laid upon them was that of the holy things: these they had to carry themselves on their shoulders.

10 When the altar was anointed, the chiefs brought their gift for its dedica-11 tion and presented their offering before it. The LORD said to Moses, 'Let the chiefs present their offering for the dedication of the altar one by one,
on consecutive days.'

12 The chief who presented his offering on the first day was Nahshon son 13 of Amminadab of the tribe of Judah. His offering was one silver dish weighing a hundred and thirty shekels by the sacred standard and one silver 14 15 tossing-bowl weighing seventy, both full of flour mixed with oil as a grain-16 offering; one saucer weighing ten gold shekels, full of incense; one young 17 bull, one full-grown ram, and one yearling ram, as a whole-offering; one

Nahshon son of Amminadab.

28 29 ling ram, as a whole-offering; one he-goat as a sin-offering; and two bulls, five full-grown rams, five he-goats, and five yearling rams, as a shared-offering. This was the offering of Eliab son of Helon.

30 On the fourth day the chief of the Reubenites, Elizur son of Shedeur, 31 came. His offering was one silver dish weighing a hundred and thirty

34 ram, and one yearling ram, as a whole-offering; one he-goat as a sin-offer-35 ing; and two bulls, five full-grown rams, five he-goats, and five yearling

36 On the fifth day the chief of the Simeonites, Shelumiel son of Zurishad-37 dai, came. His offering was one silver dish weighing a hundred and thirty

39 weighing ten gold shekels, full of incense; one young bull, one full-grown 40 ram, and one yearling ram, as a whole-offering; one he-goat as a sin-41 offering; and two bulls, five full-grown rams, five he-goats, and five yearling rams, as a shared-offering. This was the offering of Shelumiel son of Zurishaddai.

On the sixth day the chief of the Gadites, Eliasaph son of Reuel, came. This was the offering of Elishama son of Ammihud.

On the eighth day the chief of the Manassites, Gamaliel son of Pedahzur, came. On the tenth day the chief of the Danites, Ahiezer son of Ammishaddai, came. His offering was one silver dish weighing a hundred and thirty shekels by the sacred standard and one silver tossing-bowl weighing seventy, both full of flour mixed with oil as a grain-offering; one saucer weighing ten gold shekels, full of incense; one young bull, one full-grown ram, and one yearling ram, as a whole-offering; one he-goat as a sin-offering; and two bulls, five full-grown rams, five he-goats, and five yearling rams, as a shared-offering. This was the offering of Ahiezer son of Ammishaddai.

On the eleventh day the chief of the Asherites, Pagiel son of Ocran, came. His offering was one silver dish weighing a hundred and thirty shekels by the sacred standard and one silver tossing-bowl weighing seventy, both full of flour mixed with oil as a grain-offering; one saucer weighing ten gold shekels, full of incense; one young bull, one full-grown ram, and one

76 77 yearling ram, as a whole-offering; one he-goat as a sin-offering; and two bulls, five full-grown rams, five he-goats, and five yearling rams, as a shared-offering. This was the offering of Pagiël son of Ocran.

78 On the twelfth day the chief of the Naphtalites, Ahira son of Enan, came.
79 His offering was one silver dish weighing a hundred and thirty shekels by the sacred standard and one silver tossing-bowl weighing seventy, both 80 full of flour mixed with oil as a grain-offering; one saucer weighing ten
81 gold shekels, full of incense; one young bull, one full-grown ram, and one
82 83 yearling ram, as a whole-offering; one he-goat as a sin-offering; and two bulls, five full-grown rams, five he-goats, and five yearling rams, as a shared-offering. This was the offering of Ahira son of Enan.

84 This was the gift from the chiefs of Israel for the dedication of the altar when it was anointed: twelve silver dishes, twelve silver tossing-bowls, and 85 twelve golden saucers; each silver dish weighed a hundred and thirty shekels, each silver tossing-bowl seventy shekels. The total weight of the silver vessels was two thousand four hundred shekels by the sacred standard. There were twelve golden saucers full of incense, ten shekels each 86 by the sacred standard: the total weight of the gold of the saucers was a hundred and twenty shekels. The number of beasts for the whole-offering
87 was twelve bulls, twelve full-grown rams, and twelve yearling rams, with the prescribed grain-offerings, and twelve he-goats for the sin-offering.
88 The number of beasts for the shared-offering was twenty-four bulls, sixty full-grown rams, sixty he-goats, and sixty yearling rams. This was the gift
89 for the dedication of the altar when it was anointed. And when Moses entered the Tent of the Presence to speak with God, he heard the Voice speaking from above the cover over the Ark of the Tokens from between the two cherubim: the Voice spoke to him.

8 1 2 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'Speak to Aaron in these words: "When you mount the seven lamps, see that they shed their light forwards
3 in front of the lamp-stand." ' Aaron did this: he mounted the lamps, so as to shed light forwards in front of the lamp-stand, as the LORD had instructed Moses. The lamp-stand was made of beaten-work in gold, as well
4 as the stem and the petals. Moses made it to match the pattern which the LORD had shown him.

5 6 The LORD spoke to Moses and said: Take the Levites apart from the rest of the Israelites and cleanse them ritually. This is what you shall do to cleanse them. Sprinkle lustral water over them; they shall then shave
7 their whole bodies, wash their clothes, and so be cleansed. Next, they shall take a young bull as a whole-offering^d with its prescribed grain-offering,
8 flour mixed with oil; and you shall take a second young bull as a sin-offering. Bring the Levites before the Tent of the Presence and call the 9 whole community of Israelites together. Bring the Levites before the LORD, and let the Israelites lay their hands on their heads. Aaron shall present the 10 Levites before the LORD as a special gift from the Israelites, and they shall be dedicated to the service of the LORD. The Levites shall lay their hands on 11 the heads of the bulls; one bull shall be offered as a sin-offering and the other as a whole-offering to the LORD, to make expiation for the Levites.

^d as a whole-offering: prob. rdg.; Heb. om.

Then you shall set the Levites before Aaron and his sons, presenting them 13 to the LORD as a special gift. You shall thus separate the Levites from the 14 rest of the Israelites, and they shall be mine.

After this, the Levites shall enter the Tent of the Presence to serve in it, 15
ritually cleansed and presented as a special gift; for they are given and 16 dedicated to me, out of all the Israelites. I have accepted them as mine in place of all that comes first from the womb, every first child among the Israelites; for every first-born male creature, man or beast, among the 17 Israelites is mine. On the day when I struck down every first-born creature in Egypt, I hallowed all the first-born of the Israelites to myself, and I 18 have accepted the Levites in their place. I have given the Levites to Aaron 19 and his sons, dedicated among the Israelites to perform the service of the Israelites in the Tent of the Presence and to make expiation for them, and then no calamity will befall them when they come close to the sanctuary.

Moses and Aaron and the whole community of Israelites carried out all 20
the commands the LORD had given to Moses for the dedication of the Levites. The Levites purified themselves of sin and washed their clothes, 21 and Aaron presented them as a special gift before the LORD and made expiation for them, to cleanse them. Then at last they went in to perform 22 their service in the Tent of the Presence, before Aaron and his sons. Thus the commands the LORD had given to Moses concerning the Levites were all carried out.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said: Touching the Levites: they shall 23 24 begin their active work in the service of the Tent of the Presence at the age of twenty-five. At the age of fifty a Levite shall retire from regular 25 service and shall serve no longer. He may continue to assist his colleagues 26 in attendance in the Tent of the Presence but shall perform no regular service. This is how you shall arrange the attendance of the Levites.

In the first month of the second year after they came out of Egypt, the 9
LORD spoke to Moses in the wilderness of Sinai and said, 'Let the Israelites prepare the Passover at the time appointed for it. This shall be between 2 dusk and dark on the fourteenth day of this month, and you shall keep it 3 at this appointed time, observing every rule and custom proper to it.' So 4 Moses told the Israelites to prepare the Passover, and they prepared it on 5 the fourteenth day of the first month, between dusk and dark, in the wilderness of Sinai. The Israelites did exactly as the LORD had instructed Moses.

It happened that some men were ritually unclean through contact with 6 a corpse and so could not keep the Passover on the right day. They came before Moses and Aaron that same day and said, 'We are unclean through 7 contact with a corpse. Must we therefore be debarred from presenting the LORD's offering at its appointed time with the rest of the Israelites?' Moses 8 answered, 'Wait, and let me hear what commands the LORD has for you.'

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Tell the Israelites: If any one of 9 10 you or of your descendants is ritually unclean through contact with a corpse, or if he is away on a long journey, he shall keep a Passover to the LORD none the less. But in that case he shall prepare the victim in the 11 second month, between dusk and dark on the fourteenth day. It shall be

- 12 eaten with unleavened cakes and bitter herbs; nothing shall be left over till morning, and no bone of it shall be broken. The Passover shall be kept 13 exactly as the law prescribes. The man who, being ritually clean and not absent on a journey, neglects to keep the Passover, shall be cut off from his father's kin, because he has not presented the LORD's offering at its appointed time. That man shall accept responsibility for his sin.
14 When an alien is settled among you, he also shall keep the Passover to the LORD, observing every rule and custom proper to it. The same law is binding on you all, alien and native alike.

The journey from Sinai to Edom

- 15 ON THE DAY WHEN THEY SET UP THE TABERNACLE, that is the Tent of the Tokens, cloud covered it, and in the evening a brightness like 16 fire appeared over it till morning. So it continued: the cloud covered it by 17 day and a brightness like fire by night. Whenever the cloud lifted from the tent, the Israelites struck camp, and at the place where the cloud 18 settled, there they pitched their camp. At the command of the LORD they struck camp, and at the command of the LORD they encamped again, and 19 continued in camp as long as the cloud rested over the Tabernacle. When the cloud stayed long over the Tabernacle, the Israelites remained in 20 attendance on the LORD and did not move on; and it was the same when the cloud continued over the Tabernacle only a few days: at the command of the LORD they remained in camp, and at the command of the LORD they 21 struck camp. There were also times when the cloud continued only from evening till morning, and in the morning, when the cloud lifted, they moved 22 on. Whether by day or by night, they moved as soon as the cloud lifted.
Whether it was for a day or two, for a month or a year, whenever the cloud 23 stayed long over the Tabernacle, the Israelites remained where they were and did not move on; they did so only when the cloud lifted. At the command of the LORD they encamped, and at his command they struck camp.
At the LORD's command, given through Moses, they remained in attendance on the LORD.
- 10 1 2 The LORD spoke to Moses and said: Make two trumpets of beaten silver and use them for summoning the community and for breaking camp.
3 When both are sounded, the whole community shall muster before you
4 at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence. If a single trumpet is sounded, 5 the chiefs who are heads of the Israelite clans shall muster. When you give the signal for a shout, those encamped on the east side are to move off.
6 When the signal is given for a second shout those encamped to the south
7 are to move off. A signal to shout is the signal to move off. When you con-8 vene the assembly, you shall sound a trumpet but not raise a shout. This sounding of the trumpets is the duty of the Aaronite priests and shall be a rule binding for all time on your descendants.
- 9 When you go into battle against an invader and you are hard pressed by him, you shall raise a cheer when the trumpets sound, and this will serve as a reminder of you before the LORD your God and you will be delivered from your enemies. On your festal days and at your appointed seasons and on the first day of every month, you shall sound the trumpets over your whole-offerings and your shared-offerings, and the trumpets shall be a reminder on your behalf before the LORD your God. I am the LORD your God. 10

In the second year, on the twentieth day of the second month, the cloud lifted from the Tabernacle of the Tokens, and the Israelites moved by stages from the wilderness of Sinai, until the cloud came to rest in the wilderness of Paran. The first time that they broke camp at the command of the LORD given through Moses, the standard of the division of Judah moved off first with its tribal hosts: the host of Judah under Nahshon son of Amminadab, the host of Issachar under Nethaneel son of Zuar, and the host of Zebulun under Eliab son of Helon. Then the Tabernacle was taken down, and its bearers, the sons of Gershon and Merari, moved off. 11 12 13 14 15 16 17

Secondly, the standard of the division of Reuben moved off with its tribal hosts: the host of Reuben under Elizur son of Shedeur, the host of Simeon under Shelumiel son of Zurishaddai, and the host of Gad under Eliasaph son of Reuel. The Kohathites, the bearers of the holy things, moved off next, and on their arrival found the Tabernacle set up. 18 19 20 21

Thirdly, the standard of the division of Ephraim moved off with its tribal hosts: the host of Ephraim under Elishama son of Ammihud, the host of Manasseh under Gamaliel son of Pedahzur, and the host of Benjamin under Abidan son of Gideoni. 22 23 24

Lastly, the standard of the division of Dan, the rearguard of all the divisions, moved off with its tribal hosts: the host of Dan under Ahiezer son of Ammishaddai, the host of Asher under Pagiel son of Ocran, and the host of Naphtali under Ahira son of Enan. 25 26 27

This was the order of march for the Israelites, mustered in their hosts, and in this order they broke camp. 28

And Moses said to Hobab son of Reuel the Midianite, his brother-in-law, 'We are setting out for the place which the LORD promised to give us. Come with us, and we will deal generously with you, for the LORD has given an assurance of good fortune for Israel.' But he replied, 'No, I will not; I would rather go to my own country and my own people.' Moses said, 'Do not desert us, I beg you; for you know where we ought to camp in the wilderness, and you will be our guide. If you will go with us, then all the good fortune with which the LORD favours us we will share with you.' 29 30 31 32

Then they moved off from the mountain of the LORD and journeyed for three days, and the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD kept a day's journey ahead of them to find them a place to rest. The cloud of the LORD hung over them by day when they moved camp. Whenever the Ark began to move, Moses said, 33 34 35

'Up, LORD, and may thy enemies be scattered and those that hate thee flee before thee.'

When it halted, he said,

'Rest, LORD of the countless thousands of Israel.'

11 There came a time when the people complained to the LORD of their hardships. When he heard, he became angry and fire from the LORD broke
 2 out among them, and was raging at one end of the camp, when the people appealed to Moses. He interceded with the LORD, and the fire died down.
 3 Then they named that place Taberah,^a because the fire of the LORD had burned among them there.

4 Now there was a mixed company of strangers who had joined the Israelites. These people began to be greedy for better things, and the Israelites themselves wept once again and cried, 'Will no one give us meat?
 5 Think of it! In Egypt we had fish for the asking, cucumbers and water-melons, leeks and onions and garlic. Now our throats are parched; there
 6 is nothing wherever we look except this manna.' (The manna looked like
 7 coriander seed, the colour of gum resin. The people went about collecting it, ground it up in hand-mills or pounded it in mortars, then boiled it in 8 the pot and made it into cakes. It tasted like butter-cakes. When dew fell on the camp at night, the manna fell with it.) Moses heard the people wailing,
 9 all of them in their families at the opening of their tents. Then the LORD
 10 became very angry, and Moses was troubled. He said to the LORD, 'Why hast thou brought trouble on thy servant? How have I displeased the LORD
 11 that I am burdened with the care of this whole people? Am I their mother? Have I brought them into the world, and am I called upon to carry them
 12 in my bosom, like a nurse with her babies, to the land promised by thee on oath to their fathers? Where am I to find meat to give them all? They 13 pester me with their wailing and their "Give us meat to eat." This whole people is a burden too heavy for me; I cannot carry it alone. If that is thy 14 purpose for me, then kill me outright. But if I have won thy favour, let me suffer this trouble at thy hands^b no longer.'

16 The LORD answered Moses, 'Assemble seventy elders from Israel, men known to you as elders and officers in the community; bring them to me at 17 the Tent of the Presence, and there let them take their stand with you. I will come down and speak with you there. I will take back part of that same spirit which has been conferred on you and confer it on them, and they 18 will share with you the burden of taking care for the people; then you will not have to bear it alone. And to the people you shall say this: "Hallow yourselves in readiness for tomorrow; you shall have meat to eat. You
 19 wailed in the LORD's hearing; you said, 'Will no one give us meat? In Egypt we lived well.' The LORD will give you meat and you shall eat it.
 20 Not for one day only, nor for two days, nor five, nor ten, nor twenty, but for a whole month you shall eat it until it comes out at your nostrils and makes you sick; because you have rejected the LORD who dwells in your midst, wailing in his presence and saying, 'Why did we ever come out of Egypt?'"'

21 Moses replied, 'Here am I with six hundred thousand men on the march around me, and thou dost promise them meat to eat for a whole month.
 22 How can the sheep and oxen be slaughtered that would be enough for them?
 23 If all the fish in the sea could be caught, would they be enough?' The LORD said to Moses, 'Is there a limit to the power of the LORD? You will see this very day whether or not my words come true.'

Moses came out and told the people what the LORD had said. He assembled seventy men from the elders of the people and stationed them round the Tent. Then the LORD descended in the cloud and spoke to him. He took back part of that same spirit which he had conferred on Moses and conferred it on the seventy elders; as the spirit alighted on them, they fell into a prophetic ecstasy, for the first and only time.

Now two men named Eldad and Medad, who had been enrolled with the seventy, were left behind in the camp. But, though they had not gone out to the Tent, the spirit alighted on them none the less, and they fell into an ecstasy there in the camp. A young man ran and told Moses that Eldad and Medad were in an ecstasy in the camp, whereupon Joshua son of Nun, who had served with Moses since he was a boy, broke in, 'My lord Moses, stop them!' But Moses said to him, 'Are you jealous on my account? I wish that all the LORD's people were prophets and that the LORD would confer his spirit on them all!' And Moses rejoined the camp with the elders of Israel.

Then a wind from the LORD sprang up; it drove quails in from the west, and they were flying all round the camp for the distance of a day's journey, three feet above the ground. The people were busy gathering quails all that day, all night, and all next day, and even the man who got least gathered ten homers. They spread them out to dry all about the camp. But the meat was scarcely between their teeth, and they had not so much as bitten it, when the LORD's anger broke out against the people and he struck them with a deadly plague. That place was called Kibroth-hattaavah^a because there they buried the people who had been greedy for meat.

From Kibroth-hattaavah the Israelites went on to Hazeroth, and while they were at Hazeroth, Miriam and Aaron began to speak against Moses. They blamed him for his Cushite wife (for he had married a Cushite woman), and they said, 'Is Moses the only one with^b whom the LORD has spoken? Has he not spoken with^b us as well?' Moses was in fact a man of great humility, the most humble man on earth. But the LORD heard them and suddenly he said to Moses, Aaron and Miriam, 'Go out all three of you to the Tent of the Presence.' So the three went out, and the LORD descended in a pillar of cloud; he stood at the entrance to the tent and summoned Aaron and Miriam. The two of them went forward, and he said,

'Listen to my words.

If he^c were your prophet and nothing more,
I would make myself known to him in a vision,
I would speak with him in a dream.

But my servant Moses is not such a prophet;
he alone is faithful^d of all my household.

With him I speak face to face,
openly and not in riddles.

He shall see the very form of the LORD.

How do you dare speak against my servant Moses?'

9 Thus the anger of the LORD was roused against them, and he left them;
 10 and as the cloud moved from the tent, there was Miriam, her skin diseased and white as snow. Aaron turned towards her and saw her skin diseased.
 11 Then he said to Moses, 'Pray, my lord, do not make us pay the penalty of 12 sin, foolish and wicked though we have been. Let her not be like something still-born, whose flesh is half eaten away when it comes from the womb.' 13 14 So Moses cried, 'Not this, O LORD! Heal her, I pray.' The LORD replied, 'Suppose her father had spat in her face, would she not have to remain in 15 disgrace for seven days? Let her be kept for seven days in confinement outside the camp and then be brought back.' So Miriam was kept outside 16 for seven days, and the people did not strike camp until she was brought back. After this they set out from Hazeroth and pitched camp in the wilderness of Paran.

13 1 2 THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and said, 'Send men out to explore the land of Canaan which I am giving to the Israelites; from each of their fathers' 3 tribes send one man, and let him be a man of high rank.' So Moses sent them from the wilderness of Paran at the command of the LORD, all of 4 them leading men among the Israelites. These were their names:

from the tribe of Reuben, Shammua son of Zaccur;
 5 from the tribe of Simeon, Shaphat son of Hori;
 6 from the tribe of Judah, Caleb son of Jephunneh;
 7 from the tribe of Issachar, Igal son of Joseph;
 8 from the tribe of Ephraim, Hoshea son of Nun;
 9 from the tribe of Benjamin, Palti son of Raphu;
 10 from the tribe of Zebulun, Gaddiel son of Sodi;
 11 from the tribe of Joseph (that is from the tribe of Manasseh), Gaddi son of Susi;
 12 from the tribe of Dan, Ammiel son of Gemalli;
 13 from the tribe of Asher, Sethur son of Michael;
 14 from the tribe of Naphtali, Nahbi son of Vophsi;
 15 from the tribe of Gad, Geuel son of Machi.

16 These are the names of the men whom Moses sent to explore the land.
 But Moses called the son of Nun Joshua, not Hoshea.

17 When Moses sent them to explore the land of Canaan, he said to them, 18 'Make your way up by the Negeb, and go on into the hill-country. See what the land is like, and whether the people who live there are strong or 19 weak, few or many. See whether it is easy or difficult country in which they live, and whether the cities in which they live are weakly defended or 20 well fortified; is the land fertile or barren, and does it grow trees or not?
 Go boldly in and take some of its fruit.' It was the season when the first grapes were ripe.

21 They went up and explored the country from the wilderness of Zin as far as Rehob by Lebo-hamath. They went up by the Negeb and came to 22 Hebron, where Ahiman, Sheshai and Talmi, the descendants of Anak,^a 23 were living. (Hebron was built seven years before Zoan in Egypt.) They came to the gorge of Eshcol,^a and there they cut a branch with a single bunch of grapes, and they carried it on a pole two at a time; they also picked pomegranates and figs. It was from the bunch of grapes which the Israelites cut there that that place was named the gorge of Eshcol. After forty days they returned from exploring the country, and came back to Moses and Aaron and the whole community of Israelites at Kadesh in the wilderness of Paran. They made their report to them and to the whole community, and showed them the fruit of the country. And this was the story they told Moses: 'We made our way into the land to which you sent us. It is flowing with milk and honey, and here is the fruit it grows; but its inhabitants are sturdy, and the cities are very strongly fortified; indeed, we saw there the descendants of Anak. We also saw the Amalekites who live in the Negeb, Hittites, Jebusites, and Amorites who live in the hill-country, and the Canaanites who live by the sea and along the Jordan.'

Then Caleb called for silence before Moses and said, 'Let us go up at once and occupy the country; we are well able to conquer it.' But the men who had gone with him said, 'No, we cannot attack these people; they are stronger than we are.' Thus their report to the Israelites about the land which they had explored was discouraging: 'The country we explored', they said, 'will swallow up any who go to live in it. All the people we saw there are men of gigantic size. When we set eyes on the Nephilim^b (the sons of Anak^c belong to the Nephilim) we felt no bigger than grasshoppers; and that is how we looked to them.'

Then the whole Israelite community cried out in dismay; all night long they wept. One and all they made complaints against Moses and Aaron: 'If only we had died in Egypt or in the wilderness!' they said. 'Far happier if we had! Why should the LORD bring us to this land, to die in battle and leave our wives and our dependants to become the spoils of war? To go back to Egypt would be better than this.' And they began to talk of choosing someone to lead them back.

Then Moses and Aaron flung themselves on the ground before the assembled community of the Israelites, and two of those who had explored the land, Joshua son of Nun and Caleb son of Jephunneh, rent their clothes and addressed the whole community: 'The country we penetrated and explored', they said, 'is very good land indeed. If the LORD is pleased with us, he will bring us into this land which flows with milk and honey, and give it to us. But you must not rebel against the LORD. You need not fear the people of the land; for there we shall find food. They have lost the protection that they had: the LORD is with us. You have nothing to fear from them.' But by way of answer the assembled Israelites threatened to stone them, when suddenly the glory of the LORD appeared to them all in the Tent of the Presence.

Then the LORD said to Moses, 'How much longer will this people treat me with contempt? How much longer will they refuse to trust me in spite of all the signs I have shown among them? I will strike them with pestilence. I will deny them their heritage, and you and your descendants I will make into a nation greater and more numerous than they.' But Moses answered

^a Eshcol: that is Bunch of Grapes. ^b Or giants. ^c sons of Anak: or tall men.

14 the LORD, 'What if the Egyptians hear of it? It was thou who didst bring this people out of Egypt by thy strength. What if they tell the inhabitants of this land? They too have heard of thee, LORD, that thou art with this people, and art seen face to face, that thy cloud stays over them, and thou goest before them in a pillar of cloud by day and in a pillar of fire by night.
15 If then thou dost put them all to death at one blow, the nations who have
16 heard these tales of thee will say, "The LORD could not bring this people into the land which he promised them by oath; and so he destroyed them in the wilderness."

17 'Now let the LORD's might be shown in its greatness, true to thy proclamation of thyself—"The LORD, long-suffering, ever constant, who forgives iniquity and rebellion, and punishes sons to the third and fourth generation for the iniquity of their fathers, though he does not sweep them clean away." Thou hast borne with this people from Egypt all the way here; forgive their iniquity, I beseech thee, as befits thy great and constant love.'

20 21 The LORD said, 'Your prayer is answered; I pardon them. But as I live, 22-23 in very truth the glory of the LORD shall fill the earth. Not one of all those who have seen my glory and the signs which I wrought in Egypt and in the wilderness shall see the country which I promised on oath to their fathers. Ten times they have challenged me and not obeyed my voice. None of 24-25 those who have flouted me shall see this land. But my servant Caleb showed a different spirit: he followed me with his whole heart. Because of this, I will bring him into the land in which he has already set foot, the territory of the Amalekites and the Canaanites who dwell in the Vale, and put his descendants in possession of it. Tomorrow you must turn back and set out for the wilderness by way of the Red Sea.'^a

26 27 The LORD spoke to Moses and Aaron and said, 'How long must I tolerate^b the complaints of this wicked community? I have heard the Israelites 28 making complaints against me. Tell them that this is the very word of the LORD: As I live, I will bring home to you the words I have heard you utter.
29 Here in this wilderness your bones shall lie, every man of you on the register from twenty years old and upwards, because you have made these 30 complaints against me. Not one of you shall enter the land which I swore with uplifted hand should be your home, except only Caleb son of Jephunneh and Joshua son of Nun. As for your dependants, those dependants who,
31 you said, would become the spoils of war, I will bring them in to the land you have rejected, and they shall enjoy it. But as for the rest of you, your 32 bones shall lie in this wilderness; your sons shall be wanderers in the wilderness forty years, paying the penalty of your wanton disloyalty till
34 the last man of you dies there. Forty days you spent exploring the country, and forty years you shall spend—a year for each day—paying the penalty
35 of your iniquities. You shall know what it means to have me against you. 'I, the LORD, have spoken. This I swear to do to all this wicked community who have combined against me. There shall be an end of them here in this 36 wilderness; here they shall die.' But the men whom Moses had sent to explore the land, and who came back and by their report set all the community complaining against him, died of the plague before the LORD; they died of the plague because they had made a bad report. Of those who went 38 to explore the land, Joshua son of Nun and Caleb son of Jephunneh alone remained alive.
37

When Moses reported the LORD's words to all the Israelites, the people 39 were plunged in grief. They set out early next morning and made for the 40 heights of the hill-country, saying, 'Look, we are on our way up to the place the LORD spoke of. We admit that we have been wrong.' But Moses 41 replied, 'Must you persist in disobeying the LORD's command? No good will come of this. Go no further; you will not have the LORD with you, and 42 your enemies will defeat you. For in front of you are the Amalekites and Canaanites, and you will die by the sword, because you have ceased to 43 follow the LORD, and he will no longer be with you.' But they went reck- 44 lessly on their way towards the heights of the hill-country, though neither the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD nor Moses moved with them out of the camp; and the Amalekites and Canaanites from those hills came down 45 and fell upon them, and crushed them at Hormah.

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and said, Speak to the Israelites in these 15 1 2 words: When you enter the land where you are to live, the land I am giving you, you will make food-offerings to the LORD; they may be whole-offer- 3 ings or any sacrifice made in fulfilment of a special^a vow or by way of free-will offering or at one of the appointed seasons. When you thus make an 4 offering of soothing odour from herd or flock to the LORD, the man who offers, in presenting it, shall add a grain-offering of a tenth of an ephah of 5 flour mixed with a quarter of a hin of oil. You shall also add to the whole-offering or shared-offering a quarter of a hin of wine as a drink-offering with each lamb sacrificed.

If the animal is a ram, the grain-offering shall be two tenths of an ephah 6 of flour mixed with a third of a hin of oil, and the wine for the drink- 7 offering shall be a third of a hin; in this way you will make an offering of soothing odour to the LORD.

When you offer to the LORD a young bull, whether as a whole-offering 8 or as a sacrifice to fulfil a special^b vow, or as a shared-offering, you shall 9 add a grain-offering of three tenths of an ephah of flour mixed with half a hin of oil, and for the drink-offering, half a hin of wine; the whole will 10 thus be a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD. This is what must be done in each case, for every bull or ram, lamb or kid, whatever the 11 number of each that you offer. Every native Israelite shall observe these 12 rules in each case when he offers a food-offering of soothing odour to the 13
LORD.

When an alien residing with you or permanently settled among you 14 offers a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD, he shall do as you do.
There is one and the same rule for you and for the resident alien, a rule 15 binding for all time on your descendants; you and the alien are alike before the LORD. There shall be one law and one custom for you and for the alien 16 residing with you.

^a in fulfilment of a special: or to discharge a . . .

^b fulfil a special: or discharge a . . .

17 18 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to the Israelites in these words :
19 After you have entered the land into which I am bringing you, whenever you eat the bread of the country, you shall set aside a contribution for the 20 LORD. You shall set aside a cake made of your first kneading of dough, as 21 you set aside the contribution from the threshing-floor. You must give a contribution to the LORD from your first kneading of dough ; this rule is binding on your descendants.

22 When through inadvertence you omit to carry out any of these com-23 mands which the LORD gave to Moses—any command whatever that the LORD gave you through Moses on that first day and thereafter and made 24 binding on your descendants—if it be done inadvertently, unnoticed by the community, then the whole community shall offer one young bull as a whole-offering, a soothing odour to the LORD, with its proper grain-offering and drink-offering according to custom ; and they shall add one 25 he-goat as a sin-offering. The priest shall make expiation for the whole community of Israelites, and they shall be forgiven. The omission was inadvertent ; and they have brought their offering, a food-offering to the LORD ; they have made their sin-offering before the LORD for their in-26 advertence ; the whole community of Israelites and the aliens residing among you shall be forgiven. The inadvertence was shared by the whole people.

27 If any individual sins inadvertently, he shall present a yearling she-goat 28 as a sin-offering, and the priest shall make expiation before the LORD for 29 the said individual, and he shall be forgiven. For anyone who sins inadvertently, there shall be one law for all, whether native Israelite or 30 resident alien. But the person who sins presumptuously, native or alien, 31 insults the LORD. He shall be cut off from his people, because he has brought the word of the LORD into contempt and violated his command. That person shall be wholly cut off ; the guilt shall be on his head alone.

32 During the time that the Israelites were in the wilderness, a man was 33 found gathering sticks on the sabbath day. Those who had caught him in 34 the act brought him to Moses and Aaron and all the community, and they kept him in custody, because it was not clearly known what was to be done 35 with him. The LORD said to Moses, 'The man must be put to death ; he 36 must be stoned by all the community outside the camp.' So they took him outside the camp and all stoned him to death, as the LORD had commanded Moses.

37 38 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to the Israelites in these words : You must make tassels like flowers on the corners of your garments, you and your children's children. Into this tassel you shall work a violet 39 thread, and whenever you see this in the tassel, you shall remember all the LORD's commands and obey them, and not go your own wanton ways, 40 led astray by your own eyes and hearts. This token is to ensure that you remember all my commands and obey them, and keep yourselves holy, consecrated to your God.

41 I am the LORD your God who brought you out of Egypt to become your God. I am the LORD your God.

NOW KORAH SON OF IZHAR, son of Kohath, son of Levi, with the Reubenites Dathan and Abiram sons of Eliab and On son of Peleth, challenged the authority of Moses. With them in their revolt were two hundred and fifty Israelites, all men of rank in the community, conveners of assembly and men of good standing. They confronted Moses and Aaron and said to them, 'You take too much upon yourselves. Every member of the community is holy and the LORD is among them all. Why do you set yourselves up above the assembly of the LORD?' When Moses heard this, he prostrated himself, and he said to Korah and all his company, 'Tomorrow morning the LORD shall declare who is his, who is holy and may present offerings to him. The man whom the LORD chooses shall present them. This is what you must do, you, Korah, and all your company: you must take censers and put fire in them, and then place incense on them before the LORD tomorrow. The man whom the LORD then chooses is the man who is holy. You take too much upon yourselves, you sons of Levi.'

Moses said to Korah, 'Now listen, you sons of Levi. Is it not enough for you that the God of Israel has set you apart from the community of Israel, bringing you near him to maintain the service of the Tabernacle of the LORD and to stand before the community as their ministers? He has brought you near him and your brother Levites with you; now you seek the priesthood as well. That is why you and all your company have combined together against the LORD. What is Aaron that you should make these complaints against him?'

Moses sent to fetch Dathan and Abiram sons of Eliab, but they answered, 'We are not coming. Is it a small thing that you have brought us away from a land flowing with milk and honey to let us die in the wilderness? Must you also set yourself up as prince over us? What is more, you have not brought us into a land flowing with milk and honey, nor have you given us fields and vineyards to inherit. Do you think you can hoodwink men like us? We are not coming.' This answer made Moses very angry, and he said to the LORD, 'Take no notice of their murmuring. I have not taken from them so much as a single ass; I have done no wrong to any of them.'

Moses said to Korah, 'Present yourselves before the LORD tomorrow, you and all your company, you and they and Aaron. Each man of you is to take his censer and put incense on it. Then you shall present them before the LORD with their two hundred and fifty censers, and you and Aaron shall also bring your censers.' So each man took his censer and put fire in it and placed incense on it; Moses and Aaron took their stand at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence, and Korah gathered his whole company together and faced them at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence.

Then the glory of the LORD appeared to the whole community. And the LORD spoke to Moses and Aaron and said, 'Stand apart from this company, so that I may make an end of them in a single instant.' But they prostrated themselves and said, 'O God, God of the spirits of all mankind, if one man sins, wilt thou be angry with the whole community?' But the LORD said to Moses, 'Tell them to stand back from the dwellings of Korah, Dathan and Abiram.'

So Moses rose and went to Dathan and Abiram, and the elders of Israel

26 followed him. He said to the whole community, 'Stand well away from the 27 tents of these wicked men; touch nothing of theirs, or you will be swept away because of all their sins.' So they moved away from the places occu-28 pied by Korah, Dathan and Abiram. Now Dathan and Abiram, holding themselves erect, had come out to the entrance of their tents with their 29 wives, their sons, and their dependants. Then Moses said, 'This shall prove 30 to you that it is the LORD who sent me to do all these things, and it was not my own heart that prompted me. If these men die a natural death and share the common fate of man, then the LORD has not sent me; but if the LORD makes a great chasm, and the ground opens its mouth and swallows them and all that is theirs, and they go down alive to Sheol, then you will know that these men have held the LORD in contempt.'

31 32 Hardly had Moses spoken when the ground beneath them split; the earth opened its mouth and swallowed them and their homes—all the 33 followers of Korah and all their property. They went down alive into Sheol with all that they had; the earth closed over them, and they vanished from 34 the assembly. At their cries all the Israelites round them fled, shouting, 35 'Look to yourselves! the earth will swallow us up.' Meanwhile fire had come out from the LORD and burnt up the two hundred and fifty men who were presenting the incense.

36 37 Then the LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'Bid Eleazar son of Aaron the priest set aside the censers from the burnt remains, and scatter the fire 38 from them far and wide, because they are holy. And the censers of these men who sinned at the cost of their lives you shall make into beaten plates to cover the altar; they are holy, because they have been presented before 39 the LORD. Let them be a sign to the Israelites.' So Eleazar the priest took the bronze^a censers which the victims of the fire had presented, and they 40 were beaten into plates to make a covering for the altar, as a reminder to the Israelites that no person unqualified, not descended from Aaron, should come forward to burn incense before the LORD, or his fate would be that of Korah and his company. All this was done as the LORD commanded Eleazar through Moses.

41 Next day all the community of the Israelites raised complaints against Moses and Aaron and taxed them with causing the death of some of the 42 LORD's people. As they gathered against Moses and Aaron, they turned towards the Tent of the Presence and saw that the cloud covered it, and 43 the glory of the LORD appeared. Moses and Aaron came to the front of the 44 Tent of the Presence, and the LORD spoke to Moses and Aaron and said, 45 'Stand well clear of this community, so that in a single instant I may make 46 an end of them.' Then they prostrated themselves, and Moses said to Aaron, 'Take your censer, put fire from the altar in it, set incense on it, and go with it quickly to the assembled community to make expiation for them.
Wrath has gone forth already from the presence of the LORD. The plague 47 has begun.' So Aaron took his censer, as Moses had said, ran into the midst of the assembly and found that the plague had begun among the people.
48 He put incense on the censer and made expiation for the people, stand-
49 ing between the dead and the living, and the plague stopped. Fourteen thousand seven hundred died of it, in addition to those who had died for the offence of Korah. When Aaron came back to Moses at the entrance to the Tent of the Presence, the plague had stopped.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'Speak to the Israelites and tell them to give you a staff for each tribe, one from every tribal chief, twelve in all, and write each man's name on his staff. On Levi's staff write the name of Aaron, for there shall be one staff for each head of a tribe. You shall put them all in the Tent of the Presence before the Tokens, where I meet you, and the staff of the man I choose shall sprout. I will rid myself of the complaints of these Israelites, who keep on complaining against you.'

Moses thereupon spoke to the Israelites, and each of their chiefs handed him a staff, each of them one for his tribe, twelve in all, and Aaron's staff among them. Moses put them before the LORD in the Tent of the Tokens, and next day when he entered the tent, he found that Aaron's staff, the staff for the tribe of Levi, had sprouted. Indeed, it had sprouted, blossomed, and produced ripe almonds. Moses then brought out the staffs from before the LORD and showed them to all the Israelites; they saw for themselves, and each man took his own staff. The LORD said to Moses, 'Put back Aaron's staff in front of the Tokens to be kept as a warning to all rebels, so that you may rid me once and for all of their complaints, and then they shall not die.' Moses did this; as the LORD had commanded him, so he did.

The Israelites said to Moses, 'This is the end of us! We perish, one and all! Every single person who goes near the Tabernacle of the LORD dies. Is this to be our final end?'

THE LORD SAID TO AARON: You and your sons, together with the members of your father's tribe, shall be fully answerable for the sanctuary. You and your sons alone shall be answerable for your priestly office; but you shall admit your kinsmen of Levi, your father's tribe, to be attached to you and assist you while you and your sons are before the Tent of the Tokens. They shall be in attendance on you and fulfil all the duties of the Tent, but shall not go near the holy vessels and the altar, or they will die and you with them. They shall be attached to you and be responsible for the maintenance of the Tent of the Presence in every detail; no unqualified person shall come near you. You yourselves shall be responsible for the sanctuary and the altar, so that wrath may no more fall on the Israelites. I have myself taken the Levites your kinsmen out of all the Israelites as a gift for you, given to the LORD for the maintenance of the Tent of the Presence. But only you and your sons may fulfil the duties of your priestly office that concern the altar or lie within the Veil. This duty is yours; I bestow on you this gift of priestly service. The unqualified person who intrudes on it shall be put to death.

The LORD said to Aaron: I, the LORD, commit to your control the contributions made to me, that is all the holy-gifts of the Israelites. I give them to you and to your sons for your allotted portion due to you in perpetuity. Out of the most holy gifts kept back from the altar-fire this part shall belong to you: every offering, whether grain-offering, sin-offering, or 10 guilt-offering, rendered to me as a most holy gift, belongs to you and to your sons. You shall eat it as befits most holy gifts; every male may eat it. You shall regard it as holy.

11 This also is yours: the contribution from all such of their gifts as are presented as special gifts by the Israelites. I give them to you and to your sons and daughters with you as a due in perpetuity. Every person in your household who is ritually clean may eat them.

12 I give you all the choicest of the oil, the choicest of the new wine and the corn, the firstfruits which are given to the LORD. The first-ripe fruits of all produce in the land which are brought to the LORD shall be yours. Every-one in your household who is clean may eat them.

14 Everything in Israel which has been devoted to God shall be yours.

15 All the first-born of man or beast which are brought to the LORD shall be yours. Notwithstanding, you must accept payment in redemption of any first-born of man and of unclean beasts: at the end of one month you shall redeem it at the fixed price of five shekels of silver by the sacred standard (twenty gerahs to the shekel). You must not, however, allow the redemption of the first-born of a cow, sheep, or goat; they are holy. You shall fling their blood against the altar and burn their fat in sacrifice as a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD; their flesh shall be yours, as are the breast of the special gift and the right leg.

19 All the contributions from holy-gifts, which the Israelites set aside for the LORD, I give to you and to your sons and daughters with you as a due in perpetuity. This is a perpetual covenant of salt before the LORD with you and your descendants also.

20 The LORD said to Aaron: You shall have no patrimony in the land of Israel, no holding among them; I am your holding in Israel, I am your patrimony.

21 To the Levites I give every tithe in Israel to be their patrimony, in return for the service they render in maintaining the Tent of the Presence. 22 In order that the Israelites may not henceforth approach the Tent and thus 23 incur the penalty of death, the Levites alone shall perform the service of the Tent, and they shall accept the full responsibility for it. This rule is binding on your descendants for all time. They shall have no patrimony 24 among the Israelites, because I give them as their patrimony the tithe which the Israelites set aside as a contribution to the LORD. Therefore I say to them: You shall have no patrimony among the Israelites.

25 26 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to the Levites in these words: When you receive from the Israelites the tithe which I give you from them as your patrimony, you shall set aside from it the contribution to the LORD, a tithe of the tithe. Your contribution shall count for you as if it were corn 27 from the threshing-floor and juice from the vat. In this way you too shall 28 set aside the contribution due to the LORD out of all tithes which you receive from the Israelites and shall give the LORD's contribution to Aaron 29 the priest. Out of all the gifts you receive you shall set aside the contribution due to the LORD; and the gift which you hallow^a must be taken from the choicest of them.

^a you hallow: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure.

You shall say to the Levites: When you have set aside the choicest part 30 of your portion, the remainder shall count for you as the produce of the threshing-floor and the winepress, and you may eat it anywhere, you and 31 your households. It is your payment for service in the Tent of the Presence.
When you have set aside its choicest part, you will incur no penalty in 32 respect of it, and you will not be profaning the holy-gifts of the Israelites;
so you will not die.

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and Aaron and said: This is a law and a 19 1 2 statute which the LORD has ordained. Tell the Israelites to bring you a red cow without blemish or defect, which has never borne the yoke. You shall give it to Eleazar the priest, and it shall be taken outside the camp and 3 slaughtered^a to the east of it. Eleazar the priest shall take some of the blood 4 on his finger and sprinkle it seven times towards the front of the Tent of the Presence. The cow shall be burnt in his sight, skin, flesh, and blood, 5 together with the offal. The priest shall then take cedar-wood, marjoram, 6 and scarlet thread, and throw them into the heart of the fire in which the cow is burning. He shall wash his clothes and bathe his body in water; 7 after which he may enter the camp, but he remains ritually unclean till sunset. The man who burnt the cow shall wash his clothes and bathe 8 his body in water, but he also remains unclean till sunset. Then a man 9 who is clean shall collect the ashes of the cow and deposit them outside the camp in a clean place. They shall be reserved for use by the Israelite community in the water of ritual purification; for the cow is a sin-offering.
The man who collected the ashes of the cow shall wash his clothes, but he 10 remains unclean till sunset. This rule shall be binding for all time on the Israelites and on the alien who is living with them.

Whoever touches a corpse shall be ritually unclean for seven days. He 11 12 shall get himself purified with the water of ritual purification on the third day and on the seventh day, and then he shall be clean. If he is not purified both on the third day and on the seventh, he shall not be clean. Everyone 13 who touches a corpse, that is the body of a man who has died, and does not purify himself, defiles the Tabernacle of the LORD. That person shall be cut off from Israel. The water of purification has not been flung over him;
he remains unclean, and his impurity is still upon him.

When a man dies in a tent, this is the law: everyone who goes into the 14 tent and everyone who was inside the tent shall be ritually unclean for seven days, and every open vessel which has no covering tied over it shall also 15 be unclean. In the open, anyone who touches a man killed with a weapon 16 or one who has died naturally, or who touches a human bone or a grave, shall be unclean for seven days. For such uncleanness, they shall take some 17 of the ash from the burnt mass of the sin-offering and add fresh water to it in a vessel. Then a man who is clean shall take marjoram, dip it in the 18 water, and sprinkle the tent with all the vessels in it and all the people who were there, or the man who has touched a human bone, a corpse (whether the man was killed or died naturally), or a grave. The man who is clean 19 shall sprinkle the unclean man on the third day and on the seventh; on the seventh day he shall purify him; then the man shall wash his clothes and bathe in water, and at sunset he shall be clean. If a man who is unclean does not get himself purified, that person shall be cut off from the assembly, because he has defiled the sanctuary of the LORD. The water of purification has not been flung over him: he is unclean. This rule shall be binding on you for all time. The man who sprinkles the water of purification shall also wash his clothes, and whoever touches the water shall be unclean till sunset. Whatever the unclean man touches shall be unclean, and any person who touches that shall be unclean till sunset.

^a Or he shall take it outside the camp and slaughter it . . .

20 IN THE FIRST MONTH the whole community of Israel reached the wilderness of Zin and stayed some time at Kadesh; there Miriam died and was buried.

There was no water for the community; so they gathered against Moses and Aaron. The people disputed with Moses and said, 'If only we had perished when our brothers perished in the presence of the LORD! Why have you brought the assembly of the LORD into this wilderness for us and our beasts to die here? Why did you fetch us up from Egypt to bring us to this vile place, where nothing will grow, neither corn nor figs, vines nor pomegranates? There is not even any water to drink.' Moses and Aaron came forward in front of the assembly to the entrance of the Tent of the Presence. There they fell prostrate, and the glory of the LORD appeared to them.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'Take a^a staff, and then with Aaron your brother assemble all the community, and, in front of them all, speak to the rock and it will yield its water. Thus you will produce water for the community out of the rock, for them and their beasts to drink.' Moses left the presence of the LORD with the staff, as he had commanded him. Then he and Aaron gathered the assembly together in front of the rock, and he said to them, 'Listen to me, you rebels. Must we get water out of this rock for you?' Moses raised his hand and struck the rock twice with his staff. Water gushed out in abundance and they all drank, men and beasts. But the LORD said to Moses and Aaron, 'You did not trust me so far as to uphold my holiness in the sight of the Israelites; therefore you shall not lead this assembly into the land which I promised to give them.' Such were the waters of Meribah,^b where the people disputed with the LORD and through which his holiness was upheld.

The approach to the promised land

14 FROM KADESH MOSES SENT ENVOYS to the king of Edom: 'This is a message from your brother Israel. You know all the hardships we have encountered, how our fathers went down to Egypt, and we lived there for many years. The Egyptians ill-treated us and our fathers before us, and we cried to the LORD for help. He listened to us and sent an angel, and he brought us out of Egypt; and now we are here at Kadesh, a town on your frontier. Grant us passage through your country. We will not trespass on 17 field or vineyard, or drink from your wells. We will keep to the king's highway; we will not turn off to right or left until we have crossed your ter- 18 ritory.' But the Edomites answered, 'You shall not cross our land. If you 19 do, we will march out and attack you in force.' The Israelites said, 'But we will keep to the main road. If we and our flocks drink your water, we will 20 pay you for it; we will simply cross your land on foot.' But the Edomites said, 'No, you shall not', and took the field against them with a large army 21 in full strength. Thus the Edomites refused to allow Israel to cross their frontier, and Israel went a different way to avoid a conflict.

The whole community of Israel set out from Kadesh and came to Mount 22
 Hor. At Mount Hor, near the frontier of Edom, the LORD said to Moses 23 and Aaron, 'Aaron shall be gathered to his father's kin. He shall not enter 24 the land which I promised to give the Israelites, because over the waters of Meribah you rebelled against my command. Take Aaron and his son 25 Eleazar, and go up Mount Hor. Strip Aaron of his robes and invest Eleazar 26 his son with them, for Aaron shall be taken from you: he shall die there.' Moses did as the LORD had commanded him: they went up Mount Hor 27 in sight of the whole community, and Moses stripped Aaron of his robes 28 and invested his son Eleazar with them. There Aaron died on the mountaintop, and Moses and Eleazar came down from the mountain. So the whole 29 community saw that Aaron had died, and all Israel mourned him for thirty days.

When the Canaanite king of Arad who lived in the Negeb heard that 21
 the Israelites were coming by way of Atharim, he attacked them and took some of them prisoners. Israel thereupon made a vow to the LORD and 2 said, 'If thou wilt deliver this people into my power, I will destroy their cities.' The LORD listened to Israel and delivered the Canaanites into their 3 power. Israel destroyed them and their cities and called the place Hormah. ^a

Then they left Mount Hor by way of the Red Sea to march round the 4 flank of Edom. But on the way they grew impatient and spoke against God 5 and Moses. 'Why have you brought us up from Egypt', they said, 'to die in the desert where there is neither food nor water? We are heartily sick 6 of this miserable fare.' Then the LORD sent poisonous snakes among the 7 people, and they bit the Israelites so that many of them died. The people came to Moses and said, 'We sinned when we spoke against the LORD and 8 you. Plead with the LORD to rid us of the snakes.' Moses therefore pleaded with the LORD for the people; and the LORD told Moses to make a serpent ^b 9 of bronze and erect it as a standard, so that anyone who had been bitten could look at it and recover. So Moses made a bronze serpent and erected 10 it as a standard, so that when a snake had bitten a man, he could look at the bronze serpent and recover.

The Israelites went on and encamped at Oboth. They moved on from 10 11
 Oboth and encamped at Iye-abarim in the wilderness on the eastern frontier of Moab. From there they moved and encamped by the gorge of 12 the Zared. They moved on from the Zared and encamped by the farther 13 side of the Arnon in the wilderness which extends into Amorite territory,

^a That is Destruction.^b Or snake.

14 for the Arnon was the Moabite frontier; it lies between Moab and the Amorites. That is why the Book of the Wars of the LORD speaks of Vaheb^a in Suphah and the gorges:

15 Arnon and the watershed of the gorges that falls away towards the dwellings at Ar
and slopes towards the frontier of Moab.

16 From there they moved on to Beer:^b this is the water-hole where the LORD
17 said to Moses, 'Gather the people together and I will give them water.' It was then that Israel sang this song:

18 Well up, spring water! Greet it with song,
the spring unearthed by the princes,
laid open by the leaders of the people with sceptre and with mace,
a gift from the wilderness.

19 And they proceeded from Beer^c to Nahaliel, and from Nahaliel to Bamoth;
20 then from Bamoth to the valley in the Moabite country below the summit of Pisgah overlooking the desert.

21 22 Then Israel sent envoys to the Amorite king Sihon and said, 'Grant us passage through your country. We will not trespass on field or vineyard, nor will we drink from your wells. We will travel by the king's highway till
23 we have crossed your territory.' But Sihon would not grant Israel passage through his territory; he mustered all his people and came out against Israel in the wilderness. He advanced as far as Jahaz and attacked Israel, 24 but Israel put them to the sword, giving no quarter, and occupied their land from the Arnon to the Jabbok, the territory of the Ammonites, where the country became difficult. So Israel took all these Amorite cities and 25 settled in them, that is in Heshbon and all its dependent villages. Heshbon was the capital of the Amorite king Sihon, who had fought against the former king of Moab and taken from him all his territory as far as the Arnon.
26 Therefore the bards say:

27 Come to Heshbon, come!
Let us see the city of Sihon rebuilt and restored!
28 For fire blazed out from Heshbon,
and flames from Sihon's city.
It devoured Ar of Moab,
and swept the high ground at Arnon head.

29 Woe to you, Moab;
it is the end of you, you people of Kemosh.
He has made his sons fugitives
and his daughters the prisoners of Sihon the Amorite king.
30 From Heshbon to Dibon their very embers are burnt out and they are extinct,
while the fire spreads onward to Medeba.

31 Thus Israel occupied the territory of the Amorites.

^a Name meaning Watershed.

Moses then sent men to explore Jazer; the Israelites captured it together 32 with its dependent villages and drove out the Amorites living there. Then 33 they turned and advanced along the road to Bashan. Og king of Bashan, with all his people, took the field against them at Edrei. The LORD said to 34 Moses, 'Do not be afraid of him. I have delivered him into your hands, with all his people and his land. Deal with him as you dealt with Sihon the 35 Amorite king who lived in Heshbon.' So they put him to the sword with his sons and all his people, until there was no survivor left, and they occupied his land.

Israel in the plains of Moab

THE ISRAELITES WENT FORWARD and encamped in the lowlands of 22
Moab on the farther side of the Jordan from Jericho.

Balak son of Zippor saw what Israel had done to the Amorites, and 2 3 Moab was in terror of the people because there were so many of them. The Moabites were sick with fear at the sight of them; and they said to the 4 elders of Midian, 'This horde will soon lick up everything round us as a bull crops the spring grass.' Balak son of Zippor was at that time king of 5 Moab. He sent a deputation to summon Balaam son of Beor, who was at Pethor by the Euphrates in the land of the Amavites, with this message,
'Look, an entire nation has come out of Egypt; they cover the face of the 6 country and are settling at my very door. Come at once and lay a curse on them, because they are too many for me; then I may be able to defeat them and drive them from the country. I know that those whom you bless are blessed, and those whom you curse are cursed.'

The elders of Moab and Midian took the fees for augury with them, and 7
they came to Balaam and told him what Balak had said. 'Spend this night 8 here,' he said, 'and I will give you whatever answer the LORD gives to me.'
So the Moabite chiefs stayed with Balaam. God came to Balaam and asked 9 him, 'Who are these men with you?' Balaam replied, 'Balak son of Zippor 10 king of Moab has sent them to me and he says, "Look, a people newly come out of Egypt is covering the face of the country. Come at once and denounce 11 them for me; then I may be able to fight them and drive them away."' God 12 said to Balaam, 'You are not to go with them or curse the people, because they are to be blessed.'^a So Balaam rose in the morning and said to Balak's 13 chiefs, 'Go back to your own country; the LORD has refused to let me go with you.' Then the Moabite chiefs took their leave and went back to Balak, 14 and told him that Balaam had refused to come with them; whereupon 15 Balak sent a second and larger embassy of higher rank than the first. They 16 came to Balaam and told him, 'This is the message from Balak son of Zippor: "Let nothing stand in the way of your coming. I will confer great 17 honour upon you; I will do whatever you ask me. But you must come and denounce this people for me."' Balaam gave this answer to Balak's mes- 18
sengers: 'Even if Balak were to give me all the silver and gold in his house,
I could not disobey the command of the LORD my God in anything, small

19 or great. But stay here for this night, as the others did, that I may learn 20 what more the LORD has to say to me.' During the night God came to Balaam and said to him, 'If these men have come to summon you, then 21 rise and go with them, but do only what I tell you.' So in the morning
Balaam rose, saddled his ass and went with the Moabite chiefs.

22 But God was angry because Balaam was going, and as he came riding on his ass, accompanied by his two servants, the angel of the LORD took his 23 stand in the road to bar his way. When the ass saw the angel standing in the road with his sword drawn, she turned off the road into the fields, and 24 Balaam beat the ass to bring her back on to the road. Then the angel of the LORD stood where the road ran through a hollow, with fenced vineyards 25 on either side. The ass saw the angel and, crushing herself against the wall, 26 crushed Balaam's foot against it, and he beat her again. The angel of the LORD moved on further and stood in a narrow place where there was no 27 room to turn either to right or left. When the ass saw the angel, she lay down under Balaam. At that Balaam lost his temper and beat the ass with 28 his stick. The LORD then made the ass speak, and she said to Balaam, 'What 29 have I done? This is the third time you have beaten me.' Balaam answered the ass, 'You have been making a fool of me. If I had had a sword here, I 30 should have killed you on the spot.' But the ass answered, 'Am I not still the ass which you have ridden all your life? Have I ever taken such a liberty 31 with you before?' He said, 'No.' Then the LORD opened Balaam's eyes:
32 he saw the angel of the LORD standing in the road with his sword drawn, and he bowed down and fell flat on his face before him. The angel said to 33 him, 'What do you mean by beating your ass three times like this? I came out to bar your way but you made straight for me, and three times your ass 34 saw me and turned aside. If she had not turned aside, I should by now have killed you and spared her.' Balaam replied to the angel of the LORD, 'I have 35 done wrong. I did not know that you stood in the road confronting me.
But now, if my journey displeases you, I am ready to go back.' The angel of the LORD said to Balaam, 'Go on with these men; but say only what I tell you.' So Balaam went on with Balak's chiefs.

36 When Balak heard that Balaam was coming, he came out to meet him as 37 far as Ar of Moab by the Arnon on his frontier. Balak said to Balaam, 'Did
I not send time and again to summon you? Why did you not come? Did 38 you think that I could not do you honour?' Balaam replied, 'I have come, as you see. But now that I am here, what power have I of myself to say 39 anything? Whatever the word God puts into my mouth, that is what I 40 will say.' So Balaam went with Balak till they came to Kiriath-huzoth, and Balak slaughtered cattle and sheep and sent them to Balaam and to the chiefs who were with him.

41 In the morning Balak took Balaam and led him up to the Heights of 23 Baal, from where he could see the full extent of the Israelite host. Then Balaam said to Balak, 'Build me here seven altars and prepare for me seven 2 bulls and seven rams.' Balak did as he asked and offered a bull and a ram
3-4 on each altar. Then he said to him, 'I have prepared the seven altars, and I have offered the bull and the ram on each altar.' Balaam said to Balak, 'Take your stand beside your sacrifice, and let me go off by myself. It may happen that the LORD will meet me. Whatever he reveals to me, I will tell you.' So he went forthwith, and God met him. The LORD put words into Balaam's mouth and said, 'Go back to Balak, and speak as I tell you.' So he went back, and found Balak standing by his sacrifice, and with him all the Moabite chiefs. And Balaam uttered his oracle:

From Aram,^a from the mountains of the east,
Balak king of Moab has brought me:
'Come, lay a curse for me on Jacob,
come, execrate Israel.'
How can I denounce whom God has not denounced? 8
How can I execrate whom the LORD has not execrated?
From the rocky heights I see them, 9
I watch them from the rounded hills.
I see a people that dwells alone,
that has not made itself one with the nations.
Who can count the host^b of Jacob 10
or number the hordes^c of Israel?
Let me die as men die who are righteous,
grant that my end may be as theirs!

Then Balak said to Balaam, 'What is this you have done? I sent for you to denounce my enemies, and what you have done is to bless them.' But he replied, 'Must I not keep to the words that the LORD puts into my mouth?'

Balak then said to him, 'Come with me now to another place from which you will see them, though not the full extent of them; you will not see them all. Denounce them for me from there.' So he took him to the Field of the Watchers^d on the summit of Pisgah, where he built seven altars and offered a bull and a ram on each altar. Balaam said to Balak, 'Take your stand beside your sacrifice, and I will meet God over there.' The LORD met Balaam and put words into his mouth, and said, 'Go back to Balak, and speak as I tell you.' So he went back, and found him standing beside his sacrifice, with the Moabite chiefs. Balak asked what the LORD had said, and Balaam uttered his oracle:

Up, Balak, and listen:
hear what I am charged to say, son of Zippor.
God is not a mortal that he should lie, 19
not a man that he should change his mind.^e
Has he not spoken, and will he not make it good?
What he has proclaimed, he will surely fulfil.
I have received command to bless; 20
I will bless and I cannot gainsay it.
He has discovered no iniquity in Jacob 21
and has seen no mischief in Israel.^f

^a Or Syria.^b Or dust.^c Or quarter or sands.^d Or Field of Zophim.^e Or feel regret.^f Or None can discover calamity in Jacob nor see trouble in Israel.

- The LORD their God is with them, acclaimed among them as king. ^a
- 22 What its curving horns are to the wild ox,
 God is to them, who brought them out of Egypt.
- 23 Surely there is no divination in ^b Jacob,
 and no augury in ^b Israel;
 now is the time to say of Jacob and of Israel, 'See what God has wrought!'
- 24 Behold a people rearing up like a lioness, rampant like a lion;
 he will not couch till he devours the prey
 and drinks the blood of the slain.
- 25 Then Balak said to Balaam, 'You will not denounce them; then at least do not 26 bless them'; and he answered, 'Did I not warn you that I must do all the 27 LORD tells me?' Balak replied, 'Come, let me take you to another place; per-28 haps God will be pleased to let you denounce them for me from there.' So he 29 took Balaam to the summit of Peor overlooking Jeshimon, and Balaam told him to build seven altars for him there and prepare seven bulls and seven rams.
- 30 Balak did as Balaam had said, and he offered a bull and a ram on each altar.
- 24 But now that Balaam knew that the LORD wished him to bless Israel, he did not go and resort to divination as before. He turned towards the desert;
 2 and as he looked, he saw Israel encamped tribe by tribe. The spirit of God
 3 came upon him, and he uttered his oracle:

The very word of Balaam son of Beor,
 the very word of the man whose sight is clear,
 4 the very word of him who hears the words of God,
 who with staring eyes sees in a trance
 the vision from the Almighty:

5 how goodly are your tents, O Jacob,
 your dwelling-places, Israel, 6 like long rows of palms,
 like gardens by a river,
 like lign-aloes planted by the LORD,
 like cedars beside the water!

7 The water in his vessels shall overflow,
 and his seed shall be like great waters
 so that his king may be taller than Agag,
 and his kingdom lifted high.

8 What its curving horns are to the wild ox,
 God is to him, who brought him out of Egypt;
 he shall devour his adversaries the nations,
 crunch their bones, and smash their limbs in pieces.

9 When he reclines he couches like a lion,
 like a lioness, and no one dares rouse him.
 Blessed be they that bless you,
 and they that curse you be accursed!

^a Or royal care is bestowed on them. ^b Or against.

At that Balak was very angry with Balaam, beat his hands together and said, 'I summoned you to denounce my enemies, and three times you have persisted in blessing them. Off with you to your own place! I promised to confer great honour upon you, but now the LORD has kept this honour from you.' Balaam answered, 'But I told your own messengers whom you sent:
 "If Balak gives me all the silver and gold in his house, I cannot disobey the command of the LORD by doing anything of my own will, good or bad.
 What the LORD speaks to me, that is what I will say." Now I am going to my own people; but first, I will warn you what this people will do to yours in the days to come.' So he uttered his oracle:

The very word of Balaam son of Beor,
 the very word of the man whose sight is clear,
 the very word of him who hears the words of God,
 who shares the knowledge of the Most High,
 who with staring eyes sees in a trance
 the vision from the Almighty:

I see him, but not now;
 I behold him, but not near:
 a star shall come forth out of Jacob,
 a comet arise from Israel.

He shall smite the squadrons^a of Moab,
 and beat down all the sons of strife.
 Edom shall be his by conquest and Seir, his enemy, shall be his.
 Israel shall do valiant deeds;
 Jacob shall trample them down,
 the last survivor from Ar shall he destroy.

He saw Amalek and uttered his oracle:
 First of all the nations was Amalek,
 but his end shall be utter destruction.

He saw the Kenites and uttered his oracle:
 Your refuge, though it seems secure,
 your nest, though set on the mountain crag,
 is doomed to burning, O Cain.
 How long must you dwell there in my sight?

He uttered his oracle:
 Ah, who are these assembling in the north,
 invaders from the region of Kittim?
 They will lay waste Assyria; they will lay Eber waste:
 he too shall perish utterly.

Then Balaam arose and returned home, and Balak also went on his way.

WHEN THE ISRAELITES WERE IN SHITTIM, the people began to have intercourse with Moabite women, who invited them to the sacrifices offered to their gods; and they ate the sacrificial food and prostrated

3 themselves before the gods of Moab. The Israelites joined in the worship
4 of the Baal of Peor, and the LORD was angry with them. He said to Moses,
'Take all the leaders of the people and hurl them down to their death before the LORD in the full light of day, that the fury of his anger may turn away 5 from Israel.' So Moses said to the judges of Israel, 'Put to death, each one of you, those of his tribe who have joined in the worship of the Baal of Peor.'

6 One of the Israelites brought a Midianite woman into his family in open defiance of Moses and all the community of Israel, while they were weep-7 ing by the entrance of the Tent of the Presence. Phinehas son of Eleazar, son of Aaron the priest, saw him. He stepped out from the crowd and took 8 up a spear, and he went into the inner room after the Israelite and transfixed the two of them, the Israelite and the woman, pinning them together.
Thus the plague which had attacked the Israelites was brought to a stop;
9 but twenty-four thousand had already died.

10 11 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'Phinehas son of Eleazar, son of Aaron the priest, has turned my wrath away from the Israelites; he displayed among them the same jealous anger that moved me, and therefore 12 in my jealousy I did not exterminate the Israelites. Tell him that I hereby 13 grant him my covenant of security of tenure. He and his descendants after him shall enjoy the priesthood under a covenant for all time, because he 14 showed his zeal for his God and made expiation for the Israelites.' The name of the Israelite struck down with the Midianite woman was Zimri 15 son of Salu, a chief in a Simeonite family, and the Midianite woman's name was Cozbi daughter of Zur, who was the head of a group of fathers' families in Midian.

17-18 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'Make the Midianites suffer as they made you suffer with their crafty tricks, and strike them down; their craftiness was your undoing at Peor and in the affair of Cozbi their sister, the daughter of a Midianite chief, who was struck down at the time of the plague that followed Peor.'

26 1 AFTER THE PLAGUE the LORD said to Moses and Eleazar the priest, son
2 of Aaron, 'Number the whole community of Israel by fathers' families, recording everyone in Israel aged twenty years and upwards fit for military 3 service.' Moses and Eleazar collected them in the lowlands of Moab by 4 the Jordan near Jericho,^a all who were twenty years of age and upwards, as the LORD had commanded Moses.

These were the Israelites who came out of Egypt:

5^b Reubenites (Reuben was Israel's eldest son): Enoch, the Enochite
6 family; Pallu, the Palluite family; Hezron, the Hezronite family; Carmi, 7 the Carmite family. These were the Reubenite families; the number in 8 their detailed list was forty-three thousand seven hundred and thirty. Son 9 of Pallu: Eliab. Sons of Eliab: Nemuel, Dathan and Abiram. These were the same Dathan and Abiram, conveners of the community, who defied Moses and Aaron and joined the company of Korah in defying the LORD.

 50 These were the Naphtalite families by their families; the number in their detailed list was forty-five thousand four hundred.

51 The total in the Israelite lists was six hundred and one thousand seven hundred and thirty.

52 53 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'The land shall be apportioned 54 among these tribes according to the number of names recorded. To the larger group you shall give a larger property and to the smaller a smaller;
 a property shall be given to each in proportion to its size as shown in the 55 detailed lists. The land, however, shall be apportioned by lot; the lots shall 56 be cast for the properties by families in the father's line. Properties shall be apportioned by lot between the larger families and the smaller.'

57 The detailed lists of Levi, by families: Gershon, the Gershonite family;
 Kohath, the Kohathite family; Merari, the Merarite family.

58 These were the families of Levi: the Libnite, Hebronite, Mahlithite, Mushite, and Korahite families.

59 Kohath was the father of Amram; Amram's wife was named Jochebed daughter of Levi, born to him in Egypt. She bore to Amram Aaron, Moses, 60 and their sister Miriam. Aaron's sons were Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar and 61 Ithamar. Nadab and Abihu died because they presented illicit fire before the LORD.

62 In the detailed lists of Levi the number of males, aged one month and upwards, was twenty-three thousand. They were recorded separately from the other Israelites because no property was allotted to them among the Israelites.

63 These were the detailed lists prepared by Moses and Eleazar the priest when they numbered the Israelites in the lowlands of Moab by the Jordan 64 near Jericho. Among them there was not a single one of the Israelites whom 65 Moses and Aaron the priest had recorded in the wilderness of Sinai; for the LORD had said they should all die in the wilderness. None of them was still living except Caleb son of Jephunneh and Joshua son of Nun.

27 A claim was presented by the daughters of Zelophehad son of Hopher, son of Gilead, son of Machir, son of Manasseh, son of Joseph. Their 2 names were Mahlah, Noah, Hoglah, Milcah and Tirzah. They appeared at the entrance of the Tent of the Presence before Moses, Eleazar the priest, 3 the chiefs, and all the community, and spoke as follows: 'Our father died in the wilderness. He was not among the company of Korah which combined together against the LORD; he died for his own sin and left no sons.
 4 Is it right that, because he had no son, our father's name should disappear from his family? Give us our property on the same footing as our father's brothers.'

5 6 So Moses brought their case before the LORD, and the LORD spoke to

Moses and said, 'The claim of the daughters of Zelophehad is good. You must allow them to inherit on the same footing as their father's brothers. Let their father's patrimony pass to them. Then say this to the Israelites: "When a man dies leaving no son, his patrimony shall pass to his daughter. If he has no daughter, you shall give it to his brothers. If he has no brothers, you shall give it to his father's brothers. If his father had no brothers, then you shall give possession to the nearest survivor in his family, and he shall inherit. This shall be a legal precedent for the Israelites, as the LORD has commanded Moses."'

The LORD said to Moses, 'Go up this mountain, Mount Abarim, and look out over the land which I have given to the Israelites. Then, when you have looked out over it, you shall be gathered to your father's kin like your brother Aaron; for you and Aaron disobeyed my command when the community disputed with me in the wilderness of Zin: you did not uphold my holiness before them at the waters.' These were the waters of Meribah-by-Kadesh in the wilderness of Zin.

Then Moses said, 'Let the LORD, the God of the spirits of all mankind, appoint a man over the community to go out and come in at their head, to lead them out and bring them home, so that the community of the LORD may not be like sheep without a shepherd.' The LORD answered Moses, 'Take Joshua son of Nun, a man endowed with spirit; lay your hand on him and set him before Eleazar the priest and all the community. Give him his commission in their presence, and delegate some of your authority to him, so that all the community of the Israelites may obey him. He must appear before Eleazar the priest, who will obtain a decision for him by consulting the Urim before the LORD; at his word they shall go out and shall come home, both Joshua and the whole community of the Israelites.'

Moses did as the LORD had commanded him. He took Joshua, presented him to Eleazar the priest and the whole community, laid his hands on him and gave him his commission, as the LORD had instructed him.

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and said, Give this command to the Israelites: See that you present my offerings, the food for the food-offering of soothing odour, to me at the appointed time.

Tell them: This is the food-offering which you shall present to the LORD: the regular daily whole-offering of two yearling rams without blemish. One you shall sacrifice in the morning and the second between dusk and dark. The grain-offering shall be a tenth of an ephah of flour mixed with a quarter of a hin of oil of pounded olives. (This was the regular whole-offering made at Mount Sinai, a soothing odour, a food-offering to the LORD.) The wine for the proper drink-offering shall be a quarter of a hin to each ram; you are to pour out this strong drink in the holy place as an offering to the LORD. You shall sacrifice the second ram between dusk and dark, with the same grain-offering as at the morning sacrifice and with the proper drink-offering; it is a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD.

For the sabbath day: two yearling rams without blemish, a grain-offering of two tenths of an ephah of flour mixed with oil, and the proper

10 drink-offering. This whole-offering, presented every sabbath, is in addition to the regular whole-offering and the proper drink-offering.

11 On the first day of every month you shall present a whole-offering to the LORD, consisting of two young bulls, one ram and seven yearling rams without blemish. The grain-offering shall be three tenths of flour mixed with oil for each bull, two tenths of flour mixed with oil for the full-grown ram, and one tenth of flour mixed with oil for each young ram. This is a whole-offering, a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD. The proper drink-offering shall be half a hin of wine for each bull, a third for the full-grown ram and a quarter for each young ram. This is the whole-offering to be made, month by month, throughout the year. Further, one he-goat shall be sacrificed as a sin-offering to the LORD, in addition to the regular whole-offering and the proper drink-offering.

16 The Passover of the LORD shall be held on the fourteenth day of the first month, and on the fifteenth day there shall be a pilgrim-feast; for seven days you must eat only unleavened cakes. On the first day there shall be a sacred assembly; you shall not do your daily work. As a food-offering, a whole-offering to the LORD, you shall present two young bulls, one ram, and seven yearling rams, all without blemish. You shall offer the proper grain-offerings of flour mixed with oil, three tenths for each bull, two tenths for the ram, and one tenth for each of the seven young rams; and as a sin-offering, one he-goat to make expiation for you. All these you shall offer in addition to the morning whole-offering, which is the regular sacrifice. You shall repeat this daily till the seventh day, presenting food as a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD, in addition to the regular whole-offering and the proper drink-offering. On the seventh day there shall be a sacred assembly; you shall not do your daily work.

26 On the day of Firstfruits, when you bring to the LORD your grain-offering from the new crop at your Feast of Weeks, there shall be a sacred assembly; you shall not do your daily work. You shall bring a whole-offering as a soothing odour to the LORD: two young bulls, one full-grown ram, and seven yearling rams. The proper grain-offering shall be of flour mixed with oil, three tenths for each bull, two tenths for the one ram, and a tenth for each of the seven young rams, and there shall be one he-goat as a sin-offering to make expiation for you; they shall all be without blemish. All these you shall offer in addition to the regular whole-offering with the proper grain-offering and drink-offering.

29 On the first day of the seventh month there shall be a sacred assembly; you shall not do your daily work. It shall be a day of acclamation. You shall sacrifice a whole-offering as a soothing odour to the LORD: one young bull, one full-grown ram, and seven yearling rams, without blemish. Their proper grain-offering shall be of flour mixed with oil, three tenths for the bull, two tenths for the one ram, and one tenth for each of the seven young rams, and there shall be one he-goat as a sin-offering to make expiation for you. This is in addition to the monthly whole-offering and the regular whole-offering with their proper grain-offerings and drink-offerings according to custom; it is a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD.

7 On the tenth day of this seventh month there shall be a sacred assembly, and you shall mortify yourselves; you shall not do any work. You shall bring a whole-offering to the LORD as a soothing odour: one young bull, one full-grown ram, and seven yearling rams; they shall all be without blemish. The proper grain-offering shall be of flour mixed with oil, three tenths for the bull, two tenths for the one ram, and one tenth for each of the seven young rams, and there shall be one he-goat as a sin-offering, in addition to the expiatory sin-offering and the regular whole-offering, with the proper grain-offering and drink-offering.

On the fifteenth day of the seventh month there shall be a sacred assembly. You shall not do your daily work, but shall keep a pilgrim-feast to the LORD for seven days. As a whole-offering, a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD, you shall bring thirteen young bulls, two full-grown rams, and fourteen yearling rams; they shall all be without blemish. The proper grain-offering shall be of flour mixed with oil, three tenths for each of the thirteen bulls, two tenths for each of the two rams, and one tenth for each of the fourteen young rams, and there shall be one he-goat as a sin-offering, in addition to the regular whole-offering with the proper grain-offering and drink-offering.

On the second day: twelve young bulls, two full-grown rams, and fourteen yearling rams, without blemish, together with the proper grain-offerings and drink-offerings for bulls, full-grown rams, and young rams, as prescribed according to their number, and there shall be one he-goat as a sin-offering, in addition to the regular whole-offering with the proper grain-offering and drink-offering.

On the third day: eleven bulls, two full-grown rams, and fourteen yearling rams, without blemish, together with the proper grain-offerings and drink-offerings for bulls, full-grown rams, and young rams, as prescribed according to their number, and there shall be one he-goat as a sin-offering, in addition to the regular whole-offering, with the proper grain-offering and drink-offering.

On the fourth day: ten bulls, two full-grown rams, and fourteen yearling rams, without blemish, together with the proper grain-offerings and drink-offerings for bulls, full-grown rams, and young rams, as prescribed according to their number, and there shall be one he-goat as a sin-offering, in addition to the regular whole-offering with the proper grain-offering and drink-offering.

On the fifth day: nine bulls, two full-grown rams, and fourteen yearling rams, without blemish, together with the proper grain-offerings and drink-offerings for bulls, full-grown rams, and young rams, as prescribed according to their number, and there shall be one he-goat as a sin-offering, in addition to the regular whole-offering with the proper grain-offering and drink-offering.

On the sixth day: eight bulls, two full-grown rams, and fourteen yearling rams, without blemish, together with the proper grain-offerings and drink-offerings for bulls, full-grown rams, and young rams, as prescribed according to their number, and there shall be one he-goat as a sin-offering, in addition to the regular whole-offering with the proper grain-offering and drink-offering.

32 On the seventh day: seven bulls, two full-grown rams, and fourteen 33 yearling rams, without blemish, together with the proper grain-offerings and drink-offerings for bulls, full-grown rams, and young rams, as pre-34 scribed according to their number, and there shall be one he-goat as a sin-offering, in addition to the regular whole-offering with the proper grain-offering and drink-offering.

35 The eighth day you shall keep as a closing ceremony; you shall not do 36 your daily work. As a whole-offering, a food-offering of soothing odour to the LORD, you shall bring one bull, one full-grown ram, and seven yearling 37 rams, without blemish, together with the proper grain-offerings and drink-offerings for bulls, full-grown rams, and young rams, as prescribed accord-38 ing to their number, and there shall be one he-goat as a sin-offering, in addition to the regular whole-offering with the proper grain-offering and drink-offering.

39 These are the sacrifices which you shall offer to the LORD at the appointed seasons, in addition to the votive offerings, the freewill offerings, the whole-offerings, the grain-offerings, the drink-offerings, and the shared-offerings.

40 Moses told the Israelites exactly what the LORD had commanded him.

30 THEN MOSES SPOKE to the heads of the Israelite tribes and said, This is 2 the LORD's command: When a man makes a vow to the LORD or swears an oath and so puts himself under a binding obligation, he must not break 3 his word. Every word he has spoken, he must make good. When a woman, still young and living in her father's house, makes a vow to the LORD or 4 puts herself under a binding obligation, if her father hears of it and keeps silence, then any such vow or obligation shall be valid. But if her father 5 disallows it when he hears of it, none of her vows or obligations shall be 6 valid; the LORD will absolve her, because her father has disallowed it. If the woman is married when she is under a vow or a binding obligation 7 rashly uttered, then if her husband hears of it and keeps silence when he hears, her vow or obligation by which she has bound herself shall be valid.
8 If, however, her husband disallows it when he hears of it and repudiates the vow which she has taken upon herself or the rash utterance with which 9 she has bound herself, then the LORD will absolve her. Every vow by which 10 a widow or a divorced woman has bound herself shall be valid. But if it is in her husband's house that a woman makes a vow or puts herself under a 11 binding obligation by an oath, and her husband, hearing of it, keeps silence and does not disallow it, then every vow and obligation under which she 12 has put herself shall be valid; but if her husband clearly repudiates them when he hears of them, then nothing that she has uttered, whether vow or obligation, shall be valid. Her husband has repudiated them, and the LORD will absolve her.

13 The husband can confirm or repudiate any vow or oath by which a 14 woman binds herself to mortification. If he maintains silence day after day, he thereby confirms every vow or obligation under which she has put herself: he confirms them, because he kept silence at the time when he heard them. If he repudiates them some time after he has heard them, he shall be 15 responsible for her default.

Such are the decrees which the LORD gave to Moses concerning a husband 16 and his wife and a father and his daughter, still young and living in her father's house.

THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES and said, 'You are to exact vengeance for 31 1 2
Israel on the Midianites and then you will be gathered to your father's kin.'

Then Moses spoke to the people in these words: 'Let some men among 3 you be drafted for active service. They shall fall upon Midian and exact vengeance in the LORD's name. You shall send out a thousand men from 4 each of the tribes of Israel.' So the men were called up from the clans of 5 Israel, a thousand from each tribe, twelve thousand in all, drafted for active service. Moses sent out this force, a thousand from each tribe, with 6 Phinehas son of Eleazar the priest, who was in charge of the holy vessels and of the trumpets to give the signal for the battle-cry. They made war 7 on Midian as the LORD had commanded Moses, and slew all the men. In 8 addition to those slain in battle they killed the kings of Midian—Evi, Rekem, Zur, Hur, and Reba, the five kings of Midian—and they put to 9 death also Balaam son of Beor. The Israelites took captive the Midianite women and their dependants, and carried off all their beasts, their flocks, and their property. They burnt all their cities, in which they had settled, 10 and all their encampments. They took all the spoil and plunder, both 11 man and beast, and brought them—captives, plunder, and spoil—to Moses 12 and Eleazar the priest and to all the community of the Israelites, to the camp in the lowlands of Moab by the Jordan at Jericho.

Moses and Eleazar the priest and all the leaders of the community went 13 to meet them outside the camp. Moses spoke angrily to the officers of the 14 army, the commanders of units of a thousand and of a hundred, who were returning from the campaign: 'Have you spared all the women?' he said. 15
'Remember, it was they who, on Balaam's departure, set about seducing 16
the Israelites into disloyalty to the LORD that day at Peor, so that the plague struck the community of the LORD. Now kill every male dependant, 17 and kill every woman who has had intercourse with a man, but spare for 18 yourselves every woman among them who has not had intercourse. You 19 yourselves, every one of you who has taken life and every one who has touched the dead, must remain outside the camp for seven days. Purify 20 yourselves and your captives on the third day and on the seventh day, and purify also every piece of clothing, every article made of skin, everything woven of goat's hair, and everything made of wood.'

Eleazar the priest said to the soldiers returning from battle, 'This is a 21 law and statute which the LORD has ordained through Moses. Anything 22-23 which will stand fire, whether gold, silver, copper, iron, tin, or lead, you shall pass through fire and then it will be clean. Other things shall be purified by the water of ritual purification; whatever cannot stand fire shall be passed through the water. On the seventh day you shall wash your 24 clothes, and then be clean; after this you may re-enter the camp.'

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'Count all that has been captured, 25 26 man or beast, you and Eleazar the priest and the heads of families in the community, and divide it equally between the fighting men who went on the campaign and the whole community. You shall levy a tax for the LORD: from the combatants it shall be one out of every five hundred, whether men, cattle, asses, or sheep, to be taken out of their share and given to Eleazar the priest as a contribution for the LORD. Out of the share of the Israelites it shall be one out of every fifty taken, whether man or beast, cattle, asses, or sheep, to be given to the Levites who are in charge of the LORD's Tabernacle.'

Moses and Eleazar the priest did as the LORD had commanded Moses. These were the spoils, over and above the plunder taken by the fighting men: six hundred and seventy-five thousand sheep, seventy-two thousand cattle, sixty-one thousand asses; and of persons, thirty-two thousand girls who had had no intercourse with a man.

The half-share of those who took part in the campaign was thus three hundred and thirty-seven thousand five hundred sheep, the tax for the LORD from these being six hundred and seventy-five; thirty-six thousand cattle, the tax being seventy-two; thirty thousand five hundred asses, the tax being sixty-one; and sixteen thousand persons, the tax being thirty-two. Moses gave Eleazar the priest the tax levied for the LORD, as the LORD had commanded him.

The share of the community, being the half-share for the Israelites which Moses divided off from that of the combatants, was three hundred and thirty-seven thousand five hundred sheep, thirty-six thousand cattle, thirty thousand five hundred asses, and sixteen thousand persons. Moses took one out of every fifty, whether man or beast, from the half-share of the Israelites, and gave it to the Levites who were in charge of the LORD's Tabernacle, as the LORD had commanded him.

Then the officers who had commanded the forces on the campaign, the commanders of units of a thousand and of a hundred, came to Moses and said to him, 'Sir, we have checked the roll of the fighting men who were under our command, and not one of them is missing. So we have brought the gold ornaments, the armlets, bracelets, finger-rings, earrings, and pendants that each man has found, to offer them before the LORD as a ransom for our lives.'

Moses and Eleazar the priest received this gold from the commanders of units of a thousand and of a hundred, all of it craftsman's work, and the gold thus levied as a contribution to the LORD weighed sixteen thousand seven hundred and fifty shekels; for every man in the army had taken plunder. So Moses and Eleazar the priest received the gold from the commanders of units of a thousand and of a hundred, and brought it to the Tent of the Presence that the LORD might remember Israel.

Now the Reubenites and the Gadites had large and very numerous flocks, and when they saw that the land of Jazer and Gilead was good grazing country, they came and said to Moses and Eleazar the priest and to the leaders of the community, 'Ataroth, Dibon, Jazer, Nimrah, Heshbon, Elealeh, Sebam, Nebo, and Beon, the region which the LORD has subdued before the advance of the Israelite community, is grazing country, and our flocks are our livelihood. If', they said, 'we have found favour with you, 5

 sir, then let this country be given to us as our possession, and do not make 6 us cross the Jordan.' Moses replied to the Gadites and the Reubenites, 7
 'Are your kinsmen to go into battle while you stay here? How dare you dis- 8 courage the Israelites from crossing over to the land which the LORD has 9 given them? This is what your fathers did when I sent them out from 10 11 Kadesh-barnea to view the land. They went up as far as the gorge of 12
 Eshcol and viewed the land, and on their return so discouraged the Israel- 13
 ites that they would not enter the land which the LORD had given them. 14
 The LORD became angry that day, and he solemnly swore: "Because they 15 have not followed me with their whole heart, none of the men who came 16 out of Egypt, from twenty years old and upwards, shall see the land which 17
 I promised on oath to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob." This meant all except 18
 Caleb son of Jephunneh the Kenizzite and Joshua son of Nun, who fol- 19
 lowed the LORD with their whole heart. The LORD became angry with 20 Israel, and he made them wander in the wilderness for forty years until 21 that whole generation was dead which had done what was wrong in his 22 eyes. And now you are following in your fathers' footsteps, a fresh brood 23 of sinful men to fire the LORD's anger once more against Israel; for if you 24 refuse to follow him, he will again abandon this whole people in the wilderness and you will be the cause of their destruction.'

Presently they came forward with this offer: 'We will build folds for our 16 sheep here and towns for our dependants. Then we can be drafted as a 17 fighting force to go at the head of the Israelites until we have brought them 18 to the lands that will be theirs. Meanwhile our dependants can live in the 19 walled towns, safe from the people of the country. We will not return 20 until every Israelite is settled in possession of his patrimony; we will claim 21 no share of the land with them over the Jordan and beyond, because our 22 patrimony has already been allotted to us east of the Jordan.' Moses 23 answered, 'If you stand by your promise, if in the presence of the LORD 24 you are drafted for battle, and the whole draft crosses the Jordan in front of 25
 the LORD and remains there until the LORD has driven out his enemies, and 26
 the land falls before him, then you may come back and be quit of your 27 obligation to the LORD and to Israel; and this land shall be your possession 28 in the sight of the LORD. But I warn you, if you fail to do all this, you will 29 have sinned against the LORD, and your sin will find you out. So build 30 towns for your dependants and folds for your sheep; but carry out your promise.'

The Gadites and Reubenites answered Moses, 'Sir, we are your servants 25 and will do as you command. Our dependants and wives, our flocks and 26 all our beasts shall remain here in the cities of Gilead; but we, all who have 27 been drafted for active service with the LORD, will cross the river and fight, according to your command.'

Accordingly Moses gave these instructions to Eleazar the priest and 28
 Joshua son of Nun and to the heads of the families in the Israelite tribes: 29
 'If the Gadites and Reubenites, all who have been drafted for battle before 30
 the LORD, cross the Jordan with you, and if the land falls into your hands, then you shall give them Gilead for their possession. But if, thus drafted, they fail to cross with you, then they shall acquire land alongside you in 31 Canaan.' The Gadites and Reubenites said in response, 'Sir, the LORD

 32 has spoken, and we will obey. Once we have been drafted, we will cross over before the LORD into Canaan; then we shall have our patrimony here beyond the Jordan.'

33 So to the Gadites, the Reubenites, and half the tribe of Manasseh son of Joseph, Moses gave the kingdoms of Sihon king of the Amorites and Og king of Bashan, the whole land with its towns and the country round 35 them. The Gadites built Dibon, Ataroth, Aroer, Atroth-shophan, Jazer, 36 Jogbehah, Beth-nimrah, and Beth-haran, all of them walled towns with 37 folds for their sheep. The Reubenites built Heshbon, Elealeh, Kiriathaim, 38 Nebo, Baal-meon (whose name was changed), and Sibmah; these were the 39 names they gave to the towns they built. The sons of Machir son of Manasseh 40 invaded Gilead, took it and drove out the Amorite inhabitants; Moses then assigned Gilead to Machir son of Manasseh, and he made his home 41 there. Jair son of Manasseh attacked and took the tent-villages of Ham ^a 42 and called them Havvoth-jair. ^b Nobah attacked and took Kenath and its villages and gave it his own name, Nobah.

13 THESE ARE THE STAGES in the journey of the Israelites, when they were 2 led by Moses and Aaron in their tribal hosts out of Egypt. Moses recorded their starting-points stage by stage as the LORD commanded him. These are their stages from one starting-point to the next:

3 The Israelites left Rameses on the fifteenth day of the first month, the day after the Passover; they marched out defiantly in full view of all the 4 Egyptians, while the Egyptians were burying all the first-born struck down by the LORD as a judgement on their gods.

5 The Israelites left Rameses and encamped at Succoth.

6 They left Succoth and encamped at Etham on the edge of the wilderness.

7 They left Etham, turned back near Pi-hahiroth ^c on the east of Baalzephon, and encamped before Migdol.

8 They left Pi-hahiroth, passed through the Sea into the wilderness, marched for three days through the wilderness of Etham, and encamped at Marah.

9 They left Marah and came to Elim, where there were twelve springs of water and seventy palm-trees, and encamped there.

10 They left Elim and encamped by the Red Sea.

11 They left the Red Sea and encamped in the wilderness of Sin.

12 They left the wilderness of Sin and encamped at Dophkah.

13 They left Dophkah and encamped at Alush.

14 They left Alush and encamped at Rephidim, where there was no water for the people to drink.

15 They left Rephidim and encamped in the wilderness of Sinai.

16 They left the wilderness of Sinai and encamped at Kibroth-hattaavah.

17 They left Kibroth-hattaavah and encamped at Hazereth.

18 They left Hazereth and encamped at Rithmah.

 Moab by the Jordan near Jericho. Their camp beside the Jordan extended 49 from Beth-jeshimoth to Abel-shittim in the lowlands of Moab. In the 50 lowlands of Moab by the Jordan near Jericho the LORD spoke to Moses and 51 said, Speak to the Israelites in these words: You will soon be crossing the 52 Jordan to enter Canaan. You must drive out all its inhabitants as you 52 advance, destroy all their carved figures and their images of cast metal, 53 and lay their hill-shrines in ruins. You must take possession of the land 53 and settle there, for to you I have given the land to occupy. You must divide 54 it by lot among your families, each taking its own territory, the large family 54 a large territory and the small family a small. It shall be assigned to them 55 according to the fall of the lot, each tribe and family taking its own territory.
 If you do not drive out the inhabitants of the land as you advance, any 55 whom you leave in possession will become like a barbed hook in your eye and a thorn in your side. They shall continually dispute your possession of the land, and what I meant to do to them I will do to you.

1 2 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Give these instructions to the Israelites: Soon you will be entering Canaan. This is the land assigned to you as a perpetual patrimony, the land of Canaan thus defined by its frontiers. Your southern border shall start from the wilderness of Zin, where it marches with Edom, and run southwards from the end of the Dead Sea on its eastern side. It shall then turn from the south up the ascent of Akkrabbim and pass by Zin, and its southern limit shall be Kadesh-barnea. It shall proceed by Hazar-addar to Azmon and from Azmon turn towards the Torrent of Egypt, and its limit shall be the sea. Your western frontier shall be the Great Sea and the seaboard; this shall be your frontier to the west. This shall be your northern frontier: you shall draw a line from the Great Sea to Mount Hor and from Mount Hor to Lebo-hamath, and the limit of the frontier shall be Zedad. From there it shall run to Ziphron, and its limit shall be Hazar-enan; this shall be your frontier to the north. 10 11 To the east you shall draw a line from Hazar-enan to Shepham; it shall run down from Shepham to Riblah east of Ain, continuing until it strikes the ridge east of the sea of Kinnereth. The frontier shall then run down to the Jordan and its limit shall be the Dead Sea. The land defined by these frontiers shall be your land.

13 Moses gave these instructions to the Israelites: This is the land which you shall assign by lot, each taking your own territory; it is the land which 14 the LORD has ordered to be given to nine tribes and a half tribe. For the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh have already 15 occupied their territories, family by family. These two and a half tribes have received their territory here beyond the Jordan, east of Jericho, towards the sunrise.

16 17 The LORD spoke to Moses and said, These are the men who shall assign 18 the land for you: Eleazar the priest and Joshua son of Nun. You shall also 19 take one chief from each tribe to assign the land. These are their names:
 20 from the tribe of Judah: Caleb son of Jephunneh;
 21 from the tribe of Simeon: Samuel son of Ammihud;
 22 from the tribe of Benjamin: Elidad son of Kislou;
 23 from the tribe of Dan: the chief Bukki son of Jogli;
 24 and from the Josephites: from Manasseh, the chief Hanniel son of Ephod;
 25 from Ephraim, the chief Kemuel son of Shiphtan;
 26 from Zebulun: the chief Elizaphan son of Parnach;
 27 from Issachar: the chief Paltiel son of Azzan;
 28 from Asher: the chief Ahihud son of Shelomi;
 29 from Naphtali: the chief Pedahel son of Ammihud.
 These were the men whom the LORD appointed to assign the territories in the land of Canaan.

35 THE LORD SPOKE TO MOSES in the lowlands of Moab by the Jordan near 2 Jericho and said: Tell the Israelites to set aside towns in their patrimony as homes for the Levites, and give them also the common land surrounding the towns. They shall live in the towns, and keep their beasts, their herds, 3 and all their livestock on the common land. The land of the towns which 4 you give the Levites shall extend from the centre of the town outwards for a thousand cubits in each direction. Starting from the town the eastern 5 boundary shall measure two thousand cubits, the southern two thousand, the western two thousand, and the northern two thousand, with the town in the centre. They shall have this as the common land adjoining their towns.

When you give the Levites their towns, six of them shall be cities of 6 refuge, in which the homicide may take sanctuary; and you shall give them forty-two other towns. The total number of towns to be given to the 7 Levites, each with its common land, is forty-eight. When you set aside 8 these towns out of the territory of the Israelites, you shall allot more from the larger tribe and less from the smaller; each tribe shall give towns to the Levites in proportion to the patrimony assigned to it.

The LORD spoke to Moses and said, Speak to the Israelites in these 9 10 words: You are crossing the Jordan to the land of Canaan. You shall 11 designate certain cities to be places of refuge, in which the homicide who has killed a man by accident may take sanctuary. These cities shall be 12 places of refuge from the vengeance of the dead man's next-of-kin, so that the homicide shall not be put to death without standing his trial before the community. The cities appointed as places of refuge shall be six in 13 number, three east of the Jordan and three in Canaan. These six cities 14 15 shall be places of refuge, so that any man who has taken life inadvertently, whether he be Israelite, resident alien, or temporary settler, may take sanctuary in one of them.

If the man strikes his victim with anything made of iron and he dies, 16
then he is a murderer: the murderer must be put to death. If a man has a 17 stone in his hand capable of causing death and strikes another man and he dies, he is a murderer: the murderer must be put to death. If a man has a 18 wooden thing in his hand capable of causing death, and strikes another man and he dies, he is a murderer: the murderer must be put to death. The dead 19 man's next-of-kin shall put the murderer to death; he shall put him to death because he had attacked his victim. If the homicide sets upon a man openly 20 of malice aforethought or aims a missile at him of set purpose and he dies, or if in enmity he falls upon him with his bare hands and he dies, then 21 the assailant must be put to death; he is a murderer. His next-of-kin shall put the murderer to death because he had attacked his victim.

If he attacks a man on the spur of the moment, not being his enemy, or 22
hurls a missile at him not of set purpose, or if without looking he throws a 23 stone capable of causing death and it hits a man, then if the man dies, provided he was not the man's enemy and was not harming him of set purpose, the community shall judge between the striker and the next-of- 24 kin according to these rules. The community shall protect the homicide 25 from the vengeance of the kinsman and take him back to the city of refuge where he had taken sanctuary. He must stay there till the death of the duly anointed high priest. If the homicide ever goes beyond the boundaries of 26 the city where he has taken sanctuary, and the next-of-kin finds him outside 27

28 and kills him, then the next-of-kin shall not be guilty of murder. The homicide must remain in the city of refuge till the death of the high priest ; 29 after the death of the high priest he may go back to his property. These shall be legal precedents for you for all time wherever you live.

30 The homicide shall be put to death as a murderer only on the testimony of witnesses; the testimony of a single witness shall not be enough to bring 31 him to his death. You shall not accept payment for the life of a homicide 32 guilty of a capital offence; he must be put to death. You shall not accept a payment from a man who has taken sanctuary in a city of refuge, allowing 33 him to go back before the death of the high priest and live at large. You shall not defile your land by bloodshed. Blood defiles the land, and expiation cannot be made on behalf of the land for blood shed on it except by the 34 blood of the man that shed it. You shall not make the land which you inhabit unclean, the land in which I dwell; for I, the LORD, dwell among the Israelites.

36 THE HEADS OF THE FATHERS' FAMILIES OF GILEAD son of Machir, son of Manasseh, one of the families of the sons of Joseph, approached Moses and the chiefs, heads of families in Israel, and addressed them.
2 'Sir,' they said, 'the LORD commanded you to distribute the land by lot to the Israelites, and you were also commanded to give the patrimony of our 3 brother Zelophehad to his daughters. Now if any of them shall be married to a husband from another Israelite tribe, her patrimony will be lost to the patrimony of our fathers and be added to that of the tribe into which she is 4 married, and so part of our allotted patrimony will be lost. Then, when the jubilee year comes round in Israel, her patrimony would be added to the patrimony of the tribe into which she is married, and it would be permanently lost to the patrimony of our fathers' tribe.'

5 So Moses, instructed by the LORD, gave the Israelites this ruling: 'The 6 tribe of the sons of Joseph is right. This is the LORD's command for the daughters of Zelophehad: They may marry whom they please, but only 7 within a family of their father's tribe. No patrimony in Israel shall pass from 8 tribe to tribe, but every Israelite shall retain his father's patrimony. Any woman of an Israelite tribe who is an heiress may marry a man from any family in her father's tribe. Thus the Israelites shall retain each one the 9 patrimony of his forefathers. No patrimony shall pass from one tribe to another, but every tribe in Israel shall retain its own patrimony.'

10 The daughters of Zelophehad acted in accordance with the LORD's 11 command to Moses; Mahlah, Tirzah, Hoglah, Milcah and Noah, the 12 daughters of Zelophehad, married sons of their father's brothers. They married within the families of the sons of Manasseh son of Joseph, and their patrimony remained with the tribe of their father's family.

13 These are the commandments and the decrees which the LORD issued to the Israelites through Moses in the lowlands of Moab by the Jordan near Jericho.

DEUTERONOMY

Primary charge of Moses to the people

THESE ARE THE WORDS THAT MOSES SPOKE to all 1
Israel in Transjordan, in the wilderness, that is to say in the Arabah opposite Suph, between Paran on the one side and Tophel, Laban, Hazereth, and Dizahab on the other. (The journey from Horeb through the 2 hill-country of Seir to Kadesh-barnea takes eleven days.)

On the first day of the eleventh month of the fortieth year, after the 3-4 defeat of Sihon king of the Amorites who ruled in Heshbon, and the defeat at Edrei of Og king of Bashan who ruled in Ashtaroth, Moses repeated to the Israelites all the commands that the LORD had given him for them. It 5 was in Transjordan, in Moab, that Moses resolved to promulgate this law.
These were his words: The LORD our God spoke to us at Horeb and said, 6
'You have stayed on this mountain long enough; go now, make for the 7 hill-country of the Amorites, and pass on to all their neighbours in the Arabah, in the hill-country, in the Shephelah, in the Negeb, and on the coast, in short, all Canaan and the Lebanon as far as the great river, the 8 Euphrates. I have laid the land open before you; go in and occupy it, the land which the LORD swore to give to your forefathers Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and to their descendants after them.'

At that time I said to you, 'You are a burden too heavy for me to carry 9 unaided. The LORD your God has increased you so that today you are as 10 numerous as the stars in the sky. May the LORD the God of your fathers 11 increase your number a thousand times and may he bless you as he promised. How can I bear unaided the heavy burden you are to me, and put 12 up with your complaints? Choose men of wisdom, understanding, and 13 repute for each of your tribes, and I will set them in authority over you.'
Your answer was, 'What you have told us to do is right.' So I took men of 14 15 wisdom and repute and set them in authority over you, some as commanders over units of a thousand, of a hundred, of fifty or of ten, and others as officers, for each of your tribes. And at that time I gave your judges this 16 command: 'You are to hear the cases that arise among your kinsmen and judge fairly between man and man, whether fellow-countryman or resident 17 alien. You must be impartial and listen to high and low alike: have no fear of man, for judgement belongs to God. If any case is too difficult for you, bring it before me and I will hear it.' At the same time I instructed you in 18 all these duties.

Then we set out from Horeb, in obedience to the orders of the LORD 19
our God, and marched through that vast and terrible wilderness, as you found it to be, on the way to the hill-country of the Amorites; and so we came to Kadesh-barnea. Then I said to you, 'You have reached the 20 21 hill-country of the Amorites which the LORD our God is giving us. The LORD your God has indeed now laid the land open before you. Go forward and occupy it in fulfilment of the promise which the LORD the God of your 22 fathers made you; do not be discouraged or afraid.' But you all came to me and said, 'Let us send men ahead to spy out the country and report back 23 to us about the route we should take and the cities we shall find.' I approved 24 this plan and picked twelve of you, one from each tribe. They set out and made their way up into the hill-country as far as the gorge of Eshcol, 25 which they explored. They took samples of the fruit of the country and brought them back to us, and made their report: 'It is a rich land that the LORD our God is giving us.'

26 But you refused to go up and rebelled against the command of the LORD 27 your God. You muttered treason in your tents and said, 'It was because the LORD hated us that he brought us out of Egypt to hand us over to the 28 Amorites to be wiped out. What shall we find up there? Our kinsmen have discouraged us by their report of a people bigger and taller than we are, and of great cities with fortifications towering to the sky. And they told us they saw there the descendants of the Anakim.'^a 29 Then I said to you, 'You must not dread them nor be afraid of them.

30 The LORD your God who goes at your head will fight for you and he will 31 do again what you saw him do for you in Egypt and in the wilderness. You saw there how the LORD your God carried you all the way to this place, 32 as a father carries his son.' In spite of this you did not trust the LORD your 33 God, who went ahead on the journey to find a place for your camp. He went in fire by night to show you the way you should take, and in a cloud by day.

34 When the LORD heard your complaints, he was indignant and solemnly
35 swore: 'Not one of these men, this wicked generation, shall see the rich 36 land which I swore to give your forefathers, except Caleb son of Jephunneh.
He shall see it, and to him and his descendants I will give the land on which 37 he has set foot, because he followed the LORD with his whole heart.' On your account the LORD was angry with me also and said, 'You yourself 38 shall never enter it, but Joshua son of Nun, who is in attendance on you, shall enter it. Encourage him, for he shall put Israel in possession of that 39 land. Your dependants who, you thought, would become spoils of war, and your children who do not yet know good and evil, they shall enter; 40 I will give it to them, and they shall occupy it. You must turn back and set out for the wilderness by way of the Red Sea.'^b

41 You answered me, 'We have sinned against the LORD; we will now go up and attack just as the LORD our God commanded us.' And each of you fastened on his weapons, thinking it an easy thing to invade the hill-42 country. But the LORD said to me, 'Tell them not to go up and not to fight; 43 for I will not be with them, and their enemies will defeat them.' And I told you this, but you did not listen; you rebelled against the LORD's command 44 and defiantly went up to the hill-country. The Amorites living in the hills came out against you and like bees they chased you; they crushed you at 45 Hormah in Seir. Then you came back and wept before the LORD, but he would not hear you or listen to you. That is why you remained in Kadesh 46 as long as you did.

^a the descendants . . . Anakim: or the tall men.

^b Or the Sea of Reeds.

So we turned and set out for the wilderness by way of the Red Sea as 2
the LORD had told me we must do, and we spent many days marching round the hill-country of Seir. Then the LORD said to me, 'You have been 2 3 long enough marching round these hills; turn towards the north. And give 4 the people this charge: "You are about to go through the territory of your kinsmen the descendants of Esau who live in Seir. Although they are 5 afraid of you, be on your guard and do not provoke them; for I shall not give you any of their land, not so much as a foot's-breadth: I have given 6 the hill-country of Seir to Esau as a possession. You may purchase food from them for silver, and eat it, and you may buy^a water to drink.'" The 7 LORD your God has blessed you in everything you have undertaken; he has watched your journey through this great wilderness; these forty years
the LORD your God has been with you and you have gone short of nothing.
So we went on past our kinsmen, the descendants of Esau who live in Seir, 8 and along the road of the Arabah which comes from Elath and Eziongeber, and we turned and followed the road to the wilderness of Moab.
There the LORD said to me, 'Do not harass the Moabites nor provoke them 9 to battle, for I will not give you any of their land as a possession. I have given Ar to the descendants of Lot as a possession.' (The Emim once lived 10 there—a great and numerous people, as tall as the Anakim. The Rephaim also were reckoned as Anakim; but the Moabites called them Emim. The 12 Horites lived in Seir at one time, but the descendants of Esau occupied their territory: they destroyed them as they advanced and then settled in the land instead of them, just as Israel did in their own territory which the LORD gave them.) 'Come now, cross the gorge of the Zared.' So we went across. 13
The journey from Kadesh-barnea to the crossing of the Zared took us 14 thirty-eight years, until the whole generation of fighting men had passed away as the LORD had sworn that they would. The LORD's hand was raised 15 against them, and he rooted them out of the camp to the last man.

When the last of the fighting men among the people had died, the LORD 16 17 spoke to me, 'Today', he said, 'you are to cross by Ar^b which lies on the 18 frontier of Moab, and when you reach the territory of the Ammonites, you 19 must not harass them or provoke them to battle, for I will not give you any Ammonite land as a possession; I have assigned it to the descendants of Lot.' (This also is reckoned as the territory of the Rephaim, who lived there 20 at one time; but the Ammonites called them Zamzummim. They were a great and numerous people, as tall as the Anakim, but the LORD destroyed 21 them as the Ammonites advanced and occupied their territory instead of them, just as he had done for the descendants of Esau who lived in Seir. As 22 they advanced, he destroyed the Horites so that they occupied their territory and took possession instead of them: so it is to this day. It was 23 Caphtorites from Caphtor who destroyed the Avvim who lived in the hamlets near Gaza, and settled in the land instead of them.) 'Come, set out 24 on your journey and cross the gorge of the Arnon, for I have put Sihon the Amorite, king of Heshbon, and his territory into your hands. Begin to ^a Or dig for.^b by Ar: or the gully.

25 occupy it and provoke him to battle. Today I will begin to put the fear and dread of you upon all the peoples under heaven; if they so much as hear a rumour of you, they will quake and tremble before you.'

26 Then I sent messengers from the wilderness of Kedemoth to Sihon king 27 of Heshbon with these peaceful overtures: 'Grant us passage through your 28 country by the highway: we will keep to the highway, trespassing neither 29 to right nor to left, and we will pay you the full price for the food we eat
30 and the water we drink. The descendants of Esau who live in Seir granted
31 us passage, and so did the Moabites who live in Ar. We will simply pass 32 through your land on foot, until we cross the Jordan to the land which 33 the LORD our God is giving us.' But Sihon king of Heshbon refused to 34 grant us passage; for the LORD your God had made him stubborn and 35 obstinate, in order that he and his land might become subject to you, as it 36 still is. So the LORD said to me, 'Come, I have begun to deliver Sihon and 37 his territory into your hands. Begin now to occupy his land.' Then Sihon
38 with all his people came out to meet us in battle at Jahaz, and the LORD
39 our God delivered him into our hands; we killed him with his sons and all 40 his people. We captured all his cities at that time and put to death everyone 41 in the cities, men, women, and dependants; we left no survivor. We took 42 the cattle as booty and plundered the cities we captured. From Aroer on 43 the edge of the gorge of the Arnon and the level land of the gorge, as far as 44 Gilead, no city walls were too lofty for us; the LORD our God laid them all 45 open to us. But you avoided the territory of the Ammonites, both the parts 46 along the gorge of the Jabbok and their cities in the hills, thus fulfilling 47 all that the LORD our God had commanded.

3 Next we turned and advanced along the road to Bashan. Og king of 2 Bashan, with all his people, came out against us at Edrei. The LORD said
3 to me, 'Do not be afraid of him, for I have delivered him into your hands, 4 with all his people and his land. Deal with him as you dealt with Sihon the 5 king of the Amorites who lived in Heshbon.' So the LORD our God also 6 delivered Og king of Bashan into our hands, with all his people. We 7 slaughtered them and left no survivor, and at the same time we captured 8 all his cities; there was not a single town that we did not take from them.
9 In all we took sixty cities, the whole region of Argob, the kingdom of Og
10 in Bashan; all these were fortified cities with high walls, gates, and bars, 11 apart from a great many open settlements. Thus we put to death all the 12 men, women, and dependants in every city, as we did to Sihon king of 13 Heshbon. All the cattle and the spoil from the cities we took as booty for 14 ourselves.

8 At that time we took from these two Amorite kings in Transjordan the 9 territory that runs from the gorge of the Arnon to Mount Hermon (the 10 mountain that the Sidonians call Sirion and the Amorites Senir), all 11 the cities of the tableland, and the whole of Gilead and Bashan as far as 12 Salcah and Edrei, cities in the kingdom of Og in Bashan. (Only Og king of 13 Bashan remained as the sole survivor of the Rephaim. His sarcophagus of 14 basalt^a was nearly fourteen feet long and six feet wide, and it may still be 15 seen in the Ammonite city of Rabbah.)

^a Or iron.

At that time, when we occupied this territory, I assigned to the Reubenites and Gadites the land beyond Aroer on the gorge of the Arnon and half the hill-country of Gilead with its towns. The rest of Gilead and the whole of Bashan the kingdom of Og, all the region of Argob, I assigned to half the tribe of Manasseh. (All Bashan used to be called the land of the Rephaim. Jair son of Manasseh took all the region of Argob as far as the Geshurite and Maacathite border. There are tent-villages in Bashan still called by his name, Havvoth-jair.^a) To Machir I assigned Gilead, and to the Reubenites and the Gadites I assigned land from Gilead to the gorge of the Arnon, that is to the middle of the gorge; and its territory ran ^{bc} to the gorge of the Jabbok, the Ammonite frontier, and included the Arabah, with the Jordan and adjacent land, from Kinnereth to the Sea of the Arabah, that is the Dead Sea, below the watershed of Pisgah on the east. At that time I gave you this command: 'The LORD your God has given you this land to occupy; let all your fighting men be drafted and cross at the head of their fellow-Israelites. Only your wives and dependants and your livestock—I know you have much livestock—shall stay in the towns I have given you. This you shall do until the LORD gives your kinsmen security as he has given it to you, and until they too occupy the land which the LORD your God is giving them on the other side of the Jordan; then you may return to the possession which I have given you, every man to his own.'

At that time also I gave Joshua this charge: 'You have seen with your own eyes all that the LORD your God has done to these two kings; he will do the same to all the kingdoms into which you will cross over. Do not be afraid of them, for the LORD your God himself will fight for you.'

At that same time I pleaded with the LORD, 'O Lord GOD, thou hast begun to show to thy servant thy greatness and thy strong hand: what god is there in heaven or on earth who can match thy works and mighty deeds? Let me cross over and see that rich land which lies beyond the Jordan, and the fine hill-country and the Lebanon.' But because of you the LORD brushed me aside and would not listen. 'Enough!' he answered. 'Say no more about this. Go to the top of Pisgah and look west and north, south and east; look well at what you see, for you shall not cross this river Jordan. Give Joshua his commission, encourage him and strengthen him; for he will lead this people across, and he will put them in possession of the land you see before you.'

So we remained in the valley opposite Beth-peor.

NOW, ISRAEL, LISTEN to the statutes and laws which I am teaching you, and obey them; then you will live, and go in and occupy the land which the LORD the God of your fathers is giving you. You must not add anything to my charge, nor take anything away from it. You must carry out all the commandments of the LORD your God which I lay upon you.

You saw with your own eyes what the LORD did at Baal-peor; the LORD your God destroyed among you every man who went over to the Baal of

4 5 Peor, but you who held fast to the LORD your God are all alive today. I have taught you statutes and laws, as the LORD my God commanded me; 6 these you must duly keep when you enter the land and occupy it. You must observe them carefully, and thereby you will display your wisdom and understanding to other peoples. When they hear about these statutes, they will say, 'What a wise and understanding people this great nation is!' 7 What great nation has a god^a close at hand as the LORD our God is close to us whenever we call to him? What great nation is there whose statutes and laws are just, as is all this law which I am setting before you today? But take good care: be on the watch not to forget the things that you have seen with your own eyes, and do not let them pass from your minds as long as you live, but teach them to your sons and to your sons' sons. You must never forget that day when you stood before the LORD your God at Horeb, and the LORD said to me, 'Assemble the people before me; I will make them hear my words and they shall learn to fear me all their lives on earth, 11 and they shall teach their sons to do so.' Then you came near and stood at the foot of the mountain. The mountain was ablaze with fire to the very 12 skies: there was darkness, cloud, and thick mist. When the LORD spoke to you from the fire you heard a voice speaking, but you saw no figure; there 13 was only a voice. He announced the terms of his covenant to you, bidding you observe the Ten Words,^b and he wrote them on two tablets of stone. 14 At that time the LORD charged me to teach you statutes and laws which you should observe in the land into which you are passing to occupy it.

15 On the day when the LORD spoke to you out of the fire on Horeb, you 16 saw no figure of any kind; so take good care not to fall into the degrading practice of making figures carved in relief, in the form of a man or a woman, 17 18 or of any animal on earth or bird that flies in the air, or of any reptile on the ground or fish in the waters under the earth. Nor must you raise your eyes 19 to the heavens and look up to the sun, the moon, and the stars, all the host of heaven, and be led on to bow down to them and worship them; the LORD your God assigned these for the worship of^c the various peoples under 20 heaven. But you are the people whom the LORD brought out of Egypt, from the smelting-furnace, and took for his own possession, as you are 21 to this day. The LORD was angry with me on your account and swore that I should not cross the Jordan nor enter the rich land which the LORD your 22 God is giving you for your possession. I shall die in this country; I shall not cross the Jordan, but you are about to cross and occupy that rich land. 23 Be careful not to forget the covenant which the LORD your God made with you, and do not make yourselves a carved figure of anything which the 24 LORD your God has forbidden. For the LORD your God is a devouring fire, a jealous god.

25 When you have children and grandchildren and grow old in the land, if you then fall into the degrading practice of making any kind of carved figure, doing what is wrong in the eyes of the LORD your God and provoking him to anger, I summon heaven and earth to witness against you this 26 day: you will soon vanish from the land which you are to occupy after crossing the Jordan. You will not live long in it; you will be swept away. The LORD will disperse you among the peoples, and you will be left few in number among the nations to which the LORD will lead you. There you will worship gods made by human hands out of wood and stone, gods that can neither see nor hear, neither eat nor smell. But if from there you seek the LORD your God, you will find him, if indeed you search with all your heart and soul. When you are in distress and all these things come upon you, you will in days to come turn back to the LORD your God and obey him. The LORD your God is a merciful god; he will never fail you nor destroy you, nor will he forget the covenant guaranteed by oath with your forefathers.

Search into days gone by, long before your time, beginning at the day when God created man on earth; search from one end of heaven to the other, and ask if any deed as mighty as this has been seen or heard. Did any people ever hear the voice of God speaking out of the fire, as you heard it, and remain alive? Or did ever a god attempt to come and take a nation for himself away from another nation, with a challenge, and with signs, portents, and wars, with a strong hand and an outstretched arm, and with great deeds of terror, as the LORD your God did for you in Egypt in the sight of you all? You have had sure proof that the LORD is God; there is no other. From heaven he let you hear his voice for your instruction, and on earth he let you see his great fire, and out of the fire you heard his words. Because he loved your fathers and chose their children after them, he in his own person brought you out of Egypt by his great strength, so that he might drive out before you nations greater and more powerful than you and bring you in to give you their land in possession as it is today. This day, then, be sure and take to heart that the LORD is God in heaven above and on earth below; there is no other. You shall keep his statutes and his commandments which I give you today; then all will be well with you and with your children after you, and you will live long in the land which the LORD your God is giving you for all time.

Then Moses set apart three cities in the east, in Transjordan, to be places of refuge for the homicide who kills a man without intent, with no previous enmity between them. If he takes sanctuary in one of these cities his life shall be safe. The cities were: Bezer-in-the-Wilderness on the tableland for the Reubenites, Ramoth in Gilead for the Gadites, and Golan in Bashan for the Manassites.

This is the law which Moses laid down for the Israelites. These are the precepts, the statutes, and the laws which Moses proclaimed to the Israelites, when they came out of Egypt and were in Transjordan in the valley opposite Beth-peor in the land of Sihon king of the Amorites who lived in Heshbon. Moses and the Israelites had defeated him when they came out of Egypt and had occupied his territory and the territory of Og king of Bashan, the two Amorite kings in the east, in Transjordan. The territory ran from Aroer on the gorge of the Arnon to Mount Sirion, that is Hermon; and all the Arabah on the east, in Transjordan, as far as the Sea of the Arabah below the watershed of Pisgah.

Moses summoned all Israel and said to them: Listen, O Israel, to the statutes and the laws which I proclaim in your hearing today. Learn them 2 and be careful to observe them. The LORD our God made a covenant with 3 us at Horeb. It was not with our forefathers that the LORD made this cove-

4 nant, but with us, all of us who are alive and are here this day. The LORD 5 spoke with you face to face on the mountain out of the fire. I stood between the LORD and you at that time to report the words of the LORD; for you were afraid of the fire and did not go up the mountain. And the LORD said:

6 I am the LORD your God who brought you out of Egypt, out of the land of slavery.

7 You shall have no other god^a to set against me.

8 You shall not make a carved image for yourself nor the likeness of anything in the heavens above, or on the earth below, or in the waters under the earth.

9 You shall not bow down to them or worship^b them; for I, the LORD your God, am a jealous god. I punish the children for the sins of the fathers to 10 the third and fourth generations of those who hate me. But I keep faith with thousands, with^c those who love me and keep my commandments.

11 You shall not make wrong use of the name of the LORD your God; the LORD will not leave unpunished the man who misuses his name.

12 Keep the sabbath day holy as the LORD your God commanded you.

13 14 You have six days to labour and do all your work. But the seventh day is a sabbath of the LORD your God; that day you shall not do any work, neither you, your son or your daughter, your slave or your slave-girl, your ox, your ass, or any of your cattle, nor the alien within your gates, so that your 15 slaves and slave-girls may rest as you do. Remember that you were slaves in Egypt and the LORD your God brought you out with a strong hand and an outstretched arm, and for that reason the LORD your God commanded you to keep the sabbath day.

16 Honour your father and your mother, as the LORD your God commanded you, so that you may live long, and that it may be well with you in the land which the LORD your God is giving you.

17 You shall not commit murder.

18 You shall not commit adultery.

19 You shall not steal.

20 You shall not give false evidence against your neighbour.

21 You shall not covet your neighbour's wife; you shall not set your heart on your neighbour's house, his land, his slave, his slave-girl, his ox, his ass, or on anything that belongs to him.

22 These Commandments the LORD spoke in a great voice to your whole assembly on the mountain out of the fire, the cloud, and the thick mist;
then he said no more. He wrote them on two tablets of stone and gave them 23 to me. When you heard the voice out of the darkness, while the mountain was ablaze with fire, all the heads of your tribes and the elders came to me 24 and said, 'The LORD our God has shown us his glory and his greatness, and we have heard his voice out of the fire: today we have seen that God 25 may speak with men and they may still live. Why should we now risk

^a Or gods.

^b Or or be led to worship . . .

death? for this great fire will devour us. If we hear the voice of the LORD our God again, we shall die. Is there any mortal man who has heard the voice of the living God speaking out of the fire, as we have, and has lived?
You shall go near and listen to all that the LORD our God says, and report to us all that the LORD our God has said to you; we will listen and obey.'

When the LORD heard these words which you spoke to me, he said, 'I have heard what this people has said to you; every word they have spoken is right. Would that they always had such a heart to fear me and to observe all my commandments, so that all might be well with them and their children for ever! Go, and tell them to return to their tents, but you yourself stand here beside me, and I will set forth to you all the commandments, the statutes and laws which you shall teach them to observe in the land which I am giving them to occupy.'

You shall be careful to do as the LORD your God has commanded you; do not turn from it to right or to left. You must conform to all the LORD your God commands you, if you would live and prosper and remain long in the land you are to occupy.

These are the commandments, statutes, and laws which the LORD your God commanded me to teach you to observe in the land into which you are passing to occupy it, a land flowing with milk and honey, so that you may fear the LORD your God and keep all his statutes and commandments which I am giving you, both you, your sons, and your descendants all your lives, and so that you may live long. If you listen, O Israel, and are careful to observe them, you will prosper and increase greatly as the LORD the God of your fathers promised you.

Hear, O Israel, the LORD^a is our God, one LORD, and you must love the LORD your God with all your heart and soul and strength. These commandments which I give you this day are to be kept in your heart; you shall repeat them to your sons, and speak of them indoors and out of doors, when you lie down and when you rise. Bind them as a sign on the hand and wear them as a phylactery on the forehead; write them up on the door-posts of your houses and on your gates.

The LORD your God will bring you into the land which he swore to your forefathers Abraham, Isaac and Jacob that he would give you, a land of great and fine cities which you did not build, houses full of good things which you did not provide, rock-hewn cisterns which you did not hew, and vineyards and olive-groves which you did not plant. When you eat your fill there, be careful not to forget the LORD who brought you out of Egypt, out of the land of slavery. You shall fear the LORD your God, serve him alone and take your oaths in his name. You must not follow other gods, gods of the nations that are around you; if you do, the LORD your God who is in your midst will be angry with you, and he will sweep you away off the face of the earth, for the LORD your God is a jealous god.

You must not challenge the LORD your God as you challenged him at Massah.^b You must diligently keep the commandments of the LORD your God as well as the precepts and statutes which he gave you. You must do what is right and good in the LORD's eyes so that all may go well with you,

^a See note on Exod. 3. 15.

^b That is Challenge.

and you may enter and occupy the rich land which the LORD promised by 19 oath to your forefathers; then you shall drive out all your enemies before you, as the LORD promised.

20 When your son asks you in time to come, 'What is the meaning of the 21 precepts, statutes, and laws which the LORD our God gave you?', you shall say to him, 'We were Pharaoh's slaves in Egypt, and the LORD brought us 22 out of Egypt with his strong hand, sending great disasters, signs, and portents against the Egyptians and against Pharaoh and all his family, as we 23 saw for ourselves. But he led us out from there to bring us into the land and 24 give it to us as he had promised to our forefathers. The LORD commanded us to observe all these statutes and to fear the LORD our God; it will be for 25 our own good at all times, and he will continue to preserve our lives. It will be counted to our credit if we keep all these commandments in the sight of the LORD our God, as he has bidden us.'

7 WHEN THE LORD YOUR GOD BRINGS YOU into the land which you are entering to occupy and drives out many nations before you—Hittites, 2 Gergashites, Amorites, Canaanites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites,
 3 seven nations more numerous and powerful than you—when the LORD your God delivers them into your power and you defeat them, you must put them to death. You must not make a treaty with them or spare them.
 4 You must not intermarry with them, neither giving your daughters to their sons nor taking their daughters for your sons; if you do, they will 5 draw your sons away from the LORD^a and make them worship other gods.
 Then the LORD will be angry with you and will quickly destroy you. But 6 this is what you must do to them: pull down their altars, break their sacred pillars, hack down their sacred poles and destroy their idols by fire, for you are a people holy to the LORD your God; the LORD your God chose you out of all nations on earth to be his special possession.

7 It was not because you were more numerous than any other nation that the LORD cared for you and chose you, for you were the smallest of all 8 nations; it was because the LORD loved you and stood by his oath to your forefathers, that he brought you out with his strong hand and redeemed you from the land of slavery, from the power of Pharaoh king of Egypt.
 9 Know then that the LORD your God is God, the faithful God; with those who love him and keep his commandments he keeps covenant and faith 10 for a thousand generations, but those who defy him and show their hatred for him he repays with destruction: he will not be slow to requite any who so hate him.

11 You are to observe these commandments, statutes, and laws which I give you this day, and keep them.

12 If you listen to these laws and are careful to observe them, then the LORD your God will observe the sworn covenant he made with your forefathers 13 and will keep faith with you. He will love you, bless you and cause you to increase. He will bless the fruit of your body and the fruit of your land, your corn and new wine and oil, the offspring of your herds, and of your lamb-14 ing flocks, in the land which he swore to your forefathers to give you. You

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. me.

shall be blessed above every other nation; neither among your people nor among your cattle shall there be impotent male or barren female. The LORD 15 will take away all sickness from you; he will not bring upon you any of the foul diseases of Egypt which you know so well, but will bring them upon all your enemies. You shall devour all the nations which the LORD your 16 God is giving over to you. Spare none of them, and do not worship their gods; that is the snare which awaits you.

You may say to yourselves, 'These nations outnumber us, how can we 17 drive them out?' But you need have no fear of them; only remember what 18 the LORD your God did to Pharaoh and to the whole of Egypt, the great 19 challenge which you yourselves witnessed, the signs and portents, the strong hand and the outstretched arm by which the LORD your God brought 20 you out. He will deal thus with all the nations of whom you are afraid. He will also spread panic among them until all who are left or have gone into 21 hiding perish before you. Be in no dread of them, for the LORD your God 22 is in your midst, a great and terrible god. He will drive out these nations before you little by little. You will not be able to exterminate them quickly, 23 for fear the wild beasts become too numerous for you. The LORD your God will deliver these nations over to you and will throw them into great panic 24 in the hour of their destruction. He will put their kings into your hands, and you shall wipe out their name from under heaven. When you destroy 25 them, no man will be able to withstand you. Their idols you shall destroy by fire; you must not covet the silver and gold on them and take it for 26 yourselves, or you will be ensnared by it; for these things are abominable to the LORD your God. You must not introduce any abominable idol into your houses and thus bring yourselves under solemn ban along with it. You shall hold it loathsome and abominable, for it is forbidden under the ban.

You must carefully observe everything that I command you this day so 8 that you may live and increase and may enter and occupy the land which the LORD promised to your forefathers upon oath. You must remember all 2 that road by which the LORD your God has led you these forty years in the wilderness to humble you, to test you and to discover whether or no it was in your heart to keep his commandments. He humbled you and made you 3 hungry; then he fed you on manna which neither you nor your fathers had known before, to teach you that man cannot live on bread alone but lives by every word that comes from the mouth of the LORD. The clothes on 4 your backs did not wear out nor did your feet swell all these forty years.
Take this lesson to heart: that the LORD your God was disciplining you as 5 a father disciplines his son; and keep the commandments of the LORD your 6 God, conforming to his ways and fearing him. For the LORD your God is 7 bringing you to a rich land, a land of streams, of springs and underground waters gushing out in hill and valley, a land of wheat and barley, of vines, 8 fig-trees, and pomegranates, a land of olives, oil, and honey. It is a land 9 where you will never live in poverty nor want for anything, a land whose stones are iron-ore and from whose hills you will dig copper. You will have 10 plenty to eat and will bless the LORD your God for the rich land that he has given you.

11 Take care not to forget the LORD your God and do not fail to keep his 12 commandments, laws, and statutes which I give you this day. When you 13 have plenty to eat and live in fine houses of your own building, when your herds and flocks increase, and your silver and gold and all your possessions 14 increase too, do not become proud and forget the LORD your God who 15 brought you out of Egypt, out of the land of slavery; he led you through the vast and terrible wilderness infested with poisonous snakes and scorpions, a thirsty, waterless land, where he caused water to flow from the hard rock;
16 he fed you in the wilderness on manna which your fathers did not know, to 17 humble you and test you, and in the end to make you prosper. Nor must you say to yourselves, 'My own strength and energy have gained me this 18 wealth', but remember the LORD your God; it is he that gives you strength to become prosperous, so fulfilling the covenant guaranteed by oath with your forefathers, as he is doing now.

19 If you forget the LORD your God and adhere to other gods, worshipping them and bowing down to them, I give you a solemn warning this day that 20 you will certainly be destroyed. You will be destroyed because of your disobedience to the LORD your God, as surely as were the nations whom the LORD destroyed at your coming.

9 Listen, O Israel; this day you will cross the Jordan to occupy the territory of nations greater and more powerful than you, and great cities 2 with walls towering to the sky. They are great and tall people, the descendants of the Anakim, of whom you know, for you have heard it said, 'Who 3 can withstand the sons of Anak?' Know then this day that it is the LORD your God himself who goes at your head as a devouring fire; he will subdue them and destroy them at your approach; you shall drive them out and overwhelm them, as he promised you.

4 When the LORD your God drives them out before you, do not say to yourselves, 'It is because of my own merit that the LORD has brought me in 5 to occupy this land.' It is not because of your merit or your integrity that you are entering their land to occupy it; it is because of the wickedness of these nations that the LORD your God is driving them out before you, and to fulfil the promise which the LORD made to your forefathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

6 Know then that it is not because of any merit of yours that the LORD your God is giving you this rich land to occupy; indeed, you are a stubborn 7 people. Remember and never forget, how you angered the LORD your God in the wilderness: from the day when you left Egypt until you came to this 8 place you have defied the LORD. In Horeb you roused the LORD's anger, 9 and the LORD in his wrath was on the point of destroying you. When I went up the mountain to receive the tablets of stone, the tablets of the covenant which the LORD made with you, I remained on the mountain 10 forty days and forty nights without food or drink. Then the LORD gave me the two tablets of stone written with the finger of God, and upon them were all the words the LORD spoke to you out of the fire, upon the mountain 11 on the day of the assembly. At the end of forty days and forty nights the 12 LORD gave me the two tablets of stone, the tablets of the covenant, and said to me, 'Make haste down from the mountain because your people whom you brought out of Egypt have done a disgraceful thing. They have already turned aside from the way which I told them to follow and have cast for themselves an image of metal.'

Then the LORD said to me, 'I have considered this people and I find them a stubborn people. Let me be, and I will destroy them and blot out their name from under heaven; and of you alone I will make a nation more powerful and numerous than they.' So I turned and went down the mountain, and it was ablaze; and I had the two tablets of the covenant in my hands. When I saw that you had sinned against the LORD your God and had cast for yourselves an image of a bull-calf, and had already turned aside from the way the LORD had told you to follow, I took the two tablets and flung them down and shattered them in the sight of you all. Then once again I lay prostrate before the LORD, forty days and forty nights without food or drink, on account of all the sins that you had committed, and because you had done what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD and provoked him to anger. I dreaded the LORD's anger and his wrath which threatened to destroy you; and once again the LORD listened to me. The LORD was greatly incensed with Aaron also and would have killed him; so I prayed for him as well at that same time. I took the calf, that sinful thing that you had made, and burnt it and pounded it, grinding it until it was as fine as dust; then I flung its dust into the torrent that flowed down the mountain. You also roused the LORD's anger at Taberah, and at Massah, and at Kibroth-hattaavah. Again, when the LORD sent you from Kadesh-barnea with orders to advance and occupy the land which he was giving you, you defied the LORD your God and did not trust him or obey him. You were defiant from the day that the LORD first knew you. Forty days and forty nights I lay prostrate before the LORD because he had threatened to destroy you, and I prayed to the LORD and said, 'O Lord GOD, do not destroy thy people, thy own possession, whom thou didst redeem by thy great power and bring out of Egypt by thy strong hand. Remember thy servants, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and overlook the stubbornness of this people, their wickedness and their sin; otherwise the people in the land out of which thou didst lead us will say, "It is because the LORD was not able to bring them into the land which he promised them and because he hated them, that he has led them out to kill them in the wilderness." But they are thy people, thy own possession, whom thou didst bring out by thy great strength and by thy outstretched arm.'

AT THAT TIME THE LORD SAID to me, 'Cut two tablets of stone like the first, and make also a wooden chest, an Ark. Come to me on the mountain, and I will write on the tablets the words that were on the first tablets which you broke in pieces, and you shall put them into the Ark.' So I made the Ark of acacia-wood and cut two tablets of stone like the first, and went up the mountain taking the tablets with me. Then in the same writing as before, the LORD wrote down the Ten Words^a which he had spoken to you out of the fire, upon the mountain on the day of the assembly, and the LORD gave them to me. I turned and came down the mountain, and I put the tablets in the Ark that I had made, as the LORD had commanded me, and there they have remained ever since.

6^a (The Israelites journeyed by stages from Beeroth-bene-jaakan to Moserah. There Aaron died and was buried; and his son Eleazar succeeded him in the priesthood. From there they came to Gudgodah and from Gudgodah to Jobathah, a land of many ravines. At that time the LORD set apart the tribe of Levi to carry the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD, to attend on the LORD and minister to him, and to give the blessing in his name, as they have done to this day. That is why the Levites have no holding or patrimony with their kinsmen; the LORD is their patrimony, as he promised them.)

10 I stayed on the mountain forty days and forty nights, as I did before, and once again the LORD listened to me; he consented not to destroy you. 11 The LORD said to me, 'Set out now at the head of the people so that they may enter and occupy the land which I swore to give to their forefathers.'

12 What then, O Israel, does the LORD your God ask of you? Only to fear the LORD your God, to conform to all his ways, to love him and to serve him with all your heart and soul. This you will do by keeping the commandments of the LORD and his statutes which I give you this day for your good. 14 To the LORD your God belong heaven itself, the highest heaven, the earth and everything in it; yet the LORD cared for your forefathers in his love for them and chose their descendants after them. Out of all nations you were 16 his chosen people as you are this day. So now you must circumcise the 17 foreskin of your hearts and not be stubborn any more, for the LORD your God is God of gods and Lord of lords, the great, mighty, and terrible God. 18 He is no respecter of persons and is not to be bribed; he secures justice for widows and orphans, and loves the alien who lives among you, giving 19 him food and clothing. You too must love the alien, for you once lived as 20 aliens in Egypt. You must fear the LORD your God, serve him, hold fast 21 to him and take your oaths in his name. He is your praise, your God who has done for you these great and terrible things which you have seen with 22 your own eyes. When your forefathers went down into Egypt they were only seventy strong, but now the LORD your God has made you countless as the stars in the sky.

11 You shall love the LORD your God and keep for all time the charge he 2 laid upon you, the statutes, the laws, and the commandments. This day you know the discipline of the LORD, though your children who have neither known nor experienced it do not; you know his greatness, his 3 strong hand and outstretched arm, the signs he worked and his acts in 4 Egypt against Pharaoh the king and his country, and all that he did to the Egyptian army, its horses and chariots, when he caused the waters of the Red Sea to flow over them as they pursued you. In this way the LORD 5 destroyed them, and so things remain to this day. You know what he did 6 for you in the wilderness as you journeyed to this place, and what he did to Dathan and Abiram sons of Eliab, son of Reuben, when the earth opened its mouth and swallowed them in the sight of all Israel, together with their households and their tents and every living thing in their company. With your own eyes you have seen the mighty work that the LORD did.

You shall observe all that I command you this day, so that you may have strength to enter and occupy the land into which you are crossing, and so that you may live long in the land which the LORD swore to your forefathers to give them and their descendants, a land flowing with milk and honey. The land which you are entering to occupy is not like the land of Egypt from which you have come, where, after sowing your seed, you irrigated it by foot like a vegetable garden. But the land into which you are crossing to occupy is a land of mountains and valleys watered by the rain of heaven. It is a land which the LORD your God tends^a and on which his eye rests from year's end to year's end. If you pay heed to the commandments which I give you this day, and love the LORD your God and serve him with all your heart and soul, then I will send rain for your land in season, both autumn and spring rains, and you will gather your corn and new wine and oil, and I will provide pasture in the fields for your cattle: you shall eat your fill. Take good care not to be led astray in your hearts nor to turn aside and serve other gods and prostrate yourselves to them, or the LORD will become angry with you: he will shut up the skies and there will be no rain, your ground will not yield its harvest, and you will soon vanish from the rich land which the LORD is giving you. You shall take these words of mine to heart and keep them in mind; you shall bind them as a sign on the hand and wear them as a phylactery on the forehead. Teach them to your children, and speak of them indoors and out of doors, when you lie down and when you rise. Write them up on the door-posts of your houses and on your gates. Then you will live long, you and your children, in the land which the LORD swore to your forefathers to give them, for as long as the heavens are above the earth.

If you diligently keep all these commandments that I now charge you to observe, by loving the LORD your God, by conforming to his ways and by holding fast to him, the LORD will drive out all these nations before you and you shall occupy the territory of nations greater and more powerful than you. Every place where you set the soles of your feet shall be yours. Your borders shall run from the wilderness to^b the Lebanon and from the River, the river Euphrates, to the western sea. No man will be able to withstand you; the LORD your God will put the fear and dread of you upon the whole land on which you set foot, as he promised you. Understand that this day I offer you the choice of a blessing and a curse. The blessing will come if you listen to the commandments of the LORD your God which I give you this day, and the curse if you do not listen to the commandments of the LORD your God but turn aside from the way that I command you this day and follow other gods whom you do not know.

When the LORD your God brings you into the land which you are entering to occupy, there on Mount Gerizim you shall pronounce the blessing and on Mount Ebal the curse. (These mountains are on the other side of the Jordan, close to Gilgal beside the terebinth of Moreh, beyond the road

^a which . . . tends: or whose soil the LORD your God has made firm.

- to the west which lies in the territory of the Canaanites of the Arabah.) 31 You are about to cross the Jordan to enter and occupy the land which the 32 LORD your God is giving you; you shall occupy it and settle in it, and you shall be careful to observe all the statutes and laws which I set before you this day.

God's laws delivered by Moses

- 12 THese are the statutes and laws that you shall be careful to observe in the land which the LORD the God of your fathers is giving 2 you to occupy as long as you live on earth. You shall demolish all the sanctuaries where the nations whose place you are taking worship their
 3 gods, on mountain-tops and hills and under every spreading tree. You shall pull down their altars and break their sacred pillars, burn their sacred poles and hack down the idols of their gods and thus blot out the name of them from that place.
 4 You shall not follow such practices in the worship of the LORD your God,
 5 but you shall resort to the place which the LORD your God will choose out of all your tribes to receive his Name that it may dwell there. There you shall come and bring your whole-offerings and sacrifices, your tithes and contributions, your vows and freewill offerings, and the first-born of your 6 herds and flocks. There you shall eat before the LORD your God; so you shall find joy in whatever you undertake, you and your families, because the LORD your God has blessed you.
 8 You shall not act as we act here today, each of us doing what he pleases,
 9 for till now you have not reached the place of rest, the patrimony which
 10 the LORD your God is giving you. You shall cross the Jordan and settle in the land which the LORD your God allots you as your patrimony; he will grant you peace from all your enemies on every side, and you will live in 11 security. Then you shall bring everything that I command you to the place which the LORD your God will choose as a dwelling for his Name—your whole-offerings and sacrifices, your tithes and contributions, and all the 12 choice gifts that you have vowed to the LORD. You shall rejoice before the LORD your God with your sons and daughters, your male and female slaves, and the Levites who live in your settlements because they have no holding or patrimony among you.
 13 See that you do not offer your whole-offerings in any place at random, 14 but offer them only at the place which the LORD will choose in one of your tribes, and there you must do all I command you. On the other hand, you may freely kill for food in all your settlements, as the LORD your God blesses you. Clean and unclean alike may eat it, as they would eat the meat of 16 gazelle or buck. But on no account must you eat the blood; pour it out on 17 the ground like water. In all your settlements you may not eat any of the tithe of your corn and new wine and oil, or any of the first-born of your cattle and sheep, or any of the gifts that you vow, or any of your freewill 18 offerings and contributions; but you shall eat it before the LORD your God in the place that the LORD your God will choose—you, your sons and daughters, your male and female slaves, and the Levites in your settlements; so you shall find joy before the LORD your God in all that you undertake. Be careful not to neglect the Levites in your land as long as you live. 19

When the LORD your God extends your boundaries, as he has promised you, and you say to yourselves, 'I would like to eat meat', because you have a craving for it, then you may freely eat it. If the place that the LORD your God will choose to receive his Name is far away, then you may slaughter a beast from the herds or flocks which the LORD has given you and freely eat it in your own settlements as I command you. You may eat it as you would the meat of gazelle or buck; both clean and unclean alike may eat it. But you must strictly refrain from eating the blood, because the blood is the life; you must not eat the life with the flesh. You must not eat it, you must pour it out on the ground like water. If you do not eat it, all will be well with you and your children after you; for you will be doing what is right in the eyes of the LORD. But such holy-gifts as you may have and the gifts you have vowed, you must bring to the place which the LORD will choose. You must present your whole-offerings, both the flesh and the blood, on the altar of the LORD your God; but of your shared-offerings you shall eat the flesh, while the blood is to be poured on the altar of the LORD your God. See that you listen and do all that I command you, and then it will go well with you and your children after you for ever; for you will be doing what is good and right in the eyes of the LORD your God. 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28

When the LORD your God exterminates, as you advance, the nations whose country you are entering to occupy, you shall take their place and settle in their land. After they have been destroyed, take care that you are not ensnared into their ways. Do not inquire about their gods and say, 'How do these nations worship their gods? I too will do the same.' You must not do for the LORD your God what they do, for all that they do for their gods is hateful and abominable to the LORD. As sacrifices for their gods they even burn their sons and their daughters. 29 30 31

See that you observe everything I command you: you must not add anything to it, nor take anything away from it. 32

When a prophet or dreamer appears among you and offers you a sign or a portent and calls on you to follow other gods whom you have not known and worship them, even if the sign or portent should come true, do not listen to the words of that prophet or that dreamer. God is testing you through him to discover whether you love the LORD your God with all your heart and soul. You must follow the LORD your God and fear him; you must keep his commandments and obey him, serve him and hold fast to him. That prophet or that dreamer shall be put to death, for he has preached rebellion against the LORD your God who brought you out of Egypt and redeemed you from that land of slavery; he has tried to lead you astray from the path which the LORD your God commanded you to take. You must rid yourselves of this wickedness. 13 2 3 4 5 6

If your brother, your father's son or your mother's son, or your son or daughter, or the wife of your bosom or your dearest friend should entice you secretly to go and worship other gods—gods whom neither you nor

7 your fathers have known, gods of the people round about you, near or far,
 8 at one end of the land or the other—then you shall not consent or listen.
 9 You shall have no pity on him, you shall not spare him nor shield him, you shall put him to death; your own hand shall be the first to be raised against 10 him and then all the people shall follow. You shall stone him to death, because he tried to lead you astray from the LORD your God who brought 11 you out of Egypt, out of the land of slavery. All Israel shall hear of it and be afraid; never again will anything as wicked as this be done among you.
 12-13 When you hear that miscreants have appeared in any of the cities which the LORD your God is giving you to occupy, and have led its inhabitants astray by calling on them to serve other gods whom you have not known, 14 then you shall investigate the matter carefully. If, after diligent examination, the report proves to be true and it is shown that this abominable thing has 15 been done among you, you shall put the inhabitants of that city to the sword; you shall lay the city under solemn ban together with everything 16 in it. You shall gather all its goods into the square and burn both city and goods as a complete offering to the LORD your God; and it shall remain a 17 mound of ruins, never to be rebuilt. Let nothing out of all that has been laid under the ban be found in your possession, so that the LORD may turn from his anger and show you compassion; and in his compassion he will 18 increase you as he swore to your forefathers, provided that you obey the LORD your God and keep all his commandments which I give you this day, doing only what is right in the eyes of the LORD your God.

14 YOU ARE THE SONS OF THE LORD your God: you shall not gash your-
 2 selves nor shave your forelocks in mourning for the dead. You are a people holy to the LORD your God, and the LORD has chosen you out of all peoples on earth to be his special possession.
 3 4 You shall not eat any abominable thing. These are the animals you may 5 eat: ox, sheep, goat, buck, gazelle, roebuck, wild-goat, white-rumped deer, 6 long-horned antelope, and rock-goat. You may eat any animal which has 7 a parted foot or a cloven hoof and also chews the cud; those which only chew the cud or only have a parted or cloven hoof you may not eat. These are: the camel, the hare, and the rock-badger,^a because they chew the cud 8 but do not have cloven hoofs; you shall regard them as unclean; and the pig, because it has a cloven hoof but does not chew the cud, you shall regard as unclean. You shall not eat their flesh or even touch their dead 9 carcasses. Of creatures that live in water you may eat all those that have 10 fins and scales, but you may not eat any that have neither fins nor scales; 11 12 you shall regard them as unclean. You may eat all clean birds. These are the birds you may not eat: the griffon-vulture,^b the black vulture, the 13 14 bearded vulture,^c the kite, every kind of falcon, every kind of crow,^d 15 the desert-owl, the short-eared owl, the long-eared owl, every kind of 16 17 hawk, the tawny owl, the screech-owl, the little owl, the horned owl, the 18 osprey, the fisher-owl, the stork,^e every kind of cormorant, the hoopoe, and the bat.

^a Or rock-rabbit.^b Or eagle.^c Or ossifrage.^d Or raven^e Or heron.

All teeming winged creatures you shall regard as unclean; they may not be eaten. You may eat every clean insect. 19 20

You shall not eat anything that has died a natural death. You shall give it to the aliens who live in your settlements, and they may eat it, or you may sell it to a foreigner; for you are a people holy to the LORD your God. 21

You shall not boil a kid in its mother's milk.

Year by year you shall set aside a tithe of all the produce of your seed, of everything that grows on the land. You shall eat it in the presence of the LORD your God in the place which he will choose as a dwelling for his Name—the tithe of your corn and new wine and oil, and the first-born of your cattle and sheep, so that for all time you may learn to fear the LORD your God. When the LORD your God has blessed you with prosperity, and the place which he will choose to receive his Name is far from you and the journey too great for you to be able to carry your tithe, then you may exchange it for silver. You shall tie up the silver and take it with you to the place which the LORD your God will choose. There you shall spend it as you will on cattle or sheep, wine or strong drink, or whatever you desire;
you shall consume it there with rejoicing, both you and your family, in the presence of the LORD your God. You must not neglect the Levites who live in your settlements; for they have no holding or patrimony among you. 22 23 24 25 26 27

At the end of every third year you shall bring out all the tithe of your produce for that year and leave it in your settlements so that the Levites, who have no holding or patrimony among you, and the aliens, orphans, and widows in your settlements may come and eat their fill. If you do this the LORD your God will bless you in everything to which you set your hand. 28 29

At the end of every seventh year you shall make a remission of debts. 15
This is how the remission shall be made: everyone who holds a pledge shall remit the pledge of anyone indebted to him. He shall not press a fellow-countryman for repayment, for the LORD's year of remission has been declared.^a You may press foreigners; but if it is a fellow-countryman that holds anything of yours, you must remit all claim upon it. There will never be any poor among you if only you obey the LORD your God by carefully keeping these commandments which I lay upon you this day; for the LORD your God will bless you with great prosperity in the land which he is giving you to occupy as your patrimony. When the LORD your God blesses you, as he promised, you will lend to men of many nations, but you yourselves will not borrow; you will rule many nations, but they will not rule you. 2 3 4-5 6

When one of your fellow-countrymen in any of your settlements in the land which the LORD your God is giving you becomes poor, do not be hard-hearted or close-fisted with your countryman in his need. Be open-handed towards him and lend him on pledge as much as he needs. See that you do not harbour iniquitous thoughts when you find that the seventh year, the year of remission, is near, and look askance at your needy countryman and give him nothing. If you do, he will appeal to the LORD against you, and you will be found guilty of sin. Give freely to him and do not begrudge him your bounty, because it is for this very bounty that the LORD 7 8 9 10

^a Or has come.

11 your God will bless you in everything that you do or undertake. The poor will always be with you in the land, and for that reason I command you to be open-handed with your countrymen, both poor and distressed, in your own land.

12 When a fellow-Hebrew, man or woman, sells himself to you as a slave, he shall serve you for six years and in the seventh year you shall set him
13 14 free. But when you set him free, do not let him go empty-handed. Give to him lavishly from your flock, from your threshing-floor and your winepress. Be generous to him, because the LORD your God has blessed you.
18 Do not take it amiss when you have to set him free, for his six years' service to you has been worth twice ^a the wage of a hired man. Then the LORD your 15 God will bless you in everything you do. Remember that you were slaves in Egypt and the LORD your God redeemed you; that is why I am giving you this command today.

16 If, however, a slave is content to be with you and says, 'I will not leave
17 you, I love you and your family', then you shall take an awl and pierce through his ear to the door, and he will be your slave for life. You shall treat a slave-girl in the same way.

19^b You shall dedicate to the LORD your God every male first-born of your herds and flocks. You shall not plough with the first-born of your cattle,
20 nor shall you shear the first-born of your sheep. Year by year you and your family shall eat them in the presence of the LORD your God, in the place
21 which the LORD will choose. If any animal is defective, if it is lame or blind, or has any other serious defect, you must not sacrifice it to the LORD your 22 God. Eat it in your settlements; both clean and unclean alike may eat it as they would the meat of gazelle or buck. But you must not eat the blood;
23 pour it out on the ground like water.

16 OBSERVE THE MONTH OF ABIB and keep the Passover to the LORD your God, for it was in that month that the LORD your God brought you out
2 of Egypt by night. You shall slaughter a lamb, a kid, or a calf as a Passover victim to the LORD your God in the place which he will choose as a dwelling
3 for his Name. You shall eat nothing leavened with it. For seven days you shall eat unleavened cakes, the bread of affliction. In urgent haste you came
4 out of Egypt, and thus as long as you live you shall commemorate the day of your coming out of Egypt. No leaven shall be seen in all your territory
5 for seven days, nor shall any of the flesh which you have slaughtered in the evening of the first day remain overnight till morning. You may not
6 slaughter the Passover victim in any of the settlements which the LORD your God is giving you, but only in the place which he will choose as a
7 dwelling for his Name; you shall slaughter the Passover victim in the evening as the sun goes down, the time of your coming out of Egypt. You
8 shall boil it and eat it in the place which the LORD your God will choose, and then next morning you shall turn and go to your tents. For six days
9 you shall eat unleavened cakes, and on the seventh day there shall be a closing ceremony in honour of the LORD your God; you shall do no work.

9 Seven weeks shall be counted: start counting the seven weeks from the time when the sickle is put to the standing corn; then you shall keep the pilgrim-feast of Weeks to the LORD your God and offer a freewill offering in proportion to the blessing that the LORD your God has given you. You shall rejoice before the LORD your God, with your sons and daughters, your male and female slaves, the Levites who live in your settlements, and the aliens, orphans, and widows among you. You shall rejoice in the place which the LORD your God will choose as a dwelling for his Name and remember that you were slaves in Egypt. You shall keep and observe all these statutes.

You shall keep the pilgrim-feast of Tabernacles^a for seven days, when you bring in the produce from your threshing-floor and winepress. You shall rejoice in your feast, with your sons and daughters, your male and female slaves, the Levites, aliens, orphans, and widows who live in your settlements. For seven days you shall keep this feast to the LORD your God in the place which he will choose, when the LORD your God gives you his blessing in all your harvest and in all your work; you shall keep the feast with joy.

Three times a year all your males shall come into the presence of the LORD your God in the place which he will choose: at the pilgrim-feasts of Unleavened Bread, of Weeks, and of Tabernacles. No one shall come into the presence of the LORD empty-handed. Each of you shall bring such a gift as he can in proportion to the blessing which the LORD your God has given you.

You shall appoint for yourselves judges and officers, tribe by tribe, in every settlement which the LORD your God is giving you, and they shall dispense true justice to the people. You shall not pervert the course of justice or show favour, nor shall you accept a bribe; for bribery makes the wise man blind and the just man give a crooked answer. Justice, and justice alone, you shall pursue, so that you may live and occupy the land which the LORD your God is giving you.

You shall not plant any kind of tree as a sacred pole beside the altar of the LORD your God which you shall build. You shall not set up a sacred pillar, for the LORD your God hates them.

You shall not sacrifice to the LORD your God a bull or sheep that has any defect or serious blemish, for that would be abominable to the LORD your God.

If so be that, in any one of the settlements which the LORD your God is giving you, a man or woman is found among you who does what is wrong in the eyes of the LORD your God, by breaking his covenant and going to worship other gods and prostrating himself before them or before the sun and moon and all the host of heaven—a thing that I have forbidden—then, if it is reported to you or you hear of it, make thorough inquiry. If the report proves to be true, and it is shown that this abominable thing has been done in Israel, then bring the man or woman who has done this wicked deed to the city gate and stone him to death. Sentence of death shall be carried out on the testimony of two or of three witnesses: no one shall be put to death on the testimony of a single witness. The first stones shall be thrown

by the witnesses and then all the people shall follow; thus you shall rid yourselves of this wickedness.

8 When the issue in any lawsuit is beyond your competence, whether it be a case of blood against blood, plea against plea, or blow against blow, that is disputed in your courts, then go up without delay to the place which the LORD your God will choose. There you must go to the levitical priests or to the judge then in office; seek their guidance, and they will pronounce the sentence. You shall act on the pronouncement which they make from the place which the LORD will choose. See that you carry out all their instructions. Act on the instruction which they give you, or on the precedent that they cite; do not swerve from what they tell you, either to right or to left. 12 Anyone who presumes to reject the decision either of the priest who ministers there to the LORD your God, or of the judge, shall die; thus you shall rid Israel of wickedness. Then all the people will hear of it and be afraid, and will never again show such presumption.

14 When you come into the land which the LORD your God is giving you, and occupy it and settle in it, and you then say, 'Let us appoint over us a king, as all the surrounding nations do', you shall appoint as king the man whom the LORD your God will choose. You shall appoint over you a man of your own race; you must not appoint a foreigner, one who is not of your own race. He shall not acquire many horses, nor, to add to his horses, shall he cause the people to go back to Egypt, for this is what the LORD said to you, 'You shall never go back that way.' He shall not acquire many wives and so be led astray; nor shall he acquire great quantities of silver and gold for himself. When he has ascended the throne of the kingdom, he shall make a copy of this law in a book at the dictation of the levitical priests. 19 He shall keep it by him and read from it all his life, so that he may learn to fear the LORD his God and keep all the words of this law and observe these statutes. In this way he shall not become prouder than his fellow-countrymen, nor shall he turn from these commandments to right or to left; then he and his sons will reign long over his kingdom in Israel.

18 The levitical priests, the whole tribe of Levi, shall have no holding or patrimony in Israel; they shall eat the food-offerings of the LORD, their 2 patrimony. They shall have no patrimony among their fellow-countrymen; the LORD is their patrimony, as he promised them.

3 This shall be the customary due of the priests from those of the people who offer sacrifice, whether a bull or a sheep: the shoulders, the cheeks, and the stomach shall be given to the priest. You shall give him also the firstfruits of your corn and new wine and oil, and the first fleeces at the shearing of your flocks. For it was he whom the LORD your God chose from all your tribes to attend on the LORD and to minister in the name of the LORD, both he and his sons for all time.

6 When a Levite comes from any settlement in Israel where he may be lodging to the place which the LORD will choose, if he comes in the eagerness of his heart and ministers in the name of the LORD his God, like all 7 his fellow-Levites who attend on the LORD there, he shall have an equal share of food with them, besides what he may inherit from his father's family.

When you come into the land which the LORD your God is giving you, 9 do not learn to imitate the abominable customs of those other nations. Let 10 no one be found among you who makes his son or daughter pass through fire, no augur or soothsayer or diviner or sorcerer, no one who casts spells 11 or traffics with ghosts and spirits, and no necromancer. Those who do 12 these things are abominable to the LORD, and it is because of these abominable practices that the LORD your God is driving them out before you. You 13 shall be whole-hearted in your service of the LORD your God.

These nations whose place you are taking listen to soothsayers and 14 augurs, but the LORD your God does not permit you to do this. The LORD 15 your God will raise up a prophet from among you like myself, and you shall listen to him. All this follows from your request to the LORD your 16 God on Horeb on the day of the assembly. There you said, 'Let us not hear again the voice of the LORD our God, nor see this great fire again, or we shall die.' Then the LORD said to me, 'What they have said is right. I will 17 18 raise up for them a prophet like you, one of their own race, and I will put my words into his mouth. He shall convey all my commands to them, and 19 if anyone does not listen to the words which he will speak in my name I will require satisfaction from him. But the prophet who presumes to utter in 20 my name what I have not commanded him or who speaks in the name of other gods—that prophet shall die.' If you ask yourselves, 'How shall we 21 recognize a word that the LORD has not uttered?', this is the answer: When 22
the word spoken by the prophet in the name of the LORD is not fulfilled and does not come true, it is not a word spoken by the LORD. The prophet has spoken presumptuously; do not hold him ^a in awe.

WHEN THE LORD YOUR GOD EXTERMINATES the nations whose land 19
he is giving you, and you take their place and settle in their cities and houses, you shall set apart three cities in the land which he is giving you 2 to occupy. Divide into three districts the territory which the LORD your 3
God is giving you as patrimony, and determine where each city shall lie.
These shall be places in which homicides may take sanctuary.

This is the kind of homicide who may take sanctuary there and save his 4 life: the man who strikes another without intent and with no previous enmity between them; for instance, the man who goes into a wood with 5 his mate to fell trees, and, when cutting a tree, he relaxes his grip on the axe,^b the head glances off the tree, hits the other man and kills him. The homicide may take sanctuary in any one of these cities, and his life shall be 6 safe. Otherwise, when the dead man's next-of-kin who had the duty of vengeance pursued him in the heat of passion, he might overtake him if the distance were great, and take his life, although the homicide was not liable to the death-penalty because there had been no previous enmity on his part. That is why I command you to set apart three cities. 7

If the LORD your God extends your boundaries, as he swore to your fore- 8 fathers, and gives you the whole land which he promised to them, because 9 you keep all the commandments that I am laying down today and carry them out by loving the LORD your God and by conforming to his ways for ^a Or it. ^b when . . . axe: or as he swings the axe to cut a tree.

10 all time, then you shall add three more cities of refuge to these three. Let no innocent blood be shed in the land which the LORD your God is giving you as your patrimony, or blood-guilt will fall on you.

11 When one man is the enemy of another, and he lies in wait for him, attacks him and strikes him a blow so that he dies, and then takes sanctuary in one of these cities, the elders of his own city shall send to fetch him; they shall hand him over to the next-of-kin, and he shall die. You shall show him no mercy, but shall rid Israel of the guilt of innocent blood; then all will be well with you.

14 Do not move your neighbour's boundary stone, fixed by the men of former times in the patrimony which you shall occupy in the land the LORD your God gives you for your possession.

15 A single witness may not give evidence against a man in the matter of any crime or sin which he commits: a charge must be established on the evidence of two or of three witnesses.

16 When a malicious witness comes forward to give false evidence against a man, and the two disputants stand before the LORD, before the priests and the judges then in office, if, after careful examination by the judges, he be proved to be a false witness giving false evidence against his fellow, you shall treat him as he intended to treat his fellow, and thus rid yourselves of this wickedness. The rest of the people when they hear of it will be afraid: never again will anything as wicked as this be done among you. You shall show no mercy: life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot.

10 WHEN YOU TAKE THE FIELD against an enemy and are faced by horses and chariots and an army greater than yours, do not be afraid of them; for the LORD your God, who brought you out of Egypt, will be with you.

2 When you are about to join battle, the priest shall come forward and address the army in these words: 'Hear, O Israel, this day you are joining battle with the enemy; do not lose heart, or be afraid, or give way to panic in face of them; for the LORD your God will go with you to fight your enemy for you and give you the victory.' Then the officers shall address the army in these words: 'Any man who has built a new house and has not dedicated it shall go back to his house; or he may die in battle and another man dedicate it. Any man who has planted a vineyard and has not begun to use it shall go back home; or he may die in battle and another man use it. Any man who has pledged himself to take a woman in marriage and has not taken her shall go back home; or he may die in battle and another man take her.' The officers shall further address the army: 'Any man who is afraid and has lost heart shall go back home; or his comrades will be discouraged as he is.' When these officers have finished addressing the army, commanders shall be appointed to lead it.

11 When you advance on a city to attack it, make an offer of peace. If the city accepts the offer and opens its gates to you, then all the people in it shall be put to forced labour and shall serve you. If it does not make peace with you but offers battle, you shall besiege it, and the LORD your God will deliver it into your hands. You shall put all its males to the sword, but you may take the women, the dependants, and the cattle for yourselves, and plunder everything else in the city. You may enjoy the use of the spoil of your enemies which the LORD your God gives you. That is what you shall do to cities at a great distance, as opposed to those which belong to nations near at hand. In the cities of these nations whose land the LORD your God is giving you as a patrimony, you shall not leave any creature alive. You shall annihilate them—Hittites, Amorites, Canaanites, Perizzites, Hivites, Jebusites—as the LORD your God commanded you, so that they may not teach you to imitate all the abominable things that they have done for their gods and so cause you to sin against the LORD your God.

When you are at war, and lay siege to a city for a long time in order to take it, do not destroy its trees by taking the axe to them, for they provide you with food; you shall not cut them down. The trees of the field are not men that you should besiege them. But you may destroy or cut down any trees that you know do not yield food, and use them in siege-works against the city that is at war with you, until it falls.

When a dead body is found lying in open country, in the land which the LORD your God is giving you to occupy, and it is not known who struck the blow, your elders and your judges shall come out and measure the distance to the surrounding towns to find which is nearest. The elders of that town shall take a heifer that has never been mated^a or worn a yoke, and bring it down to a ravine where there is a stream that never runs dry and the ground is never tilled or sown, and there in the ravine they shall break its neck. The priests, the sons of Levi, shall then come forward; for the LORD your God has chosen them to minister to him and to bless in the name of the LORD, and their voice shall be decisive in all cases of dispute and assault. Then all the elders of the town nearest to the dead body shall wash their hands over the heifer whose neck has been broken in the ravine. They shall solemnly declare: 'Our hands did not shed this blood, nor did we witness the bloodshed. Accept expiation, O LORD, for thy people Israel whom thou hast redeemed, and do not let the guilt of innocent blood rest upon thy people Israel: let this bloodshed be expiated on their behalf.' Thus, by doing what is right in the eyes of the LORD, you shall rid yourselves of the guilt of innocent blood.

When you wage war against your enemy and the LORD your God delivers them into your hands and you take some of them captive, then if you see a comely woman among the captives and take a liking to her, you may marry her. You shall bring her into your house, where she shall shave her head, pare her nails, and discard the clothes which she had when captured. Then she shall stay in your house and mourn for her father and mother for a full month. After that you may have intercourse with her; you shall be her husband and she your wife. But if you no longer find her pleasing, let her go free. You must not sell her, nor treat her harshly, since you have had your will with her.

When a man has two wives, one loved and the other unloved, if they both bear him sons, and the son of the unloved wife is the elder, then, when the day comes for him to divide his property among his sons, he shall not

17 treat the son of the loved wife as his first-born in contempt of his true first-born, the son of the unloved wife. He shall recognize the rights of his first-born, the son of the unloved wife, and give him a double share of all that he possesses; for he was the firstfruits of his manhood, and the right of the first-born is his.

18 When a man has a son who is disobedient and out of control, and will not obey his father or his mother, or pay attention when they punish
19 him, then his father and mother shall take hold of him and bring him out
20 to the elders of the town, at the town gate. They shall say to the elders of the town, 'This son of ours is disobedient and out of control; he will not 21 obey us, he is a wastrel and a drunkard.' Then all the men of the town shall stone him to death, and you will thereby rid yourselves of this wickedness. All Israel will hear of it and be afraid.

22 When a man is convicted of a capital offence and is put to death, you
23 shall hang him on a gibbet; but his body shall not remain on the gibbet overnight; you shall bury it on the same day, for a hanged man is offensive ^a in the sight of God. You shall not pollute the land which the LORD your God is giving you as your patrimony.

22 WHEN YOU SEE A FELLOW-COUNTRYMAN'S OX or sheep straying, do
2 not ignore it but take it back to him. If the owner is not a near neighbour and you do not know who he is, take the animal into your own house and
3 keep it with you until he claims it, and then give it back to him. Do the same with his ass or his cloak or anything else that your fellow-countryman has lost, if you find it. You may not ignore it.

4 When you see your fellow-countryman's ass or ox lying on the road, do not ignore it; you must help him to lift it to its feet again.

5 No woman shall wear an article of man's clothing, nor shall a man put on woman's dress; for those who do these things are abominable to the LORD your God.

6 When you come across a bird's nest by the road, in a tree or on the ground, with fledglings or eggs in it and the mother-bird on the nest, do not take both mother and young. Let the mother-bird go free, and take only the young; then you will prosper and live long.

8 When you build a new house, put a parapet along the roof, or you will bring the guilt of bloodshed on your house if anyone should fall from it.

9 You shall not sow your vineyard with a second crop, or the full yield will be forfeit, both the yield of the seed you sow and the fruit of the vineyard.

10 You shall not plough with an ox and an ass yoked together.

11 You shall not wear clothes woven with two kinds of yarn, wool and flax together.

12 You shall make twisted tassels on the four corners of your cloaks which you wrap round you.

13 When a man takes a wife and after having intercourse with her turns
14 against her and brings trumped-up charges against her, giving her a bad name and saying, 'I took this woman and slept with her and did not find proof of virginity in her', then the girl's father and mother shall take the proof of her virginity to the elders of the town, at the town gate. The girl's father shall say to the elders, 'I gave my daughter in marriage to this man, and he has turned against her. He has trumped up a charge and said, "I have not found proofs of virginity in your daughter." Here are the proofs.' They shall then spread the garment before the elders of the town. The elders shall take the man and punish him: they shall fine him a hundred pieces of silver because he has given a bad name to a virgin of Israel, and hand them to the girl's father. She shall be his wife: he is not free to divorce her all his life long. If, on the other hand, the accusation is true and no proof of the girl's virginity is found, then they shall bring her out to the door of her father's house and the men of her town shall stone her to death. She has committed an outrage in Israel by playing the prostitute in her father's house: you shall rid yourselves of this wickedness.

When a man is discovered lying with a married woman, they shall both die, the woman as well as the man who lay with her: you shall rid Israel of this wickedness.

When a virgin is pledged in marriage to a man and another man comes upon her in the town and lies with her, you shall bring both of them out to the gate of that town and stone them to death; the girl because, although in the town, she did not cry for help, and the man because he dishonoured another man's wife: you shall rid yourselves of this wickedness. If the man comes upon such a girl in the country and rapes her, then the man alone shall die because he lay with her. You shall do nothing to the girl, she has done nothing worthy of death: this deed is like that of a man who attacks another and murders him, for the man came upon her in the country and, though the girl cried for help, there was no one to rescue her.

When a man comes upon a virgin who is not pledged in marriage and forces her to lie with him, and they are discovered, then the man who lies with her shall give the girl's father fifty pieces of silver, and she shall be his wife because he has dishonoured her. He is not free to divorce her all his life long.

A man shall not take his father's wife: he shall not bring shame on his father.

No man whose testicles have been crushed or whose organ has been severed shall become a member of the assembly of the LORD.

No descendant of an irregular union, even down to the tenth generation, shall become a member of the assembly of the LORD.

No Ammonite or Moabite, even down to the tenth generation, shall become a member of the assembly of the LORD. They shall never become members of the assembly of the LORD, because they did not meet you with food and water on your way out of Egypt, and because they hired Balaam son of Beor from Pethor in Aram-naharaim^a to revile you. The LORD your God refused to listen to Balaam and turned his denunciation into a blessing, because the LORD your God loved you. You shall never seek their welfare or their good all your life long.

You shall not regard an Edomite as an abomination, for he is your own

^a That is Aram of Two Rivers.

8 kin; nor an Egyptian, for you were aliens in his land. The third generation of children born to them may become members of the assembly of the LORD.

9 When you are encamped against an enemy, you shall be careful to avoid 10 any foulness. When one of your number is unclean because of an emission of seed at night, he must go outside the camp; he may not come within it.
11 Towards evening he shall wash himself in water, and at sunset he may come 12 back into the camp. You shall have a sign outside the camp showing where 13 you can withdraw. With your equipment you will have a trowel, and when 14 you squat outside, you shall scrape a hole with it and then turn and cover your excrement. For the LORD your God goes about in your camp, to keep you safe and to hand over your enemies as you advance, and your camp must be kept holy for fear that he should see something indecent and go with you no further.

15 You shall not surrender to his master a slave who has taken refuge with 16 you. Let him stay with you anywhere he chooses in any one of your settlements, wherever suits him best; you shall not force him.

17 No Israelite woman shall become a temple-prostitute, and no Israelite man shall prostitute himself in this way.

18 You shall not allow a common prostitute's fee, or the pay of a male prostitute, to be brought into the house of the LORD your God in fulfilment of any vow, for both of them are abominable to the LORD your God.

19 You shall not charge interest on anything you lend to a fellow-countryman, money or food or anything else on which interest can be 20 charged. You may charge interest on a loan to a foreigner but not on a loan to a fellow-countryman, for then the LORD your God will bless you in all you undertake in the land which you are entering to occupy.

21 When you make a vow to the LORD your God, do not put off its fulfilment; otherwise the LORD your God will require satisfaction of you and you will 22 be guilty of sin. If you choose not to make a vow, you will not be guilty of 23 sin; but if you voluntarily make a vow to the LORD your God, mind what you say and do what you have promised.

24 When you go into another man's vineyard, you may eat as many grapes as you wish to satisfy your hunger, but you may not put any into your basket.

25 When you go into another man's standing corn, you may pluck ears to rub in your hands, but you may not put a sickle to his standing corn.

24 When a man has married a wife, but she does not win his favour because he finds something shameful in her, and he writes her a note of divorce, gives it to her and dismisses her; and suppose after leaving his house she goes off to become the wife of another man, and this next husband turns against her and writes her a note of divorce which he gives her and dismisses her, or dies after making her his wife—then in that case her first husband who dismissed her is not free to take her back to be his wife again after she has become for him unclean. This is abominable to the LORD; you must not bring sin upon the land which the LORD your God is giving you as your patrimony.

5 When a man is newly married, he shall not be liable for military service or any other public duty. He shall remain at home exempt from service for one year and enjoy the wife he has taken.

No man shall take millstones, or even the upper one alone, in pledge; that would be taking a life in pledge. 6

When a man is found to have kidnapped a fellow-countryman, an Israelite, and to have treated him harshly and sold him, he shall die: you shall rid yourselves of this wickedness. 7

Be careful how you act in all cases of malignant skin-disease; be careful to observe all that the levitical priests tell you; I gave them my commands which you must obey. Remember what the LORD your God did to Miriam, on your way out of Egypt. 8 9

When you make a loan to another man, do not enter his house to take a pledge from him. Wait outside, and the man whose creditor you are shall bring the pledge out to you. If he is a poor man, you shall not sleep in the cloak he has pledged. Give it back to him at sunset so that he may sleep in it and bless you; then it will be counted to your credit in the sight of the LORD your God. 10 11 12 13

You shall not keep back the wages of a man who is poor and needy, whether a fellow-countryman or an alien living in your country in one of your settlements. Pay him his wages on the same day before sunset, for he is poor and his heart is set on them: he may appeal to the LORD against you, and you will be guilty of sin. 14 15

Fathers shall not be put to death for their children, nor children for their fathers; a man shall be put to death only for his own sin. 16

You shall not deprive aliens and orphans of justice nor take a widow's cloak in pledge. Remember that you were slaves in Egypt and the LORD your God redeemed you from there; that is why I command you to do this. 17 18

When you reap the harvest in your field and forget a swathe, do not go back to pick it up; it shall be left for the alien, the orphan, and the widow, in order that the LORD your God may bless you in all that you undertake. 19

When you beat your olive-trees, do not strip them afterwards; what is left shall be for the alien, the orphan, and the widow. 20

When you gather the grapes from your vineyard, do not glean afterwards; what is left shall be for the alien, the orphan, and the widow. Remember that you were slaves in Egypt; that is why I command you to do this. 21 22

When two men go to law and present themselves for judgement, the judges shall try the case; they shall acquit the innocent and condemn the guilty. If the guilty man is sentenced to be flogged, the judge shall cause him to lie down and be beaten in his presence; the number of strokes shall correspond to the gravity of the offence. They may give him forty strokes, but not more; otherwise, if they go further and exceed this number, your fellow-countryman will have been publicly degraded. 23 24 25

You shall not muzzle an ox while it is treading out the corn. 4

When brothers live together and one of them dies without leaving a son, his widow shall not marry outside the family. Her husband's brother shall have intercourse with her; he shall take her in marriage and do his duty by her as her husband's brother. The first son she bears shall perpetuate the 5 6

7 dead brother's name so that it may not be blotted out from Israel. But if the man is unwilling to take his brother's wife, she shall go to the elders at the town gate and say, 'My husband's brother refuses to perpetuate his 8 brother's name in Israel; he will not do his duty by me.' At this the elders of the town shall summon him and reason with him. If he still stands his 9 ground and says, 'I will not take her', his brother's widow shall go up to him in the presence of the elders; she shall pull his sandal off his foot and spit in his face and declare: 'Thus we requite the man who will not build 10 up his brother's family.' His family shall be known in Israel as the House of the Unsandalled Man.

11 When two men are fighting and the wife of one of them comes near to drag her husband clear of his opponent, if she puts out her hand and catches hold of the man's genitals, you shall cut off her hand and show her 12 no mercy.

13 You shall not have unequal weights in your bag, one heavy, the other 14 light. You shall not have unequal measures in your house, one large, the 15 other small. You shall have true and correct weights and true and correct measures, so that you may live long in the land which the LORD your God 16 is giving you. All who commit these offences, all who deal dishonestly, are abominable to the LORD.

17 Remember what the Amalekites did to you on your way out of Egypt, 18 how they met you on the road when you were faint and weary and cut off your rear, which was lagging behind exhausted: they showed no fear of 19 God. When the LORD your God gives you peace from your enemies on every side, in the land which he is giving you to occupy as your patrimony, you shall not fail to blot out the memory of the Amalekites from under heaven.

26 WHEN YOU COME INTO THE LAND which the LORD your God is giving 2 you to occupy as your patrimony and settle in it, you shall take the firstfruits of all the produce of the soil, which you gather in from the land which the LORD your God is giving you, and put them in a basket. Then you shall go to the place which the LORD your God will choose as a dwelling for his 3 Name and come to the priest, whoever he shall be in those days. You shall say to him, 'I declare this day to the LORD your God that I have entered 4 the land which the LORD swore to our forefathers to give us.' The priest shall take the basket from your hand and set it down before the altar of the 5 LORD your God. Then you shall solemnly recite before the LORD your God:
'My father was a homeless^a Aramaean who went down to Egypt with a small company and lived there until they became a great, powerful, and 6 numerous nation. But the Egyptians ill-treated us, humiliated us and imposed cruel slavery upon us. Then we cried to the LORD the God of our 7 fathers for help, and he listened to us and saw our humiliation, our hardship and distress; and so the LORD brought us out of Egypt with a strong 8 hand and outstretched arm, with terrifying deeds, and with signs and portents. He brought us to this place and gave us this land, a land flowing 9 with milk and honey. And now I have brought the firstfruits of the soil 10 with milk and honey.

^a Or wandering.

which thou, O LORD, hast given me.' You shall then set the basket before the LORD your God and bow down in worship before him. You shall all rejoice, you and the Levites and the aliens living among you, for all the good things which the LORD your God has given to you and to your family. 11

When you have finished taking a tithe of your produce in the third year, the tithe-year, you shall give it to the Levites and to the aliens, the orphans, and the widows. They shall eat it in your settlements and be well fed. Then you shall declare before the LORD your God: 'I have rid my house of the tithe that was holy to thee and given it to the Levites, to the aliens, the orphans, and the widows, according to all the commandments which thou didst lay upon me. I have not broken or forgotten any of thy commandments. I have not eaten any of the tithe while in mourning, nor have I rid myself of it for unclean purposes, nor offered any of it to ^a the dead. I have obeyed the LORD my God: I have done all that thou didst command me. Look down from heaven, thy holy dwelling-place, and bless thy people Israel and the ground which thou hast given to us as thou didst swear to our forefathers, a land flowing with milk and honey.'

This day the LORD your God commands you to keep these statutes and laws: be careful to observe them with all your heart and soul. You have recognized the LORD this day as your God; you are to conform to his ways, to keep his statutes, his commandments, and his laws, and to obey him. The LORD has recognized you this day as his special possession, as he promised you, and to keep his commandments; he will raise you high above all the nations which he has made, to bring him praise and fame and glory, and to be a people holy to the LORD your God, according to his promise. 16 17 18 19

Concluding charge of Moses to the people

MOSES, WITH THE ELDERS OF ISRAEL, gave the people this charge: 27
 'Keep all the commandments that I lay upon you this day. On the day that you cross the Jordan to the land which the LORD your God is giving you, you shall set up great stones and plaster them over. You shall inscribe on them all the words of this law, when you have crossed over to enter the land which the LORD your God is giving you, a land flowing with milk and honey, as the LORD the God of your fathers promised you. When you have crossed the Jordan you shall set up these stones on Mount Ebal, as I command you this day, and cover them with plaster. You shall build an altar there to the LORD your God: it shall be an altar of stones on which you shall use no tool of iron. You shall build the altar of the LORD your God with blocks of undressed stone, and you shall offer whole-offerings upon it to the LORD your God. You shall slaughter shared-offerings and eat them there, and rejoice before the LORD your God. You shall inscribe on the stones all the words of this law, engraving them with care.'

Moses and the levitical priests spoke to all Israel, 'Be silent, Israel, and listen; this day you have become a people belonging to the LORD your God. 9

^a Or for.

- 10 Obey the LORD your God, and observe his commandments and statutes which I lay upon you this day.'
- 12 That day Moses gave the people this command: 'Those who shall stand for the blessing of the people on Mount Gerizim when you have crossed the Jordan are these: Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, Joseph, and Benjamin.
- 13 Those who shall stand on Mount Ebal for the curse are these: Reuben, Gad, Asher, Zebulun, Dan, and Naphtali.'
- 14 The Levites, in the hearing of all Israel, shall intone these words:
- 15 'A curse upon the man who carves an idol or casts an image, anything abominable to the LORD that craftsmen make, and sets it up in secret': the people shall all respond and say, 'Amen.'
- 16 'A curse upon him who slights his father or his mother': the people shall all say, 'Amen.'
- 17 'A curse upon him who moves his neighbour's boundary stone': the people shall all say, 'Amen.'
- 18 'A curse upon him who misdirects a blind man': the people shall all say, 'Amen.'
- 19 'A curse upon him who withholds justice from the alien, the orphan, and the widow': the people shall all say, 'Amen.'
- 20 'A curse upon him who lies with his father's wife, for he brings shame upon his father': the people shall all say, 'Amen.'
- 21 'A curse upon him who lies with any animal': the people shall all say, 'Amen.'
- 22 'A curse upon him who lies with his sister, his father's daughter or his mother's daughter': the people shall all say, 'Amen.'
- 23 'A curse upon him who lies with his wife's mother': the people shall all say, 'Amen.'
- 24 'A curse upon him who strikes another man in secret': the people shall all say, 'Amen.'
- 25 'A curse upon him who takes reward to kill a man with whom he has no feud': the people shall all say, 'Amen.'
- 26 'A curse upon any man who does not fulfil this law by doing all that it prescribes': the people shall all say, 'Amen.'

- 28 IF YOU WILL OBEY THE LORD your God by diligently observing all his commandments which I lay upon you this day, then the LORD your God will raise you high above all nations of the earth, and all these blessings shall come to you and light upon you, because you obey the LORD your God:
- 3 A blessing on you in the city; a blessing on you in the country.
- 4 A blessing on the fruit of your body, the fruit of your land and of your cattle, the offspring of your herds and of your lambing flocks.
- 5 A blessing on your basket and your kneading-trough.
- 6 A blessing on you as you come in; and a blessing on you as you go out.
- 7 May the LORD deliver up the enemies who attack you and let them be put to rout before you. Though they come out against you by one way, they shall flee before you by seven ways.
- 8 May the LORD grant you a blessing in your granaries and in all your labours; may the LORD your God bless you in the land which he is giving you.

The LORD will set you up as his own holy people, as he swore to you, if you keep the commandments of the LORD your God and conform to his ways. Then all people on earth shall see that the LORD has named you as his very own, and they shall go in fear of you. The LORD will make you prosper greatly in the fruit of your body and of your cattle, and in the fruit of the ground in the land which he swore to your forefathers to give you. May the LORD open the heavens for you, his rich treasure house, to give rain upon your land at the proper time and bless everything to which you turn your hand. You shall lend to many nations, but you shall not borrow; the LORD will make you the head and not the tail: you shall be always at the top and never at the bottom, when you listen to the commandments of the LORD your God, which I give you this day to keep and to fulfil. You shall turn neither to the right nor to the left from all the things which I command you this day nor shall you follow after and worship other gods.

BUT IF YOU DO NOT OBEY the LORD your God by diligently observing all his commandments and statutes which I lay upon you this day, then all these maledictions shall come to you and light upon you:

A curse upon you in the city; a curse upon you in the country.

A curse upon your basket and your kneading-trough.

A curse upon the fruit of your body, the fruit of your land, the offspring of your herds and of your lambing flocks.

A curse upon you as you come in; and a curse upon you as you go out.

May the LORD send upon you starvation, burning thirst, and dysentery,^a whatever you are about, until you are destroyed and quickly perish for your evil doings, because you have forsaken me.

May the LORD cause pestilence to haunt you until he has exterminated you out of the land which you are entering to occupy; may the LORD afflict you with wasting disease and recurrent fever, ague and eruptions; with drought, black blight and red; and may these plague you until you perish. May the skies above you be bronze, and the earth beneath you iron. May the LORD turn the rain upon your country into fine sand, and may dust come down upon you from the sky until you are blotted out.

May the LORD put you to rout before the enemy. Though you go out against them by one way, you shall flee before them by seven ways. May you be repugnant to all the kingdoms on earth. May your bodies become food for the birds of the air and the wild beasts, with no man to scare them away.

May the LORD strike you with Egyptian boils and with tumours, scabs, and itches, for which you will find no cure. May the LORD strike you with madness, blindness, and bewilderment; so that you will grope about in broad daylight, just as a blind man gropes in darkness, and you will fail to find your way. You will also be oppressed and robbed, day in, day out, with no one to save you. A woman will be pledged to you, but another shall ravish her; you will build a house but not live in it; you will plant a vineyard but not enjoy its fruit. Your ox will be slaughtered before your eyes, but you will not eat any of it; and before your eyes your ass will be stolen and will not come back to you; your sheep will be given to the enemy, and there will be no one to recover them. Your sons and daughters will be given to another people while you look on; your eyes will strain after them all day long, and you will be powerless. A nation whom you do not know shall eat the fruit of your land and all your toil, and your lot will be nothing but brutal oppression. The sights you see will drive you mad. May the LORD strike you on knee and leg with malignant boils for which you will find no cure; they will spread from the sole of your foot to the crown of your head. May the LORD give you up, you and the king whom you have appointed, to a nation whom neither you nor your fathers have known, and there you will worship other gods, gods of wood and stone. You will become a horror, a byword, and an object-lesson to all the peoples amongst whom the LORD disperses you.

You will carry out seed for your fields in plenty, but you will harvest little; for the locusts will devour it. You will plant vineyards and cultivate them, but you will not drink the wine or gather the grapes; for the grub will eat them. You will have olive-trees all over your territory, but you will not anoint yourselves with their oil; for your olives will drop off. You will bear sons and daughters, but they will not remain yours because they will be taken into captivity. All your trees and the fruit of the ground will be infested with the mole-cricket. The alien who lives with you will raise himself higher and higher, and you will sink lower and lower. He will lend to you but you will not lend to him: he will be the head and you the tail.

All these maledictions will come upon you; they will pursue you and overtake you until you are destroyed because you did not obey the LORD your God by keeping the commandments and statutes which he gave you. They shall be a sign and a portent to you and your descendants for ever, because you did not serve the LORD your God with joy and with a glad heart for all your blessings. Then in hunger and thirst, in nakedness and extreme want, you shall serve your enemies whom the LORD will send against you, and they will put a yoke of iron on your neck when they have subdued you. May the LORD raise against you a nation from afar, from the other end of the earth, who will swoop upon you like a vulture, a nation whose language you will not understand, a nation of grim aspect with no reverence for age and no pity for the young. They will devour the young of your cattle and the fruit of your land, when you have been subdued. They will leave you neither corn, nor new wine nor oil, neither the offspring of your herds nor of your lambing flocks, until you are annihilated. They will besiege you in all your cities until they bring down your lofty impregnable walls, those city walls throughout your land in which you trust. They will besiege you within all your cities, throughout the land which the LORD your God has given you. Then you will eat your own children, the flesh of your sons and daughters whom the LORD your God has given you, because of the dire straits to which you will be reduced when your enemy besieges you. The pampered, delicate man will not share with his brother, or the wife of his bosom, or his own remaining children.

any of the meat which he is eating, the flesh of his own children. He is left with nothing else because of the dire straits to which you will be reduced when your enemy besieges you within your cities. The pampered, delicate woman, the woman who has never even tried to put a foot to the ground, so delicate and pampered she is, will not share with her own husband or her son or her daughter the afterbirth which she expels, or any boy or girl that she may bear. She will herself eat them secretly in her extreme want, because of the dire straits to which you will be reduced when your enemy besieges you within your cities.

If you do not observe and fulfil all the law written down in this book, if you do not revere this honoured and dreaded name, this name 'the LORD^a your God', then the LORD will strike you and your descendants with unimaginable plagues, malignant and persistent, and with sickness, persistent and severe. He will bring upon you once again all the diseases of Egypt which you dread, and they will cling to you. The LORD will bring upon you sickness and plague of every kind not written down in this book of the law, until you are destroyed. Then you who were countless as the stars in the sky will be left few in number, because you did not obey the LORD your God. Just as the LORD took delight in you, prospering and increasing you, so now it will be his delight to destroy and exterminate you, and you will be uprooted from the land which you are entering to occupy. The LORD will scatter you among all peoples from one end of the earth to the other, and there you will worship other gods whom neither you have known nor your forefathers, gods of wood and stone. Among those nations you will find no peace, no rest for the sole of your foot. Then the LORD will give you an inquiet mind, dim eyes, and failing appetite. Your life will hang continually in suspense, fear will beset you night and day, and you will find no security all your life long. Every morning you will say, 'Would God it were evening!', and every evening, 'Would God it were morning!', for the fear that lives in your heart and the sights that you see. The LORD will bring you sorrowing back to Egypt by that very road of which I said to you, 'You shall not see that road again'; and there you will offer to sell yourselves to your enemies as slaves and slave-girls, but there will be no buyer.

These are the words of the covenant which the LORD commanded Moses to make with the Israelites in Moab, in addition to the covenant which he made with them on Horeb.

MOSES SUMMONED ALL THE ISRAELITES and said to them: 'You have seen with your own eyes all that the LORD did in Egypt to Pharaoh, to all his servants, and to the whole land, the great challenge which you yourselves witnessed, those great signs and portents, but to this day the LORD has not given you a mind to learn, or eyes to see, or ears to hear. I led you for forty years in the wilderness; your clothes did not wear out on you, nor did your sandals wear out and fall off your feet; you ate no bread and drank no wine or strong drink, in order that you might learn that I am the LORD your God. You came to this place where Sihon king of Heshbon

^a See note on Exod. 3. 15.

- 8 and Og king of Bashan came to attack us, and we defeated them. We took their land and gave it as patrimony to the Reubenites, the Gadites, and 9 half the tribe of Manasseh. You shall observe the provisions of this covenant and keep them so that you may be successful in all you do.
- 10 'You all stand here today before the LORD your God, tribal chiefs, 11 elders, and officers, all the men of Israel, with your dependants, your wives, the aliens who live in your camp—all of them, from those who chop
12 wood to those who draw water—and you are ready to accept the oath and enter into the covenant which the LORD your God is making with you
13 today. The covenant is to constitute you his people this day, and he will be your God, as he promised you and as he swore to your forefathers, 14 Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. It is not with you alone that I am making this covenant and this oath, but with all those who stand here with us today
15 before the LORD our God and also with those who are not here with us today. For you know how we lived in Egypt and how we and you, as we 16 passed through the nations, saw their loathsome idols and the false gods they had, the gods of wood and stone, of silver and gold. If there should be 17 among you a man or woman, family or tribe, who is moved today to turn from the LORD our God and to go worshipping the gods of those nations—
18 if there is among you such a root from which springs gall and wormwood,
19 then when he hears the terms of this oath, he may inwardly flatter himself and think, "All will be well with me even if I follow the promptings of my 20 stubborn heart"; but this will bring everything to ruin. The LORD will not be willing to forgive him; for then his anger and resentment will overwhelm
21 this man, and the denunciations prescribed in this book will fall heavily on him, and the LORD will blot out his name from under heaven. The LORD will single him out from all the tribes of Israel for disaster to fall upon him, according to the oath required by the covenant and prescribed in this book of the law.
- 22 'The next generation, your sons who follow you and the foreigners who 23 come from distant countries, will see the plagues of this land and the ulcers which the LORD has brought upon its people, the whole land burnt up with brimstone and salt, so that it cannot be sown, or yield herb or green plant. It will be as desolate as were Sodom and Gomorrah, Admah and 24 Zeboyim, when the LORD overthrew them in his anger and rage. Then they, and all the nations with them, will ask, "Why has the LORD so afflicted this land? Why has there been this great outburst of wrath?"
25 The answer will be: "Because they forsook the covenant of the LORD the God of their fathers which he made with them when he brought them out 26 of Egypt. They began to worship other gods and to bow down to them, gods whom they had not known and whom the LORD had not assigned to 27 them. The anger of the LORD was roused against that land, so that he brought upon it all the maledictions written in this book. The LORD up-28 rooted them from their soil in anger, in wrath and great fury, and banished them to another land, where they are to this day."
- 29 'There are things hidden, and they belong to the LORD our God, but what is revealed belongs to us and our children for ever; it is for us to observe all that is prescribed in this law.

'When these things have befallen you, the blessing and the curse of 30 which I have offered you the choice, if you and your sons take them to heart there in all the countries to which the LORD your God has banished you, if you turn back to him and obey him heart and soul in all that I command 2 you this day, then the LORD your God will show you compassion and 3 restore your fortunes. He will gather you again from all the countries to which he has scattered you. Even though he were to banish you to the four 4 corners of the world, the LORD your God will gather you from there, from there he will fetch you home. The LORD your God will bring you into the 5 land which your forefathers occupied, and you will occupy it again; then he will bring you prosperity and make you more numerous than your forefathers were. The LORD your God will circumcise^a your hearts and the 6 hearts of your descendants, so that you will love him with all your heart and soul and you will live. Then the LORD your God will turn all these 7 denunciations against your enemies and the foes who persecute you. You 8 will then again obey the LORD and keep all his commandments which I give you this day. The LORD your God will make you more than prosperous 9-10 in all that you do, in the fruit of your body and of your cattle and in the fruits of the earth; for, when you obey the LORD your God by keeping his commandments and statutes, as they are written in this book of the law, and when you turn back to the LORD your God with all your heart and soul, he will again rejoice over you and be good to you, as he rejoiced over your forefathers.

'The commandment that I lay on you this day is not too difficult for you, 11
 it is not too remote. It is not in heaven, that you should say, "Who will go up to heaven for us to fetch it and tell it to us, so that we can keep it?" 12 Nor is it beyond the sea, that you should say, "Who will cross the sea for us to fetch it and tell it to us, so that we can keep it?" It is a thing very 13 near to you, upon your lips and in your heart ready to be kept. 14

'Today I offer you the choice of life and good, or death and evil. If you 15 16 obey the commandments of the LORD your God which I give you this day, by loving the LORD your God, by conforming to his ways and by keeping his commandments, statutes, and laws, then you will live and increase, and the LORD your God will bless you in the land which you are entering to occupy. But if your heart turns away and you do not listen and you are led 17 on to bow down to other gods and worship them, I tell you this day that 18 you will perish; you will not live long in the land which you will enter to occupy after crossing the Jordan. I summon heaven and earth to witness 19 against you this day: I offer you the choice of life or death, blessing or curse. Choose life and then you and your descendants will live; love the 20 LORD your God, obey him and hold fast to him: that is life for you and length of days in the land which the LORD swore to give to your forefathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.'

Moses finished speaking these words to all Israel, and then he said, 'I 31 1 2 am now a hundred and twenty years old, and I can no longer move about as I please; and the LORD has told me that I may not cross the Jordan. The 3
 LORD your God will cross over at your head and destroy these nations before

^a Or incline.

4 your advance, and you shall occupy their lands; and, as he directed, Joshua will lead you across. The LORD will do to these nations as he did to Sihon and Og, kings of the Amorites, and to their lands; he will destroy them.
 5 The LORD will deliver them into your power, and you shall do to them as I
 6 commanded you. Be strong, be resolute; you must not dread them or be afraid, for the LORD your God himself goes with you; he will not fail you or forsake you.'

7 Moses summoned Joshua and said to him in the presence of all Israel, 'Be strong, be resolute; for it is you who are to lead this people into the land which the LORD swore to give their forefathers, and you are to bring
 8 them into possession of it. The LORD himself goes at your head; he will be with you; he will not fail you or forsake you. Do not be discouraged or afraid.'

9 Moses wrote down this law and gave it to the priests, the sons of Levi, who carried the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD, and to all the elders of 10 Israel. Moses gave them this command: 'At the end of every seven years, at the appointed time for the year of remission, at the pilgrim-feast of 11 Tabernacles, when all Israel comes to enter the presence of the LORD your God in the place which he will choose, you shall read this law publicly in 12 the hearing of all Israel. Assemble the people, men, women, and dependants, together with the aliens who live in your settlements, so that they may listen, and learn to fear the LORD your God and observe all these laws with care.
 13 Their children, too, who do not know them, shall hear them, and learn to fear the LORD your God all their lives in the land which you will occupy after crossing the Jordan.'

Joshua appointed successor to Moses

14 THE LORD SAID TO MOSES, 'The time of your death is drawing near; call Joshua, and then come and stand in the Tent of the Presence so that I may give him his commission.' So Moses and Joshua went and took 15 their stand in the Tent of the Presence; and the LORD appeared in the tent in a pillar of cloud, and the pillar of cloud stood at the entrance of the tent.

16 The LORD said to Moses, 'You are about to die like your forefathers, and this people, when they come into the land and live among foreigners, will go wantonly after their gods; they will abandon me and break the 17 covenant which I have made with them. Then my anger will be roused against them, and I will abandon them and hide my face from them. They will be an easy prey, and many terrible disasters will come upon them. They will say on that day, "These disasters have come because our God is 18 not among us." On that day I will hide my face because of all the evil they have done in turning to other gods.'

19 'Now write down this rule of life^a and teach it to the Israelites; make 20 them repeat it, so that it may be on record against them. When I have brought them into the land which I swore to give to their forefathers, a land flowing with milk and honey, and they have plenty to eat and grow

^a rule of life: or song.

fat, they will turn to other gods and worship them, they will spurn me and break my covenant; and many calamities and disasters will follow. 21
Then this rule of life will confront them as a record, for it will not be forgotten by their descendants. For even before I bring them into the land which I swore to give them, I know which way their thoughts incline already.'

That day Moses wrote down this rule of life and taught it to the Israelites. 22
The LORD^a gave Joshua son of Nun his commission in these words: 'Be strong, be resolute; for you shall bring the Israelites into the land which I swore to give them, and I will be with you.' 23

When Moses had finished writing down these laws in a book, from beginning to end, he gave this command to the Levites who carried the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD: 'Take this book of the law and put it beside the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD your God to be a witness against you. For I know how defiant and stubborn you are; even during my lifetime you have defied the LORD; how much more, then, will you do so when I am dead? Assemble all the elders of your tribes and your officers; I will say 28 all these things in their hearing and will summon heaven and earth to witness against them. For I know that after my death you will take 29 to degrading practices and turn aside from the way which I told you to follow, and in days to come disaster will come upon you, because you are doing what is wrong in the eyes of the LORD and so provoking him to anger.'

Two historical poems

MOSES RECITED THIS SONG from beginning to end in the hearing 30 of the whole assembly of Israel:

Give ear to what I say, O heavens, 32
earth, listen to my words;
my teaching shall fall like drops of rain,
my words shall distil like dew, 2
like fine rain upon the grass and like the showers on young plants.

When I call aloud the name of the LORD,^b 3
you shall respond, 'Great is our God, the creator^c whose work is perfect, 4
and all his ways are just,
a faithful god, who does no wrong,
righteous and true is He!'

Perverse and crooked generation 5 whose faults have proved you no children of his,
is this how you repay the LORD, 6
you brutish and stupid people?

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. He.

^b Or the name JEHOVAH.

Is he not your father who formed you?
 Did he not make you and establish you?
 Remember the days of old,
 think of the generations long ago;
 ask your father to recount it and your elders to tell you the tale.

When the Most High parcelled out the nations,
 when he dispersed all mankind, he laid down the boundaries of every people
 according to the number of the sons of God;
 but the LORD's share was his own people,
 Jacob was his allotted portion.
 He found him in a desert land,
 in a waste and howling void.
 He protected and trained him,
 he guarded him as the apple of his eye,
 as an eagle watches over its nest,
 hovers above its young,
 spreads its pinions and takes them up,
 and carries them upon its wings.
 The LORD alone led him,
 no alien god at his side.
 He made him ride on the heights of the earth and fed him on the harvest of the fields;
 he satisfied him with honey from the crags
 and oil from the flinty rock,
 curds from the cattle, milk from the ewes,
 the fat of lambs' kidneys,
 of rams, the breed of Bashan, and of goats,
 with the finest flour of wheat;
 and he drank wine from the blood of the grape.
 Jacob ate and was well fed, Jeshurun grew fat and unruly,^a
 he grew fat, he grew bloated and sleek.
 He forsook God who made him
 and dishonoured the Rock of his salvation.
 They roused his jealousy with foreign gods
 and provoked him with abominable practices.
 They sacrificed to foreign demons that are no gods,
 gods who were strangers to them;
 they took up with new gods from their neighbours,
 gods whom your fathers did not acknowledge.
 You forsook the creator^b who begot you and cared nothing for God who brought you to birth.
 The LORD saw and spurned them;
 his own sons and daughters provoked him.

^a Or and kicked.^b Or rock.

'I will hide my face from them,' he said ;	20
'let me see what their end will be,
for they are a mutinous generation,
sons who are not to be trusted.
They roused my jealousy with a god of no account,	21
with their false gods they provoked me ;
so I will rouse their jealousy with a people of no account,
with a brutish nation I will provoke them.
For fire is kindled by my anger,	22
it burns to the depths of Sheol ;
it devours earth and its harvest
and sets fire to the very roots of the mountains.
I will heap on them one disaster after another,	23
I will use up all my arrows on them :
pangs of hunger, ravages of plague,	24
and bitter pestilence.
I will harry them with the fangs of wild beasts
and the poison of creatures that crawl in the dust.
The sword will make orphans in the streets	25
and widows in their own homes ;
it will take toll of young man and maid,
of babes in arms and old men.
I had resolved to strike them down	26
and to destroy all memory of them,
but I feared that I should be provoked by their foes,	27
that their enemies would take the credit and say, "It was not the LORD,
it was we who raised the hand that did this."'
They are a nation that lacks good counsel,	28
devoid of understanding.
If only they had the wisdom to understand this	29
and give thought to their end !
How could one man pursue a thousand of them,	30
how could two put ten thousand to flight,
if their Rock had not sold them to their enemies,
if the LORD had not handed them over ?
For the enemy have no Rock like ours,	31
in themselves they are mere fools.
Their vines are vines of Sodom,	32
grown on the terraces of Gomorrah ;
their grapes are poisonous,
the clusters bitter to the taste.
Their wine is the venom of serpents,	33
the cruel poison of asps ;
all this I have in reserve,	34
sealed up in my storehouses
till the day of punishment and vengeance,	35

till the moment when they slip and fall;
for the day of their downfall is near,
their doom is fast approaching.
36 The LORD will give his people justice and have compassion on his servants;
for he will see that their strength is gone:
alone, or defended by his clan, no one is left.

37 He will say, 'Where are your gods,
the rock in which you sought shelter, 38 the gods who ate the fat of your sacrifices and drank the wine of your drink-offerings?

Let them rise to help you!
Let them give you shelter!

39 See now that I, I am He,
and there is no god beside me:
I put to death and I keep alive,
I wound and I heal;
there is no rescue from my grasp.

40 I lift my hand to heaven and swear: As I live for ever, 41 when I have whetted my flashing sword,
when I have set my hand to judgement,
then I will punish my adversaries
and take vengeance on my enemies.

42 I will make my arrows drunk with blood,
my sword shall devour flesh,
blood of slain and captives,
the heads of the enemy princes.'

43 Rejoice with him, you heavens, bow down, all you gods, before him;
for he will avenge the blood of his sons
and take vengeance on his adversaries;
he will punish those who hate him
and make expiation for his people's land.

44 This is the song that Moses came and recited in the hearing of the people, he and Joshua son of Nun.

45 46 Moses finished speaking to all Israel, and then he said, 'Take to heart all these warnings which I solemnly give you this day: command your 47 children to be careful to observe all the words of this law. For you they are no empty words; they are your very life, and by them you shall live long in the land which you are to occupy after crossing the Jordan.'

48 49 That same day the LORD spoke to Moses and said, 'Go up this mount Abarim, Mount Nebo in Moab, to the east of Jericho, and look out over the land of Canaan that I am giving to the Israelites for their possession.

50 On this mountain you shall die and be gathered to your father's kin, just as Aaron your brother died on Mount Hor and was gathered to his father's 51 kin. This is because both of you were unfaithful to me at the waters of Meribah-by-Kadesh in the wilderness of Zin, when you did not uphold my holiness among the Israelites. You shall see the land from a distance 52 but you may not enter the land I am giving to the Israelites.⁷

THIS IS THE BLESSING that Moses the man of God pronounced upon 33
the Israelites before his death:

The LORD came from Sinai 2
and shone forth from Seir.

He showed himself from Mount Paran, and with him were myriads of holy ones^a streaming along at his right hand.

Truly he loves his people 3
and blesses his saints.^b

They sit at his feet
and receive his instruction,

as a possession for the assembly of Jacob. 5
Then a king arose^c in Jeshurun,
when the chiefs of the people were assembled
together with all the tribes of Israel.

Of Reuben he said:^d 6

May Reuben live and not die out,
but may he be few in number.

And of Judah he said this: 7

Hear, O LORD, the cry of Judah
and join him to his people,
thou whose hands fight for him,
who art his helper against his foes.

Of Levi he said: 8

Thou didst give thy Thummim to Levi, thy Urim to thy loyal servant
whom thou didst prove at Massah,
for whom thou didst plead at the waters of Meribah, who said of his parents, I do not know them, 9
who did not acknowledge his brothers,
nor recognize his children.

They observe thy word
and keep thy covenant;
they teach thy precepts to Jacob, 10
thy law to Israel.

They offer thee the smoke of sacrifice
and offerings on thy altar.

The death of Moses

THEN MOSES WENT UP from the lowlands of Moab to Mount Nebo, 34 to the top of Pisgah, eastwards from Jericho, and the LORD showed him the whole land: Gilead as far as Dan; the whole of Naphtali; the 2 territory of Ephraim and Manasseh, and all Judah as far as the western sea; the Negeb and the Plain; the valley of Jericho, the Vale of Palm Trees, 3 as far as Zoar. The LORD said to him, 'This is the land which I swore to 4 Abraham, Isaac and Jacob that I would give to their descendants. I have let you see it with your own eyes, but you shall not cross over into it.'

There in the land of Moab Moses the servant of the LORD died, as the 5
 LORD had said. He was buried in a valley in Moab opposite Beth-peor, but 6 to this day no one knows his burial-place. Moses was a hundred and twenty 7 years old when he died; his sight was not dimmed nor had his vigour failed.

8 The Israelites wept for Moses in the lowlands of Moab for thirty days;
9 then the time of mourning for Moses was ended. And Joshua son of Nun was filled with the spirit of wisdom, for Moses had laid his hands on him, and the Israelites listened to him and did what the LORD had commanded Moses.

10 There has never yet risen in Israel a prophet like Moses, whom the LORD
11 knew face to face: remember all the signs and portents which the LORD sent him to show in Egypt to Pharaoh and all his servants and the whole 12 land; remember the strong hand of Moses and the terrible deeds which he did in the sight of all Israel.

THE BOOK OF JOSHUA

Israel's entry into the promised land

AFTER THE DEATH OF MOSES the servant of the LORD, 1
the LORD said to Joshua son of Nun, his assistant, 'My servant 2
Moses is dead; now it is for you to cross the Jordan, you and this 3 whole people of Israel, to the land which I am giving them. Every place 3 where you set foot is yours: I have given it to you, as I promised Moses. 4
From the desert and the Lebanon to the great river, the river Euphrates, and 4 across all the Hittite country westwards to the Great Sea,^a all this shall be 5 your land. No one will ever be able to stand against you: as I was with 5 Moses, so will I be with you; I will not fail you or forsake you. Be strong, 6 be resolute; it is you who are to put this people in possession of the land 6 which I swore to give to their fathers. Only be strong and resolute; observe 7 diligently all the law which my servant Moses has given you. You must 7 not turn from it to right or left, if you would prosper wherever you go. 8
This book of the law must ever be on your lips; you must keep it in mind 8 day and night so that you may diligently observe all that is written in it. 9 Then you will prosper and be successful in all that you do. This is my 9 command: be strong, be resolute; do not be fearful or dismayed, for the 10 LORD your God is with you wherever you go.' Then Joshua told the officers 10 to pass through the camp and give this order to the people: 'Get food ready 11 to take with you; for within three days you will be crossing the Jordan to 11 occupy the country which the LORD your God is giving you to possess.'
To the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh, Joshua 12 said, 'Remember the command which Moses the servant of the LORD 13 gave you when he said, "The LORD your God will grant you security here 14 and will give you this territory." Your wives and dependants and your 14 herds may stay east of the Jordan in the territory which Moses has given 15 you, but for yourselves, all the warriors among you must cross over as a 15 fighting force at the head of your kinsmen. You must help them, until the 15
LORD grants them security like you and they too take possession of the land 16 which the LORD your God is giving them. You may then return to the land 16 which is your own possession, the territory which Moses the servant of 17 the LORD has given you east of the Jordan.' They answered Joshua, 'What- 17 ever you tell us, we will do; wherever you send us, we will go. As we obeyed 18
Moses, so will we obey you; and may the LORD your God be with you as he 18 was with Moses! Whoever rebels against your authority, and fails to carry 18 out all your orders, shall be put to death. Only be strong and resolute.'

^a Or the Mediterranean Sea.

2 Joshua son of Nun sent two spies out from Shittim secretly with orders to reconnoitre the country. The two men came to Jericho and went to the
2 house of a prostitute named Rahab, and spent the night there. It was reported to the king of Jericho that some Israelites had arrived that night
3 to explore the country. So the king sent to Rahab and said, 'Bring out the men who have come to you and are now in your house; they are here to 4 explore the whole country.' The woman, who had taken the two men and hidden them,^a replied, 'Yes, the men did come to me, but I did not know
5 where they came from; and when it was time to shut the gate at nightfall, they had gone. I do not know where they were going, but if you hurry after 6 them, you will catch them up.' In fact, she had taken them up on to the roof and concealed them among the stalks of flax which she had laid out
7 there in rows. The messengers went in pursuit of them down the road to the fords of the Jordan, and the gate was closed as soon as they had gone
8 out. The men had not yet settled down, when Rahab came up to them on the roof and said to them, 'I know that the LORD has given this land to you,
9 that terror of you has descended upon us all, and that because of you the whole country is panic-stricken. For we have heard how the LORD dried up
10 the water of the Red Sea^b before you when you came out of Egypt, and what you did to Sihon and Og, the two Amorite kings beyond the Jordan, 11 whom you put to death. When we heard this, our courage failed us; your coming has left no spirit in any of us; for the LORD your God is God in 12 heaven above and on earth below. Swear to me now by the LORD that you will keep faith with my family, as I have kept faith with you. Give me a 13 token of good faith; promise that you will spare the lives of my father and mother, my brothers and sisters and all who belong to them, and save us
14 from death.' The men replied, 'Our lives for yours, so long as you do not betray our business. When the LORD gives us the country, we will deal
15 honestly and faithfully by you.' She then let them down through an opening
16 by a rope; for the house where she lived was on an angle of the wall. 'Take to the hills,' she said, 'or the pursuers will come upon you. Hide yourselves
17 there for three days until they come back, and then go on your way.' The men warned her that they would be released from the oath she had made
18 them take unless she did what they told her. 'When we enter the land,' they said, 'you must fasten this strand of scarlet cord in the opening through
19 which you have lowered us, and get everybody together here in the house, your father and mother, your brothers and all your family. If anybody goes 20 out of doors into the street, his blood shall be on his own head; we shall be quit of the oath. But if a hand is laid on anyone who stays indoors with you,
21 his blood shall be on our heads. Remember too that, if you betray our business, then we shall be quit of the oath you have made us take.' She 22 replied, 'It shall be as you say', and sent them away. They set off, and she fastened the strand of scarlet cord in the opening. The men made their way
23 into the hills and stayed there three days until the pursuers returned. They had searched all along the road, but had not found them. ^c The two men then turned and came down from the hills, crossed the river and returned to Joshua son of Nun. They told him all that had happened to them and said to him, 'The LORD has put the whole country into our hands, and now all its people are panic-stricken at our approach.'

Joshua rose early in the morning, and he and all the Israelites set out from Shittim and came to the Jordan, where they encamped before crossing the river. At the end of three days the officers passed through the camp, and gave this order to the people: 'When you see the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD your God being carried forward by the levitical priests, then you too shall leave your positions and set out. Follow it, but do not go close to it; keep some distance behind, about a thousand yards. This will show you the way you are to go, for you have not travelled this way before.' Joshua then said to the people, 'Hallow yourselves, for tomorrow the LORD will do a great miracle among you.' To the priests he said, 'Lift up the Ark of the Covenant and pass in front of the people.' So they lifted up the Ark of the Covenant and went in front of the people. Then the LORD said to Joshua, 'Today I will begin to make you stand high in the eyes of all Israel, and they shall know that I will be with you as I was with Moses. Give orders to the priests who carry the Ark of the Covenant, and tell them that when they come to the edge of the waters of the Jordan, they are to take their stand in the river.'

Then Joshua said to the Israelites, 'Come here and listen to the words of the LORD your God. By this you shall know that the living God is among you and that he will drive out before you the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Hivites, the Perizzites, the Gergashites, the Amorites, and the Jebusites: the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD,^a the lord of all the earth, is to cross the Jordan at your head. Choose twelve men from the tribes of Israel, one man from each tribe. When the priests carrying the Ark of the LORD, the lord of all the earth, set foot in the waters of the Jordan, then the waters of the Jordan will be cut off; the water coming down from upstream will stand piled up like a bank.' So the people set out from their tents to cross the Jordan, with the priests in front of them carrying the Ark of the Covenant. Now the Jordan is in full flood in all its reaches throughout the time of harvest. When the priests reached the Jordan and dipped their feet in the water at the edge, the water coming down from upstream was brought to a standstill; it piled up like a bank for a long way back, as far as Adam, a town near Zarethan. The waters coming down to the Sea of the Arabah, the Dead Sea, were completely cut off, and the people crossed over opposite Jericho. The priests carrying the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD stood firm on the dry bed in the middle of the Jordan; and all Israel passed over on dry ground until the whole nation had crossed the river.

WHEN THE WHOLE NATION HAD FINISHED CROSSING the Jordan, the LORD said to Joshua, 'Take twelve men from the people, one from each tribe, and order them to lift up twelve stones from this place, out of the middle of the Jordan, where the feet of the priests stood firm. They are to carry them across and set them down in the camp where you spend the

4 night.' Joshua summoned the twelve men whom he had chosen out of the 5 Israelites, one man from each tribe, and said to them, 'Cross over in front of the Ark of the LORD your God as far as the middle of the Jordan, and let each of you take a stone and hoist it on his shoulder, one for each of the 6 tribes of Israel. These stones are to stand as a memorial among you; and 7 in days to come, when your children ask you what these stones mean, you shall tell them how the waters of the Jordan were cut off before the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD when it crossed the Jordan. Thus these stones 8 will always be a reminder to the Israelites.' The Israelites did as Joshua had commanded: they lifted up twelve stones from the middle of the Jordan, as the LORD had instructed Joshua, one for each of the tribes of Israel, carried them across to the camp and set them down there.

9 Joshua set up twelve stones in the middle of the Jordan at the place where the priests stood who carried the Ark of the Covenant, and there 10 they are to this day. The priests carrying the Ark remained standing in the middle of the Jordan until every command which the LORD had told Joshua to give to the people was fulfilled, and the people had made good speed 11 across. When all the people had finished crossing, then the Ark of the LORD 12 crossed, and the priests with it.^a At the head of the Israelites, there crossed over the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh, as a 13 fighting force, as Moses had told them to do; about forty thousand strong, drafted for active service, they crossed over to the lowlands of Jericho in the presence of the LORD to do battle.

14 That day the LORD made Joshua stand very high in the eyes of all Israel, and the people revered him, as they had revered Moses all his life.

15 16 The LORD said to Joshua, 'Command the priests carrying the Ark of the 17 Tokens to come up from the Jordan.' So Joshua commanded the priests 18 to come up from the Jordan; and when the priests carrying the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD came up from the river-bed, they had no sooner set foot on dry land than the waters of the Jordan came back to their place and 19 filled up all its reaches as before. On the tenth day of the first month the people came up out of the Jordan and camped in Gilgal in the district east 20 of Jericho, and there Joshua set up the twelve stones which they had taken 21 from the Jordan. He said to the Israelites, 'In days to come, when your 22 descendants ask their fathers what these stones mean, you shall explain 23 that the Jordan was dry when Israel crossed over, and that the LORD your God dried up the waters of the Jordan in front of you until you had gone across, just as the LORD your God did at the Red Sea when he dried it up 24 for us until we had crossed. Thus all people on earth will know how strong is the hand of the LORD; and thus they will stand in awe of the LORD your God for ever.'

5 When all the Amorite kings to the west of the Jordan and all the Canaanite kings by the sea-coast heard that the LORD had dried up the waters before the advance of the Israelites until they had crossed, their courage melted away and there was no more spirit left in them for fear of the Israelites.

2 At that time the LORD said to Joshua, 'Make knives of flint, seat yourself,
3 and make Israel a circumcised people again.' Joshua thereupon made knives

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds before the people.

of flint and circumcised the Israelites at Gibeath-haaraloth. ^a This is why 4
 Joshua circumcised them: all the males who came out of Egypt, all the 5 fighting men, had died in the wilderness on the journey from Egypt. The 6 people who came out of Egypt had all been circumcised, but not those who 7 had been born in the wilderness during the journey. For the Israelites 8 travelled in the wilderness for forty years, until the whole nation, all the 9 fighting men among them, had passed away, all who came out of Egypt 10 and had disobeyed the voice of the LORD. The LORD swore that he would 11 not allow any of these to see the land which he had sworn to their fathers 12 to give us, a land flowing with milk and honey. So it was their sons, whom 13 he had raised up in their place, that Joshua circumcised; they were un- 14 circumcised because they had not been circumcised on the journey. When 15 the circumcision of the whole nation was complete, they stayed where they were in camp until they had recovered. The LORD then said to Joshua, 'Today I have rolled away from you the reproaches of the Egyptians.' Therefore the place is called Gilgal ^b to this very day.

The Israelites encamped in Gilgal, and at sunset on the fourteenth day 10 of the month they kept the Passover in the lowlands of Jericho. On the day 11 after the Passover, they ate their unleavened cakes and parched grain, and 12 that day it was the produce of the country. It was from that day, when they 13 first ate the produce of the country, that the manna ceased. The Israelites 14 received no more manna; and that year they ate what had grown in the 15 land of Canaan.

When Joshua came near Jericho he looked up and saw a man standing in 13 front of him with a drawn sword in his hand. Joshua went up to him and 14 said, 'Are you for us or for our enemies?' And the man said to him, 'I am 15 here as captain of the army of the LORD.' Joshua fell down before him, face to the ground, and said, 'What have you to say to your servant, my lord?'
 The captain of the LORD's army said to him, 'Take off your sandals; the place where you are standing is holy'; and Joshua did so.

JERICHO WAS BOLTED AND BARRED against the Israelites; no one went 6 out, no one came in. The LORD said to Joshua, 'Look, I have delivered 2 Jericho and her king ^c into your hands. You shall march round the city with 3 all your fighting men, making the circuit of it once, for six days running. 4 Seven priests shall go in front of the Ark carrying seven trumpets made 5 from rams' horns. On the seventh day you shall march round the city 6 seven times and the priests shall blow their trumpets. At the blast of the 7 rams' horns, when you hear the trumpet sound, the whole army shall raise 8 a great shout; the wall of the city will collapse and the army shall advance, every man straight ahead.' So Joshua son of Nun summoned the priests 6 and gave them their orders: 'Take up the Ark of the Covenant; let seven priests with seven trumpets of ram's horn go in front of the Ark of the LORD.' Then he said to the army, 'March on and make the circuit of the 7 city, and let the men drafted from the two and a half tribes go in front of the Ark of the LORD.' When Joshua had spoken to the army, the seven 8 9 priests carrying the seven trumpets of ram's horn before the LORD passed on and blew the trumpets, with the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD following them. The drafted men marched in front of the priests who blew the trumpets, and the rearguard followed the Ark, the trumpets sounding as they marched. But Joshua ordered the army not to shout, or to raise their voices or utter a word, till the day came when he would tell them to shout; then they were to give a loud shout. Thus he caused the Ark of the LORD to go round the city, making the circuit of it once, and then they went back to the camp and spent the night there. Joshua rose early in the morning and the priests took up the Ark of the LORD. The seven priests carrying the seven trumpets of ram's horn went marching in front of the Ark of the LORD, blowing the trumpets as they went, with the drafted men in front of them and the rearguard following the Ark of the LORD, the trumpets sounding as they marched. They marched round the city once on the second day and returned to the camp; this they did for six days. But on the seventh day they rose at dawn and marched seven times round the city in the same way; that was the only day on which they marched round seven times. The seventh time the priests blew the trumpets and Joshua said to the army, 'Shout! The LORD has given you the city. The city shall be under solemn ban: everything in it belongs to the LORD. No one is to be spared except the prostitute Rahab and everyone who is with her in the house, because she hid the men whom we sent. And you must beware of coveting anything that is forbidden under the ban; you must take none of it for yourselves; this would put the Israelite camp itself under the ban and bring trouble on it. All the silver and gold, all the vessels of copper and iron, shall be holy; they belong to the LORD and they must go into the LORD's treasury.' So they blew the trumpets, and when the army heard the trumpet sound, they raised a great shout, and down fell the walls. The army advanced on the city, every man straight ahead, and took it. Under the ban they destroyed everything in the city; they put everyone to the sword, men and women, young and old, and also cattle, sheep, and asses.

22 But the two men who had been sent out as spies were told by Joshua to go into the prostitute's house and bring out her and all who belonged to her, as they had sworn to do. So the young men went and brought out Rahab, her father and mother, her brothers and all who belonged to her. They brought out the whole family and left them outside the Israelite camp. They then set fire to the city and everything in it, except that they deposited the silver and gold and the vessels of copper and iron in the treasury of the LORD's house. Thus Joshua spared the lives of Rahab the prostitute, her household and all who belonged to her, because she had hidden the men whom Joshua had sent to Jericho as spies; she and her family settled permanently among the Israelites. It was then that Joshua laid this curse on Jericho:

May the LORD's curse light on the man who comes forward to rebuild this city of Jericho:
the laying of its foundations shall cost him his eldest son,
the setting up of its gates shall cost him his youngest.

Thus the LORD was with Joshua, and his fame spread throughout the country. 27

But the Israelites defied the ban: Achan son of Carmi, son of Zabdi, son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, took some of the forbidden things, and the LORD was angry with the Israelites. 7

Joshua sent men from Jericho with orders to go up to Ai, near Bethaven, east of Bethel, and see how the land lay; so the men went up and explored Ai. They returned to Joshua and reported that there was no need for the whole army to move: 'Let some two or three thousand men go forward to attack Ai. Do not make the whole army toil up there; the population is small.' And so about three thousand men went up, but they turned tail before the men of Ai, who killed some thirty-six of them; they chased them all the way from the gate to the Quarries^a and killed them on the pass. At this the courage of the people melted and flowed away like water. Joshua and the elders of Israel rent their clothes and flung themselves face downwards to the ground; they lay before the Ark of the LORD till evening and threw dust on their heads. Joshua said, 'Alas, O Lord GOD, why didst thou bring this people across the Jordan only to hand us over to the Amorites to be destroyed? If only we had been content to settle on the other side of the Jordan! I beseech thee, O Lord; what can I say, now that Israel has been routed by the enemy? When the Canaanites and all the natives of the country hear of this, they will come swarming around us and wipe us off the face of the earth. What wilt thou do then for the honour of thy great name?' 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9

The LORD said to Joshua, 'Stand up; why lie prostrate on your face? Israel has sinned: they have broken the covenant which I laid upon them, by taking forbidden things for themselves. They have stolen them, and concealed it by mingling them with their own possessions. That is why the Israelites cannot stand against their enemies: they are put to flight because they have brought themselves under the ban. Unless they destroy every single thing among them that is forbidden under the ban, I will be with them no longer. Stand up; you must hallow the people; tell them they must hallow themselves for tomorrow. Tell them, These are the words of the LORD the God of Israel: You have forbidden things among you, Israel; you cannot stand against your enemies until you have rid yourselves of them. In the morning come forward tribe by tribe, and the tribe which the LORD chooses shall come forward clan by clan; the clan which the LORD chooses shall come forward family by family; and the family which the LORD chooses shall come forward man by man. The man who is chosen as the harbinger of forbidden things shall be burnt, he and all that is his, because he has broken the covenant of the LORD and committed outrage in Israel.' Early in the morning Joshua rose and brought Israel forward tribe by tribe, and the tribe of Judah was chosen. He brought forward the clans of Judah, and the clan of Zerah was chosen; then the clan of Zerah family by family, and the family of Zabdi was chosen. He brought that family forward man by man, and Achan son of Carmi, son of Zabdi, son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, was chosen. Then Joshua said to Achan, 'My 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 son, give honour to the LORD the God of Israel and make your confession to him: tell me what you have done, hide nothing from me.' Achan answered 20 Joshua, 'I confess, I have sinned against the LORD the God of Israel. This 21 is what I did: among the booty I caught sight of a fine mantle from Shinar, two hundred shekels of silver, and a bar of gold weighing fifty shekels. I 22 coveted them and I took them. You will find them hidden in the ground inside my tent, with the silver underneath.' So Joshua sent messengers, 23 who ran to the tent, and there was the stuff ^a hidden in the tent with the silver underneath. They took the things from the tent, brought them to 24 Joshua and all the Israelites, and spread them out before the LORD. Then Joshua took Achan son of Zerah, with the silver, the mantle, and the bar of gold, together with his sons and daughters, his oxen, his asses, and his sheep, his tent, and everything he had, and he and all Israel brought them

25 up to the Vale of Achor. ^b Joshua said, 'What trouble you have brought on us! Now the LORD will bring trouble on you.' Then all the Israelites stoned
26 him to death; and they raised a great pile of stones over him, which remains to this day. So the LORD's anger was abated. That is why to this day that place is called the Vale of Achor.

8 THE LORD SAID TO JOSHUA, 'Do not be fearful or dismayed; take the whole army and attack Ai. I deliver the king of Ai into your hands, him
2 and his people, his city and his country. Deal with Ai and her king as you dealt with Jericho and her king; but you may keep for yourselves the cattle and any other spoil that you may take. Set an ambush for the city to the 3 west of it.' So Joshua and all the army prepared for the assault on Ai. He 4 chose thirty thousand fighting men and dispatched them by night, with these orders: 'Lie in ambush to the west of the city, not far from it, and all
5 of you hold yourselves in readiness. I myself will approach the city with the rest of the army, and when the enemy come out to meet us as they did
6 last time, we shall take to flight before them. Then they will come out and pursue us until we have drawn them away from the city, thinking that we
7 have taken to flight as we did last time. While we are in flight, come out from your ambush and occupy the city; the LORD your God will deliver it
8 into your hands. When you have taken it, set it on fire. Thus you will do
9 what the LORD commands. These are your orders.' So Joshua sent them off, and they went to the place of ambush and waited between Bethel and Ai to the west of Ai, while Joshua spent the night with the army.

10 Early in the morning Joshua rose, mustered the army and marched 11 against Ai, he himself and the elders of Israel at its head. All the armed forces with him marched on until they came within sight of the city. They 12 encamped north of Ai, with the valley between them and the city; but Joshua took some five thousand men and set them in ambush between 14 Bethel and Ai to the west of the city. ^c When the king of Ai saw them, he and the citizens rose with all speed that morning and marched out to do battle against Israel; he did not know that there was an ambush set for him to the west of the city. Joshua and all the Israelites made as if they were 15 routed by them and fled towards the wilderness, and all the people in the 16 city were called out in pursuit. So they pursued Joshua and were drawn away from the city. Not a man was left in Ai; they had all gone out 17 in pursuit of the Israelites and during the pursuit had left the city undefended.

^a Or the mantle. ^b That is Trouble. ^c So Sept.; Heb. adds (13) So the army pitched camp to the north of the city, and the rearguard to the west, while Joshua went that night into the valley.

Then the LORD said to Joshua, 'Point towards Ai with the dagger you 18 are holding, for I will deliver the city into your hands.' So Joshua pointed with his dagger towards Ai. At his signal, the men in ambush rose quickly 19 from their places and, entering the city at a run, took it and promptly set fire to it. The men of Ai looked back and saw the smoke from the city already 20 going up to the sky; they were powerless to make their escape in any direction, and the Israelites who had feigned flight towards the wilderness turned 21 on their pursuers. For when Joshua and all the Israelites saw that the ambush had seized the city and that smoke was already going up from it, 22 they turned and fell upon the men of Ai. Those who had come out to meet the Israelites were now hemmed in with Israelites on both sides of them, and the Israelites cut them down until there was not a single survivor, nor 23 had any escaped. The king of Ai was taken alive and brought to Joshua.
When the Israelites had cut down to the last man all the citizens of Ai who 24 were in the open country or in the wilderness to which they had pursued them, and the massacre was complete, they all turned back to Ai and put it to the sword. The number who were killed that day, men and women, was 25 twelve thousand, the whole population of Ai. Joshua held out his dagger and did not draw back his hand until he had put to death all who lived in 26 Ai; but the Israelites kept for themselves the cattle and any other spoil that they took, following the word of the LORD spoken to Joshua. So Joshua 27 burnt Ai to the ground, and left it the desolate ruined mound it remains to 28 this day. He hanged the king of Ai on a tree and left him there till sunset; and when the sun had set, he gave the order and they cut him down and 29 flung down his body at the entrance of the city gate. Over the body they raised a great pile of stones, which is there to this day.

At that time Joshua built an altar to the LORD the God of Israel on Mount 30
Ebal. The altar was of blocks of undressed stone on which no tool of iron 31 had been used, following the commands given to the Israelites by Moses the servant of the LORD, as is described in the book of the law of Moses. At the altar they offered whole-offerings to the LORD, and slaughtered shared- 32 offerings. There in the presence of the Israelites he engraved on blocks ^a of 33 stone a copy of the law of Moses. And all Israel, elders, officers, and judges, took their stand on either side of the Ark, facing the levitical priests who 34 carried the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD—all Israel, native and alien alike. Half of them stood facing Mount Gerizim and half facing Mount Ebal, to fulfil the command of Moses the servant of the LORD that the 35 blessing should be pronounced first. Then Joshua recited the whole of the blessing and the cursing word by word, as they are written in the book of the law. There was not a single word of all that Moses had commanded which he did not read aloud before the whole congregation of Israel, including the women and dependants and the aliens resident in their company.

9 When the news of these happenings reached all the kings west of the Jordan, in the hill-country, the Shephelah, and all the coast of the Great Sea running up to the Lebanon, the kings of the Hittites, Amorites, 2 Canaanites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites agreed to join forces and fight against Joshua and Israel.

3 When the inhabitants of Gibeon heard how Joshua had dealt with 4 Jericho and Ai, they adopted a ruse of their own. They went and disguised themselves, with old sacking for their asses, old wine-skins split and 5 mended, old and patched sandals for their feet, old clothing to wear, and by 6 way of provisions nothing but dry and mouldy bread. They came to Joshua in the camp at Gilgal and said to him and the Israelites, 'We have come from 7 a distant country to ask you now to grant us a treaty.' The Israelites said to the Hivites, 'But maybe you live in our neighbourhood: if so, how can we 8 grant you a treaty?' They said to Joshua, 'We are your slaves.' Joshua asked 9 them who they were and where they came from. 'Sir,' they replied, 'our country is very far away, and we have come because of the renown of the LORD your God. We have heard of his fame, of all that he did to Egypt, 10 and to the two Amorite kings east of the Jordan, Sihon king of Heshbon and Og king of Bashan who lived at Ashtaroth. Our elders and all the 11 people of our country told us to take provisions for the journey and come to meet you, and say, "We are your slaves; please grant us a treaty." Look 12 at our bread; it was hot from the oven when we packed it at home on the day we came away. Now it is dry and mouldy. Look at the wine-skins; they 13 were new when we filled them, and now they are all split; look at our clothes and our sandals, worn out by the long journey.' The chief men of the com- 14 munity accepted some of their provisions, and did not at first seek guidance from the LORD. So Joshua received them peaceably and granted them a 15 treaty, promising to spare their lives, and the chiefs pledged their faith to them on oath.

16 Within three days of granting them the treaty, the Israelites learnt that 17 they were in fact neighbours and lived near by. So the Israelites set out and on the third day they reached their cities; these were Gibeon, Kephirah, 18 Beeroth, and Kiriath-jearim. The Israelites did not slaughter them, because of the oath which the chief men of the community had sworn to them by the LORD the God of Israel, but the people were all indignant with their 19 chiefs. The chiefs all replied to the assembled people, 'But we swore an oath to them by the LORD the God of Israel; we cannot touch them now. 20 What we will do is this: we will spare their lives so that the oath which we swore to them may bring no harm upon us. But though their lives must 21 be spared, they shall be set to chop wood and draw water for the community.' The people agreed to do as their chiefs had said. Joshua summoned 22 the Gibeonites and said, 'Why did you play this trick on us? You told us that you live a long way off, when you are near neighbours. There is a 23 curse upon you for this: for all time you shall provide us with slaves, to chop wood and draw water for the house of my God.' They answered 24 Joshua, 'We were told, sir, that the LORD your God had commanded Moses his servant to give you the whole country and to exterminate all its inhabitants; so because of you we were in terror of our lives, and that is why we did this. We are in your power: do with us whatever you think right and proper.' What he did was this: he saved them from death at the hands of the Israelites, and they did not kill them; but thenceforward he set them to chop wood and draw water for the community and for the altar of the LORD. And to this day they do it at the place which the LORD chose.

When Adoni-zedek king of Jerusalem heard that Joshua had captured Ai and destroyed it (for Joshua had dealt with Ai and her king as he had dealt with Jericho and her king), and that the inhabitants of Gibeon had made their peace with Israel and were living among them, he was greatly alarmed; for Gibeon was a large place, like a royal city: it was larger than Ai, and its men were all good fighters. So Adoni-zedek king of Jerusalem sent to Hoham king of Hebron, Piram king of Jarmuth, Japhia king of Lachish, and Debir king of Eglon, and said, 'Come up and help me, and we will attack the Gibeonites, because they have made their peace with Joshua and the Israelites.' So the five Amorite kings, the kings of Jerusalem, Hebron, Jarmuth, Lachish, and Eglon, joined forces and advanced to take up their positions for the attack on Gibeon. But the men of Gibeon sent this message to Joshua in the camp at Gilgal: 'We are your slaves, do not abandon us, come quickly to our relief. All the Amorite kings in the hill-country have joined forces against us; come and help us.' So Joshua went up from Gilgal with all his forces and all his fighting men. The LORD said to Joshua, 'Do not be afraid of them; I have delivered them into your hands, and not a man will be able to stand against you.' Joshua came upon them suddenly, after marching all night from Gilgal. The LORD threw them into confusion before the Israelites, and Joshua defeated them utterly in Gibeon; he pursued them down the pass of Beth-horon and kept up the slaughter as far as Azekah and Makkedah. As they were fleeing from Israel down the pass, the LORD hurled great hailstones at them out of the sky all the way to Azekah: more died from the hailstones than the Israelites slew by the sword.

On that day when the LORD delivered the Amorites into the hands of Israel, Joshua spoke with the LORD, and he said in the presence of Israel:

Stand still, O Sun, in Gibeon;
stand, Moon, in the Vale of Ajalon.

So the sun stood still and the moon halted until a nation had taken vengeance on its enemies, as indeed is written in the Book of Jashar.^a The sun stayed in mid heaven and made no haste to set for almost a whole day. Never before or since has there been such a day as this day on which the LORD listened to the voice of a man; for the LORD fought for Israel. So Joshua and all the Israelites returned to the camp at Gilgal.

The five kings fled and hid themselves in a cave at Makkedah, and Joshua was told that they had been found hidden in this cave. Joshua replied, 'Roll some great stones to the mouth of the cave and post men there to keep watch over the kings. But you must not stay; keep up the 20 pursuit, attack your enemies from the rear and do not let them reach their cities; the LORD your God has delivered them into your hands.' When Joshua and the Israelites had finished the work of slaughter and all had been put to the sword—except a few survivors who escaped and entered the fortified cities—the whole army rejoined Joshua at Makkedah in peace; not a man of the Israelites suffered so much as a scratch on his tongue.

22 Then Joshua said, 'Open the mouth of the cave, and bring me out those 23 five kings.' They did so; they brought the five kings out of the cave, the 24 kings of Jerusalem, Hebron, Jarmuth, Lachish, and Eglon. When they had brought them to Joshua, he summoned all the Israelites and said to the commanders of the troops who had served with him, 'Come forward and put your feet on the necks of these kings.' So they came forward and put their feet on their necks. Joshua said to them, 'Do not be fearful or 25 dismayed; be strong and resolute; for the LORD will do this to every enemy you fight against.' And he struck down the kings and slew them; then he 26 hung their bodies on five trees, where they remained hanging till evening. At sunset, on Joshua's orders they took them down from the trees and 27 threw them into the cave in which they had hidden; they piled great stones against its mouth, and there the stones are to this day.^d

28 On that same day, Joshua captured Makkedah and put both king and people to the sword, destroying both them and every living thing in the city. He left no survivor, and he dealt with the king of Makkedah as he 29 had dealt with the king of Jericho. Then Joshua and all the Israelites marched on from Makkedah to Libnah and attacked it. The LORD 30 delivered the city and its king to the Israelites, and they put its people and every living thing in it to the sword; they left no survivor there, and dealt 31 with its king as they had dealt with the king of Jericho. From Libnah Joshua and all the Israelites marched on to Lachish, took up their positions 32 and attacked it. The LORD delivered Lachish into their hands; they took it on the second day and put every living thing in it to the sword, as they had done at Libnah.

33 Meanwhile Horam king of Gezer had advanced to the relief of Lachish; but Joshua struck them down, both king and people, and not a man of 34 them survived. Then Joshua and all the Israelites marched on from Lachish to Eglon, took up their positions and attacked it; that same day they cap- 35 tured it and put its inhabitants to the sword, destroying every living thing in it as they had done at Lachish. From Eglon Joshua and all the Israelites 36 advanced to Hebron and attacked it. They captured it and put its king to the sword together with every living thing in it and in all its villages; as at 37 Eglon, he left no survivor, destroying it and every living thing in it. Then Joshua and all the Israelites wheeled round towards Debir and attacked it. 38 They captured the city with its king, and all its villages, put them to the sword and destroyed every living thing; they left no survivor. They dealt 39 with Debir and its king as they had dealt with Hebron and with Libnah and its king.

40 So Joshua massacred the population of the whole region—the hill-country, the Negeb, the Shephelah, the watersheds—and all their kings

^d and there . . . day: or on this very day.

He left no survivor, destroying everything that drew breath, as the LORD the God of Israel had commanded. Joshua carried the slaughter from Kadesh-barnea to Gaza, over the whole land of Goshen and as far as Gibeon. All these kings he captured at the same time, and their country with them, for the LORD the God of Israel fought for Israel. And Joshua returned with all the Israelites to the camp at Gilgal.

When Jabin king of Hazor heard of all this, he sent to Jobab king of Madon, to the kings of Shimron and Akshaph, to the northern kings in the hill-country, in the Arabah opposite Kinnereth, in the Shephelah, and in the district of Dor on the west, the Canaanites to the east and the west, the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, and Jebusites in the hill-country, and the Hivites below Hermon in the land of Mizpah. They took the field with all their forces, a great horde countless as the grains of sand on the sea-shore, among them a great number of horses and chariots. All these kings made common cause, and came and encamped at the waters of Merom to fight against Israel. The LORD said to Joshua, 'Do not be afraid of them, for at this time tomorrow I shall deliver them to Israel all dead men; you shall hamstring their horses and burn their chariots.' So Joshua and his army surprised them by the waters of Merom and fell upon them. The LORD delivered them into the hands of Israel; they struck them down and pursued them as far as Greater Sidon, Misrephoth on the west, and the Vale of Mizpah on the east. They struck them down until not a man was left alive. Joshua dealt with them as the LORD had commanded: he hamstrung their horses and burnt their chariots.

At this point Joshua turned his forces against Hazor, formerly the head of all these kingdoms. He captured the city and put its king to death with the sword. They killed every living thing in it and wiped them all out; they spared nothing that drew breath, and Hazor itself they destroyed by fire. So Joshua captured these kings and their cities and put them to the sword, destroying them all, as Moses the servant of the LORD had commanded. The cities whose ruined mounds are still standing were not burnt by the Israelites; it was Hazor alone that Joshua burnt. The Israelites plundered all these cities and kept for themselves the cattle and any other spoil they took; but they put every living soul to the sword until they had destroyed every one; they did not leave alive any one that drew breath. The LORD laid his commands on his servant Moses, and Moses laid these same commands on Joshua, and Joshua carried them out. Not one of the commands laid on Moses by the LORD did he leave unfulfilled.

And so Joshua took the whole country, the hill-country, all the Negeb, all the land of Goshen, the Shephelah, the Arabah, and the Israelite hill-country with the adjoining lowlands. His conquests extended from the bare mountain which leads up to Seir as far as Baal-gad in the Vale of Lebanon under Mount Hermon. He took prisoner all their kings, struck them down and put them to death. It was a long war that he fought against all these kingdoms. Except for the Hivites who lived in Gibeon, not one of their cities came to terms with the Israelites; all were taken by storm. It was the LORD's purpose that they should offer an obstinate resistance to the Israelites in battle, and that thus they should be annihilated without mercy and utterly destroyed,^a as the LORD had commanded Moses.

21 It was then that Joshua proceeded to wipe out the Anakim from the hill-country, from Hebron, Debir, Anab, all the hill-country of Judah and 22 all the hill-country of Israel, destroying both them and their cities. No Anakim were left in the land taken by the Israelites; they survived only in Gaza, Gath, and Ashdod.

23 Thus Joshua took the whole country, fulfilling all the commands that the LORD had laid on Moses; he assigned it as Israel's patrimony, allotting to each tribe its share; and the land was at peace.

The division of the land among the tribes

BY THIS TIME JOSHUA HAD BECOME VERY OLD, and the LORD said 13 to him, 'You are now a very old man, and much of the country remains to be occupied. The country which remains is this: all the districts of the 2 Philistines and all the Geshurite country (this is reckoned as Canaanite 3 territory from Shihor to the east of Egypt as far north as Ekron; and it belongs to the five lords of the Philistines, those of Gaza, Ashdod, Ashkelon, Gath, and Ekron); all the districts of the Avvim on the south; all the 4 Canaanite country from the low-lying land which belongs to the Sidonians as far as Aphek, the Amorite frontier; the land of the Gebalites and all the 5 Lebanon to the east from Baal-gad under Mount Hermon as far as Lebo-hamath. I will drive out in favour of the Israelites all the inhabitants of the 6 hill-country from the Lebanon as far as Misrephoth on the west, and all the Sidonians. In the mean time you are to allot all this to the Israelites for their patrimony, as I have commanded you. Distribute this land now to the 7 nine tribes and half the tribe of Manasseh for their patrimony.' For half 8 the tribe of Manasseh and ^a with them the Reubenites and the Gadites had each taken their patrimony which Moses gave them east of the Jordan, as Moses the servant of the LORD had ordained. It started from Aroer 9 which is by the edge of the gorge of the Arnon, and the level land half-way along the gorge, and included all the tableland from Medeba as far as 10 Dibon; all the cities of Sihon, the Amorite king who ruled in Heshbon, as far as the Ammonite frontier; and it also included Gilead and the Geshurite 11 and Maacathite territory, and all Mount Hermon and the whole of Bashan as far as Salcah, all the kingdom of Og which he ruled from both Ashtaroth 12 and Edrei in Bashan. He was a survivor of the remnant of the Rephaim, but Moses put them both to death and occupied their lands. But the 13 Israelites did not drive out the Geshurites and the Maacathites; the Geshurites and the Maacathites live among the Israelites to this day.
 The tribe of Levi, however, received no patrimony; the LORD the God of 14
 Israel is their patrimony, as he promised them.

So Moses allotted territory to the tribe of the Reubenites family by 15 family. Their territory started from Aroer which is by the edge of the gorge 16 of the Arnon, and the level land half-way along the gorge, and included all the tableland as far as Medeba; Heshbon and all its cities on the tableland, 17
 Dibon, Bamoth-baal, Beth-baal-meon, Jahaz, Kedemoth, Mephaath, 18
 Kiriathaim, Sibmah, Zereth-shahar on the hill in the Vale, Beth-peor, the 19 20 watershed of Pisgah, and Beth-jeshimoth, all the cities of the tableland, all the kingdom of Sihon the Amorite king who ruled in Heshbon, whom Moses put to death together with the princes of Midian, Evi, Rekem, Zur, Hur, and Reba, the vassals of Sihon who dwelt in the country. Balaam son 22 of Beor, who practised augury, was among those whom the Israelites put to the sword. The boundary of the Reubenites was the Jordan and the 23 adjacent land: this is the patrimony of the Reubenites family by family, both the cities and their hamlets. Moses allotted territory to the Gadites family by family. Their territory 24 25

^a For half . . . Manasseh and: prob. rdg.; Heb. om.

was Jazer, all the cities of Gilead and half the Ammonite country as far as 26 Aroer which is east of Rabbah. It reached from Heshbon as far as Ramoth-27 mizpeh and Betonim, and from Mahanaim as far as the boundary of Lo-debar; it included in the valley Beth-haram, Beth-nimrah, Succoth, and Zaphon, the rest of the kingdom of Sihon king of Heshbon. The boundary 28 was the Jordan and the adjacent land as far as the end of the Sea of Kinnereth east of the Jordan. This is the patrimony of the Gadites family by family, both the cities and their hamlets.

29 Moses allotted territory to the half tribe of Manasseh: it was for half the 30 tribe of the Manassites family by family. Their territory ran from Mahan-aim and included all Bashan, all the kingdom of Og king of Bashan and all 31 Havvoth-jair in Bashan—sixty cities. Half Gilead, and Ashtaroth and Edrei the royal cities of Og in Bashan, belong to the sons of Machir son of Manasseh on behalf of half the Machirites family by family.

32 These are the territories which Moses allotted to the tribes as their 33 patrimonies in the lowlands of Moab east of the Jordan. But to the tribe of Levi he gave no patrimony: the LORD the God of Israel is their patrimony, as he promised them.

14 Now follow the possessions which the Israelites acquired in the land of Canaan, as Eleazar the priest, Joshua son of Nun, and the heads of the 2 families of the Israelite tribes allotted them. They were assigned by lot, following the LORD's command given through Moses, to the nine and a 3 half tribes. To two and a half tribes Moses had given patrimonies beyond 4 the Jordan; but he gave none to the Levites as he did to the others. The tribe of Joseph formed the two tribes of Manasseh and Ephraim. The Levites were given no share in the land, only cities to dwell in, with their 5 common land for flocks and herds. So the Israelites, following the LORD's command given to Moses, assigned the land.

6 Now the tribe of Judah had come to Joshua in Gilgal, and Caleb son of Jephunneh the Kenizzite said to him, 'You remember what the LORD said 7 to Moses the man of God concerning you and me at Kadesh-barnea. I was forty years old when Moses the servant of the LORD sent me from there to 8 explore the land, and I brought back an honest report. The others who went with me discouraged the people, but I loyally carried out the purpose of 9 the LORD my God. Moses swore an oath that day and said, "The land on which you have set foot shall be your patrimony and your sons' after you as a possession for ever; for you have loyally carried out the purpose of the 10 LORD my God." Well, the LORD has spared my life as he promised; it is now forty-five years since he made this promise to Moses, at the time when Israel was journeying in the wilderness. Today I am eighty-five years old.
11 I am still as strong as I was on the day when Moses sent me out; I am as fit 12 now for war as I was then and am ready to take the field again. Give me today this hill-country which the LORD then promised me. You heard on that day that the Anakim were there and their cities were large and well fortified. Perhaps the LORD will be with me and I shall dispossess them as 13 he promised.' Joshua blessed Caleb and gave him Hebron for his patri-14 mony, and that is why Hebron remains to this day in the patrimony of Caleb son of Jephunneh the Kenizzite. It is because he loyally carried out the purpose of the LORD the God of Israel. Formerly the name of Hebron 15 was Kiriath-arba. This Arba was the chief man of the Anakim. And the land was at peace.

This is the territory allotted to the tribe of the sons of Judah family by 15 family. It started from the Edomite frontier at the wilderness of Zin and ran as far as the Negeb at its southern end, and it had a common border 2 with the Negeb at the end of the Dead Sea, where an inlet of water bends towards the Negeb. It continued from the south by the ascent of Akrabbim, 3 passed by Zin, went up from the south of Kadesh-barnea, passed by Hezron, went on to Addar and turned round to Karka. It then passed along to 4 Azmon, reached the Torrent of Egypt, and its limit was the sea. This was their southern boundary.

The eastern boundary is the Dead Sea as far as the mouth of the Jordan 5 and the adjacent land northwards from the inlet of the sea, at the mouth of the Jordan. The boundary goes up to Beth-hoglah; it passes north of 6 Beth-arabah and thence to the stone of Bohan son of Reuben, thence to Debir from the Vale of Achor, and then turns north to the districts ^a in 7 front of the ascent of Adummim south of the gorge. The boundary then passes the waters of En-shemesh and the limit there is En-rogel. It then 8 goes up by the Valley of Ben-hinnom to the southern slope of the Jebusites (that is Jerusalem). Thence it goes up to the top of the hill which faces the Valley of Hinnom on the west; this is at the northern end of the Vale of 9 Rephaim. The boundary then bends round from the top of the hill to the spring of the waters of Nephtoah, runs round to the cities of Mount 10 Ephron and round to Baalah, that is Kiriath-jearim. It then continues westwards from Baalah to Mount Seir, passes on to the north side of the slope of Mount Jearim, that is Kesalon, down to Beth-shemesh and on to 11 Timnah. The boundary then goes north to the slope of Ekron, bends round to Shikkeron, crosses to Mount Baalah and reaches Jabneel; its limit is the sea. The western boundary is the Great Sea and the land adjacent. This is 12 the whole circuit of the boundary of the tribe of Judah family by family.

Caleb son of Jephunneh received his share of the land within the tribe 13 of Judah as the LORD had said to Joshua. It was Kiriath-arba, that is Hebron. This Arba was the ancestor of the Anakim. Caleb drove out the 14 three Anakim: these were Sheshai, Ahiman and Talmi, descendants of Anak. From there he attacked the inhabitants of Debir; the name of Debir 15 was formerly Kiriath-sepher. Caleb announced that whoever should 16 attack Kiriath-sepher and capture it would receive his daughter Achsah in marriage. Othniel, son of Caleb's brother Kenaz, captured it, and Caleb 17 gave him his daughter Achsah. When she came to him, he incited her to ask her father for a piece of land. As she sat on the ass, she broke wind, and 18 Caleb asked her, 'What did you mean by that?' She replied, 'I want a 19 favour from you. You have put me in this dry Negeb; you must give me pools of water as well.' So Caleb gave her the upper pool and the lower pool.

This is the patrimony of the tribe of the sons of Judah family by family. 20

63 At Jerusalem, the men of Judah were unable to drive out the Jebusites who lived there, and to this day Jebusites and men of Judah live together in Jerusalem.

16 This is the lot that fell to the sons of Joseph: the boundary runs from the Jordan at Jericho, east of the waters of Jericho by the wilderness, and goes 2 up from Jericho into the hill-country to Bethel. It runs on from Bethel to 3 Luz and crosses the Archite border at Ataroth.^c Westwards it descends to the boundary of the Japhletites as far as the boundary of Lower Beth-4 horon and Gezer; its limit is the sea. Here Manasseh and Ephraim the sons of Joseph received their patrimony.

5 This was the boundary of the Ephraimites family by family: their 6 eastern boundary ran from Ataroth-addar up to Upper Beth-horon. It continued westwards to Michmethath on the north, going round by the 7 east of Taanath-shiloh and passing by it on the east of Janoah. It descends from Janoah to Ataroth and Naarath, touches Jericho and continues to the 8 Jordan, and from Tappuah it goes westwards by the gorge of Kanah; and its limit is the sea. This is the patrimony of the tribe of Ephraim family by family. There were also cities reserved for the Ephraimites within the patrimony of the Manassites, each of these cities with its hamlets. They did not however drive out the Canaanites who dwelt in Gezer; the Canaanites have lived among the Ephraimites to the present day but have been subject to forced labour in perpetuity.

This is the territory allotted to the tribe of Manasseh, Joseph's eldest son. Machir was Manasseh's eldest son and father of Gilead, a fighting man; Gilead and Bashan were allotted to him.

The rest of the Manassites family by family were the sons of Abiezer, the sons of Helek, the sons of Asriel, the sons of Shechem, the sons of Hephher, and the sons of Shemida; these were the male offspring of Manasseh son of Joseph family by family.

Zelophehad son of Hephher, son of Gilead, son of Machir, son of Manasseh, had no sons but only daughters: their names were Mahlah, Noah, Hoglah, Milcah and Tirzah. They presented themselves before Eleazar the priest and Joshua son of Nun, and before the chiefs, and they said, 'The LORD commanded Moses to allow us to inherit on the same footing as our kinsmen.' They were therefore given a patrimony on the same footing as their father's brothers according to the commandment of the LORD.

There fell to Manasseh's lot ten shares, apart from the country of Gilead and Bashan beyond the Jordan, because Manasseh's daughters had received a patrimony on the same footing as his sons. The country of Gilead belonged to the rest of Manasseh's sons. The boundary of Manasseh reached from Asher as far as Michmethath, which is to the east of Shechem, and thence southwards towards Jashub by ^a En-tappuah. The territory of Tappuah belonged to Manasseh, but Tappuah itself was on the border of Manasseh and belonged to Ephraim. The boundary then followed the gorge of Kanah to the south of the gorge (these cities ^b belong to Ephraim, although they lie among the cities of Manasseh), the boundary of Manasseh being on the north of the gorge; its limit was the sea. The southern side belonged to Ephraim and the northern to Manasseh, and their boundary was the sea. They marched with Asher on the north and Issachar on the east. But in Issachar and Asher, Manasseh possessed Beth-shean and its villages, Ibleam and its villages, the inhabitants of Dor and its villages, the inhabitants of En-dor and its villages, the inhabitants of Taanach and its villages, and the inhabitants of Megiddo and its villages. (The third is the district of Dor. ^c) The Manassites were unable to occupy these cities; the Canaanites maintained their hold on that part of the country. When the Israelites grew stronger, they put the Canaanites to forced labour, but they did not drive them out.

The sons of Joseph appealed to Joshua and said, 'Why have you given us only one lot and one share as our patrimony? We are a numerous people; so far the LORD has blessed us.' Joshua replied, 'If you are so numerous, go up into the forest in the territory of the Perizzites and the Rephaim and clear it for yourselves. You are their near neighbours ^d in the hill-country

16 of Ephraim.' The sons of Joseph said, 'The hill-country is not enough for us; besides, all the Canaanites have chariots of iron, those who inhabit the valley beside Beth-shean and its villages and also those in the Vale of Jezreel.' Joshua replied to the tribes of Joseph, that is Ephraim and Manasseh: 'You are a numerous people with great resources. You shall not have one lot only. The hill-country is yours. It is forest land; clear it and it shall be yours to its furthest limits. The Canaanites may be powerful and equipped with chariots of iron, but you will be able to drive them out.'

18 THE WHOLE COMMUNITY OF THE ISRAELITES met together at Shiloh and established the Tent of the Presence there. The country now lay subdued at their feet, but there remained seven tribes among the Israelites who had not yet taken possession of the patrimonies which would fall to them. Joshua therefore said to them, 'How much longer will you neglect to take possession of the land which the LORD the God of your fathers has given you? Appoint three men from each tribe whom I may send out to travel through the whole country. They shall make a register showing the patrimony suitable for each tribe, and come back to me, and then it can be shared out among you in seven portions. Judah shall retain his boundary in the south, and the house of Joseph their boundary in the north. You shall register the land in seven portions, bring the lists here, and I will cast lots for you in the presence of the LORD our God. Levi has no share among you, because his share is the priesthood of the LORD; and Gad, Reuben, and the half tribe of Manasseh have each taken possession of their patrimony east of the Jordan, which Moses the servant of the LORD gave them.'

8 So the men set out on their journeys. Joshua ordered the emissaries to survey the country: 'Go through the whole country,' he said, 'survey it and return to me, and I will cast lots for you here before the LORD in Shiloh.' So the men went and passed through the country; they registered it on a scroll, city by city, in seven portions, and came to Joshua in the camp at Shiloh. Joshua cast lots for them in Shiloh before the LORD, and distributed the land there to the Israelites in their proper shares.

11 This is the lot which fell to the tribe of the Benjamites family by family. The territory allotted to them lay between the territory of Judah and Joseph. Their boundary at its northern corner starts from the Jordan; it goes up the slope on the north side of Jericho, continuing westwards into the hill-country, and its limit there is the wilderness of Beth-aven. From there it runs on to Luz, to the southern slope of Luz, that is Bethel, and down to Ataroth-addar over the hill-country south of Lower Beth-horon. The boundary then bends round at the west corner southwards from the hill-country above Beth-horon, and its limit is Kiriath-baal, that is Kiriath-jearim, a city of Judah. This is the western side. The southern side starts from the edge of Kiriath-jearim and ends ^a at the spring of the waters of Nephtoah. It goes down to the edge of the hill to the east of the Valley of Ben-hinnom, north of the Vale of Rephaim, down the Valley of Hinnom, to the southern slope of the Jebusites and so to En-rogel. It then bends round north and comes out at En-shemesh, goes on to the districts in front of the ascent of Adummim and thence down to the Stone of Bohan son of Reuben. It passes to the northern side of the slope facing the Arabah and goes down to the Arabah, passing the northern slope of Beth-hoglah, and its limit is the northern inlet of the Dead Sea, at the southern mouth of the Jordan. This forms the southern boundary. The Jordan is the boundary on the east side. This is the patrimony of the Benjamites, the complete circuit of their boundaries family by family.

The cities belonging to the tribe of the Benjamites family by family are: Jericho, Beth-hoglah, Emek-keziz, Beth-arabah, Zemaraim, Bethel, Avvim, Parah, Ophrah, Kephrah-ammoni, Ophni, and Geba: twelve cities in all with their hamlets. Gibeon, Ramah, Beeroth, Mizpah, Kephirah, Mozah, Rekem, Irpeel, Taralah, Zela, Eleph, Jebus, that is Jerusalem, Gibeah, and Kiriath-jearim: fourteen cities in all with their hamlets. This is the patrimony of the Benjamites family by family.

The second lot cast was for Simeon, the tribe of the Simeonites family by family. Their patrimony was included in that of Judah. For their patrimony they had Beersheba,^a Moladah, Hazar-shual, Balah, Ezem, Eltolad, Bethul, Hormah, Ziklag, Beth-marcaboth, Hazar-susah, Beth-lebaoth, and Sharuhin: in all, thirteen cities and their hamlets. They had Ain, Rimmon, Ether, and Ashan: four cities and their hamlets, all the hamlets round these cities as far as Baalath-beer, Ramath-negeb. This was the patrimony of the tribe of Simeon family by family. The patrimony of the Simeonites was part of the land allotted to the men of Judah, because their share was larger than they needed. The Simeonites therefore had their patrimony within the territory of Judah.

The third lot fell to the Zebulunites family by family. The boundary of their patrimony extended to Shadud.^b Their boundary went up westwards as far as Maralah and touched Dabbesheth and the gorge east of Jokneam. It turned back from Shadud eastwards towards the sunrise up to the border of Kisloth-tabor, on to Daberath and up to Japhia. From there it crossed eastwards towards the sunrise to Gath-hepher, to Ittah-kazin, out to Rimmon, and bent round^c to Neah. The northern boundary went round to Hannathon, and its limits were the Valley of Jiphtah-el, Kattath, Nahalal, Shimron, Idalah, and Bethlehem: twelve cities in all with their hamlets. These cities and their hamlets were the patrimony of Zebulun family by family.

The fourth lot cast was for the sons of Issachar family by family. Their boundary included Jezreel, Kesulloth, Shunem, Hapharaim, Shion, Anaharath, Rabbith, Kishion, Ebez, Remeth, En-gannim, En-haddah, and Beth-pazzez. The boundary touched Tabor, Shahazumah, and Beth-shemesh, and its limit was the Jordan: sixteen cities with their hamlets. This was the patrimony of the tribe of the sons of Issachar family by family, both cities and hamlets.

The fifth lot cast was for the tribe of the Asherites family by family. Their boundary included Helkath, Hali, Beten, Akshaph, Alammelech, Amad, and Mishal; it touched Carmel on the west and the swamp of 27 Libnath. It then turned back towards the east to Beth-dagon, touched 28 Zebulun and the Valley of Jiptah-el on the north at Beth-emek and Neiel, 29 and reached Cabul on its northern side, and Abdon, Rehob, Hammon, and 30 Kanan as far as Greater Sidon. The boundary turned at Ramah, going as 31 far as the fortress city of Tyre, and then back again to Hosah, and its limits 32 to the west were Mehalbeh, Achzib, Acco,^a Aphek, and Rehob: twenty-

33 The sixth lot cast was for the sons of Naphtali family by family. Their 34 boundary started from Heleph and from Elon-bezaananim and ran past 35 Adami-nekeb and Jabneel as far as Lakkum, and its limit was the Jordan.
 36 The boundary turned back westwards to Aznoth-tabor and from there on 37 to Hukok. It touched Zebulun on the south, Asher on the west, and the 38 low-lying land by the Jordan on the east. Their fortified cities were Ziddim, 39 Zer, Hammath, Rakkath, Kinnereth, Adamah, Ramah, Hazor, Kedesh, 40 Edrei, En-hazor, Iron, Migdal-el, Horem, Beth-anath, and Beth-shemesh:
 41 nineteen cities with their hamlets. This was the patrimony of the tribe of 42 Naphtali family by family, both cities and hamlets.

43 The seventh lot cast was for the tribe of the sons of Dan family by 44 family. The boundary of their patrimony was Zorah, Eshtaol, Ir-shemesh, 45 Shaalabbin, Aijalon, Jithlah, Elon, Timnah, Ekron, Eltekeh, Gibbethon, 46 Baalath, Jehud, Bene-berak, Gath-rimmon; and on the west Jarkon was 47 the boundary opposite Joppa. But the Danites, when they lost this territory, 48 marched against Leshem, attacked it and captured it. They put its people
 49 to the sword, occupied it and settled in it; and they renamed the place Dan
 50 after their ancestor Dan. This was the patrimony of the tribe of the sons 51 of Dan family by family, these cities and their hamlets.

52 So the Israelites finished allocating the land and marking out its front-
 53 iers; and they gave Joshua son of Nun a patrimony within their territory.
 54 They followed the commands of the LORD and gave him the city for which 55 he asked, Timnath-serah in the hill-country of Ephraim, and he rebuilt the city and settled in it.

56 These are the patrimonies which Eleazar the priest and Joshua son of 57 Nun and the heads of families assigned by lot to the Israelite tribes at 58 Shiloh before the LORD at the entrance of the Tent of the Presence. Thus they completed the distribution of the land.

0 1 2 THE LORD SPOKE TO JOSHUA and commanded him to say this to the 3 Israelites: 'You must now appoint your cities of refuge, of which I spoke
 4 to you through Moses. They are to be places where the homicide, the man
 5 who kills another inadvertently without intent, may take sanctuary. You shall single them out as cities of refuge from the vengeance of the dead man's next-of-kin. When a man takes sanctuary in one of these cities, he shall halt at the entrance of the city gate and state his case in the hearing of the elders of that city; if they admit him into the city, they shall grant him a place where he may live as one of themselves. When the next-of-kin comes in pursuit, they shall not surrender him: he struck down his fellow without intent and had not previously been at enmity with him. The homicide may stay in that city until he stands trial before the community. On the death of the ruling high priest, he may return to the city and home from which he has fled.' They dedicated Kedesh in Galilee in the hill-country of Naphtali, Shechem in the hill-country of Ephraim, and Kiriath-arba, that is Hebron, in the hill-country of Judah. Across the Jordan eastwards from Jericho they appointed these cities: from the tribe of Reuben, Bezer-in-the-wilderness on the tableland, from the tribe of Gad, Ramoth in Gilead, and from the tribe of Manasseh, Golan in Bashan. These were the appointed cities where any Israelite or any alien residing among them might take sanctuary. They were intended for any man who killed another inadvertently, to ensure that no one should die at the hand of the next-of-kin until he had stood his trial before the community.

The heads of the Levite families approached Eleazar the priest and Joshua son of Nun and the heads of the families of the tribes of Israel. They came before them at Shiloh in the land of Canaan and said, 'The LORD gave his command through Moses that we were to receive cities to live in, together with the common land belonging to them for our cattle.' The Israelites therefore gave part of their patrimony to the Levites, the following cities with their common land, according to the command of the LORD.

This is the territory allotted to the Kohathite family: those Levites who were descended from Aaron the priest received thirteen cities chosen by lot from the tribes of Judah, Simeon, and Benjamin; the rest of the Kohathites were allotted family by family ^a ten cities from the tribes of Ephraim, Dan, and half Manasseh.

The Gershonites were allotted family by family thirteen cities from the tribes of Issachar, Asher, Naphtali, and the half tribe of Manasseh in Bashan.

The Merarites were allotted family by family twelve cities from the tribes of Reuben, Gad, and Zebulun.

So the Israelites gave the Levites these cities with their common land, allocating them by lot as the LORD had commanded through Moses.

The Israelites designated the following cities out of the tribes of Judah and Simeon for those sons of Aaron who were of the Kohathite families of the Levites, because their lot came out first. They gave them Kiriath-arba (Arba was the father of Anak), that is Hebron, in the hill-country of Judah, and the common land round it, but they gave the open country near the city, and its hamlets, to Caleb son of Jephunneh as his patrimony.

To the sons of Aaron the priest they gave Hebron, a city of refuge for the homicide, Libnah, Jattir, Eshtemoa, Holon, Debir, Ashan, ^c Juttah, and Beth-shemesh, each with its common land: nine cities from these two tribes. They also gave cities from the tribe of Benjamin, Gibeon, Geba, Anathoth, and Almon, each with its common land: four cities. The number of the cities with their common land given to the sons of Aaron the priest was thirteen.

20 The cities which the rest of the Kohathite families of the Levites re-21 ceived by lot were from the tribe of Ephraim. They gave them Shechem, a city of refuge for the homicide, in the hill-country of Ephraim, Gezer, 22 23 Kibzaim, and Beth-horon, each with its common land: four cities. From 24 the tribe of Dan, they gave them Eltekeh, Gibbethon, Aijalon, and Gath-25 rimmon, each with its common land: four cities. From the half tribe of Manasseh, they gave them Taanach and Gath-rimmon, each with its 26 common land: two cities. The number of the cities belonging to the rest of the Kohathite families with their common land was ten.

27 The Gershonite families of the Levites received, out of the share of the half tribe of Manasseh, Golan in Bashan, a city of refuge for the homicide, 28 and Be-ashtaroth,^a each with its common land: two cities. From the tribe
 29 of Issachar they received Kishon, Daberah, Jarmuth, and En-gannim, 30 each with its common land: four cities. From the tribe of Asher they 31 received Mishal, Abdon, Helkath, and Rehob, each with its common land:
 32 four cities. From the tribe of Naphtali they received Kedesh in Galilee, a city of refuge for the homicide, Hammoth-dor, and Kartan, each with its 33 common land: three cities. The number of the cities of the Gershonite families with their common land was thirteen.

34 From the tribe of Zebulun the rest of the Merarite families of the Levites
 35 received Jokneam, Kartah, Rimmon,^b and Nahalal, each with its common 36 land: four cities. East of the Jordan at Jericho, from the tribe of Reuben they were given Bezer-in-the-wilderness on the tableland, a city of refuge 37 for the homicide, Jahaz, Kedemoth, and Mephaath, each with its common 38 land: four cities. From the tribe of Gad they received Ramoth in Gilead, 39 a city of refuge for the homicide, Mahanaim, Heshbon, and Jazer, each 40 with its common land: four cities in all. Twelve cities in all fell by lot to the rest of the Merarite families of the Levites.

41 The cities of the Levites within the Israelite patrimonies numbered 42 forty-eight in all, with their common land. Each city had its common land round it, and it was the same for all of them.

43 Thus the LORD gave Israel all the land which he had sworn to give to 44 their forefathers; they occupied it and settled in it. The LORD gave them security on every side as he had sworn to their forefathers. Of all their enemies not a man could withstand them; the LORD delivered all their 45 enemies into their hands. Not a word of the LORD's promises to the house of Israel went unfulfilled; they all came true.

22 AT THAT TIME JOSHUA SUMMONED THE REUBENITES, the Gadites,
 2 and the half tribe of Manasseh, and said to them, 'You have observed all the commands of Moses the servant of the LORD, and you have obeyed me 3 in all the commands that I too have laid upon you. All this time you have not deserted your brothers; up to this day you have diligently observed 4 the charge laid on you by the LORD your God. And now that the LORD your God has given your brothers security as he promised them, you may turn now and go to your homes in your own land, the land which Moses the servant of the LORD gave you east of the Jordan. But take good care to 5 keep the commands and the law which Moses the servant of the LORD gave you: to love the LORD your God; to conform to his ways; to observe his commandments; to hold fast to him; to serve him with your whole heart and soul.' Joshua blessed them and dismissed them; and they went 6 to their homes. He sent them home with his blessing, and with these words: 7-8

 'Go to your homes richly laden, with great herds, with silver and gold, copper and iron, and with large stores of clothing. See that you share with your kinsmen the spoil you have taken from your enemies.'

Moses had given territory to one half of the tribe of Manasseh in Bashan, and Joshua gave territory to the other half west of the Jordan among their kinsmen.

So the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh left the 9 rest of the Israelites and went from Shiloh in Canaan on their way into Gilead, the land which belonged to them according to the decree of the LORD given through Moses. When these tribes came to Geliloth by the 10
 Jordan,^a they built a great altar there by the river for all to see. The Israel- 11 ites heard that the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh had built the altar facing the land of Canaan, at Geliloth by the Jordan opposite the Israelite side. When the news reached them, all the commu- 12 nity of the Israelites assembled at Shiloh to advance against them with a display of force. At the same time the Israelites sent Phinehas son of 13 Eleazar the priest into the land of Gilead, to the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh, and ten leading men with him, one from 14 each of the tribes of Israel, each of them the head of a household among the clans of Israel. They came to the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half 15 tribe of Manasseh in the land of Gilead, and remonstrated with them in these words: 'We speak for the whole community of the LORD. What is 16 this treachery you have committed against the God of Israel? Are you ceasing to follow the LORD and building your own altar this day in defiance 17 of the LORD? Remember our offence at Peor, for which a plague fell upon the community of the LORD; to this day we have not been purified from it.
 Was that offence so slight that you dare cease to follow the LORD today? 18
 If you defy the LORD today, then tomorrow he will be angry with the whole community of Israel. If the land you have taken is unclean, then cross over 19 to the LORD's own land, where the Tabernacle of the LORD now rests, and take a share of it with us; but do not defy the LORD and involve us in your defiance by building an altar of your own apart from the altar of the LORD 20 our God. Remember the treachery of Achan son of Zerah, who defied the ban and the whole community of Israel suffered for it. He was not the only one who paid for that sin with his life.'

Then the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh 21 remonstrated with the heads of the clans of Israel: 'The LORD the God of 22 gods, the LORD the God of gods, he knows, and Israel must know: if this had been an act of defiance or treachery against the LORD, you could not save us today. If we had built ourselves an altar meaning to forsake the 23
 LORD, or had offered whole-offerings and grain-offerings upon it, or had ^a Prob. rdg. ; Heb. adds which was in Canaan.

- presented shared-offerings, the LORD himself would exact punishment.
- 24 The truth is that we have done this for fear that the day may come when your sons will say to ours, "What have you to do with the LORD, the God 25 of Israel? The LORD put the Jordan as a boundary between our sons and your sons. You have no share in the LORD, you men of Reuben and Gad." 26 Thus your sons will prevent our sons from going in awe of the LORD. So we resolved to set ourselves to build an altar, not for whole-offerings and 27 sacrifices, but as a witness between us and you, and between our descendants after us. Thus we shall be able to do service before the LORD, as we do now, with our whole-offerings, our sacrifices, and our shared-offerings;
and your sons will never be able to say to our sons that they have no 28 share in the LORD. And we thought, if ever they do say this to us and our descendants, we will point to this copy of the altar of the LORD which we have made, not for whole-offerings and not for sacrifices, but as a witness 29 between us and you. God forbid that we should defy the LORD and forsake him this day by building another altar for whole-offerings, grain-offerings, and sacrifices, in addition to the altar of the LORD our God which stands in front of his Tabernacle.'
- 30 When Phinehas the priest and the leaders of the community, the heads of the Israelite clans, who were with him, heard what the Reubenites, the 31 Gadites, and the Manassites said, they were satisfied. Phinehas son of Eleazar the priest said to the Reubenites, Gadites, and Manassites, 'We know now that the LORD is in our midst today; you have not acted treacherously against the LORD, and thus you have preserved all Israel from punish-32 ment at his hand.' Then Phinehas son of Eleazar the priest and the leaders left the Reubenites and the Gadites in Gilead and reported to the Israelites 33 in Canaan. The Israelites were satisfied, and they blessed God and thought no more of attacking Reuben and Gad and ravaging their land. The 34 Reubenites and Gadites said, 'The altar is a witness between us that the LORD is God', and they named it 'Witness'.

Joshua's farewell and death

- 23 A LONG TIME HAD PASSED since the LORD had given Israel security from all the enemies who surrounded them, and Joshua was now a 2 very old man. He summoned all Israel, their elders and heads of families, their judges and officers, and said to them, 'I have become a very old man.
3 You have seen for yourselves all that the LORD our God has done to these peoples for your sake; it was the LORD God himself who fought for you.
4 I have allotted you your patrimony tribe by tribe, the land of all the peoples that I have wiped out and of all these that remain between the Jordan and 5 the Great Sea which lies towards the setting sun. The LORD your God himself drove them out for your sake; he drove them out to make room for you, and you occupied their land, as the LORD your God had promised 6 you. Be resolute therefore: observe and perform everything written in the 7 book of the law of Moses, without swerving to right or to left. You must not associate with the peoples that are left among you; you must not call upon their gods by name, nor ^a swear by them nor prostrate yourselves in worship before them. You must hold fast to the LORD your God as you have done down to this day. For your sake the LORD has driven out great and mighty nations; to this day not a man of them has withstood you. One of you can put to flight a thousand, because the LORD your God fights for you, as he promised. Be on your guard then, love the LORD your God, for ^b if you do turn away and attach yourselves to the peoples that still remain among you, and intermarry with them and associate with them and they with you, then be sure that the LORD will not continue to drive those peoples out to make room for you. They will be snares to entrap you, whips for your backs and barbed hooks in your eyes, until you vanish from the good land which the LORD your God has given you. And now I am going the way of all mankind. You know in your heart of hearts that nothing that the LORD your God has promised you has failed to come true, every word of it. But the same LORD God who has kept his word to you to such good effect can equally bring every kind of evil on you, until he has rooted you out from this good land which he has given you. If you break the covenant which the LORD your God has prescribed and prostrate yourselves in worship before other gods, then the LORD will be angry with you and you will quickly vanish from the good land he has given you.^c

Joshua assembled all the tribes of Israel at Shechem. He summoned the elders of Israel, the heads of families, the judges and officers; and they presented themselves before God. Joshua then said this to all the people: "This is the word of the LORD the God of Israel: "Long ago your forefathers, Terah and his sons Abraham and Nahor, lived beside the Euphrates, and they worshipped other gods. I took your father Abraham from beside the Euphrates and led him through the length and breadth of Canaan. I gave him many descendants: I gave him Isaac, and to Isaac I gave Jacob and Esau. I put Esau in possession of the hill-country of Seir, but Jacob and his sons went down to Egypt. I sent Moses and Aaron, and I struck the Egyptians with plagues—you know well what I did among them—and after that I brought you out; I brought your fathers out of Egypt and you came to the Red Sea. The Egyptians sent their chariots and cavalry to pursue your fathers to the sea. But when they appealed to the LORD, he put a screen of darkness between you and the Egyptians, and brought the sea down on them and it covered them; you saw for yourselves what I did to Egypt. For a long time you lived in the wilderness. Then I brought you into the land of the Amorites who lived east of the Jordan; they fought against you, but I delivered them into your hands; you took possession of their country and I destroyed them for your sake. The king of Moab, Balak son of Zippor, took the field against Israel. He sent for Balaam son of Beor to lay a curse on you, but I would not listen to him. Instead of that he blessed you; and so I saved you from the power of Balak. Then you crossed the Jordan and came to Jericho. The citizens of Jericho fought against you,^c

12 but I delivered them into your hands. I spread panic before you, and it was 13 this, not your sword or your bow, that drove out the two kings of the Amorites. I gave you land on which you had not laboured, cities which you had never built; you have lived in those cities and you eat the produce of vineyards and olive-groves which you did not plant.”

14 ‘Hold the LORD in awe then, and worship him in loyalty and truth.
 Banish the gods whom your fathers worshipped beside the Euphrates and 15 in Egypt, and worship the LORD. But if it does not please you to worship the LORD, choose here and now whom you will worship: the gods whom your forefathers worshipped beside the Euphrates, or the gods of the Amorites in whose land you are living. But I and my family, we will 16 worship the LORD.’ The people answered, ‘God forbid that we should for-17 sake the LORD to worship other gods, for it was the LORD our God who brought us and our fathers up from Egypt, that land of slavery; it was he who displayed those great signs before our eyes and guarded us on all our 18 wanderings among the many peoples through whose lands we passed. The LORD drove out before us the Amorites and all the peoples who lived in 19 that country. We too will worship the LORD; he is our God.’ Joshua answered the people, ‘You cannot worship the LORD. He is a holy god, a 20 jealous god, and he will not forgive your rebellion and your sins. If you forsake the LORD and worship foreign gods, he will turn and bring adversity upon you and, although he once brought you prosperity, he will make 21 an end of you.’ The people said to Joshua, ‘No; we will worship the LORD.’
 22 He said to them, ‘You are witnesses against yourselves that you have chosen the LORD and will worship him.’ ‘Yes,’ they answered, ‘we are witnesses.’
 23 He said to them, ‘Then here and now banish the foreign gods that are 24 among you, and turn your hearts to the LORD the God of Israel.’ The people said to Joshua, ‘The LORD our God we will worship and his voice 25 we will obey.’ So Joshua made a covenant that day with ^a the people; he 26 drew up a statute and an ordinance for them in Shechem and wrote its terms in the book of the law of God. He took a great stone and set it up there under 27 the terebinth ^b in the sanctuary of the LORD, and said to all the people, ‘This stone is a witness against us; for it has heard all the words which the LORD has spoken to us. If you renounce your God, it shall be a witness against 28 you.’ Then Joshua dismissed the people, each man to his patrimony.

29 After these things, Joshua son of Nun the servant of the LORD died; he 30 was a hundred and ten years old. They buried him within the border of his own patrimony in Timnath-serah in the hill-country of Ephraim to the 31 north of Mount Gaash. Israel served the LORD during the lifetime of Joshua and of the elders who outlived him and who well knew all that the LORD had done for Israel.

32 The bones of Joseph, which the Israelites had brought up from Egypt, were buried in Shechem, in the plot of land which Jacob had bought from the sons of Hamor father of Shechem for a hundred sheep; ^c and they passed 33 into the patrimony of the house of Joseph. Eleazar son of Aaron died and was buried in the hill which had been given to Phinehas his son in the hill-country of Ephraim.

THE BOOK OF JUDGES

The conquest of Canaan completed

AFTER THE DEATH OF JOSHUA the Israelites inquired of 1
the LORD which tribe should attack the Canaanites first. The LORD 2 answered, 'Judah shall attack. I hereby deliver the country into his power.' Judah said to his brother Simeon, 'Go forward with me into 3 my allotted territory, and let us do battle with the Canaanites; then I in turn will go with you into your territory.' So Simeon went with him; then 4 Judah advanced to the attack, and the LORD delivered the Canaanites and Perizzites into their hands. They slaughtered ten thousand of them at Bezek. There they came upon Adoni-bezek, engaged him in battle and 5 defeated the Canaanites and Perizzites. Adoni-bezek fled, but they pursued 6 him, took him prisoner and cut off his thumbs and his great toes. Adoni- 7 bezek said, 'I once had seventy kings whose thumbs and great toes were cut off picking up the scraps from under my table. What I have done God has done to me.' He was brought to Jerusalem and died there.

The men of Judah made an assault on Jerusalem and captured it, put its 8 people to the sword and set fire to the city. Then they turned south to 9 fight the Canaanites of the hill-country, the Negeb, and the Shephelah.
Judah attacked the Canaanites in Hebron, formerly called Kiriath-arba, 10 and defeated Sheshai, Ahiman and Talmai. From there they marched 11 against the inhabitants of Debir, formerly called Kiriath-sepher. Caleb 12 said, 'Whoever attacks Kiriath-sepher and captures it, to him I will give my daughter Achsah in marriage.' Othniel, son of Caleb's younger 13 brother Kenaz, captured it, and Caleb gave him his daughter Achsah.
When she came to him, he incited her to ask her father for a piece of land. 14
As she sat on the ass, she broke wind, and Caleb said, 'What did you mean by that?' She replied, 'I want to ask a favour of you. You have put me in 15 this dry Negeb; you must give me pools of water as well.' So Caleb gave her the upper pool and the lower pool.

The descendants of Moses' father-in-law, the Kenite, went up with the 16 men of Judah from the Vale of Palm Trees to the wilderness of Judah which is in the Negeb of Arad and settled among the Amalekites. Judah 17 then accompanied his brother Simeon, attacked the Canaanites in Zephath and destroyed it; hence the city was called Hormah.^a Judah took Gaza, 18 Ashkelon, and Ekron, and the territory of each. The LORD was with Judah 19 and they occupied the hill-country, but they could not drive out the inhabitants of the Vale because they had chariots of iron. Hebron was given 20

to Caleb as Moses had directed, and he drove out the three sons of Anak.

21 But the Benjamites did not drive out the Jebusites of Jerusalem; and the Jebusites have lived on in Jerusalem with the Benjamites till the present day.

23 The tribes of Joseph attacked Bethel, and the LORD was with them. They 24 sent spies to Bethel, formerly called Luz. These spies saw a man coming out of the city and said to him, 'Show us how to enter the city, and we will 25 see that you come to no harm.' So he showed them how to enter, and they 26 put the city to the sword, but let the man and his family go free. He went into Hittite country, built a city and named it Luz, which is still its name today.

27 Manasseh did not drive out the inhabitants of Beth-shean with its villages, nor of Taanach, Dor, Ibleam, and Megiddo, with the villages of 28 each of them; the Canaanites held their ground in that region. Later, when Israel became strong, they put them to forced labour, but they never completely drove them out.

29 Ephraim did not drive out the Canaanites who lived in Gezer, but the Canaanites lived among them there.

30 Zebulun did not drive out the inhabitants of Kitron and Nahalol, but the Canaanites lived among them and were put to forced labour.

31 Asher did not drive out the inhabitants of Acco and Sidon, of Ahlab, Achzib, Helbah, Aphik and Rehob. Thus the Asherites lived among the Canaanite inhabitants and did not drive them out.

33 Naphtali did not drive out the inhabitants of Beth-shemesh and of Beth-anath, but lived among the Canaanite inhabitants and put the inhabitants of Beth-shemesh and Beth-anath to forced labour.

34 The Amorites pressed the Danites back into the hill-country and did 35 not allow them to come down into the Vale. The Amorites held their ground in Mount Heres and in Aijalon and Shaalbim, but the tribes of Joseph increased their pressure on them until they reduced them to forced labour.

36 The boundary of the Edomites ran from the ascent of Akrabbim, upwards from Sela.

2 The angel of the LORD came up from Gilgal to Bokim, and said, 'I brought^a you up out of Egypt and into the country which I vowed I would give to your forefathers. I said, I will never break my covenant with you, and you in turn must make no covenant with the inhabitants of the country; you must pull down their altars. But you did not obey me, and look what 3 you have done! So I said, I will not drive them out before you; they will 4 decoy you, and their gods will shut you fast in the trap.' When the angel of 5 the LORD said this to the Israelites, they all wept and wailed, and so the place was called Bokim; ^b and they offered sacrifices there to the LORD.

Israel under the judges

JOSHUA DISMISSED THE PEOPLE, and the Israelites went off to occupy 6 the country, each man to his allotted portion. As long as Joshua was 7 alive and the elders who survived him—everyone, that is, who had witnessed the whole great work which the LORD had done for Israel—the 8 people worshipped the LORD. At the age of a hundred and ten Joshua son of 9 Nun, the servant of the LORD, died, and they buried him within the border of his own property in Timnath-heres north of Mount Gaash in the hill- 10 country of Ephraim. Of that whole generation, all were gathered to their forefathers, and another generation followed who did not acknowledge the 11 LORD and did not know what he had done for Israel. Then the Israelites did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD, and worshipped the Baalim.^a 12
 They forsook the LORD, their fathers' God who had brought them out of Egypt, and went after other gods, gods of the races among whom they 13 14 lived; they bowed down before them and provoked the LORD to anger; they forsook the LORD and worshipped the Baal and the Ashtaroth.^b The LORD in his anger made them the prey of bands of raiders and plunderers;
 he sold them to their enemies all around them, and they could no longer make a stand. Every time they went out to battle the LORD brought 15 disaster upon them, as he had said when he gave them his solemn warning, and they were in dire straits.

The LORD set judges over them, who rescued them from the marauding 16 bands. Yet they did not listen even to these judges, but turned wantonly 17 to worship other gods and bowed down before them; all too soon they abandoned the path of obedience to the LORD's commands which their forefathers had followed. They did not obey the LORD. Whenever the LORD 18 set up a judge over them, he was with that judge, and kept them safe from their enemies so long as he lived. The LORD would relent as often as he heard them groaning under oppression and ill-treatment. But as soon as 19 the judge was dead, they would relapse into deeper corruption than their forefathers and give their allegiance to other gods, worshipping them and bowing down before them. They gave up none of their evil practices and their wilful ways. And the LORD was angry with Israel and said, 'This 20 nation has broken the covenant which I laid upon their forefathers and has not obeyed me, and now, of all the nations which Joshua left at his 21 death, I will not drive out to make room for them one single man. By their 22 means I will test Israel, to see whether or not they will keep strictly to the way of the LORD as their forefathers did.' So the LORD left those nations 23 alone and made no haste to drive them out or give them into Joshua's hands.

These are the nations which the LORD left as a means of testing all the 3 Israelites who had not taken part in the battles for Canaan, his purpose 2 being to teach succeeding generations of Israel, or those at least who had not learnt in former times, how to make war. These were: the five lords of 3 the Philistines, all the Canaanites, the Sidonians, and the Hivites who lived in Mount Lebanon from Mount Baal-hermon as far as Lebo-hamath.

^a The Baalim were Canaanite deities.^b The Ashtaroth were Canaanite deities.

4 His purpose also was to test whether the Israelites would obey the com-
5 mands which the LORD had given to their forefathers through Moses. Thus 6 the Israelites lived among the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites. They took their daughters in marriage and gave their own daughters to their sons; and they worshipped their gods.

7 The Israelites did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD; they forgot 8 the LORD their God and worshipped the Baalim and the Asheroth.^a The LORD was angry with Israel and he sold them to Cushan-rishathaim, king 9 of Aram-naharaim,^b who kept them in subjection for eight years. Then the Israelites cried to the LORD for help and he raised up a man to deliver them, Othniel son of Caleb's younger brother Kenaz, and he set them 10 free. The spirit of the LORD came upon him and he became judge over Israel. He took the field, and the LORD delivered Cushan-rishathaim king 11 of Aram into his hands; Othniel was too strong for him. Thus the land was at peace for forty years until Othniel son of Kenaz died.

12 Once again the Israelites did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD, 13 and because of this he roused Eglon king of Moab against Israel. Eglon mustered the Ammonites and the Amalekites, advanced to attack Israel 14 and took possession of the Vale of Palm Trees. The Israelites were subject 15 to Eglon king of Moab for eighteen years. When they cried to the LORD for help, he raised up a man to deliver them, Ehud son of Gera the Ben-16 jamite, who was left-handed. The Israelites sent him to pay their tribute to Eglon king of Moab. Ehud made himself a two-edged sword, only 17 fifteen inches long, which he fastened on his right side under his clothes, and he brought the tribute to Eglon king of Moab. Eglon was a very fat 18 man. When Ehud had finished presenting the tribute, he sent on the men 19 who had carried it, and he himself turned back from the Carved Stones at Gilgal. 'My lord king,' he said, 'I have a word for you in private.' Eglon 20 called for silence and dismissed all his attendants. Ehud then came up to him as he sat in the roof-chamber of his summer palace and said, 'I have 21 a word from God for you.' So Eglon rose from his seat, and Ehud reached with his left hand, drew the sword from his right side and drove it into his 22 belly. The hilt went in after the blade and the fat closed over the blade;
23 he did not draw the sword out but left it protruding behind. Ehud went 24 out to the porch, shut the doors on him and fastened them. When he had gone away, Eglon's servants came and, finding the doors fastened, they 25 said, 'He must be relieving himself in the closet of his summer palace.'
They waited until they were ashamed to delay any longer, and still he did 26 not open the doors of the roof-chamber. So they took the key and opened the doors; and there was their master lying on the floor dead. While they 27 had been waiting, Ehud made his escape; he passed the Carved Stones and escaped to Seirah. When he arrived there, he sounded the trumpet in the 28 hill-country of Ephraim, and the Israelites came down from the hills with him at their head. He said to them, 'Follow me, for the LORD has delivered your enemy the Moabites into your hands.' Down they came after him, and they seized the fords of the Jordan against the Moabites and allowed no man to cross. They killed that day some ten thousand Moabites, all of them men of substance and all fighting men; not one escaped. Thus Moab on that day became subject to Israel, and the land was at peace for eighty years.

After Ehud there was Shamgar of Beth-anath.^a He killed six hundred Philistines with an ox-goad, and he too delivered Israel.

After Ehud's death the Israelites once again did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD, so he sold them to Jabin the Canaanite king, who ruled in Hazor. The commander of his forces was Sisera, who lived in Harosheth-of-the-Gentiles. The Israelites cried to the LORD for help, because Sisera had nine hundred chariots of iron and had oppressed Israel harshly for twenty years. At that time Deborah wife of Lappidoth,^b a prophetess, was judge in Israel. It was her custom to sit beneath the Palm-tree of Deborah between Ramah and Bethel in the hill-country of Ephraim, and the Israelites went up to her for justice. She sent for Barak son of Abinoam from Kedesh in Naphtali and said to him, 'These are the commands of the LORD the God of Israel: "Go and draw ten thousand men from Naphtali and Zebulun and bring them with you to Mount Tabor, and I will draw Sisera, Jabin's commander, to the Torrent of Kishon with his chariots and all his rabble, and there I will deliver them into your hands."' Barak answered her, 'If you go with me, I will go; but if you will not go, neither will I.' 'Certainly I will go with you,' she said, 'but this venture will bring you no glory, because the LORD will leave Sisera to fall into the hands of a woman.' So Deborah rose and went with Barak to Kedesh. Barak summoned Zebulun and Naphtali to Kedesh and marched up with ten thousand men, and Deborah went with him.

Now Heber the Kenite had parted company with the Kenites, the descendants of Hobab, Moses' brother-in-law, and he had pitched his tent at Elon-bezaanannim near Kedesh.

Word was brought to Sisera that Barak son of Abinoam had gone up to Mount Tabor; so he summoned all his chariots, nine hundred chariots of iron, and his troops, from Harosheth-of-the-Gentiles to the Torrent of Kishon. Then Deborah said to Barak, 'Up! This day the LORD gives Sisera into your hands. Already the LORD has gone out to battle before you.' So Barak came charging down from Mount Tabor with ten thousand men at his back. The LORD put Sisera to rout with all his chariots and his army before Barak's onslaught; but Sisera himself dismounted from his chariot and fled on foot. Barak pursued the chariots and the army as far as Harosheth, and the whole army was put to the sword and perished; not a man was left alive. Meanwhile Sisera fled on foot to the tent of Jael wife of Heber the Kenite, because Jabin king of Hazor and the household of Heber the Kenite were at peace. Jael came out to meet Sisera and said to him, 'Come in here, my lord, come in; do not be afraid.' So he went into the tent, and she covered him with a rug. He said to her, 'Give me some water to drink; I am thirsty.' She opened a skin full of milk, gave him a drink and covered him up again. He said to her, 'Stand at the tent door, and if anybody comes and asks if someone is here, say No.' But Jael,

^a of Beth-anath: or son of Anath.

^b wife of Lappidoth: or a spirited woman.

Heber's wife, took a tent-peg, picked up a hammer, crept up to him, and drove the peg into his skull as he lay sound asleep. His brains oozed out on the ground, his limbs twitched, and he died. When Barak came up in pursuit of Sisera, Jael went out to meet him and said to him, 'Come, I will show you the man you are looking for.' He went in with her, and there was Sisera lying dead with the tent-peg in his skull. That day God gave victory to the Israelites over Jabin king of Canaan, and they pressed home their attacks upon that king of Canaan until they had made an end of him.

That day Deborah and Barak son of Abinoam sang this song :

For the leaders, the leaders ^a in Israel,
for the people who answered the call,
bless ye the LORD.
Hear me, you kings; princes, give ear;
I will sing, I will sing to the LORD.
I will raise a psalm to the LORD the God of Israel.
O LORD, at thy setting forth from Seir,
when thou camest marching out of the plains of Edom,
earth trembled; heaven quaked;
the clouds streamed down in torrents.
Mountains shook in fear before the LORD, the lord of Sinai,
before the LORD, the God of Israel.
In the days of Shamgar of Beth-anath, ^b in the days of Jael, caravans plied no longer;
men who had followed the high roads
went round by devious paths.
Champions there were none,
none left in Israel,
until I, ^c Deborah, arose,
arose, a mother in Israel.
They chose new gods,
they consorted with demons. ^d
Not a shield, not a lance was to be seen in the forty thousand of Israel.
Be proud at heart, you marshals of Israel;
you among the people that answered the call,
bless ye the LORD.
You that ride your tawny she-asses,
that sit on saddle-cloths,
and you that take the road afoot,
ponder this well.
Hark, the sound of the players striking up in the places where the women draw water!
It is the victories of the LORD that they commemorate there,
his triumphs as the champion of Israel.

Down to the gates came the LORD's people:
 'Rouse, rouse yourself, Deborah,
 rouse yourself, lead out the host. 12
 Up, Barak! Take prisoners in plenty, son of Abinoam.'
 Then down marched the column^a and its chieftains, the people of the LORD marched down^b like warriors. 13
 The men of Ephraim showed a brave front in the vale, crying, 'With you, Benjamin! Your clansmen are here!' 14
 From Machir down came the marshals,
 from Zebulun the bearers of the musterer's staff.
 Issachar joined with Deborah in the uprising,^c 15
 Issachar stood by Barak;
 down into the valley they rushed.
 But Reuben, he was split into factions,
 great were their heart-searchings.
 What made you linger by the cattle-pens 16
 to listen to the shrill calling of the shepherds?^d Gilead stayed beyond Jordan; 17
 and Dan, why did he tarry by the ships?
 Asher lingered by the sea-shore,
 by its creeks he stayed.
 The people of Zebulun risked their very lives, 18
 so did Naphtali on the heights of the battlefield.

 Kings came, they fought; 19
 then fought the kings of Canaan
 at Taanach by the waters of Megiddo;
 no plunder of silver did they take.
 The stars fought from heaven, 20
 the stars in their courses fought against Sisera.
 The Torrent of Kishon swept him away, 21
 the Torrent barred his flight, the Torrent of Kishon;
 march on in might, my soul!
 Then hammered the hooves of his horses,
 his chargers galloped, galloped away. 22
 A curse on Meroz, said the angel of the LORD;
 a curse, a curse on its inhabitants, 23
 because they brought no help to the LORD,
 no help to the LORD and the fighting men.
 Blest above women be Jael, 24
 the wife of Heber the Kenite;
 blest above all women in the tents.
 He asked for water: she gave him milk,
 she offered him curds in a bowl fit for a chieftain. 25

Why is the clatter of his chariots so long delayed?'

The land was at peace for forty years.

- 6 THE ISRAELITES DID WHAT WAS WRONG in the eyes of the LORD and 2 he delivered them into the hands of Midian for seven years. The Midian-
3 ites were too strong for Israel, and the Israelites were forced to find them-4 selves hollow places in the mountains, and caves and strongholds. If the 5 Israelites had sown their seed, the Midianites and the Amalekites and other 6 eastern tribes would come up and attack Israel. They then pitched their 7 camps in the country and destroyed the crops as far as the outskirts of 8 Gaza, leaving nothing to support life in Israel, sheep or ox or ass. They 9 came up with their herds and their tents, like a swarm of locusts; they and 10 their camels were past counting. They had come into the land for its 11 growing crop,^a and so the Israelites were brought to destitution by the 12 Midianites, and they cried to the LORD for help. When the Israelites cried 13 to the LORD because of what they had suffered from the Midianites, he 14 sent them a prophet who said to them, 'These are the words of the LORD
15 the God of Israel: I brought you up from Egypt, that land of slavery. I 16 delivered you from the Egyptians and from all your oppressors. I drove 17 them out before you and gave you their lands. I said to you, "I am the 18 LORD your God: do not stand in awe of the gods of the Amorites in whose 19 country you are settling." But you did not listen to me.'
- 20 Now the angel of the LORD came and sat under the terebinth at Ophrah 21 which belonged to Joash the Abiezrite. His son Gideon was threshing

Midianites. The angel of the LORD showed himself to Gideon and said, 12
 'You are a brave man, and the LORD is with you.' Gideon said, 'But pray, 13
 my lord, if the LORD really is with us, why has all this happened to us?
 What has become of all those wonderful deeds of his, of which we have heard from our fathers, when they told us how the LORD brought us out 14 of Egypt? But now the LORD has cast us off and delivered us into the power of the Midianites.' The LORD turned to him and said, 'Go and use 15 this strength of yours to free Israel from the power of the Midianites. It is I that send you.' Gideon said, 'Pray, my lord, how can I save Israel? 16 Look at my clan: it is the weakest in Manasseh, and I am the least in my father's family.' The LORD answered, 'I will be with you, and you shall lay 17 low all Midian as one man.' He replied, 'If I stand so well with you, give 18 me a sign that it is you who speak to me. Please do not leave this place until I come with my gift and lay it before you.' He answered, 'I will stay until 19 you come back.' So Gideon went in, prepared a kid and made an ephah of flour into unleavened cakes. He put the meat in a basket, poured the broth 20 into a pot and brought it out to him under the terebinth. As he approached, the angel of God said to him, 'Take the meat and the cakes, and put them 21 here on the rock and pour out the broth', and he did so. Then the angel of the LORD reached out the staff in his hand and touched the meat and the 22 cakes with the tip of it. Fire sprang up from the rock and consumed the meat and the cakes; and the angel of the LORD was no more to be seen.
 Then Gideon knew that it was the angel of the LORD and said, 'Alas, Lord 23 GOD! Then it is true: I have seen the angel of the LORD face to face.' But the LORD said to him, 'Peace be with you; do not be afraid, you shall not 24 die.' So Gideon built an altar there to the LORD and named it Jehovahshalom.^a It stands to this day at Ophrah-of-the-Abiezrites.

That night the LORD said to Gideon, 'Take a young bull of your father's, 25
 the yearling bull,^b tear down the altar of Baal which belongs to your father and cut down the sacred pole which stands beside^c it. Then build an altar 26 of the proper pattern^d to the LORD your God on the top of this earthwork;^e take the yearling bull and offer it as a whole-offering with the wood of the sacred pole that you cut down.' So Gideon took ten of his servants and did 27 as the LORD had told him. He was afraid of his father's family and his fellow-citizens, and so he did it by night, and not by day. When the citizens 28 rose early in the morning, they found the altar of Baal overturned and the sacred pole which had stood beside it cut down and the yearling bull offered up as a whole-offering on the altar which he had built. They asked 29 each other who had done it, and, after searching inquiries, were told that it was Gideon son of Joash. So the citizens said to Joash, 'Bring out your 30 son. He has overturned the altar of Baal and cut down the sacred pole beside it, and he must die.' But as they crowded round him Joash retorted, 31
 'Are you pleading Baal's cause then? Do you think that it is for you to save him? Whoever pleads his cause shall be put to death at dawn. If Baal is a god, and someone has torn down his altar, let him take up his own cause.'

32 That day Joash named Gideon Jerubbaal,^a saying, 'Let Baal plead his cause against this man, for he has torn down his altar.'

33 All the Midianites, the Amalekites, and the eastern tribes joined forces, 34 crossed the river and camped in the Vale of Jezreel. Then the spirit of the LORD took possession of Gideon; he sounded the trumpet and the Abiezrites were called out to follow him. He sent messengers all through Manasseh; and they too were called out. He sent messengers to Asher, Zebulun, and Naphtali, and they came up to meet the others. Gideon said to God, 'If 35 thou wilt deliver Israel through me as thou hast promised—now, look, I
36 am putting a fleece of wool on the threshing-floor. If there is dew only on the fleece and all the ground is dry, then I shall be sure that thou wilt
37 deliver Israel through me, as thou hast promised.' And that is what happened. He rose early next day and wrung out the fleece, and he squeezed
38 enough dew from it to fill a bowl with water. Gideon then said to God, 'Do not be angry with me, but give me leave to speak once again. Let me, I pray thee, make one more test with the fleece. This time let the fleece 39 alone be dry, and all the ground be covered with dew.' God let it be so that night: the fleece alone was dry, and on all the ground there was dew.

7 Jerubbaal, that is Gideon, and all the people with him rose early and pitched camp at En-harod;^b the Midianite camp was in the vale to the
2 north of the hill of Moreh. The LORD said to Gideon, 'The people with you are more than I need to deliver Midian into their hands: Israel will claim the glory for themselves and say that it is their own strength that has given
3 them the victory. Now make a proclamation for all the people to hear, that anyone who is scared or frightened is to leave Mount Galud^c at once and go back home.' Twenty-two thousand of them went, and ten thousand
4 were left. The LORD then said to Gideon, 'There are still too many. Bring them down to the water, and I will separate them for you there. When I say to you, "This man shall go with you", he shall go; and if I say, "This
5 man shall not go with you", he shall not go.' So Gideon brought the people down to the water and the LORD said to him, 'Make every man who lapped the water with his tongue like a dog stand on one side, and on the other
6 every man who goes down on his knees and drinks.' The number of those who lapped was three hundred, and all the rest went down on their knees
7 to drink, putting their hands to their mouths. The LORD said to Gideon, 'With the three hundred men who lapped I will save you and deliver
8 Midian into your hands, and all the rest may go home.' So Gideon sent all these Israelites home, but he kept the three hundred, and they took with them the jars^d and the trumpets which the people had. The Midianite camp was below him in the vale.

9 That night the LORD said to him, 'Go down at once and attack the camp for I have delivered it into your hands. If you are afraid to do so, then go
10 down first with your servant Purah and listen to what they are saying. That will give you courage to go down and attack the camp.' So he and his 11 servant Purah went down to the part of the camp where the fighting men lay. Now the Midianites, the Amalekites, and the eastern tribes were st many that they lay there in the valley like a swarm of locusts; there was no counting their camels; in number they were like grains of sand on the sea-shore. When Gideon came close, there was a man telling his companion a dream. He said, 'I dreamt that I saw a hard, stale barley-cake rolling over and over through the Midianite camp; it came to a tent, hit it ^a and turned it upside down, and the tent collapsed.' The other answered, 'Depend upon it, this is the sword of Gideon son of Joash the Israelite. God has delivered Midian and the whole army into his hands.' When Gideon heard the story of the dream and its interpretation, he prostrated himself. Then he went back to the Israelite camp and said, 'Up! The LORD has delivered the camp of the Midianites into your hands.' He divided the three hundred men into three companies, and gave every man a trumpet and an empty jar with a torch inside it. Then he said to them, 'Watch me: when I come to the edge of the camp, do exactly as I do. When I and my men blow our trumpets, you too all round the camp will blow your trumpets, and shout, "For the LORD and for Gideon!"'

Gideon and the hundred men who were with him reached the outskirts of the camp at the beginning of the middle watch; the sentries had just been posted. They blew their trumpets and smashed their jars. The three companies all blew their trumpets and smashed their jars, then grasped the torches in their left hands and the trumpets in their right, and shouted, 'A sword for the LORD and for Gideon!' Every man stood where he was, all round the camp, and the whole camp leapt up in a panic and fled. The three hundred blew their trumpets, and throughout the camp the LORD set every man against his neighbour. The army fled as far as Beth-shittah in Zererah, as far as the ridge of Abel-meholah by Tabbath. The Israelites from Naphtali and Asher and all Manasseh were called out and they pursued the Midianites. Gideon sent men through all the hill-country of Ephraim with this message: 'Come down and cut off the Midianites. Hold the fords of the Jordan against them as far as Beth-barah.' So all the Ephraimites were called out and they held the fords of the Jordan as far as Beth-barah. They captured the two Midianite princes, Oreb and Zeeb. Oreb they killed at the Rock of Oreb, and Zeeb by the Winepress of Zeeb, and they kept up the pursuit of the Midianites; afterwards they brought the heads of Oreb and Zeeb across the Jordan to Gideon.

The men of Ephraim said to Gideon, 'Why have you treated us like this? Why did you not summon us when you went to fight Midian?'; and they reproached him violently. But he said to them, 'What have I done compared with you? Are not Ephraim's gleanings better than the whole vintage of Abiezer? God has delivered Oreb and Zeeb, the princes of Midian, into your hands. What have I done compared with you?' At these words of his, their anger died down.

Gideon came to the Jordan, and he and his three hundred men crossed over to continue the pursuit, weary though they were. He said to the men of Succoth, 'Will you give these men of mine some bread, for they are weary, and I am pursuing Zebah and Zalmunna, the kings of Midian?' But the chief men of Succoth replied, 'Are Zebah and Zalmunna already

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds and it fell.

7 in your hands, that we should give your army bread?' Gideon said, 'For 8 that, when the LORD delivers Zebah and Zalmunna into my hands, I will 9 thresh your bodies with desert thorns and briars.' He went on from there 10 to Penuel and made the same request; the men of Penuel answered like 11 the men of Succoth. He said to the men of Penuel, 'When I return safely, 12 I will pull down your castle.'

13 Zebah and Zalmunna were in Karkor with their army of fifteen thousand 14 men. These were all that remained of the whole host of the eastern tribes;
15 a hundred and twenty thousand armed men had fallen in battle. Gideon 16 advanced along the track used by the tent-dwellers east of Nobah and 17 Jogbehah, and his attack caught the army when they were off their guard.
18 Zebah and Zalmunna fled; but he went in pursuit of these Midianite kings 19 and captured them both; and their whole army melted away.

20 As Gideon son of Joash was returning from the battle by the Ascent of 21 Heres, he caught a young man from Succoth. He questioned him, and one 22 by one he numbered off the names of the rulers of Succoth and its elders, 23 seventy-seven in all. Gideon then came to the men of Succoth and said, 24 'Here are Zebah and Zalmunna, about whom you taunted me. "Are Zebah 25 and Zalmunna", you said, "already in your hands, that we should give 26 your weary men bread?"' Then he took the elders of the city and he dis-27 ciplined those men of Succoth with desert thorns and briars. He also pulled 28 down the castle of Penuel and put the men of the city to death. Then he 29 said to Zebah and Zalmunna, 'What of the men you killed in Tabor?' 30 They answered, 'They were like you, every one had the look of a king's son.' 'They were my brothers,' he said, 'my mother's sons. I swear by the LORD, if you had let them live I would not have killed you'; and he said to his eldest son Jether, 'Up with you, and kill them.' But he was still only a lad, and did not draw his sword, because he was afraid. So Zebah and Zalmunna said, 'Rise up yourself and dispatch us, for you have a man's strength.' So Gideon rose and killed them both, and he took the crescents from the necks of their camels.

22 After this the Israelites said to Gideon, 'You have saved us from the Midianites; now you be our ruler, you and your son and your grandson.'
23 Gideon replied, 'I will not rule over you, nor shall my son; the LORD will 24 rule over you.' Then he said, 'I have a request to make: will every one of 25 you give me the earrings from his booty?'—for the enemy wore golden 26 earrings, being Ishmaelites. They said, 'Of course, we will give them.' So 27 a cloak was spread out and every man threw on to it the golden earrings
28 from his booty. The earrings for which he asked weighed seventeen hundred 29 shekels of gold; this was in addition to the crescents and pendants and the 30 purple cloaks worn by the Midianite kings, not counting the chains on the necks of their camels. Gideon made it into an ephod and he set it up in his own city of Ophrah. All the Israelites turned wantonly to its worship, and it became a trap to catch Gideon and his household.

28 Thus the Midianites were subdued by the Israelites; they could no longer hold up their heads. For forty years the land was at peace, all the 29 lifetime of Gideon, that is Jerubbaal son of Joash; and he retired to his 30 own home. Gideon had seventy sons, his own offspring, for he had many wives. He had a concubine who lived in Shechem, and she also bore him 31 a son, whom he named Abimelech. Gideon son of Joash died at a ripe old 32 age and was buried in his father's grave at Ophrah-of-the-Abiezrites.

 After his death, the Israelites again went wantonly to the worship of the 33
 Baalim and made Baal-berith their god. They forgot the LORD their God 34 who had delivered them from their enemies on every side, and did not 35 show to the family of Jerubbaal, that is Gideon, the loyalty that was due to them for all the good he had done for Israel.

ABIMELECH SON OF JERUBBAAL went to Shechem to his mother's 9 brothers, and spoke with them and with all the clan of his mother's family.
 'I beg you,' he said, 'whisper a word in the ears of the chief citizens of 2 Shechem. Ask them which is better for them: that seventy men, all the sons of Jerubbaal, should rule over them, or one man. Tell them to re- 3 member that I am their own flesh and blood.' So his mother's brothers repeated all this to each of them on his behalf; and they were moved to 4 come over to Abimelech's side, because, as they said, he was their brother.
 They gave him seventy pieces of silver from the temple of Baal-berith, and 5 with these he hired idle and reckless men, who followed him. He came to his father's house in Ophrah and butchered his seventy brothers, the sons 6 of Jerubbaal, on a single stone block, all but Jotham the youngest, who survived because he had hidden himself. Then all the citizens of Shechem 6 and all Beth-millo came together and made Abimelech king beside the old propped-up terebinth at Shechem.

When this was reported to Jotham, he went and stood on the summit of 7
 Mount Gerizim. He cried at the top of his voice: 'Listen to me, you citizens of Shechem, and may God listen to you:

'Once upon a time the trees came to anoint a king, and they said to the 8 olive-tree: Be king over us. But the olive-tree answered: What, leave my 9 rich oil by which gods and men are honoured, to come and hold sway over the trees?

'So the trees said to the fig-tree: Then will you come and be king over 10 us? But the fig-tree answered: What, leave my good fruit and all its sweet- 11 ness, to come and hold sway over the trees?

'So the trees said to the vine: Then will you come and be king over us? 12
 But the vine answered: What, leave my new wine which gladdens gods and 13 men, to come and hold sway over the trees?

'Then all the trees said to the thorn-bush: Will you then be king over 14 us? And the thorn said to the trees: If you really mean to anoint me as your 15 king, then come under the protection of my shadow; if not, fire shall come out of the thorn and burn up the cedars of Lebanon.'

Then Jotham said, 'Now, have you acted fairly and honestly in making 16 Abimelech king? Have you done the right thing by Jerubbaal and his household? Have you given my father his due—who fought for you, and 17 threw himself into the forefront of the battle and delivered you from the Midianites? Today you have risen against my father's family, butchered 18 his seventy sons on a single stone block, and made Abimelech, the son of his slave-girl, king over the citizens of Shechem because he is your brother.

19 In this day's work have you acted fairly and honestly by Jerubbaal and his 20 family? If so, I wish you joy in Abimelech and wish him joy in you! If not, may fire come out of Abimelech and burn up the citizens of Shechem and all Beth-millo; may fire also come out from the citizens of Shechem and 21 Beth-millo and burn up Abimelech.' After which Jotham slipped away and made his escape; he came to Beer, and there he settled out of reach of his brother Abimelech.

23 After Abimelech had been prince over Israel for three years, God sent an evil spirit to make a breach between Abimelech and the citizens of 24 Shechem, and they played him false. This was done on purpose, so that the violent murder of the seventy sons of Jerubbaal might recoil on their brother Abimelech who did the murder and on the citizens of Shechem 25 who encouraged him to do it. The citizens of Shechem set men to lie in wait for him on the hill-tops, but they robbed all who passed that way, and so the news reached Abimelech.

26 Now Gaal son of Ebed came with his kinsmen to Shechem, and the 27 citizens of Shechem transferred their allegiance to him. They went out into the country-side, picked the early grapes in their vineyards, trod them in the winepress and held festival. They went into the temple of their god, 28 where they ate and drank and reviled Abimelech. 'Who is Abimelech,' said Gaal son of Ebed, 'and who are the Shechemites, that we should be his subjects? Have not this son of Jerubbaal and his lieutenant Zebul been subjects of the men of Hamor the father of Shechem? Why indeed should 29 we be subject to him? If only this people were in my charge I should know how to get rid of Abimelech! I would say to him, "Get your men together, 30 and come out and fight."' When Zebul the governor of the city heard what 31 Gaal son of Ebed said, he was very angry. He resorted to a ruse and sent messengers to Abimelech to say, 'Gaal son of Ebed and his kinsmen have 32 come to Shechem and are turning the city against you. Get up now in the night, you and the people with you, and lie in wait in the open country.
33 Then be up in the morning at sunrise, and advance rapidly against the city.
When he and his people come out, do to him what the situation demands.'
34 So Abimelech and his people rose in the night, and lay in wait to attack 35 Shechem, in four companies. Gaal son of Ebed came out and stood in the entrance of the city gate, and Abimelech and his people rose from their 36 hiding-place. Gaal saw them and said to Zebul, 'There are people coming down from the tops of the hills', but Zebul replied, 'What you see is the 37 shadow of the hills, looking like men.' Once more Gaal said, 'There are people coming down from the central ridge of the hills, and one company 38 is coming along the road of the Soothsayers' Terebinth.' Then Zebul said to him, 'Where are your brave words now? You said, "Who is Abimelech that we should be subject to him?" Are not these the people you despised?
39 Go out and fight him.' Gaal led the citizens of Shechem out and attacked 40 Abimelech, but Abimelech routed him and he fled. The ground was 41 strewn with corpses all the way to the entrance of the gate. Abimelech established himself in Arumah, and Zebul drove away Gaal and his kinsmen and allowed them no place in Shechem.

42 Next day the people came out into the open, and this was reported to Abimelech. He on his side took his supporters, divided them into three 43 companies and lay in wait in the open country; and when he saw the people 44 coming out of the city, he rose and attacked them. Abimelech and the company with him advanced rapidly and took up position at the entrance of the city gate, while the other two companies advanced against all those 45 who were in the open and struck them down. Abimelech kept up the attack on the city all that day and captured it; he killed the people in it, pulled the 46 city down and sowed the site with salt. When the occupants of the castle of Shechem heard of this, they went into the great hall ^a of the temple of 47 El-berith. It was reported to Abimelech that all the occupants of the castle of Shechem had collected together. So he and his people went up Mount 48 Zalmon carrying axes; there he cut brushwood, and took it and hoisted it on his shoulder. He said to his men, 'You see what I am doing; be quick and do the same.' So each man cut brushwood; then they followed Abi- 49 melech and laid the brushwood against the hall, and burnt it over their heads. Thus all the occupants of the castle of Shechem died, about a thousand men and women.

Abimelech then went to Thebez, besieged it and took it. There was a 50 51 strong castle in the middle of the city, and all the citizens, men and women, took refuge there. They shut themselves in and went on to the roof.
 Abimelech came up to the castle and attacked it. As he approached the 52 entrance to the castle to set fire to it, a woman threw a millstone down on his head and fractured his skull. He called hurriedly to his young armour- 53 bearer and said, 'Draw your sword and dispatch me, or men will say of me:
 A woman killed him.' So the young man ran him through and he died. 54
 When the Israelites saw that Abimelech was dead, they all went back to their homes. It was thus that God requited the crime which Abimelech 55 had committed against his father by the murder of his seventy brothers, and brought all the wickedness of the men of Shechem on their own heads. 56
 The curse of Jotham son of Jerubbaal came home to them. 57

After Abimelech, Tola son of Pua, son of Dodo, a man of Issachar who 10 lived in Shamir in the hill-country of Ephraim, came in his turn to deliver Israel. He was judge over Israel for twenty-three years, and when he died 2
 he was buried in Shamir.

After him came Jair the Gileadite; he was judge over Israel for twenty- 3 two years. He had thirty sons, who rode thirty asses; they had thirty towns 4 in the land of Gilead, which to this day are called Havvoth-jair. ^b When 5
 Jair died, he was buried in Kamon.

Once more the Israelites did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD, 6 worshipping the Baalim and the Ashtaroth, the deities of Aram and of Sidon and of Moab, of the Ammonites and of the Philistines. They forsook the LORD and did not worship him. The LORD was angry with Israel, and 7 he sold them to the Philistines and the Ammonites, who ^c for eighteen 8 years harassed and oppressed the Israelites who lived beyond the Jordan in the Amorite country in Gilead. Then the Ammonites crossed the Jordan 9 to attack Judah, Benjamin, and Ephraim, so that Israel was in great distress. The Israelites cried to the LORD for help and said, 'We have sinned 10

11 against thee; we have forsaken our God and worshipped the Baalim.' And 12 the LORD said to the Israelites, 'The Egyptians, the Amorites, the Ammon-13 ites, the Philistines; the Sidonians too and the Amalekites and the Midian-14 ites—all these oppressed you and you cried to me for help; and did not I 15 deliver you? But you forsook me and worshipped other gods; therefore I 16 will deliver you no more. Go and cry for help to the gods you have chosen, 17 and let them save you in the day of your distress.' But the Israelites said 18 to the LORD, 'We have sinned. Deal with us as thou wilt; only save us this 19 day, we implore thee.' They banished the foreign gods and worshipped the 20 LORD; and he could endure no longer to see the plight of Israel.

21 Then the Ammonites were called to arms, and they encamped in Gilead, 22 while the Israelites assembled and encamped in Mizpah. The people of 23 Gilead and their chief men said to one another, 'If any man will strike the 24 first blow at the Ammonites, he shall be lord over the inhabitants of Gilead.'

11 Jephthah the Gileadite was a great warrior; he was the son of Gilead by 2 a prostitute. But Gilead had a wife who bore him several sons, and when 3 they grew up they drove Jephthah away; they said to him, 'You have no
4 inheritance in our father's house; you are another woman's son.' So 5 Jephthah, to escape his brothers, went away and settled in the land of Tob,
6 and swept up a number of idle men who followed him.

7 The time came when the Ammonites made war on Israel, and when the 8 fighting began, the elders of Gilead went to fetch Jephthah from the land
9 of Tob. They said to him, 'Come and be our commander so that we can 10 fight the Ammonites.' But Jephthah said to the elders of Gilead, 'You drove 11 me from my father's house in hatred. Why come to me now when you are 12 in trouble?' 'It is because of that', they replied, 'that we have turned to you 13 now. Come with us and fight the Ammonites, and become lord over all the 14 inhabitants of Gilead.' Jephthah said to them, 'If you ask me back to fight 15 the Ammonites and if the LORD delivers them into my hands, then I will 16 be your lord.' The elders of Gilead said again to Jephthah, 'We swear by 17 the LORD, who shall be witness between us, that we will do what you say.'
18 Jephthah then went with the elders of Gilead, and the people made him
19 their lord and commander. And at Mizpah, in the presence of the LORD, 20 Jephthah repeated all that he had said.

21 Jephthah sent a mission to the king of Ammon to ask what quarrel he 22 had with them that made him invade their country. The king gave Jeph-23 thah's men this answer: 'When the Israelites came up from Egypt, they 24 took our land from the Arnon as far as the Jabbok and the Jordan. Give us 25 back these lands in peace.' Jephthah sent a second mission to the king of 26 Ammon, and they said, 'This is Jephthah's answer: Israel did not take 27 either the Moabite country or the Ammonite country. When they came up 28 from Egypt, the Israelites passed through the wilderness to the Red Sea^a 29 and came to Kadesh. They then sent envoys to the king of Edom asking 30 him to grant them passage through his country, but the king of Edom would 31 not hear of it. They sent also to the king of Moab, but he was not willing;
32 so Israel remained in Kadesh. They then passed through the wilderness, 33 skirting Edom and Moab, and kept to the east of Moab. They encamped beside the Arnon, but they did not enter Moabite territory, because the Arnon is the frontier of Moab. Israel then sent envoys to the king of the Amorites, Sihon king of Heshbon, asking him to give them free passage through his country to their destination. But Sihon would not grant Israel free passage through his territory; he mustered all his people, encamped in Jahaz and fought Israel. But the LORD the God of Israel delivered Sihon and all his people into the hands of Israel; they defeated them and occupied all the territory of the Amorites in that region. They took all the Amorite territory from the Arnon to the Jabbok and from the wilderness to the Jordan. The LORD the God of Israel drove out the Amorites for the benefit of his people Israel. And do you now propose to take their place? It is for you to possess whatever Kemosh your god gives you; and all that the LORD our God gave us as we advanced is ours. For that matter, are you any better than Balak son of Zippor, king of Moab? Did he ever quarrel with Israel or attack them? For three hundred years Israelites have lived in Heshbon and its dependent villages, in Aroer and its villages, and in all the towns by the Arnon. Why did you not oust ^a them during all that time? We have done you no wrong; it is you who are doing us wrong by attacking us. The LORD who is judge will judge this day between the Israelites and the Ammonites.' But the king of the Ammonites would not listen to the message which Jephthah had sent him.

Then the spirit of the LORD came upon Jephthah and he passed through Gilead and Manasseh, by Mizpeh of Gilead, and from Mizpeh over to the Ammonites. Jephthah made this vow to the LORD: 'If thou wilt deliver the Ammonites into my hands, then the first creature that comes out of the door of my house to meet me when I return from them in peace shall be the LORD's; I will offer that as a whole-offering.' So Jephthah crossed over to attack the Ammonites, and the LORD delivered them into his hands. He routed them with great slaughter all the way from Aroer to Minnith, taking twenty towns, and as far as Abel-keramim. Thus Israel crushed Ammon. But when Jephthah came to his house in Mizpah, who should come out to meet him with tambourines and dances but his daughter, and she his only child; he had no other, neither son nor daughter. When he saw her, he rent his clothes and said, 'Alas, my daughter, you have broken my heart, such trouble you have brought upon me. I have made a vow to the LORD and I cannot go back.' She replied, 'Father, you have made a vow to the LORD; do to me what you have solemnly vowed, since the LORD has avenged you on the Ammonites, your enemies. But, father, grant me this one favour. For two months let me be, that I may roam ^b the hills with my companions and mourn that I must die a virgin.' 'Go', he said, and he let her depart for two months. She went with her companions and mourned her virginity on the hills. At the end of two months she came back to her father, and he fulfilled the vow he had made; she died a virgin. It became a tradition that the daughters of Israel should go year by year and commemorate the fate of Jephthah's daughter, four days in every year.

The Ephraimites mustered their forces and crossed over to Zaphon. They said to Jephthah, 'Why did you march against the Ammonites and ^a Or recover.

^b Or that I may go down country to . . .

not summon us to go with you? We will burn your house over your head.'

2 Jephthah answered, 'I and my people had a feud with the Ammonites, and had I appealed to you for help, you would not have saved us^a from them.

3 When I saw that we were not to look for help from you, I took my life in my hands and marched against the Ammonites, and the LORD delivered

4 them into my power. Why then do you attack me today?' Jephthah then mustered all the men of Gilead and fought Ephraim, and the Gileadites

5 defeated them. The Gileadites seized the fords of the Jordan and held them against Ephraim. When any Ephraimite who had escaped begged

6 leave to cross, the men of Gilead asked him, 'Are you an Ephraimite?', and if he said, 'No', they would retort, 'Say Shibboleth.' He would say

'Sibboleth', and because he could not pronounce the word properly, they seized him and killed him at the fords of the Jordan. At that time forty-two thousand men of Ephraim lost their lives.

7 Jephthah was judge over Israel for six years; when he died he was

8 buried in his own city in Gilead. After him Ibzan of Bethlehem was judge

9 over Israel. He had thirty sons and thirty daughters. He gave away the thirty daughters in marriage and brought in thirty girls for his sons. He

10 was judge over Israel for seven years, and when he died he was buried in Bethlehem.

11 After him Elon the Zebulunite was judge over Israel for ten years.

12 13 When he died, he was buried in Aijalon in the land of Zebulun. Next

14 Abdon son of Hillel the Pirathonite was judge over Israel. He had forty sons and thirty grandsons, who rode each on his own ass. He was judge

15 over Israel for eight years; and when he died he was buried in Pirathon in the land of Ephraim on the hill of the Amalekite.

Israel oppressed by the Philistines

13 ○ NCE MORE THE ISRAELITES DID WHAT WAS WRONG in the eyes of the LORD, and he delivered them into the hands of the Philistines for forty years.

2 There was a man from Zorah of the tribe of Dan whose name was

3 Manoah and whose wife was barren and childless. The angel of the LORD appeared to her and said, 'You are barren and have no child, but you shall

4 conceive and give birth to a son. Now you must do as I say: be careful to drink no wine or strong drink, and to eat no forbidden food; you will

5 conceive and give birth to a son, and no razor shall touch his head, for the boy is to be a Nazirite consecrated to God from the day of his birth. He

6 will strike the first blow to deliver Israel from the power of the Philistines.'

7 The woman went and told her husband; she said to him, 'A man of God came to me; his appearance was that of an^b angel of God, most terrible to see. I did not ask him where he came from nor did he tell me his name. He said to me, "You shall conceive and give birth to a son. From this time onwards drink no wine or strong drink and eat no forbidden food, for the boy is to be a Nazirite consecrated to God from his birth to the day of his death.”^a Manoah prayed to the LORD, ‘If it please thee, O LORD, let the man of God whom thou didst send come again to tell us what we are to do with the boy who is to be born.’ God heard Manoah’s prayer, and the angel of God came again to the woman, who was sitting in the fields; her husband was not with her. The woman ran quickly and said to him, ‘The man who came to me the other day has appeared to me again.’ Manoah went with her at once and approached the man and said, ‘Was it you who talked with my wife?’ He said, ‘Yes, it was I.’ ‘Now when your words come true,’ Manoah said, ‘what kind of boy will he be and what will he do?’ The angel of the LORD answered him, ‘Your wife must be careful to do all that I told her: she must not taste anything that comes from the vine. She must drink no wine or strong drink, and she must eat no forbidden food. She must do what I say.’ Manoah said to the angel of the LORD, ‘May we urge you to stay? Let us prepare a kid for you.’ The angel of the LORD replied, ‘Though you urge me to stay, I will not eat your food; but prepare a whole-offering if you will, and offer that to the LORD.’ Manoah did not perceive that he was the angel of the LORD and said to him, ‘What is your name? For we shall want to honour you when your words come true.’ The angel of the LORD said to him, ‘How can you ask my name? It is a name of wonder.’ Manoah took a kid with the proper grain-offering, and offered it on the rock to the LORD, to him whose works are full of wonder. And while Manoah and his wife were watching, the flame went up from the altar towards heaven, and the angel of the LORD went up in the flame; and seeing this, Manoah and his wife fell on their faces. The angel of the LORD did not appear again to Manoah and his wife; and Manoah knew that he was the angel of the LORD. He said to his wife, ‘We are doomed to die, we have seen God’,^a but she replied, ‘If the LORD had wanted to kill us, he would not have accepted a whole-offering and a grain-offering at our hands; he would not now have let us see and hear all this.’ The woman gave birth to a son and named him Samson. The boy grew up in Mahaneh-dan between Zorah and Eshtaol, and the LORD blessed him, and the spirit of the LORD began to drive him hard.

Samson went down to Timnath, and there he saw a woman, one of the Philistines. When he came back, he told his father and mother that he had seen a Philistine woman in Timnath and asked them to get her for him as his wife. His father and mother said to him, ‘Is there no woman among your cousins or in all our own people? Must you go and marry one of the uncircumcised Philistines?’ But Samson said to his father, ‘Get her for me, because she pleases me.’ His father and mother did not know that the LORD was at work in this, seeking an opportunity against the Philistines, who at that time were masters of Israel.

Samson^b went down to Timnath and, when he reached the vineyards there, a young lion came at him growling. The spirit of the LORD suddenly seized him and, having no weapon in his hand, he tore the lion in pieces as if it were a kid. He did not tell his parents what he had done. Then he went down and spoke to the woman, and she pleased him. After a time he went

^a Or a god.^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds and his father and mother.

9 down again to take her to wife; he turned aside to look at the carcass of the lion, and he saw a swarm of bees in it, and honey. He scraped the honey into his hands and went on, eating as he went. When he came to his father and mother, he gave them some and they ate it; but he did not tell them that 10 he had scraped the honey out of the lion's carcass. His father went down to see the woman, and Samson gave a feast there as the custom of young men 11 was. When the people saw him, they brought thirty young men to be his 12 escort. Samson said to them, 'Let me ask you a riddle. If you can guess it during the seven days of the feast, I will give you thirty lengths of linen and 13 thirty changes of clothing; but if you cannot guess the answer, then you shall give me thirty lengths of linen and thirty changes of clothing.' 'Tell 14 us your riddle,' they said; 'let us hear it.' So he said to them:

Out of the eater came something to eat;
out of the strong came something sweet.

15 At the end of three days they had failed to guess the riddle. On the fourth day they said to Samson's wife, 'Coax your husband and make him tell you the riddle, or we shall burn you and your father's house. Did you
16 invite us here to beggar us?' So Samson's wife wept over him and said, 'You do not love me, you only hate me. You have asked my kinsfolk a riddle and you have not told it to me.' He said to her, 'I have not told it
17 even to my father and mother; and am I to tell you?' But she wept over him every day until the seven feast days were ended, and on the seventh day, because she pestered him, he told her, and she told the riddle to her 18 kinsfolk. So that same day the men of the city said to Samson before he entered the bridal chamber: ^a

What is sweeter than honey?
What is stronger than a lion?

and he replied, 'If you had not ploughed with my heifer, you would not 19 have found out my riddle.' Then the spirit of the LORD suddenly seized him. He went down to Ashkelon and there he killed thirty men, took their belts and gave their clothes to the men who had answered his riddle; but 20 he was very angry and went off to his father's house. And Samson's wife was given in marriage to the friend who had been his groomsman.

15 After a while, during the time of wheat harvest, Samson went to visit his wife, taking a kid as a present for her. He said, 'I am going to my wife
2 in our bridal chamber', but her father would not let him in. He said, 'I was sure that you hated her, so I gave her in marriage to your groomsman. Her
3 young sister is better than she—take her instead.' But Samson said, 'This time I will settle my score with the Philistines; I will do them some real 4 harm.' So he went and caught three hundred jackals and got some torches; he tied the jackals tail to tail and fastened a torch between each pair of tails.
5 He then set the torches alight and turned the jackals loose in the standing corn of the Philistines. He burnt up standing corn and stooks as well, 6 vineyards and olive groves. The Philistines said, 'Who has done this?' They were told that it was Samson, because the Timnite, his father-in-law, had taken his wife and given her to his groomsman. So the Philistines came and burnt her and her father. Samson said, 'If you do things like this, I swear I will be revenged upon you before I have done.' He smote them hip and thigh with great slaughter; and after that he went down to live in a cave in the Rock of Etam. 7 8

^a he entered . . . chamber: prob. rdg.; Heb. the sun went down.

The Philistines came up and pitched camp in Judah, and overran Lehi. The men of Judah said, 'Why have you attacked us?' They answered, 'We have come to take Samson prisoner and serve him as he served us.' So three thousand men from Judah went down to the cave in the Rock of Etam. They said to Samson, 'Surely you know that the Philistines are our masters? Now see what you have brought upon us.' He answered, 'I only served them as they had served me.' They said to him, 'We have come down to bind you and hand you over to the Philistines.' 'Then you must swear to me', he said, 'that you will not set upon me yourselves.' They answered, 'No; we will only bind you and hand you over to them, we will not kill you.' So they bound him with two new ropes and brought him up from the cave in the Rock. He came to Lehi, and when they met him, the Philistines shouted in triumph; but the spirit of the LORD suddenly seized him, the ropes on his arms became like burnt tow and his bonds melted away. He found the jaw-bone of an ass, all raw, and picked it up and slew a thousand men. He made this saying: 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16

With the jaw-bone of an ass ^a I have flayed them like asses; ^b with the jaw-bone of an ass I have slain a thousand men.

When he had said his say, he threw away the jaw-bone; and he called that place Ramath-lehi.^c He began to feel very thirsty and cried aloud to the LORD, 'Thou hast let me, thy servant, win this great victory, and must I now die of thirst and fall into the hands of the uncircumcised?' God split open the Hollow of Lehi and water came out of it. Samson drank, his strength returned and he revived. This is why the spring in Lehi is called En-hakkore^d to this day. 17 18 19

Samson was judge over Israel for twenty years in the days of the Philistines. 20

Samson went to Gaza, and there he saw a prostitute and went in to spend the night with her. The people of Gaza heard that Samson had come, and they surrounded him and lay in wait for him all that night at the city gate. During the night, however, they took no action, saying to themselves, 'When day breaks we shall kill him.' Samson lay in bed till midnight; and when midnight came he rose, seized hold of the doors of the city gate and the two posts, pulled them out, bar and all, hoisted them on to his shoulders and carried them to the top of the hill east of Hebron. 1 2 3

After this Samson fell in love with a woman named Delilah, who lived in the valley of Sorek. The lords of the Philistines went up country to see her and said, 'Coax him and find out what gives him his great strength, and how we can master him, bind him and so hold him captive; then we 4 5 6 will each give you eleven hundred pieces of silver.' So Delilah said to 7 Samson, 'Tell me what gives you your great strength, and how you can be 8 bound and held captive.' Samson replied, 'If they bind me with seven 9 fresh bowstrings not yet dry, then I shall become as weak as any other man.'

10 So the lords of the Philistines brought her seven fresh bowstrings not yet 11 dry, and she bound him with them. She had men already hidden in the 12 inner room, and she cried, 'The Philistines are upon you, Samson!' But 13 he snapped the bowstrings as a strand of tow snaps when it feels the fire, 14 and his strength was not tamed. Delilah said to Samson, 'I see you have 15 made a fool of me and told me lies. Tell me this time how you can be 16 bound.' He said to her, 'If you bind me tightly with new ropes that have 17 never been used, then I shall become as weak as any other man.' So 18 Delilah took new ropes and bound him with them. Then she cried, 'The 19 Philistines are upon you, Samson!', while the men waited hidden in the 20 inner room. He snapped the ropes off his arms like pack-thread. Delilah 21 said to him, 'You are still making a fool of me and have told me lies. Tell 22 me: how can you be bound?' He said, 'Take the seven loose locks of my 23 hair and weave them into the warp, and then drive them tight with the 24 beater; and I shall become as weak as any other man.' So she lulled him to sleep, wove the seven loose locks of his hair into the warp, and drove them tight with the beater, and cried, 'The Philistines are upon you, Samson!'
He woke from sleep and pulled away the warp and the loom with it.^a She said to him, 'How can you say you love me when you do not confide in me?
This is the third time you have made a fool of me and have not told me what gives you your great strength.' She so pestered him with these words day after day, pressing him hard and wearying him to death, that he told her his secret. 'No razor has touched my head,' he said, 'because I am a Nazirite, consecrated to God from the day of my birth. If my head were shaved, then my strength would leave me, and I should become as weak as any other man.' Delilah saw that he had told her his secret; so she sent to the lords of the Philistines and said, 'Come up at once, he has told me his secret.' So the lords of the Philistines came up and brought the money with them. She lulled him to sleep on her knees, summoned a man and he shaved the seven locks of his hair for her. She began to take him captive and his strength left him. Then she cried, 'The Philistines are upon you, Samson!' He woke from his sleep and said, 'I will go out as usual and shake myself'; he did not know that the LORD had left him. The Philistines seized him, gouged out his eyes and brought him down to Gaza. There they bound him with fetters of bronze, and he was set to grinding corn in the prison. But his hair, after it had been shaved, began to grow again.

23 The lords of the Philistines assembled together to offer a great sacrifice to their god Dagon and to rejoice before him. They said, 'Our god has delivered Samson our enemy into our hands.' The people, when they saw him, praised their god, chanting:

Our god has delivered our enemy into our hands,
the scourge of our land who piled it with our dead.

When they grew merry, they said, 'Call Samson, and let him fight to make sport for us.' So they summoned Samson from prison and he made sport before them all. They stood him between the pillars, and Samson said to the boy who held his hand, 'Put me where I can feel the pillars which support the temple, so that I may lean against them.' The temple was full of men and women, and all the lords of the Philistines were there, and there were about three thousand men and women on the roof watching Samson as he fought. Samson called on the LORD and said, 'Remember me, O Lord GOD, remember me: give me strength only this once, O God, and let me at one stroke be avenged on the Philistines for my two eyes.' He put his arms round the two central pillars which supported the temple, his right arm round one and his left round the other, and braced himself and said, 'Let me die with the Philistines.' Then Samson leaned forward with all his might, and the temple fell on the lords and on all the people who were in it. So the dead whom he killed at his death were more than those he had killed in his life. His brothers and all his father's family came down, carried him up to the grave of his father Manoah between Zorah and Eshtaol and buried him there. He had been judge over Israel for twenty years.

Years of lawlessness

THERE WAS ONCE A MAN NAMED MICAH from the hill-country of Ephraim. He said to his mother, 'You remember the eleven hundred pieces of silver which were taken from you, and how you called down a curse on the thief in my hearing? I have the money; I took it and now I will give it back to you.'^a His mother said, 'May the LORD bless you, my son.' So he gave the eleven hundred pieces of silver back to his mother, and she said, 'I now solemnly dedicate this money of mine to the LORD for the benefit of my son, to make a carved idol and a cast image.' He returned the money to his mother, and she took two hundred pieces of silver and handed them to a silversmith, who made them into an idol and an image, which stood in Micah's house.

This man Micah had a shrine, and he made an ephod and teraphim and installed one of his sons to be his priest. In those days there was no king in Israel and every man did what was right in his own eyes. Now there was a young man from Bethlehem in Judah, from the clan of Judah, a Levite named Ben-gershom.^c He had left the city of Bethlehem to go and find somewhere to live. On his way he came to Micah's house in the hill-country of Ephraim. Micah said to him, 'Where have you come from?' He replied, 'I am a Levite from Bethlehem in Judah, and I am looking for somewhere to live.' Micah said to him, 'Stay with me and be priest and father to me. I will give you ten pieces of silver a year, and provide you with food and clothes.' The Levite agreed to stay with the man and was treated as one of his own sons. Micah installed the Levite, and the young man became his priest and a member of his household. Micah said, 'Now I know that the LORD will make me prosper, because I have a Levite for my priest.'

8 In those days there was no king in Israel and the tribe of the Danites was 9 looking for territory to occupy, because they had not so far come into 10 possession of the territory allotted to them among the tribes of Israel. The 11 Danites therefore sent out five fighting men of their clan from Zorah and 12 Eshtaol to prospect, with instructions to go and explore the land. They 13 came to Micah's house in the hill-country of Ephraim and spent the night
 14 there. While they were there, they recognized the speech of the young 15 Levite; they turned there and then and said to him, 'Who brought you 16 here? What are you doing? What is your business here?' He said, 'This is 17 all Micah's doing: he has hired me and I have become his priest.' They 18 said to him, 'Then inquire of God on our behalf whether our mission will 19 be successful.' The priest replied, 'Go in peace. Your mission is in the 20 LORD's hands.' The five men went on their way and came to Laish. There 21 they found the inhabitants living a carefree life, in the same way as the 22 Sidonians, a quiet, carefree folk, with no hereditary king to keep the country under his thumb.^a They were a long way from the Sidonians, and had no contact with the Aramaeans. So the five men went back to Zorah and Eshtaol, and when their kinsmen asked their news, they said, 'Come and attack them. It is an excellent country that we have seen. Will you hang back and do nothing about it? Start off now and take possession of the land.
 When you get there, you will find a people living a carefree life in a wide expanse of open country. God has delivered it into your hands, a place where there is no lack of anything on earth.'

And so six hundred armed men from the clan of the Danites set out from Zorah and Eshtaol. They went up country and encamped in Kiriathyearim in Judah: this is why that place to this day is called Mahaneh-dan;^b it lies west of Kiriath-yearim. From there they passed on to the hill-country of Ephraim and came to Micah's house. The five men who had been to explore the country round Laish spoke up and said to their kinsmen, 'Do you know that in one of these houses there are now an ephod and teraphim, an idol and an image? Now consider what you had best do.' So they turned aside to Micah's house and greeted him. The six hundred armed Danites took their stand at the entrance of the gate, and the five men who had gone to explore the country went indoors to take the idol and the image, ephod and teraphim, while the priest was standing at the entrance with the six hundred armed men. The five men entered Micah's house and took the idol and the image, ephod and teraphim.^c The priest asked them what they were doing, but they said to him, 'Be quiet; not a word. Come with us and be our priest and father. Which is better, to be priest in the household of one man or to be priest to a whole tribe and clan in Israel?' This pleased the priest; so he took the ephod and teraphim, the idol and the image, and joined the company. They turned and went off, putting the dependants, the herds, and the valuables in front. The Danites had gone some distance from Micah's house, when his neighbours were called out in pursuit and caught up with them. They shouted after them, and the Danites turned round and said to Micah, 'What is the matter with you? Why have you come after us?' He said, 'You have taken my gods which I made for myself, you have taken the priest, and you have gone off and left me nothing. How dare you say, "What is the matter with you?"' The Danites said to him, 'Do not shout at us. We are desperate men and if we fall upon you it will be the death of yourself and your family.' With that the Danites went on their way and Micah, seeing that they were too strong for him, turned and went home.

Thus they carried off the priest and the things Micah had made for himself, and attacked Laish, whose people were quiet and carefree. They put them to the sword and set fire to their city. There was no one to save them, for the city was a long way from Sidon and they had no contact with the Aramaeans,^a although the city was in the vale near Beth-rehob. They rebuilt the city and settled in it, naming it Dan after the name of their forefather Dan, a son of Israel; but its original name was Laish. The Danites set up the idol, and Jonathan son of Gershom, son of Moses, and his sons were priests to the tribe of Dan until the people went into exile. (They set up for themselves the idol which Micah had made, and it was there as long as the house of God was at Shiloh.)

IN THOSE DAYS when no king ruled in Israel, a Levite was living in the heart of the hill-country of Ephraim. He had taken himself a concubine from Bethlehem in Judah. In a fit of anger she had left him and had gone to her father's house in Bethlehem in Judah. When she had been there four months, her husband set out after her with his servant and two asses to appeal to her and bring her back. She brought him in to the house of her father, who welcomed him when he saw him. His father-in-law, the girl's father, pressed him and he stayed with him three days, and they were well entertained during their visit. On the fourth day, they rose early in the morning, and he prepared to leave, but the girl's father said to his son-in-law, 'Have something to eat first, before you go.' So the two of them sat down and ate and drank together. The girl's father said to the man, 'Why not spend the night and enjoy yourself?' When he rose to go, his father-in-law urged him to stay, and again he stayed for the night. He rose early in the morning on the fifth day to depart, but the girl's father said, 'Have something to eat first.' So they lingered till late afternoon, eating and drinking together. Then the man stood up to go with his concubine and servant, but his father-in-law said, 'See how the day wears on towards sunset. Spend the night here and enjoy yourself, and then rise early tomorrow and set out for home.' But the man would not stay the night; he rose and left. He had reached a point opposite Jebus, that is Jerusalem, with his two laden asses and his concubine, and when they were close to Jebus, the weather grew wild and stormy, and the young man said to his master, 'Come now, let us turn into this Jebusite town and spend the night there.' But his master said to him, 'No, not into a strange town where the

^a Prob. rdg., cp. verse 7; Heb. men.

13 people are not Israelites; let us go on to Gibeah. Come, we will go and find 14 some other place, and spend the night in Gibeah or Ramah.' So they went on until sunset overtook them; they were then near Gibeah which belongs 15 to Benjamin. They turned in to spend the night there, and went and sat down in the open street of the town; but nobody took them into his house for the night.

16 Meanwhile an old man was coming home in the evening from his work in the fields. He was from the hill-country of Ephraim, but he lived in 17 Gibeah, where the people were Benjamites. He looked up, saw the traveller in the open street of the town, and asked him where he was going and 18 where he came from. He answered, 'We are travelling from Bethlehem in Judah to the heart of the hill-country of Ephraim. I come from there; I have been to Bethlehem in Judah and I am going home, but nobody has 19 taken me into his house. I have straw and provender for the asses, food and wine for myself, the girl, and the young man; we have all we need, sir.'
20 The old man said, 'You are welcome, I will supply all your wants; you 21 must not spend the night in the street.' So he took him inside and provided 22 fodder for the asses; they washed their feet, and ate and drank. While they were enjoying themselves, some of the worst scoundrels in the town surrounded the house, hurling themselves against the door and shouting to the old man who owned the house, 'Bring out the man who has gone into 23 your house, for us to have intercourse with him.' The owner of the house went outside to them and said, 'No, my friends, do nothing so wicked. This 24 man is my guest; do not commit this outrage. Here is my daughter, a virgin;^a let me bring her^b out to you. Rape her^b and do to her^b what you 25 please; but you shall not commit such an outrage against this man.' But the men refused to listen to him, so the Levite took hold of his concubine and thrust her outside for them. They assaulted her and abused her all 26 night till the morning, and when dawn broke, they let her go. The girl came at daybreak and fell down at the entrance of the man's house where 27 her master was, and lay there until it was light. Her master rose in the morning and opened the door of the house to set out on his journey, and there was his concubine lying at the door with her hands on the threshold.
28 He said to her, 'Get up and let us be off'; but there was no answer. So he 29 lifted her on to his ass and set off for home. When he arrived there, he picked up a knife, and he took hold of his concubine and cut her up limb by limb into twelve pieces; and he sent them through the length and 30 breadth of Israel. He told the men he sent with them to say to every Israelite, 'Has the like of this happened or been seen from the time the Israelites came up from Egypt till today? Consider this among yourselves and speak your minds.' So everyone who saw them said, 'No such thing has ever happened or been seen before.'

20 All the Israelites, the whole community from Dan to Beersheba and out of Gilead also, left their homes as one man and assembled before the LORD 2 at Mizpah. The leaders of the people and all the tribes of Israel presented themselves in the general assembly of the people of God, four hundred 3 thousand foot-soldiers armed with swords; and the Benjamites heard that the Israelites had gone up to Mizpah. The Israelites asked how this wicked thing had come about, and the Levite, to whom the murdered woman belonged, answered, 'I and my concubine came to Gibeah in Benjamin to spend the night there. The citizens of Gibeah rose against me that night and surrounded the house where I was, intending to kill me; and they raped my concubine and she died. I took her and cut her in pieces, and sent them through the length and breadth of Israel, because of the filthy outrage they had committed in Israel. Now it is for you, the whole of Israel, to say here and now what you think ought to be done.' All the people rose to their feet as one man and said, 'Not one of us shall go back to his tent, not one shall return home. This is what we will now do to Gibeah. We will draw lots for the attack: and we will take ten men out of every hundred in all the tribes of Israel, a hundred out of every thousand, and a thousand out of every ten thousand, to collect provisions from the people for those who have taken the field against Gibeah in Benjamin to avenge the outrage committed in Israel.' Thus all the Israelites to a man were massed against the town.

The tribes of Israel sent men all through the tribe of Benjamin saying, 'What is this wicked thing which has happened in your midst? Hand over to us those scoundrels in Gibeah, and we will put them to death and purge Israel of this wickedness.' But the Benjamites refused to listen to their fellow-Israelites. They flocked from their cities to Gibeah to go to war with the Israelites, and that day they mustered out of their cities twenty-six thousand men armed with swords. There were also seven hundred picked men from Gibeah, left-handed men, who could sling a stone and not miss by a hair's breadth. The Israelites, without Benjamin, numbered four hundred thousand men armed with swords, every one a fighting man. The Israelites at once moved on to Bethel, and there they sought an oracle from God, asking, 'Which of us shall attack Benjamin first?', and the LORD's answer was, 'Judah shall attack first.' So the Israelites set out at dawn and encamped opposite Gibeah. They advanced to do battle with Benjamin and drew up their forces before the town. The Benjamites made a sally from Gibeah and left twenty-two thousand of Israel dead on the field that day. The Israelites went up to Bethel,^a lamented before the LORD until evening and inquired whether they should again attack their brother Benjamin. The LORD said, 'Yes, attack him.' Then the Israelites took fresh courage and again formed up on the same ground as the first day. So the second day they advanced against the Benjamites, who sallied out from Gibeah to meet them and laid another eighteen thousand armed men low. The Israelites, the whole people, went back to Bethel, where they sat before the LORD lamenting and fasting until evening, and they offered whole-offerings and shared-offerings before the LORD. In those days the Ark of the Covenant of God was there, and Phinehas son of Eleazar, son of Aaron, served before the LORD.^c The Israelites inquired of the LORD and said, 'Shall we again march out to battle against Benjamin our brother or shall we desist?' The LORD answered, 'Attack him: tomorrow I will deliver him into your hands.' Israel then posted men in ambush all round Gibeah.

30 On the third day the Israelites advanced against the Benjamites and 31 drew up their forces at Gibeah as they had before; and the Benjamites sallied out to meet the army. They were drawn away from the town and began the attack as before by killing a few Israelites, about thirty,^a on the highways which led across open country, one to Bethel and the other to 32 Gibeah. They thought they were defeating them once again, but the Israelites had planned a retreat to draw them away from the town out on to 33 the highways. Meanwhile the main body of Israelites left their positions and re-formed in Baal-tamar, while those in ambush, ten thousand picked men all told, burst out from their position in the neighbourhood of Gibeah 34 and came in on the east of the town. There was soon heavy fighting; yet 35 the Benjamites did not suspect the disaster that was threatening them. So the LORD put Benjamin to flight before Israel, and on that day the Israelites killed twenty-five thousand one hundred Benjamites, all armed men.

36 The men of Benjamin now saw that they had been defeated, for all that the Israelites, trusting in the ambush which they had set by Gibeah, had 37 given way before them. The men in ambush made a sudden dash on Gibeah, fell on the town from all sides and put all the inhabitants to the 38 sword. The agreed signal between the Israelites and those in ambush^b was 39 to be a column of smoke sent up from the town. The Israelites then faced about in the battle; and Benjamin began to cut down the Israelites, killing about thirty of them,^c in the belief that they were defeating them as they 40 had done in the first encounter. As the column of smoke began to go up from the town, the Benjamites looked back and thought the whole town 41 was going up in flames. When the Israelites faced about, the Benjamites 42 saw that disaster had overtaken them and were seized with panic. They turned and fled before the Israelites in the direction of the wilderness, but the fighting caught up with them and soon those from the town were 43 among them, cutting them down. They hemmed in the Benjamites, pursuing them without respite,^d and overtook them at a point to the east of 44 Gibeah. Eighteen thousand of the Benjamites fell, all of them fighting 45 men. The survivors turned and fled into the wilderness towards the Rock of Rimmon. The Israelites picked off the stragglers on the roads, five thou-46 sand of them, and chased them until they had cut down and killed two 47 thousand more. Twenty-five thousand armed men of Benjamin fell in battle that day, all fighting men. The six hundred who survived turned and fled into the wilderness as far as the Rock of Rimmon, and there they remained 48 for four months. The Israelites then turned back to deal with the Benjam-ites, and put to the sword the people in the towns and the cattle, every creature that they found; they also set fire to every town within their reach.

21 In Mizpah the Israelites had bound themselves by oath that none of 2 them would marry his daughter to a Benjamite. The people now came to Bethel and remained there in God's presence till sunset, raising their voices
 3 in loud lamentation. They said, 'O LORD God of Israel, why has it happened
 4 in Israel that one tribe should this day be lost to Israel?' Next day the people rose early, built an altar there and offered whole-offerings and shared-offerings. At that the Israelites asked themselves whether among all the tribes of Israel there was anyone who did not go up to the assembly before the LORD; for under the terms of the great oath anyone who had not gone up to the LORD at Mizpah was to be put to death. And the Israelites felt remorse over their brother Benjamin, because, as they said, 'This day Israel has lost one whole tribe.' So they asked, 'What shall we do for wives for those who are left? We have sworn to the LORD not to give any of our daughters to them in marriage. Is there anyone in all the tribes of Israel who did not go up to the LORD at Mizpah?' Now it happened that no one from Jabesh-gilead had come to the camp for the assembly; so when they held a roll-call of the people, they found that no inhabitant of Jabesh-gilead was present. Thereupon the community sent off twelve thousand fighting men with orders to go and put the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead to the sword, men, women, and dependants. 'This is what you shall do,' they said: 'put to death every male person, and every woman who has had intercourse with a man, but spare any who are virgins.' This they did. Among the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead they found four hundred young women who were virgins and had not had intercourse with a man, and they brought them to the camp at Shiloh in Canaan. Then the whole community sent messengers to the Benjamites at the Rock of Rimmon to parley with them, and peace was proclaimed. At this the Benjamites came back, and were given those of the women of Jabesh-gilead who had been spared; but these were not enough.

The people were still full of remorse over Benjamin because the LORD had made this gap in the tribes of Israel, and the elders of the community said, 'What shall we do for wives for the rest? All the women in Benjamin have been massacred.' They said, 'Heirs there must be for the remnant of Benjamin who have escaped! Then Israel will not see one of its tribes blotted out. We cannot give them our own daughters in marriage because we have sworn that there shall be a curse on the man who gives a wife to a Benjamite.' Then they bethought themselves of the pilgrimage in honour of the LORD, made every year to Shiloh, the place which lies to the north of Bethel, on the east side of the highway from Bethel to Shechem and to the south of Lebonah. They said to the Benjamites, 'Go and hide in the vineyards and keep watch. When the girls of Shiloh come out to dance, sally out of the vineyards, and each of you seize one of them for his wife; then make your way home to the land of Benjamin. Then, if their fathers or brothers come and complain to you, say to them, "Let us keep them with your approval, for none of us has captured a wife in battle. Had you offered them to us, the guilt would be yours."'

All this the Benjamites did. They carried off as many wives as they needed, snatching them as they danced; then they went their way and returned to their patrimony, rebuilt their cities and settled in them. The Israelites also dispersed by tribes and families, and every man went back to his own patrimony.

In those days there was no king in Israel and every man did what was right in his own eyes.

RUTH

Naomi and Ruth

1 LONG AGO, IN THE TIME OF THE JUDGES, there was a 2 famine in the land, and a man from Bethlehem in Judah went to live in the Moabite country with his wife and his two sons. The man's name was Elimelech, his wife's name was Naomi, and the names of his two sons Mahlon and Chilion. They were Ephrathites from Bethlehem in Judah. They arrived in the Moabite country and there they stayed.

3 Elimelech Naomi's husband died, so that she was left with her two sons.
4 These sons married Moabite women, one of whom was called Orpah and 5 the other Ruth. They had lived there about ten years, when both Mahlon and Chilion died, so that the woman was bereaved of her two sons as well 6 as of her husband. Thereupon she set out with her two daughters-in-law to return home, because she had heard while still in the Moabite country 7 that the LORD had cared for his people and given them food. So with her two daughters-in-law she left the place where she had been living, and took 8 the road home to Judah. Then Naomi said to her two daughters-in-law,
'Go back, both of you, to your mothers' homes. May the LORD keep faith 9 with you, as you have kept faith with the dead and with me; and may he grant each of you security in the home of a new husband.' She kissed them 10 and they wept aloud. Then they said to her, 'We will return with you to 11 your own people.' But Naomi said, 'Go back, my daughters. Why should you go with me? Am I likely to bear any more sons to be husbands for you?
12 Go back, my daughters, go. I am too old to marry again. But even if I could say that I had hope of a child, if I were to marry this night and if I were to 13 bear sons, would you then wait until they grew up? Would you then refrain from marrying? No, no, my daughters, my lot is more bitter than yours, 14 because the LORD has been against me.' At this they wept again. Then Orpah kissed her mother-in-law and returned to her people, but Ruth clung to her.

15 'You see,' said Naomi, 'your sister-in-law has gone back to her people
16 and her gods;^a go back with her.' 'Do not urge me to go back and desert you', Ruth answered. 'Where you go, I will go, and where you stay, I will 17 stay. Your people shall be my people, and your God my God. Where you die, I will die, and there I will be buried. I swear a solemn oath before the 18 LORD your God: nothing but^b death shall divide us.' When Naomi saw 19 that Ruth was determined to go with her, she said no more, and the two of them went on until they came to Bethlehem. When they arrived in Bethlehem, the whole town was in great excitement about them, and the 20 women said, 'Can this be Naomi?' 'Do not call me Naomi,'^c she said, 'call me Mara,^a for it is a bitter lot that the Almighty has sent me. I went away full, and the LORD has brought me back empty. Why do you call me Naomi? The LORD has pronounced against me; the Almighty has brought disaster on me.' This is how Naomi's daughter-in-law, Ruth the Moabitess, returned with her from the Moabite country. The barley harvest was beginning when they arrived in Bethlehem.

Ruth and Boaz

NOW NAOMI HAD A KINSMAN on her husband's side, a well-to-do man of the family of Elimelech; his name was Boaz. Ruth the Moabitess said to Naomi, 'May I go out to the cornfields and glean behind anyone who will grant me that favour?' 'Yes, go, my daughter', she replied. So Ruth went gleaning in the fields behind the reapers. As it happened, she was in that strip of the fields which belonged to Boaz of Elimelech's family, and there was Boaz coming out from Bethlehem. He greeted the reapers, saying, 'The LORD be with you'; and they replied, 'The LORD bless you.' Then he asked his servant in charge of the reapers, 'Whose girl is this?' 'She is a Moabite girl', the servant answered, 'who has just come back with Naomi from the Moabite country. She asked if she might glean and gather among the swathes behind the reapers. She came and has been on her feet with hardly a moment's rest^b from daybreak till now.' Then Boaz said to Ruth, 'Listen to me, my daughter: do not go and glean in any other field, and do not look any further, but keep close to my girls. Watch where the men reap, and follow the gleaners; I have given them orders not to molest you. If you are thirsty, go and drink from the jars the men have filled.' She fell prostrate before him and said, 'Why are you so kind as to take notice of me when I am only a foreigner?' Boaz answered, 'They have told me all that you have done for your mother-in-law since your husband's death, how you left your father and mother and the land of your birth, and came to a people you did not know before. The LORD reward your deed; may the LORD the God of Israel, under whose wings you have come to take refuge, give you all that you deserve.' 'Indeed, sir,' she said, 'you have eased my mind and spoken kindly to me; may I ask you as a favour not to treat me only as one of your slave-girls?'^c When meal-time came round, Boaz said to her, 'Come here and have something to eat, and dip your bread into the sour wine.' So she sat beside the reapers, and he passed her some roasted grain. She ate all she wanted and still had some left over. When she got up to glean, Boaz gave the men orders. 'She', he said, 'may glean even among the sheaves; do not scold her. Or you may even pull out some corn from the bundles and leave it for her to glean, without reproving her.'

So Ruth gleaned in the field till evening, and when she beat out what she had gleaned, it came to about a bushel of barley. She took it up and went into the town, and her mother-in-law saw how much she had gleaned.

^a That is Bitter. ^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds in the house. ^c may I . . . slave-girls?: or if you please, treat me as one of your slave-girls.

19 Then Ruth brought out what she had saved from her meal and gave it to her. Her mother-in-law asked her, 'Where did you glean today? Which way did you go? Blessings on the man who kindly took notice of you.' So she told her mother-in-law whom she had been working with. 'The man with whom I worked today', she said, 'is called Boaz.' 'Blessings on him from the LORD', said Naomi. 'The LORD has kept faith with the living and the dead. For this man is related to us and is our next-of-kin.' 'And what is more,' said Ruth the Moabitess, 'he told me to stay close to his men until they had finished all his harvest.' 'It is best for you, my daughter,' Naomi answered, 'to go out with his girls; let no one catch you in another field.' 23 So she kept close to his girls, gleaning with them till the end of both barley and wheat harvests; but she lived with her mother-in-law.

3 One day Ruth's mother-in-law Naomi said to her, 'My daughter, I want 2 to see you happily settled. Now there is our kinsman Boaz; you were with 3 his girls. Tonight he is winnowing barley at his threshing-floor. Wash and anoint yourself, put on your cloak and go down to the threshing-floor, but do not make yourself known to the man until he has finished eating and 4 drinking. But when he lies down, take note of the place where he lies. Then go in, turn back the covering at his feet and lie down. He will tell 5 6 you what to do.' 'I will do whatever you tell me', Ruth answered. So she went down to the threshing-floor and did exactly as her mother-in-law 7 had told her. When Boaz had eaten and drunk, he felt at peace with the world and went to lie down at the far end of the heap of grain. She came in 8 quietly, turned back the covering at his feet and lay down. About midnight something disturbed the man as he slept; he turned over and, lo and behold, 9 there was a woman lying at his feet. 'Who are you?' he asked. 'I am your servant, Ruth', she replied. 'Now spread your skirt over your servant, 10 because you are my next-of-kin.' He said, 'The LORD has blessed you, my daughter. This last proof of your loyalty is greater than the first; you have 11 not sought after any young man, rich or poor. Set your mind at rest, my daughter. I will do whatever you ask; for, as the whole neighbourhood 12 knows, you are a capable woman. Are you sure that I am the next-of-kin? 13 There is a kinsman even closer than I. Spend the night here and then in the morning, if he is willing to act as your next-of-kin, well and good; but if he is not willing, I will do so; I swear it by the LORD. Now lie down till 14 morning.' So she lay at his feet till morning, but rose before one man could recognize another; and he said, 'It must not be known that a woman has 15 been to the threshing-floor.' Then he said, 'Bring me the cloak you have on, and hold it out.' So she held it out, and he put in six measures of barley and lifted it on her back, and she went to the town. When she came to her 16 mother-in-law, Naomi asked, 'How did things go with you, my daughter?' 17 Ruth told her all that the man had done for her. 'He gave me these six measures of barley,' she said; 'he would not let me come home to my mother-in-law empty-handed.' Naomi answered, 'Wait, my daughter, until you see 18 what will come of it. He will not rest until he has settled the matter today.'

4 Now Boaz had gone up to the city gate, and was sitting there; and, after a time, the next-of-kin of whom he had spoken passed by. 'Here,' he cried, 2 calling him by name, 'come and sit down.' He came and sat down. Then

Boaz stopped ten elders of the town, and asked them to sit there, and they did so. Then he said to the next-of-kin, 'You will remember the strip of field that belonged to our brother Elimelech. Naomi has returned from the Moabite country and is selling it. I promised to open the matter with you, to ask you to acquire it in the presence of those who sit here, in the presence of the elders of my people. If you are going to do your duty as next-of-kin, then do so, but if not, someone must do it. So tell me, and then I shall know; for I come after you as next-of-kin.' He answered, 'I will act as next-of-kin.' Then Boaz said, 'On the day when you acquire the field from Naomi, you also acquire Ruth the Moabitess, the dead man's wife, so as to perpetuate the name of the dead man with his patrimony.' Thereupon the next-of-kin said, 'I cannot act myself, for I should risk losing my own patrimony. You must therefore do my duty as next-of-kin. I cannot act.'

Now in those old days, when property was redeemed or exchanged, it was the custom for a man to pull off his sandal and give it to the other party. This was the form of attestation in Israel. So the next-of-kin said to Boaz, 'Acquire it for yourself', and pulled off his sandal. Then Boaz declared to the elders and all the people, 'You are witnesses today that I have acquired from Naomi all that belonged to Elimelech and all that belonged to Mahlon and Chilion; and, further, that I have myself acquired Ruth the Moabitess, wife of Mahlon, to be my wife, to perpetuate the name of the deceased with his patrimony, so that his name may not be missing among his kindred and at the gate of his native place. You are witnesses this day.' Then the elders and all who were at the gate said, 'We are witnesses. May the LORD make this woman, who has come to your home, like Rachel and Leah, the two who built up the house of Israel. May you do great things in Ephrathah and keep a name alive in Bethlehem. May your house be like the house of Perez, whom Tamar bore to Judah, through the offspring the LORD will give you by this girl.'

So Boaz took Ruth and made her his wife. When they came together, the LORD caused her to conceive and she bore Boaz a son. Then the women said to Naomi, 'Blessed be the LORD today, for he has not left you without a next-of-kin. May the dead man's name be kept alive in Israel. The child will give you new life and cherish you in your old age; for your daughter-in-law who loves you, who has proved better to you than seven sons, has borne him.' Naomi took the child and laid him in her lap and became his nurse. Her neighbours gave him a name: 'Naomi has a son,' they said; 'we will call him Obed.' He was the father of Jesse, the father of David.

THIS IS THE GENEALOGY OF PEREZ: Perez was the father of Hezron, Hezron of Ram, Ram of Amminadab, Amminadab of Nahshon, Nahshon of Salmon, Salmon of Boaz, Boaz of Obed, Obed of Jesse, and Jesse of David.

THE FIRST BOOK OF SAMUEL

The birth and call of Samuel

1 THERE WAS A MAN FROM RAMATHAIM, a Zuphite
2 from the hill-country of Ephraim, named Elkanah son of Jeroham, 3 son of Elihu, son of Tohu, son of Zuph an Ephraimite; and he had 4 two wives named Hannah and Peninnah. Peninnah had children, but 5 Hannah was childless. This man used to go up from his own town every 6 year to worship and to offer sacrifice to the LORD of Hosts in Shiloh. There 7 Eli's two sons, Hophni and Phinehas, were priests of the LORD. On the 8 day when Elkanah sacrificed, he gave several shares of the meat to his wife
9-10 Peninnah with all her sons and daughters; but, although he loved Hannah, 11 he gave her only one share, because the LORD had not granted her children.
12 Further, Hannah's rival used to torment her and humiliate her because 13 she had no children. Year after year this happened when they went up to 14 the house of the LORD; her rival used to torment her. Once when she was 15 in tears and would not eat, her husband Elkanah said to her, 'Hannah, why 16 are you crying and eating nothing? Why are you so miserable? Am I not 17 more to you than ten sons?' After they had finished eating and drinking 18 at the sacrifice at Shiloh, Hannah rose in deep distress, and stood before 19 the LORD and prayed to him, weeping bitterly. Meanwhile Eli the priest 20 was sitting on his seat beside the door of the temple of the LORD. Hannah made a vow in these words: 'O LORD of Hosts, if thou wilt deign to take notice of my trouble and remember me, if thou wilt not forget me but grant me offspring, then I will give the child to the LORD for his whole life, and no razor shall ever touch his head.' For a long time she went on praying before the LORD, while Eli watched her lips. Hannah was praying silently; but, although her voice could not be heard, her lips were moving and Eli took her for a drunken woman. He said to her, 'Enough of this drunken behaviour! Go away till the wine has worn off.' 'No, sir,' she answered,
'I am a sober person, I have drunk no wine or strong drink, and I have been pouring out my heart before the LORD. Do not think me so degraded, sir; all this time I have been speaking out of the fullness of my grief and misery.' 'Go in peace,' said Eli, 'and may the God of Israel answer the prayer you have made to him.' Hannah said, 'May I be worthy of your kindness.' And she went away and took something to eat, no longer downcast. Next morning they were up early and, after prostrating themselves before the LORD, returned to their own home at Ramah. Elkanah had intercourse with his wife Hannah, and the LORD remembered her. She conceived, and in due time bore a son, whom she named Samuel, 'because', she said, 'I asked the LORD for him.'

Elkanah, with his whole household, went up to make the annual sacrifice to the LORD and to redeem his vow. Hannah did not go with them, but said to her husband, 'When the child is weaned I will come up with him to enter the presence of the LORD, and he shall^a stay there always.' Her husband Elkanah said to her, 'Do what you think best; stay at home until you have weaned him. Only, may the LORD indeed see your vow fulfilled.'
 So the woman stayed and nursed her son until she had weaned him; and when she had weaned him, she took him up with her. She took also a bull three years old, an ephah of meal, and a flagon of wine, and she brought him, child as he was, into the house of the LORD at Shiloh. They slaughtered the bull, and brought the boy to Eli. Hannah said to him, 'Sir, as sure as you live, I am the woman who stood near you here praying to the LORD.
 It was this boy that I prayed for and the LORD has given me what I asked.
 What I asked I have received; and now I lend him to the LORD; for his whole life he is lent to the LORD.' And they prostrated themselves there before the LORD.

Then Hannah offered this prayer:

My heart rejoices in the LORD,
 in the LORD I now hold my head high;
 my mouth is full of derision of my foes,
 exultant because thou hast saved me.

There is none except thee,
 none so holy as the LORD,
 no rock like our God.

Cease your proud boasting,
 let no word of arrogance pass your lips;
 for the LORD is a god of all knowledge:
 he governs all that men do.

Strong men stand in mute^b dismay
 but those who faltered put on new strength.
 Those who had plenty sell themselves for a crust,
 and the hungry grow strong again.
 The barren woman has seven children,
 and the mother of many sons is left to languish.

The LORD kills and he gives life,
 he sends down to Sheol, he can bring the dead up again.
 The LORD makes a man poor, he makes him rich,
 he brings down and he raises up.
 He lifts the weak out of the dust
 and raises the poor from the dunghill;
 to give them a place among the great,
 to set them in seats of honour.

For the foundations of the earth are the LORD's,
 he has built the world upon them.

^a come up . . . he shall: or bring him up, and he shall come into the presence of the LORD and . . . ^b in mute: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure.

9 He will guard the footsteps of his saints,
while the wicked sink into silence and gloom;
not by mere strength shall a man prevail.

10 Those that stand against the LORD will be terrified
when the High God^a thunders out of heaven.
The LORD is judge even to the ends of the earth,
he will give strength to his king
and raise high the head of his anointed prince.

11 Then Elkanah went to Ramah with his household, but the boy remained behind in the service of the LORD under Eli the priest.

12 13 Now Eli's sons were scoundrels and had no regard for the LORD. The custom of the priests in their dealings with the people was this: when a 14 man offered a sacrifice, the priest's servant would come while the flesh was stewing and would thrust a three-pronged fork into the cauldron or pan or kettle or pot; and the priest would take whatever the fork brought out. This should have been their practice whenever Israelites came to 15 sacrifice at Shiloh; but now under Eli's sons, even before the fat was burnt, the priest's servant came and said to the man who was sacrificing, 'Give me meat to roast for the priest; he will not accept what has been already stewed, 16 only raw meat.' And if the man answered 'Let them burn the fat first, and then take what you want', he said, 'No, give it to me now, or I will take it 17 by force.' The young men's sin was very great in the LORD's sight; for they brought the LORD's sacrifice into general contempt.

18 Samuel continued in the service of the LORD, a mere boy with a linen 19 ephod fastened round him. Every year his mother made him a little cloak and took it to him when she went up with her husband to offer the annual 20 sacrifice. Eli would give his blessing to Elkanah and his wife and say, 'The LORD grant you children by this woman in place of the one for which you asked him.'^b Then they went home again.

21 The LORD showed his care for Hannah, and she conceived and gave birth to three sons and two daughters; meanwhile the boy Samuel grew up in the presence of the LORD.

22 Eli, now a very old man, had heard how his sons were treating all the Israelites, and how they lay with the women who were serving at the 23 entrance to the Tent of the Presence. So he said to them, 'Why do you do such things? I hear from all the people how wickedly you behave. Have 24 done with it, my sons; for it is no good report that I hear spreading among the LORD's people. If a man sins against another man, God will intervene; 25 but if a man sins against the LORD, who can intercede for him?' For all this, they did not listen to their father's rebuke, for the LORD meant that they 26 should die. But the young Samuel, as he grew up, commended himself to the LORD and to men.

27 Now a man of God came to Eli and said, 'This is the word of the LORD:
28 You know that I revealed myself to your forefather when he and his family were in Egypt in slavery in the house of Pharaoh. You know that I chose lent him.

^a the High God: prob. rdg.; Heb. upon him.

him from all the tribes of Israel to be my priest, to mount the steps of my altar, to burn sacrifices and to carry^a the ephod before me; and that I assigned all the food-offerings of the Israelites to your family. Why then do you show disrespect for my sacrifices and the offerings which I have ordained? What makes you resent them? Why do you honour your sons more than me by letting them batten on the choicest offerings of my people Israel? The LORD's word was, "I promise that your house and your father's house shall serve before me for all time"; but now his word is, "I will have no such thing: I will honour those who honour me, and those who despise me shall meet with contempt. The time is coming when I will lop off every limb of your own and of your father's family, so that no man in your house shall come to old age. You will even resent^b the prosperity I give to Israel; never again shall there be an old man in your house. If I allow any to survive to serve my altar, his eyes will grow dim and his appetite fail, his issue will be weaklings and die off. The fate of your two sons shall be a sign to you: Hophni and Phinehas shall both die on the same day. I will appoint for myself a priest who will be faithful, who will do what I have in my mind and in my heart. I will establish his family to serve in perpetual succession before my anointed king. Any of your family that still live will come and bow humbly before him to beg a fee, a piece of silver and a loaf, and will ask for a turn of priestly duty to earn a crust of bread."

So the child Samuel was in the LORD's service under his master Eli. Now in those days the word of the LORD was seldom heard, and no vision was granted. But one night Eli, whose eyes were dim and his sight failing, was lying down in his usual place, while Samuel slept in the temple of the LORD where the Ark of God was. Before the lamp of God had gone out, the LORD called him, and Samuel answered, 'Here I am', and ran to Eli saying, 'You called me: here I am.' 'No, I did not call you,' said Eli; 'lie down again.' So he went and lay down. The LORD called Samuel again, and he got up and went to Eli. 'Here I am,' he said; 'surely you called me.' 'I did not call, my son,' he answered; 'lie down again.' Now Samuel had not yet come to know the LORD, and the word of the LORD had not been disclosed to him. When the LORD called him for the third time, he again went to Eli and said, 'Here I am; you did call me.' Then Eli understood that it was the LORD calling the child; he told Samuel to go and lie down and said, 'If he calls again, say, "Speak, LORD; thy servant hears thee."' So Samuel went and lay down in his place.

The LORD came and stood there, and called, 'Samuel, Samuel', as before. Samuel answered, 'Speak; thy servant hears thee.' The LORD said, 'Soon I shall do something in Israel which will ring in the ears of all who hear it. When that day comes I will make good every word I have spoken against Eli and his family from beginning to end. You are to^c tell him that my judgment on his house shall stand for ever because^d he knew of his sons' blasphemies against God^e and did not rebuke them. Therefore I have sworn to the family of Eli that their abuse of sacrifices and offerings shall never be expiated.'

- 15 Samuel lay down till morning and then opened the doors of the house 16 of the LORD, but he was afraid to tell Eli about the vision. Eli called 17 Samuel: 'Samuel, my son', he said; and he answered, 'Here I am.' Eli 18 asked, 'What did the LORD say to you? Do not hide it from me. God forgive 19 you if you hide one word of all that he said to you.' Then Samuel told him everything and hid nothing. Eli said, 'The LORD must do what is good in his eyes.'
- 19 As Samuel grew up, the LORD was with him, and none of his words 20 went unfulfilled. From Dan to Beersheba, all Israel recognized that 21 Samuel was confirmed as a prophet of the LORD. So the LORD continued to appear in Shiloh, because he had revealed himself there to Samuel.^a

The struggle with the Philistines

- 4 SO SAMUEL'S WORD HAD AUTHORITY throughout Israel. And the time came when the Philistines mustered for battle against Israel, and the Israelites went out to meet them. The Israelites encamped at Eben-2 ezer and the Philistines at Aphek. The Philistines drew up their lines facing the Israelites, and when they joined battle the Israelites were routed 3 by the Philistines, who killed about four thousand men on the field. When the army got back to the camp, the elders of Israel asked, 'Why did the LORD let us be routed today by the Philistines? Let us fetch the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD from Shiloh to go with us and deliver us from the 4 power of our enemies.' So the people sent to Shiloh and fetched the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD of Hosts, who is enthroned upon the cherubim; 5 Eli's two sons, Hophni and Phinehas, were there with the Ark. When the Ark came into the camp all the Israelites greeted it with a great shout, and 6 the earth rang with the shouting. The Philistines heard the noise and asked, 'What is this great shouting in the camp of the Hebrews?' When 7 they knew that the Ark of the LORD had come into the camp, they were afraid and cried, 'A god has come into the camp. We are lost! No such 8 thing has ever happened before. We are utterly lost! Who can deliver us from the power of these mighty gods? These are the very gods who broke 9 the Egyptians and crushed them in the wilderness. Courage, Philistines, and act like men, or you will become slaves to the Hebrews as they were 10 yours. Be men, and fight!' The Philistines then gave battle, and the Israelites were defeated and fled to their homes. It was a great defeat, and thirty 11 thousand Israelite foot-soldiers perished. The Ark of God was taken, and Eli's two sons, Hophni and Phinehas, were killed.
- 12 A Benjamite ran from the battlefield and reached Shiloh on the same 13 day, his clothes rent and dust on his head. When he arrived Eli was sitting on a seat by the road to Mizpah, for he was deeply troubled about the Ark of God. The man entered the city with his news, and all the people cried 14 out in horror. When Eli heard it, he asked, 'What does this uproar mean?'

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds according to the word of the LORD.

The man hurried to Eli and told him. Eli was ninety-eight years old and sat staring with sightless eyes; so the man said to him, 'I am the man who has just arrived from the battle; this very day I have escaped from the field.' Eli asked, 'What is the news, my son?' The runner answered, 'The Israelites have fled from the Philistines; utter panic has struck the army; your two sons, Hophni and Phinehas, are killed, and the Ark of God is taken.' At the mention of the Ark of God, Eli fell backwards from his seat by the gate and broke his neck, for he was old and heavy. So he died; he had been judge over Israel for forty years. His daughter-in-law, the wife of Phinehas, was with child and near her time, and when she heard of the capture of the Ark and the deaths of her father-in-law and her husband, her labour suddenly began and she crouched down and was delivered. As she lay dying, the women who attended her said, 'Do not be afraid; you have a son.' But she did not answer or heed what they said. Then they named the boy Ichabod,^a saying, 'Glory has departed from Israel' (in allusion to the capture of the Ark of God and the death of her father-in-law and her husband); 'Glory has departed from Israel,' they said, 'because the Ark of God is taken.'

After the Philistines had captured the Ark of God, they brought it from Eben-ezer to Ashdod; and there they carried it into the temple of Dagon and set it beside Dagon himself. When the people of Ashdod rose next morning, there was Dagon fallen face downwards before the Ark of the LORD; so they took him and put him back in his place. Next morning when they rose, Dagon had again fallen face downwards before the Ark of the LORD, with his head and his two hands lying broken off beside his platform; only Dagon's body remained on it. This is why from that day to this the priests of Dagon and all who enter the temple of Dagon at Ashdod do not set foot upon Dagon's platform.

Then the LORD laid a heavy hand upon the people of Ashdod; he threw them into distress and plagued them with tumours, and their territory swarmed with rats.^b There was death and destruction all through the city. When the men of Ashdod saw this, they said, 'The Ark of the God of Israel shall not stay here, for he has laid a heavy hand upon us and upon Dagon our god.' So they sent and called all the Philistine princes together to ask what should be done with the Ark. They said, 'Let the Ark of the God of Israel be taken across to Gath.' They took it there, and after its arrival the hand of the LORD caused great havoc in the city; he plagued everybody, high and low alike, with the tumours which broke out. Then they sent the Ark of God on to Ekron. When the Ark reached Ekron, the people cried, 'They have brought the Ark of the God of Israel over to us, to kill us and our families.' So they summoned all the Philistine princes and said, 'Send the Ark of the God of Israel away; let it go back to its own place, or it will be the death of us all.' There was death and destruction all through the city; for the hand of God lay heavy upon it. Even those who did not die were plagued with tumours; the cry of the city went up to heaven.

When the Ark of the LORD had been in their territory for seven months, the Philistines summoned the priests and soothsayers and asked, 'What shall we do with the Ark of the LORD? Tell us how we ought to send it back to its own place.' They answered, 'If you send the Ark of the God of Israel back, do not let it go without a gift, but send it back with a gift for him by way of indemnity; then you will be healed and restored to favour; there is no reason why his hand should not be lifted from you.' When they were asked, 'What gift shall we send back to him?', they answered, 'Send five tumours modelled in gold and five gold rats, one for each of the Philistine princes, for the same plague afflicted all of you and your princes. Make models of your tumours and of the rats which are ravaging the land, and give honour to the God of Israel; perhaps he will relax the pressure of his hand on you, on your god, and on your land. Why should you be stubborn like Pharaoh and the Egyptians? Remember how this god made sport of them until they let Israel go. Now make a new wagon ready with two milch-cows which have never been yoked; harness the cows to the wagon, and take their calves from them and drive them back to their stalls. Then take the Ark of the LORD and put it on the wagon, place in a casket, beside it, the gold offerings that you are sending to him as an indemnity, and let it go where it will. Watch it: if it goes up towards its own territory to Beth-shemesh, then it is the LORD who has done us this great injury; but if not, then we shall know that his hand has not touched us, but we have been the victims of chance.'

^a That is No-glory.

^b Or mice.

The men did this. They took two milch-cows and harnessed them to a wagon, shutting up their calves in the stall, and they placed the Ark of the LORD on the wagon together with the casket, the gold rats, and the models of their haemorrhoids. Then the cows went straight in the direction of Beth-shemesh; they kept to the same road, lowing as they went and turning neither right nor left, while the Philistine princes followed them as far as the territory of Beth-shemesh. Now the people of Beth-shemesh were harvesting their wheat in the Vale, and when they looked up and saw the Ark they rejoiced at the sight of it. The wagon came to the farm of Joshua of Beth-shemesh and halted there. Close by stood a great stone; so they chopped up the wood of the wagon and offered the cows as a whole-offering to the LORD. Then the Levites lifted down the Ark of the LORD and the casket containing the gold offerings, and laid them on the great stone; and the men of Beth-shemesh offered whole-offerings and shared-offerings that day to the LORD. The five princes of the Philistines watched all this, and returned to Ekron the same day.

These golden haemorrhoids which the Philistines sent back as a gift of indemnity to the LORD were for Ashdod, Gaza, Ashkelon, Gath, and Ekron, one for each city. The gold rats were for all the towns of the Philistines governed by the five princes, both fortified towns and open settlements. The great stone where they deposited the Ark of the LORD stands witness on the farm of Joshua of Beth-shemesh to this very day.

But the sons of Jeconiah did not rejoice with the rest of the men of Beth-shemesh when they welcomed the Ark of the LORD, and he struck down seventy of them. The people mourned because the LORD had struck them so heavy a blow, and the men of Beth-shemesh said, 'No one is safe in the presence of the LORD, this holy God. To whom can we send it, to be rid of him?' So they sent this message to the inhabitants of Kiriath-jearim: 'The Philistines have returned the Ark of the LORD; come down and take charge of it.' Then the men of Kiriath-jearim came and took the Ark of the LORD away; they brought it into the house of Abinadab on the hill and consecrated his son Eleazar as its custodian.

Samuel judge over Israel

SO FOR A LONG WHILE the Ark was housed in Kiriath-jearim; and after some time, twenty years later, there was a movement throughout Israel to follow the LORD. So Samuel addressed these words to the whole nation: 'If your return to the LORD is whole-hearted, banish the foreign gods and the Ashtaroth from your shrines; turn to the LORD with heart and mind, and worship him alone, and he will deliver you from the Philistines.' The Israelites then banished the Baalim and the Ashtaroth, and worshipped the LORD alone.

Samuel summoned all Israel to an assembly at Mizpah, so that he might intercede with the LORD for them. When they had assembled there, they drew water and poured it out before the LORD and fasted all day, confessing that they had sinned against the LORD. It was at Mizpah that Samuel acted as judge over Israel.

When the Philistines heard that the Israelites had assembled at Mizpah, their princes marched against them. The Israelites heard that the Philistines were advancing, and they were afraid. They said to Samuel, 'Do not cease to pray for us to the LORD our God to save us from the power of the Philistines.' Thereupon Samuel took a sucking lamb, offered it up complete as a whole-offering and prayed aloud to the LORD on behalf of Israel; and the LORD answered his prayer. As Samuel was offering the sacrifice and the Philistines were advancing to battle with the Israelites, the LORD thundered loud and long over the Philistines and threw them into confusion. They fled in panic before the Israelites, who set out from Mizpah in pursuit and kept up the slaughter of the Philistines till they reached a point below Beth-car. There Samuel took a stone and set it up as a monument between Mizpah and Jeshanah,^a naming it Eben-ezer,^b 'for to this point', he said, 'the LORD has helped us.' Thus the Philistines were subdued and no longer encroached on the territory of Israel; and the hand of the LORD was against them as long as Samuel lived. The cities they had captured were restored to Israel, and from Ekron to Gath the borderland was freed from their control. Between Israel and the Amorites peace was maintained. Samuel acted as judge in Israel as long as he lived, and every year went on circuit to Bethel and Gilgal and Mizpah; he dispensed justice at all these places, returning always to Ramah. That was his home and the place from which he governed Israel, and there he built an altar to the LORD.

Saul anointed king

8 WHEN SAMUEL GREW OLD, he appointed his sons to be judges in 2 Israel. The eldest son was named Joel and the second Abiah; they 3 acted as judges in Beersheba. His sons did not follow in their father's 4 footsteps but were intent on their own profit, taking bribes and perverting
 5 the course of justice. So all the elders of Israel met, and came to Samuel
 6 at Ramah and said to him, 'You are now old and your sons do not follow 7 in your footsteps; appoint us a king to govern us, like other nations.' But 8 their request for a king to govern them displeased Samuel, and he prayed 9 to the LORD. The LORD answered Samuel, 'Listen to the people and all 10 that they are saying; they have not rejected you, it is I whom they have 11 rejected, I whom they will not have to be their king. They are now doing 12 to you just what they have done to me since I brought them up from Egypt:
 13 they have forsaken me and worshipped other gods. Hear what they have 14 to say now, but give them a solemn warning and tell them what sort of king 15 will govern them.' Samuel told the people who were asking him for a king 16 all that the LORD had said to him. 'This will be the sort of king who will 17 govern you', he said. 'He will take your sons and make them serve in his 18 chariots and with his cavalry, and will make them run before his chariot.
 19 Some he will appoint officers over units of a thousand and units of fifty.
 20 Others will plough his fields and reap his harvest; others again will make 21 weapons of war and equipment for mounted troops. He will take your 22 daughters for perfumers, cooks, and confectioners, and will seize the best of your cornfields, vineyards, and olive-yards, and give them to his lackeys.
 He will take a tenth of your grain and your vintage to give to his eunuchs and lackeys. Your slaves, both men and women, and the best of your cattle and your asses he will seize and put to his own use. He will take a tenth of your flocks, and you yourselves will become his slaves. When that day comes, you will cry out against the king whom you have chosen; but it will be too late, the LORD will not answer you.' The people refused to listen to Samuel; 'No,' they said, 'we will have a king over us; then we shall be like other nations, with a king to govern us, to lead us out to war and fight our battles.' So Samuel, when he had heard what the people said, told the LORD; and he answered, 'Take them at their word and appoint them a king.' Samuel then dismissed all the men of Israel to their homes.

9 There was a man from the district of Benjamin, whose name was Kish son of Abiel, son of Zeror, son of Bechorath, son of Aphiah a Benjamite.
 2 He was a man of substance, and had a son named Saul, a young man in his prime; there was no better man among the Israelites than he. He was a head taller than any of his fellows.

3 One day some asses belonging to Saul's father Kish had strayed, so he said to his son Saul, 'Take one of the servants with you, and go and look 4 for the asses.' They crossed the hill-country of Ephraim and went through the district of Shalisha but did not find them; they passed through the district of Shaalim but they were not there; they passed through the 5 district of Benjamin but again did not find them. When they had entered the district of Zuph, Saul said to the servant with him, 'Come, we ought to turn back, or my father will stop thinking about the asses and begin to worry about us.' The servant answered, 'There is a man of God in the city here, who has a great reputation, because everything he says comes true. Suppose we go there; he may tell us something about this errand of ours.' Saul said, 'If we do go, what shall we offer him? There is no food left in our packs and we have no present for the man of God, nothing at all.' The servant answered him again, 'Wait! I have here a quarter-shekel of silver. I can give that to the man, to tell us what we should do.' Saul said, 'Good! let us go to him.' So they went to the city where the man of God was. (In days gone by in Israel, when a man wished to consult God, he would say, 'Let us go to the seer.' For what is nowadays called a prophet used to be called a seer.) As they were going up the hill to the city they met some girls coming out to draw water and asked, 'Shall we find the seer there?' 'Yes,' they said, 'the seer is ahead of you now; he has just ^b arrived in the city because there is a feast at the hill-shrine today. As you enter the city you will meet him before he goes up to the shrine to eat; the people will not start until he comes, for he has to bless the sacrifice before the company can eat. Go up now, and you will find him at once.' So they went up to the city, and just as they were going in, there was Samuel coming towards them on his way up to the shrine.

Now the day before Saul came, the LORD had disclosed his intention to Samuel in these words: 'At this same time tomorrow I will send you a man from the land of Benjamin. Anoint him prince over my people Israel, and then he shall deliver my people from the Philistines. I have seen the sufferings of my people and their cry has reached my ears.' The moment Saul appeared the LORD said to Samuel, 'Here is the man of whom I spoke to you. This man shall rule my people.' Saul came up to Samuel in the gateway and said, 'Would you tell me where the seer lives?' Samuel replied, 'I am the seer. Go on ahead of me to the hill-shrine and you shall eat with me today; in the morning I will set you on your way, after telling you what you have on your mind. Trouble yourself no more about the asses lost three days ago, for they have been found. But what is it that all Israel is wanting? It is you and your ancestral house.' 'But I am a Benjamite,' said Saul, 'from the smallest of the tribes of Israel, and my family is the least important of all the families of the tribe of Benjamin. Why do you say this to me?' Samuel then brought Saul and his servant into the dining-hall and gave them a place at the head of the company, which numbered about thirty. Then he said to the cook, 'Bring the portion that I gave you and told you to put on one side.' So the cook took up the whole haunch and leg and put it before Saul; and Samuel said, 'Here is the portion of meat ^c kept for you. Eat it: it has been reserved for you at this feast to which I have invited the people.' So Saul dined with Samuel that day, and when they came down from the hill-shrine to the city a bed was spread on the roof for Saul, and he stayed there that night. At dawn Samuel called to Saul on the roof, 'Get up, and I will set you on your way.' When Saul rose, he and Samuel went out together into the street. As they came to the end of the town, Samuel said to Saul, 'Tell the boy to go on.' He did so, and then Samuel said, 'Stay here a moment, and I will tell you the word of God.'

Samuel took a flask of oil and poured it over Saul's head, and he kissed him and said, 'The LORD anoints you prince over his people Israel; you shall rule the people of the LORD and deliver them from the enemies round about them. You shall have a sign that the LORD has anointed you prince to govern his inheritance: when you leave me today, you will meet two men by the tomb of Rachel at Zelzah in the territory of Benjamin. They will tell you that the asses you are looking for have been found and that your father is concerned for them no longer; he is anxious about you and says again and again, "What shall I do about my son?" From there go across country as far as the terebinth of Tabor, where three men going up to Bethel to worship God will meet you. One of them will be carrying three kids, the second three loaves, and the third a flagon of wine. They will greet you and will offer you two loaves, which you will accept from them. Then when you reach the Hill of God, where the Philistine governor^a resides, you will meet a company of prophets coming down from the hill-shrine, led by lute, harp, fife, and drum, and filled with prophetic rapture. Then the spirit of the LORD will suddenly take possession of you, and you too will be rapt like a prophet and become another man. When these signs happen, do whatever the occasion demands; God will be with you. You shall go down to Gilgal ahead of me, and I will come to you to sacrifice whole-offerings and shared-offerings. Wait seven days until I join you; then I will tell you what to do.' As Saul turned to leave Samuel, God gave him a new heart. On that same day all these signs happened. When they reached the Hill there was a company of prophets coming to meet him, and the spirit of God suddenly took possession of him, so that he too was filled with prophetic rapture. When people who had known him previously saw that he was rapt like the prophets, they said to one another, 'What can have happened to the son of Kish? Is Saul also among the prophets?' One of the men of that place said, 'And whose sons are they?' Hence the proverb, 'Is Saul also among the prophets?' When the prophetic rapture had passed, he went home.^b Saul's uncle said to him and the boy, 'Where have you been?' Saul answered, 'To look for the asses, and when we could not find them, we went to Samuel.' His uncle said, 'Tell me what Samuel said.' 'He told us that the asses had been found', said Saul; but he did not repeat what Samuel had said about his being king.

Meanwhile Samuel summoned the Israelites to the LORD at Mizpah and said to the people, 'This is the word of the LORD the God of Israel: I brought Israel up from Egypt; I delivered you from the Egyptians and from all the kingdoms that oppressed you; but today you have rejected your God who saved you from all your misery and distress; you have said, "No, set up a king over us." Now therefore take up your positions before the LORD tribe by tribe and clan by clan.' Samuel then presented all the tribes of Israel, and Benjamin was picked by lot. Then he presented the tribe of Benjamin, family by family, and the family of Matri was picked. Then he presented the family of Matri, man by man, and Saul son of Kish was picked; but when they looked for him he could not be found. They went on to ask the LORD, 'Will the man be coming back?' The LORD answered, 'There he is, hiding among the baggage.' So someone ran and fetched him out, and as he took his stand among the people, he was a head taller than anyone else. Samuel said to the people, 'Look at the man whom the LORD has chosen; there is no one like him in this whole nation.' They all acclaimed him, shouting, 'Long live the king!' Samuel then explained to the people the nature of a king, and made a written record of it on a scroll which he deposited before the LORD; he then dismissed them to their homes. Saul too went home to Gibeah, and with him went some fighting men whose hearts God had moved. But there were scoundrels who said, 'How can this fellow deliver us?' They thought nothing of him and brought him no gifts.

About a month later Nahash the Ammonite attacked and besieged Jabesh-gilead. The men of Jabesh said to Nahash, 'Come to terms with us and we will be your subjects.' Nahash answered them, 'On one condition only will I come to terms with you: that I gouge out your right eyes and bring disgrace on Israel.' The elders of Jabesh-gilead then said, 'Give us seven days' respite to send messengers throughout Israel and then, if no one relieves us, we will surrender to you.' When the messengers came to Gibeah, where Saul lived, and delivered their message, all the people broke into lamentation. Saul was just coming from the field driving in the oxen, and asked why the people were lamenting; and they repeated what the men of Jabesh had said. When Saul heard this, the spirit of God suddenly seized him. In his anger he took a pair of oxen and cut them in pieces, and sent messengers with the pieces all through Israel to proclaim that the same would be done to the oxen of any man who did not follow Saul and Samuel into battle. The fear of the LORD fell upon the people and they came out, to a man. Saul mustered them in Bezek; there were three hundred thousand men from Israel and thirty thousand from Judah. He said to the men who brought the message, 'Tell the men of Jabesh-gilead, "Victory will be yours tomorrow by the time the sun is hot."' The men of Jabesh heard what the messengers reported and took heart; and they said to Nahash, 'Tomorrow we will surrender to you, and then you may deal with us as you think fit.' Next day Saul drew up his men in three columns; they forced their way right into the enemy camp during the morning watch and massacred the Ammonites while the day grew hot, after which the survivors scattered until no two men were left together.

Then the people said to Samuel, 'Who said that Saul should not reign over us? Hand the men over to us to be put to death.' But Saul said, 'No man shall be put to death on a day when the LORD has won such a victory in Israel.' Samuel said to the people, 'Let us now go to Gilgal and there renew our allegiance to the kingdom.' So they all went to Gilgal and invested Saul there as king in the presence of the LORD, sacrificing shared-offerings before the LORD; and Saul and all the Israelites celebrated the occasion with great joy.

2 THEN SAMUEL THUS ADDRESSED the assembled Israelites: 'I have
2 listened to your request and installed a king to rule over you. And the king is now your leader, while I am old and white-haired and my sons are with 3 you; but I have been your leader ever since I was a child. Here I am. Lay your complaints against me in the presence of the LORD and of his anointed king. Whose ox have I taken, whose ass have I taken? Whom have I wronged, whom have I oppressed? From whom have I taken a bribe, to 4 turn a blind eye? Tell me, and I will make restitution.' They answered,
'You have not wronged us, you have not oppressed us; you have not taken 5 anything from any man.' Samuel then said to them, 'This day the LORD is witness among you, his anointed king is witness, that you have found 6 my hands empty.' They said, 'He is witness.' Samuel said to the people,
'Yes, the LORD is witness, the LORD who gave you Moses and Aaron and 7 brought your fathers out of Egypt. Now stand up, and here in the presence of the LORD I will put the case against you and recite all the victories which 8 he has won for you and for your fathers. After Jacob and his sons had come down to Egypt and the Egyptians had made them suffer, your fathers cried to the LORD for help, and he sent Moses and Aaron, who brought them out 9 of Egypt and settled them in this place. But they forgot the LORD their God, and he abandoned them to Sisera, commander-in-chief of Jabin king of Hazor, to the Philistines, and to the king of Moab, and they had to 10 fight against them. Then your fathers cried to the LORD for help: "We have sinned, we have forsaken the LORD and we have worshipped the Baalim and the Ashtaroth. But now, if thou wilt deliver us from our 11 enemies, we will worship thee." So the LORD sent Jerubbaal and Barak, Jephthah and Samson, and delivered you from your enemies on every side; and you lived in peace and quiet.

12 'Then, when you saw Nahash king of the Ammonites coming against you, although the LORD your God was your king, you said to me, "No, let 13 us have a king to rule over us." Now, here is the king you asked for; you chose him, and the LORD has set a king over you. If you will revere the LORD and give true and loyal service, if you do not rebel against his commands, and if you and the king who reigns over you are faithful to the LORD your 15 God, well and good; but if you do not obey the LORD, and if you rebel against his commands, then he will set his face against you and against your king.

16 'Stand still, and see the great wonder which the LORD will do before your 17 eyes. It is now wheat harvest; when I call upon the LORD and he sends thunder and rain, you will see and know how wicked it was in the LORD's 18 eyes for you to ask for a king.' So Samuel called upon the LORD and he sent thunder and rain that day; and all the people were in great fear of the 19 LORD and of Samuel. They said to Samuel, 'Pray for us your servants to the LORD your God, to save us from death; for we have added to all our 20 other sins the great wickedness of asking for a king.' Samuel said to the people, 'Do not be afraid; although you have been so wicked, do not give 21 up the worship of the LORD, but serve him with all your heart. Give up the worship of false gods which can neither help nor save, because they 22 are false. For his name's sake the LORD will not cast you off, because he has resolved to make you his own people. As for me, God forbid that I should sin against the LORD and cease to pray for you. I will show you what is right and good: to revere the LORD and worship him faithfully with all your heart. Consider what great things he has done for you; but if you persist in wickedness, you shall be swept away, you and your king.⁷

Saul was fifty years^a old when he became king, and he reigned over Israel for twenty-two^b years. He picked three thousand men from Israel, two thousand to be with him in Michmash and the hill-country of Bethel and a thousand to be with Jonathan in Gibeah of Benjamin; and he sent the rest of the people home.

Jonathan killed the Philistine governor^c in Geba, and the news spread among the Philistines that the Hebrews were in revolt.^d Saul sounded the trumpet all through the land; and when the Israelites all heard that Saul had killed a Philistine governor and that the name of Israel stank among the Philistines, they answered the call to arms and came to join Saul at Gilgal.^e The Philistines mustered to attack Israel; they had thirty thousand chariots and six thousand horse, with infantry as countless as sand on the sea-shore. They went up and camped at Michmash, to the east of Beth-aven. The Israelites found themselves in sore straits, for the army was hard pressed, so they hid themselves in caves and holes and among the rocks, in pits and cisterns. Some of them crossed the Jordan into the district of Gad and Gilead, but Saul remained at Gilgal, and all the people at his back were in alarm.^f He waited seven days for his meeting with Samuel, but Samuel did not come to Gilgal; so the people began to drift away from Saul. He said therefore, 'Bring me the whole-offering and the shared-offerings', and he offered up the whole-offering. Saul had just finished the sacrifice, when Samuel arrived, and he went out to greet him. Samuel said, 'What have you done?', and Saul answered, 'I saw that the people were drifting away from me, and you yourself had not come as you had promised, and the Philistines were assembling at Michmash; and I thought, "The Philistines will now move against me at Gilgal, and I have not placated the LORD"; so I felt compelled to make the whole-offering myself.' Samuel said to Saul, 'You have behaved foolishly. You have not kept the command laid on you by the LORD your God; if you had, he would have established your dynasty over Israel for all time. But now your line will not endure; the LORD will seek a man after his own heart, and will appoint him prince over his people, because you have not kept the LORD's command.'

Samuel left Gilgal without more ado and went on his way. The rest of the people followed Saul, as he moved from Gilgal towards the enemy. At Gibeah of Benjamin he mustered the people who were with him; they were about six hundred men. Saul and his son Jonathan and the men they had with them took up their quarters in Gibeah of Benjamin, while the Philistines were encamped in Michmash. Raiding parties went out from 19 No blacksmith was to be found in the whole of Israel, for the Philistines were determined to prevent the Hebrews from making swords and spears.

20 The Israelites had to go down to the Philistines for their ploughshares, 21 mattocks, axes, and sickles to be sharpened. The charge was two-thirds of a shekel for ploughshares and mattocks, and one-third of a shekel for sharpening the axes and setting the goads.^a So when war broke out none
22 of the followers of Saul and Jonathan had either sword or spear; only Saul and Jonathan carried arms.

23 Now the Philistines had posted a force to hold the pass of Michmash;
4 and one day Saul's son Jonathan said to his armour-bearer, 'Come, let us go over to the Philistine post beyond that ridge'; but he did not tell his
2 father. Saul, at the time, had his tent under the pomegranate-tree at Migron on the outskirts of Gibeah; and he had about six hundred men
3 with him. The ephod was carried by Ahijah son of Ahitub, Ichabod's brother, son of Phinehas son of Eli, the priest of the LORD at Shiloh.
4 Nobody knew that Jonathan had gone. On either side of the pass through which Jonathan tried to make his way over to the Philistine post stood two
5 sharp columns of rock, called Bozez^b and Seneh;^c one of them was on the north towards Michmash, and the other on the south towards Geba.
6 Jonathan said to his armour-bearer, 'Now we will visit the post of those uncircumcised rascals. Perhaps the LORD will take a hand in it, and if he will, nothing can stop him. He can bring us safe through, whether we are 7 few or many.' The young man answered, 'Do what you will, go forward;
8 I am with you whatever you do.' 'Good!' said Jonathan, 'we will cross over and let them see us. If they say, "Stay where you are till we come to you",
10 then we will stay where we are and not go up to them. But if they say, "Come up to us", we will go up; this will be the sign that the LORD has put them into our power.' So they showed themselves to the Philistines, and 11 the Philistines said, 'Look! Hebrews coming out of the holes where they have been hiding!' And they called across to Jonathan and the young man, 12 'Come up to us; we have something to show you.' Jonathan said to the young man, 'Come on, the LORD has put them into the power of Israel.'
13 Jonathan climbed up on hands and feet, and the young man followed him. The Philistines fell in front of Jonathan, and the young man, coming 14 behind him, dispatched them. In that first attack Jonathan and his armour-bearer killed about twenty of them, like men cutting a furrow across a 15 half-acre field. Terror spread through the army in the field and through the whole people; the men at the post and the raiding parties were terrified; the very earth quaked, and there was panic.

16 Saul's men on the watch in Gibeah of Benjamin saw the mob of Philistines surging to and fro in confusion; so he ordered the people to call the roll and find out who was missing; and they called the roll and found that

^a one-third . . . the goads: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure. ^b That is Shining. ^c That is Bramble-bush.

Jonathan and his armour-bearer were absent. Saul said to Ahijah, 'Bring forward the ephod', for it was he who carried the ephod at that time before Israel. But while Saul was still speaking, the confusion in the Philistine camp was increasing more and more, and he said to the priest, 'Hold your hand.' Then Saul and all his men with shouting made for the battlefield, where they found the enemy fighting one another in complete disorder. The Hebrews who up to now had been under the Philistines, and had been with them in camp, changed sides and joined the Israelites under Saul and Jonathan. All the Israelites in hiding in the hill-country of Ephraim heard that the Philistines were in flight, and they also joined in and set off in hot pursuit. The LORD delivered Israel that day, and the fighting passed on beyond Beth-aven.

Now the Israelites on that day had been driven to exhaustion. Saul had adjured the people in these words: 'A curse be on the man who eats any food before nightfall until I have taken vengeance on my enemies.' So no one ate any food. Now there was honeycomb^a in the country-side; but when his men came upon it, dripping with honey though it was, not one of them put his hand to his mouth for fear of the oath. But Jonathan had not heard his father lay this solemn prohibition on the people, and he stretched out the stick that was in his hand, dipped the end of it in the honeycomb, put it to his mouth and was refreshed. One of the people said to him, 'Your father solemnly forbade this; he said, "A curse on the man who eats food today!"' Now the men were faint with hunger. Jonathan said, 'My father has done the people nothing but harm; see how I am refreshed by this mere taste of honey. How much better if the people had eaten today whatever they took from their enemies by way of spoil! Then there would indeed have been a great slaughter of Philistines.'

They defeated the Philistines that day, and pursued them from Michmash to Ajalon. But the people were so faint with hunger that they turned to plunder and seized sheep, cattle, and bullocks; they slaughtered them on the bare ground, and ate the meat with the blood in it. Someone told Saul that the people were sinning against the LORD by eating their meat with the blood in it. 'This is treason!' cried Saul. 'Roll a great stone here at once.' He then said, 'Go about among the people and tell them to bring their oxen and sheep, and let each man slaughter his here and eat it; and so they will not sin against the LORD by eating meat with the blood in it.' So as night fell each man came, driving his own ox, and slaughtered it there. Thus Saul came to build an altar to the LORD, and this was the first altar to the LORD that Saul built.

Saul said, 'Let us go down and make a night attack on the Philistines and harry them till daylight; we will not spare a man of them.' The people answered, 'Do what you think best', but the priest said, 'Let us first consult God.' So Saul inquired of God, 'Shall I pursue the Philistines? Wilt thou put them into Israel's power?'; but this time he received no answer. So he said, 'Let all the leaders of the people come forward and let us find out where the sin lies this day. As the LORD lives, the deliverer of Israel,

^a Now . . . honeycomb: prob. rdg.; Heb. All the land went into the forest, and there was honey.

even if it lies in my son Jonathan, he shall die.' Not a soul answered him. Then he said to the Israelites, 'All of you stand on one side, and I and my son Jonathan will stand on the other.' The people answered, 'Do what you think best.' Saul said to the LORD the God of Israel, 'Why hast thou not answered thy servant today? If this guilt lie in me or in my son Jonathan, O LORD God of Israel, let the lot be Urim; if it lie in thy people Israel, let it be Thummim.' Jonathan and Saul were taken, and the people were cleared. Then Saul said, 'Cast lots between me and my son Jonathan'; and Jonathan was taken. Saul said to Jonathan, 'Tell me what you have done.' Jonathan told him, 'True, I did taste a little honey on the tip of my stick. Here I am; I am ready to die.' Then Saul swore a great oath that Jonathan should die. But the people said to Saul, 'Shall Jonathan die, Jonathan who has won this great victory in Israel? God forbid! As the LORD lives, not a hair of his head shall fall to the ground, for he has been at work with God today.' So the people ransomed Jonathan and he did not die. Saul broke off the pursuit of the Philistines because they had made their way home.

When Saul had made his throne secure in Israel, he fought against his enemies on every side, the Moabites, the Ammonites, the Edomites, the king of Zobah, and the Philistines; and wherever he turned he was successful.^a He displayed his strength by defeating the Amalekites and freeing Israel from hostile raids.

Saul's sons were: Jonathan, Ishyo and Malchishua. These were the names of his two daughters: Merab the elder and Michal the younger. His wife was Ahinoam daughter of Ahimaaz, and his commander-in-chief was Abner son of his uncle Ner; Kish, Saul's father, and Ner, Abner's father, were sons^b of Abiel.

There was bitter warfare with the Philistines throughout Saul's lifetime; any strong man and any brave man that he found he took into his own service.

Samuel said to Saul, 'The LORD sent me to anoint you king over his people Israel. Now listen to the voice of the LORD. This is the very word of the LORD of Hosts: "I am resolved to punish the Amalekites for what they did to Israel, how they attacked them on their way up from Egypt." Go now and fall upon the Amalekites and destroy them, and put their property under ban. Spare no one; put them all to death, men and women, children and babes in arms, herds and flocks, camels and asses.' Thereupon Saul called out the levy and mustered them in Telaim. There were two hundred thousand foot-soldiers and another ten thousand from Judah.^c He came to the Amalekite city and halted for a time in the gorge. Meanwhile he sent word to the Kenites to leave the Amalekites and come down, 'or', he said, 'I shall destroy you as well as them; but you were friendly to Israel when they came up from Egypt.' So the Kenites left the Amalekites. Then Saul cut the Amalekites to pieces, all the way from Havilah to Shur on the borders of Egypt. Agag the king of the Amalekites he took alive, but he destroyed all the people, putting them to the sword. Saul and his army spared Agag and the best of the sheep and cattle, the fat beasts and the lambs and everything worth keeping; they were unwilling to destroy them, but anything that was useless and of no value they destroyed.

Then the word of the LORD came to Samuel: 'I repent of having made Saul king, for he has turned his back on me and has not obeyed my commands.' Samuel was angry; all night he cried aloud to the LORD. Early next morning he went to meet Saul, but was told that he had gone to Carmel; Saul had set up a monument for himself there, and had then turned and gone down to Gilgal. There Samuel found him, and Saul greeted him with the words, 'The LORD's blessing upon you! I have obeyed the LORD's commands.' But Samuel said, 'What then is this bleating of sheep in my ears? Why do I hear the lowing of cattle?' Saul answered, 'The people have taken them from the Amalekites. These are what they spared, the best of the sheep and cattle, to sacrifice to the LORD your God. The rest we completely destroyed.' Samuel said to Saul, 'Let be, and I will tell you what the LORD said to me last night.' 'Tell me', said Saul. So Samuel went on, 'Time was when you thought little of yourself, but now you are head of the tribes of Israel, and the LORD has anointed you king over Israel. The LORD sent you with strict instructions to destroy that wicked nation, the Amalekites; you were to fight against them until you had wiped them out. Why then did you not obey the LORD? Why did you pounce upon the spoil and do what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD?' Saul answered Samuel, 'But I did obey the LORD; I went where the LORD sent me, and I have brought back Agag king of the Amalekites. The rest of them I destroyed. Out of the spoil the people took sheep and oxen, the choicest of the animals laid under ban, to sacrifice to the LORD your God at Gilgal.' Samuel then said:

Does the LORD desire offerings and sacrifices
as he desires obedience?

Obedience is better than sacrifice,
and to listen to him than the fat of rams.

Defiance of him is sinful as witchcraft,
yielding to men^a as evil as^b idolatry.^c

Because you have rejected the word of the LORD,
the LORD has rejected you as king.

Saul said to Samuel, 'I have sinned. I have ignored the LORD's command and your orders: I was afraid of the people and deferred to them. But now forgive my sin, I implore you, and come back with me, and I will make my submission before the LORD.' Samuel answered, 'I will not come back with you; you have rejected the word of the LORD and therefore the LORD has rejected you as king over Israel.' He turned to go, but Saul caught the edge of his cloak and it tore. And Samuel said to him, 'The LORD has torn the kingdom of Israel from your hand today and will give it to another, a better man than you. God who is the Splendour of Israel does not deceive or change his mind; he is not a man that he should change his mind.' Saul said, 'I have sinned; but honour me this once before the elders of my people and before Israel and come back with me, and I will make my submission to the LORD your God.' So Samuel went back with Saul, and Saul made his submission to the LORD. Then Samuel said, 'Bring Agag king of the Amalekites.' So Agag came to him with faltering step and said, 'Surely the bitterness of death has passed.' Samuel said, 'Your sword has made women childless, and your mother of all women shall be childless too.' Then Samuel hewed Agag in pieces before the LORD at Gilgal.

Saul went to his own home at Gibeah, and Samuel went to Ramah; and he never saw Saul again to his dying day, but he mourned for him, because the LORD had repented of having made him king over Israel.

Saul and David

THE LORD SAID TO SAMUEL, 'How long will you mourn for Saul because I have rejected him as king over Israel? Fill your horn with oil and take it with you; I am sending you to Jesse of Bethlehem; for I have chosen myself a king among his sons.' Samuel answered, 'How can I go? Saul will hear of it and kill me.' 'Take a heifer with you,' said the LORD; 'say you have come to offer a sacrifice to the LORD, and invite Jesse to the sacrifice; then I will let you know what you must do. You shall anoint for me the man whom I show you.' Samuel did as the LORD had told him, and went to Bethlehem. The elders of the city came in haste to meet him, saying, 'Why have you come? Is all well?' 'All is well,' said Samuel; 'I have come to sacrifice to the LORD. Hallow yourselves and come with me to the sacrifice.' He himself hallowed Jesse and his sons and invited them to the sacrifice also. They came, and when Samuel saw Eliab he thought, 'Here, before the LORD, is his anointed king.' But the LORD said to him, 'Take no account of it if he is handsome and tall; I reject him. The LORD does not see as man sees; men judge by appearances but the LORD judges by the heart.' Then Jesse called Abinadab and made him pass before Samuel, but he said, 'No, the LORD has not chosen this one.' Then he presented Shammah, and Samuel said, 'Nor has the LORD chosen him.' Seven of his sons Jesse presented to Samuel, but he said, 'The LORD has not chosen any of these.' Then Samuel asked, 'Are these all?' Jesse answered, 'There is still the youngest, but he is looking after the sheep.' Samuel said to Jesse, 'Send and fetch him; we will not sit down until he comes.' So he sent and fetched him. He was handsome, with ruddy cheeks and bright eyes.^a The LORD said, 'Rise and anoint him: this is the man.' Samuel took the horn of oil and anointed him in the presence of his brothers. Then the spirit of the LORD came upon David and was with him from that day onwards. And Samuel set out on his way back to Ramah.

The spirit of the LORD had forsaken Saul, and at times an evil spirit from the LORD would seize him suddenly. His servants said to him, 'You see, sir, how an evil spirit from God seizes you; why do you not command your servants here to go and find some man who can play the harp?—then, when an evil spirit from God comes on you, he can play and you will recover.' Saul said to his servants, 'Find me a man who can play well and bring him to me.' One of his attendants said, 'I have seen a son of Jesse of Bethlehem who can play; he is a brave man and a good fighter, wise in speech and handsome, and the LORD is with him.' Saul therefore sent messengers to Jesse and asked him to send him his son David, who was with the sheep. Jesse took a homer of bread, a skin of wine, and a kid, and sent them to Saul by his son David. David came to Saul and entered his service; and Saul loved him dearly, and he became his armour-bearer. So Saul sent word to Jesse: 'Let David stay in my service, for I am pleased with him.' And whenever a spirit from God came upon Saul, David would take his harp and play on it, so that Saul found relief; he recovered and the evil spirit left him alone.

The Philistines collected their forces for war and massed at Socoh in Judah; they camped between Socoh and Azekah at Ephes-dammim. Saul and the Israelites also massed, and camped in the Vale of Elah. They drew up their lines facing the Philistines, the Philistines occupying a position on one hill and the Israelites on another, with a valley between them. A champion came out from the Philistine camp, a man named Goliath, from Gath; he was over nine feet in height. He had a bronze helmet on his head, and he wore plate-armour of bronze, weighing five thousand shekels. On his legs were bronze greaves, and one of his weapons was a dagger of bronze. The shaft of his spear was like a weaver's beam, and its head, which was of iron, weighed six hundred shekels; and his shield-bearer marched ahead of him. The champion stood and shouted to the ranks of Israel, 'Why do you come out to do battle, you slaves of Saul? I am the Philistine champion; choose your man to meet me. If he can kill me in fair fight, we will become your slaves; but if I prove too strong for him and kill him, you shall be our slaves and serve us. Here and now I defy the ranks of Israel. Give me a man,' said the Philistine, 'and we will fight it out.' When Saul and the Israelites heard what the Philistine said, they were shaken and dismayed.

David was the son of an Ephrathite^a called Jesse, who had eight sons. By Saul's time he had become a feeble old man, and his three eldest sons had followed Saul to the war. The eldest was called Eliab, the next Abinadab, and the third Shammah; David was the youngest. The three eldest followed Saul, while David used to go to Saul's camp and back to Bethlehem to mind his father's flocks.

Morning and evening for forty days the Philistine came forward and took up his position. Then one day Jesse said to his son David, 'Take your brothers an ephah of this parched grain and these ten loaves of bread, and run with them to the camp. These ten cream-cheeses are for you to take to the commanding officer. See if your brothers are well and bring back some token from them.' Saul and the brothers and all the Israelites were in the Vale of Elah, fighting the Philistines. Early next morning David left someone in charge of the sheep, set out on his errand and went as Jesse had told him. He reached the lines just as the army was going out to 21 take up position and was raising the war-cry. The Israelites and the 22 Philistines drew up their ranks opposite each other. David left his things in charge of the quartermaster, ran to the line and went up to his brothers 23 to greet them. While he was talking to them the Philistine champion, Goliath, came out from the Philistine ranks and issued his challenge in the 24 same words as before; and David heard him. When the Israelites saw the 25 man they ran from him in fear. 'Look at this man who comes out day after day to defy Israel', they said. 'The king is to give a rich reward to the man who kills him; he will give him his daughter in marriage too and will 26 exempt his family from service due in Israel.' Then David turned to his neighbours and said, 'What is to be done for the man who kills this Philis-tine and wipes out our disgrace? And who is he, an uncircumcised Philis-tine, to defy the army of the living God?' The people told him how the 27 matter stood and what was to be done for the man who killed him. His elder brother Eliab overheard David talking with the men and grew angry.

'What are you doing here?' he asked. 'And who have you left to look after those few sheep in the wilderness? I know you, you impudent young 29 rascal; you have only come to see the fighting.' David answered, 'What 30 have I done now? I only asked a question.' And he turned away from him to someone else and repeated his question, but everybody gave him the same answer.

31 What David had said was overheard and reported to Saul, who sent for 32 him. David said to him, 'Do not lose heart, sir. I will go and fight this 33 Philistine.' Saul answered, 'You cannot go and fight with this Philistine; 34 you are only a lad, and he has been a fighting man all his life.' David said to Saul, 'Sir, I am my father's shepherd; when a lion or bear comes and 35 carries off a sheep from the flock, I go after it and attack it and rescue the victim from its jaws. Then if it turns on me, I seize it by the beard and batter 36 it to death. Lions I have killed and bears, and this uncircumcised Philis-tine will fare no better than they; he has defied the army of the living God.
37 The LORD who saved me from the lion and the bear will save me from this 38 Philistine.' 'Go then,' said Saul; 'and the LORD will be with you.' He put his own tunic on David, placed a bronze helmet on his head and gave him 39 a coat of mail to wear; he then fastened his sword on David over his tunic.
But David hesitated, because he had not tried them, and said to Saul, 'I cannot go with these, because I have not tried them.' So he took them off.
40 Then he picked up his stick, chose five smooth stones from the brook and put them in a shepherd's bag which served as his pouch. He walked out to meet the Philistine with his sling in his hand.

41 The Philistine came on towards David, with his shield-bearer marching 42 ahead; and he looked David up and down and had nothing but contempt 43 for this handsome lad with his ruddy cheeks and bright eyes.^a He said to David, 'Am I a dog that you come out against me with sticks?' And he 44 swore at him in the name of his god. 'Come on,' he said, 'and I will give 45 your flesh to the birds and the beasts.' David answered, 'You have come against me with sword and spear and dagger, but I have come against you in the name of the LORD of Hosts, the God of the army of Israel which you hau defied. The LORD will put you into my power this day; I will kill you and cut your head off and leave your carcass and the carcasses of the Philistines to the birds and the wild beasts; all the world shall know that there is a God in Israel. All those who are gathered here shall see that the LORD saves neither by sword nor spear; the battle is the LORD's, and he will put you all into our power.'

When the Philistine began moving towards him again, David ran quickly to engage him. He put his hand into his bag, took out a stone, slung it, and struck the Philistine on the forehead. The stone sank into his forehead, and he fell flat on his face on the ground. So David proved the victor with his sling and stone; he struck Goliath down and gave him a mortal wound, though he had no sword. Then he ran to the Philistine and stood over him, and grasping his sword, he drew it out of the scabbard, dispatched him and cut off his head. The Philistines, when they saw that their hero was dead, turned and ran. The men of Israel and Judah at once raised the war-cry and hotly pursued them all the way to Gath and even to the gates of Ekron. The road that runs to Shaarim, Gath, and Ekron was strewn with their dead. On their return from the pursuit of the Philistines, the Israelites plundered their camp. David took Goliath's head and carried it to Jerusalem, leaving his weapons in his tent.

Saul had said to Abner his commander-in-chief, when he saw David going out against the Philistine, 'That boy there, Abner, whose son is he?' 'By your life, your majesty,' said Abner, 'I do not know.' The king said to Abner, 'Go and find out whose son the lad is.' When David came back after killing the Philistine, Abner took him and presented him to Saul with the Philistine's head still in his hand. Saul asked him, 'Whose son are you, young man?', and David answered, 'I am the son of your servant Jesse of Bethlehem.'

That same day, when Saul had finished talking with David, he kept him and would not let him return any more to his father's house, for he saw that Jonathan had given his heart to David and had grown to love him as himself. So Jonathan and David made a solemn compact because each loved the other as dearly as himself. And Jonathan stripped off the cloak he was wearing and his tunic, and gave them to David, together with his sword, his bow, and his belt. David succeeded so well in every venture on which Saul sent him that he was given a command in the army, and his promotion pleased the ordinary people, and even pleased Saul's officers.

At the home-coming of the army when David returned from the slaughter of the Philistines, the women came out from all the cities of Israel to look on, and the dancers came out to meet King Saul with tambourines, singing, and dancing. The women as they made merry sang to one another:

Saul made havoc among thousands
but David among tens of thousands.

Saul was furious, and the words rankled. He said, 'They have given David tens of thousands and me only thousands; what more can they do but make him king?' From that day forward Saul kept a jealous eye on David.

10 Next day an evil spirit from God seized upon Saul; he fell into a frenzy^a 11 in the house, and David played the harp to him as he had before. Saul had 12 his spear in his hand, and he hurled it at David, meaning to pin him to the 13 wall; but twice David swerved aside. After this Saul was afraid of David, 14 because he saw that the LORD had forsaken him and was with David. He 15 therefore removed David from his household and appointed him to the 16 command of a thousand men. David led his men into action, and succeeded 17 in everything that he undertook, because the LORD was with him. When 18 Saul saw how successful he was, he was more afraid of him than ever; all 19 Israel and Judah loved him because he took the field at their head.

17 Saul said to David, 'Here is my elder daughter Merab; I will give her to you in marriage, but in return you must serve me valiantly and fight the LORD's battles.' For Saul meant David to meet his end at the hands of the 18 Philistines and not himself. David answered Saul, 'Who am I and what are my father's people, my kinsfolk, in Israel, that I should become the 19 king's son-in-law?' However, when the time came for Saul's daughter Merab to be married to David, she had already been given to Adriel of 20 Meholah. But Michal, Saul's other daughter, fell in love with David, and 21 when Saul was told of this, he saw that it suited his plans. He said to himself, 'I will give her to him; let her be the bait that lures him to his death at the hands of the Philistines.' So Saul proposed a second time to make 22 David his son-in-law, and ordered his courtiers to say to David privately,
'The king is well disposed to you and you are dear to us all; now is the time 23 for you to marry into the king's family.' When Saul's people spoke in this way to David, he said to them, 'Do you think that marrying the king's 24 daughter is a matter of so little consequence that a poor man of no consequence, like myself, can do it?' Saul's courtiers reported what David 25 had said, and he replied, 'Tell David this: all the king wants as the brideprice is the foreskins of a hundred Philistines, by way of vengeance on his enemies.' Saul was counting on David's death at the hands of the Philis-26 tines. The courtiers told David what Saul had said, and marriage with the king's daughter on these terms pleased him well. Before the appointed 27 time, David went out with his men and slew two hundred Philistines; he brought their foreskins and counted them out to the king in order to be accepted as his son-in-law. So Saul married his daughter Michal to David.
28 He saw clearly that the LORD was with David, and knew that Michal his 29 daughter had fallen in love with him; and so he grew more and more afraid of David and was his enemy for the rest of his life.

30 The Philistine officers used to come out to offer single combat; and whenever they did, David had more success against them than all the rest of Saul's men, and he won a great name for himself.

19 SAUL SPOKE TO JONATHAN his son and all his household about killing
2 David. But Jonathan was devoted to David and told him that his father Saul was looking for an opportunity to kill him. 'Be on your guard to-3 morrow morning,' he said; 'conceal yourself, and remain in hiding. Then I will come out and join my father in the open country where you are and ^a Or fell into prophetic rapture.

4 speak to him about you, and if I discover anything I will tell you.' Jonathan
5 spoke up for David to his father Saul and said to him, 'Sir, do not wrong
6 your servant David; he has not wronged you; his conduct towards you has 7 been beyond reproach. Did he not take his life in his hands when he killed
8 the Philistine, and the LORD won a great victory for Israel? You saw it, you 9 shared in the rejoicing; why should you wrong an innocent man and put 10 David to death without cause?' Saul listened to Jonathan and swore 11 solemnly by the LORD that David should not be put to death. So Jonathan 12 called David and told him all this; then he brought him to Saul, and he 13 was in attendance on the king as before.

14 War broke out again, and David attacked the Philistines and dealt them 15 such a blow that they ran before him.

16 An evil spirit from the LORD came upon Saul as he was sitting in the 17 house with his spear in his hand; and David was playing the harp. Saul 18 tried to pin David to the wall with the spear, but he avoided the king's 19 thrust so that Saul drove the spear into the wall. David escaped and got 20 safely away. That night Saul sent servants to keep watch on David's house, 21 intending to kill him in the morning, but David's wife Michal warned him
22 to get away that night, 'or tomorrow', she said, 'you will be a dead man.'
23 She let David down through a window and he slipped away and escaped.
24 Michal took their household gods and put them on the bed; at its head she 25 laid a goat's-hair rug and covered it all with a cloak. When the men arrived 26 to arrest David she told them he was ill. Saul sent them back to see David 27 for themselves. 'Bring him to me, bed and all,' he said, 'and I will kill him.'
28 When they came, there were the household gods on the bed and the goat's-29 hair rug at its head. Then Saul said to Michal, 'Why have you played this 30 trick on me and let my enemy get safe away?' And Michal answered, 'He 31 said to me, "Help me to escape or I will kill you."'

32 Meanwhile David made good his escape and came to Samuel at Ramah, 33 and told him how Saul had treated him. Then he and Samuel went to 34 Naioth and stayed there. Saul was told that David was there, and he sent 35 a party of men to seize him. When they saw the company of prophets in 36 rapture, with Samuel standing at their head, the spirit of God came upon 37 them and they fell into prophetic rapture. When this was reported to Saul 38 he sent another party. These also fell into a rapture, and when he sent more 39 men a third time, they did the same. Saul himself then set out for Ramah 40 and came to the great cistern in Secu. He asked where Samuel and David 41 were and was told that they were at Naioth in Ramah. On his way there the 42 spirit of God came upon him too and he went on, in a rapture as he went, 43 till he came to Naioth in Ramah. There he too stripped off his clothes and 44 like the rest fell into a rapture before Samuel and lay down naked all that 45 day and all that night. That is why men say, 'Is Saul also among the 46 prophets?'

47 Then David made his escape from Naioth in Ramah and came to 48 Jonathan. 'What have I done?' he asked. 'What is my offence? What does 49 your father think I have done wrong, that he seeks my life?' Jonathan 50 answered him, 'God forbid! There is no thought of putting you to death.
51 I am sure my father will not do anything whatever without telling me. Why

3 should my father hide such a thing from me? I cannot believe it!' David said, 'I am ready to swear to it: your father has said to himself, "Jonathan must not know this or he will resent it", because he knows that you have a high regard for me. As the LORD lives, your life upon it, there is only a step 4 between me and death.' Jonathan said to David, 'What do you want me to 5 do for you?' David answered, 'It is new moon tomorrow, and I ought to dine with the king. Let me go and lie hidden in the fields until the third 6 evening. If your father happens to miss me, then say, "David asked me for leave to pay a rapid visit to his home in Bethlehem, for it is the annual 7 sacrifice there for the whole family." If he says, "Well and good", that will be a good sign for me; but if he flies into a rage, you will know that he is set 8 on doing me wrong. My lord, keep faith with me; for you and I have entered into a solemn compact before the LORD. Kill me yourself if I am guilty.
9 Why let me fall into your father's hands?' 'God forbid!' cried Jonathan.
10 'If I find my father set on doing you wrong I will tell you.' David answered 11 Jonathan, 'How will you let me know if he answers harshly?' Jonathan said, 12 'Come with me into the fields.' So they went together into the fields, and Jonathan said to David, 'I promise you, David, in the sight of the LORD the God of Israel, this time tomorrow I will sound my father for the third 13 time and, if he is well disposed to you, I will send and let you know. If my father means mischief, the LORD do the same to me and more, if I do not let you know and get you safely away. The LORD be with you as he has been 14 with my father! I know that as long as I live you will show me faithful 15 friendship, as the LORD requires; and if I should die, you will continue loyal to my family for ever. When the LORD rids the earth of all David's 16 enemies, may the LORD call him to account if he and his house are no longer my friends.' Jonathan pledged himself afresh to David because of his love 17 for him, for he loved him as himself. Then he said to him, 'Tomorrow is 18 the new moon, and you will be missed when your place is empty. So go down at nightfall for the third time to the place where you hid on the 20 evening of the feast and stay by the mound there. Then I will shoot three 21 arrows towards it, as though I were aiming at a mark. Then I will send my boy to find the arrows. If I say to him, "Look, the arrows are on this side of you, pick them up", then you can come out of hiding. You will be quite 22 safe, I swear it; for there will be nothing amiss. But if I say to the lad,
"Look, the arrows are on the other side of you, further on", then the LORD 23 has said that you must go; the LORD stand witness between us for ever to the pledges we have exchanged.'

24 So David hid in the fields. The new moon came, the dinner was prepared, 25 and the king sat down to eat. Saul took his customary seat by the wall, and Abner sat beside him; Jonathan too was present, but David's place was 26 empty. That day Saul said nothing, for he thought that David was absent 27 by some chance, perhaps because he was ritually unclean. But on the second day, the day after the new moon, David's place was still empty, and Saul said to his son Jonathan, 'Why has not the son of Jesse come to the feast, 28 either yesterday or today?' Jonathan answered Saul, 'David asked permis-29 sion to go to Bethlehem. He asked my leave and said, "Our family is holding a sacrifice in the town and my brother himself has ordered me to be there. Now, if you have any regard for me, let me slip away to see my brothers." That is why he has not come to dine with the king.' Saul was angry with Jonathan, 'You son of a crooked and unfaithful mother! You have made friends with the son of Jesse only to bring shame on yourself and dishonour on your mother; I see how it will be. As long as Jesse's son remains alive on earth, neither you nor your crown will be safe. Send at once and fetch him; he deserves to die.' Jonathan answered his father, 'Deserves to die! Why? What has he done?' At that, Saul picked up his spear and threatened to kill him; and he knew that his father was bent on David's death. Jonathan left the table in a rage and ate nothing on the second day of the festival; for he was indignant on David's behalf because his father had humiliated him.

Next morning, Jonathan went out into the fields to meet David at the appointed time, taking a young boy with him. He said to the boy, 'Run and find the arrows; I am going to shoot.' The boy ran on, and he shot the arrows over his head. When the boy reached the place where Jonathan's arrows had fallen, Jonathan called out after him, 'Look, the arrows are beyond you. Hurry! No time to lose! Make haste!' The boy gathered up the arrows and brought them to his master; but only Jonathan and David knew what this meant; the boy knew nothing. Jonathan handed his weapons to the boy and told him to take them back to the city. When the boy had gone, David got up from behind the mound and bowed humbly three times. Then they kissed one another and shed tears together, until David's grief was even greater than Jonathan's. Jonathan said to David, 'Go in safety; we have pledged each other in the name of the LORD who is witness for ever between you and me and between your descendants and mine.'

David went off at once, while Jonathan returned to the city. David made his way to the priest Ahimelech at Nob, who hurried out to meet him and said, 'Why have you come alone and no one with you?' David answered Ahimelech, 'I am under orders from the king: I was to let no one know about the mission on which he was sending me or what these orders were. When I took leave of my men I told them to meet me in such and such a place. Now, what have you got by you? Let me have five loaves, or as many as you can find.' The priest answered David, 'I have no ordinary bread available. There is only the sacred bread; but have the young men kept themselves from women?' David answered the priest, 'Women have been denied us hitherto, when I have been on campaign, even an ordinary campaign, and the young men's bodies have remained holy; and how much more will they be holy today?' So, as there was no other bread there, the priest gave him the sacred bread, the Bread of the Presence, which had just been taken from the presence of the LORD to be replaced by freshly baked bread on the day that the old was removed. One of Saul's servants happened to be there that day, detained before the LORD; his name was Doeg the Edomite, and he was the strongest of all Saul's herdsman. David said to Ahimelech, 'Have you a spear or sword here at hand? I have no sword or other weapon with me, because the king's business was urgent.' The priest answered, 'There is the sword of Goliath the Philistine whom you slew in the Vale of Elah; it is wrapped up in a cloak behind the ephod.'

If you wish to take that, take it; there is no other weapon here.' David said, 'There is no sword like it; give it to me.'

10 That day, David went on his way, eluding Saul, and came to Achish 11 king of Gath. The servants of Achish said to him, 'Surely this is David, the king of his country, the man of whom they sang as they danced:

Saul made havoc among thousands
but David among tens of thousands.'

12 These words were not lost on David, and he became very much afraid of 13 Achish king of Gath. So he altered his behaviour in public and acted like a lunatic in front of them all, scrabbling on the double doors of the city gate 14 and dribbling down his beard. Achish said to his servants, 'The man is 15 mad! Why bring him to me? Am I short of madmen that you bring this one to plague me? Must I have this fellow in my house?'

22 DAVID MADE HIS ESCAPE and went from there to the cave of Adullam.
When his brothers and all his family heard that he was there, they joined 2 him. Men in any kind of distress or in debt or with a grievance gathered round him, about four hundred in number, and he became their chief.
3 From there David went to Mizpeh in Moab and said to the king of Moab,
'Let my father and mother come and take shelter with you until I know 4 what God will do for me.' So he left them at the court of the king of Moab, and they stayed there as long as David was in his stronghold.

5 The prophet Gad said to David, 'You must not stay in your stronghold;
6 go at once into Judah.' So David went as far as the forest of Hareth. News that David and his men had been seen reached Saul while he was in Gibeah, sitting under the tamarisk-tree on the hill-top with his spear in 7 his hand and all his retainers standing about him. He said to them, 'Listen to me, you Benjamites: do you expect the son of Jesse to give you all fields and vineyards, or make you all officers over units of a thousand and a 8 hundred? Is that why you have all conspired against me? Not one of you told me when my son made a compact with the son of Jesse; none of you spared a thought for me or told me that my son had set my own servant against me, who is lying in wait for me now.'

9 Then Doeg the Edomite, who was standing with the servants of Saul, spoke: 'I saw the son of Jesse coming to Nob, to Ahimelech son of Ahitub.
10 Ahimelech consulted the LORD on his behalf, then gave him food and handed over to him the sword of Goliath the Philistine.' The king sent for 11 Ahimelech the priest and his family, who were priests at Nob, and they all came into his presence. Saul said, 'Now listen, you son of Ahitub', and 12 the man answered, 'Yes, my lord?' Then Saul said to him, 'Why have you and the son of Jesse plotted against me? You gave him food and the sword too, and consulted God on his behalf; and now he has risen against me and 13 is at this moment lying in wait for me.' 'And who among all your servants', answered Ahimelech, 'is like David, a man to be trusted, the king's son-in-law, appointed to your staff and holding an honourable place in your 14 household? Have I on this occasion done something profane in consulting God on his behalf? God forbid! I trust that my lord the king will not accuse 15 me or my family; for I know nothing whatever about it.' But the king said, 16

'Ahimelech, you must die, you and all your family.' He then turned to the 17 bodyguard attending him and said, 'Go and kill the priests of the LORD;
for they are in league with David, and, though they knew that he was a fugitive, they did not tell me.' The king's men, however, were unwilling to raise a hand against the priests of the LORD. The king therefore said to 18 Doeg the Edomite, 'You, Doeg, go and fall upon the priests'; so Doeg went and fell upon the priests, killing that day with his own hand eighty-five 19 men who could carry the ephod. He put to the sword every living thing in Nob, the city of priests: men and women, children and babes in arms, oxen, asses, and sheep. One son of Ahimelech named Abiathar made his escape 20 and joined David. He told David how Saul had killed the priests of the 21 LORD. Then David said to him, 'When Doeg the Edomite was there that 22 day, I knew that he would inform Saul. I have gambled with the lives of all your father's family. Stay here with me, have no fear; he who seeks your 23 life seeks mine, and you will be safe with me.'

The Philistines were fighting against Keilah and plundering the 23 threshing-floors; and when David heard this, he consulted the LORD and 2 asked whether he should go and attack the Philistines. The LORD answered, 'Go, attack them, and relieve Keilah.' But David's men said to him, 'As 3 we are now, we have enough to fear from Judah. How much worse if we challenge the Philistine forces at Keilah?' David consulted the LORD once 4 again and the LORD answered him, 'Go to Keilah; I will give the Philistines into your hands.' So David and his men went to Keilah and fought 5 the Philistines; they carried off their cattle, inflicted a heavy defeat on them and relieved the inhabitants. Abiathar son of Ahimelech made good his 6 escape and joined David at Keilah, bringing the ephod with him. Saul was 7 told that David had entered Keilah, and he said, 'God has put him into my hands; for he has walked into a trap by entering a walled town with gates and bars.' He called out the levy to march on Keilah and besiege David 8 and his men. When David learnt how Saul planned his undoing, he told 9 Abiathar the priest to bring the ephod, and then he prayed, 'O LORD God 10 of Israel, I thy servant have heard news that Saul intends to come to Keilah and destroy the city because of me. Will the citizens of Keilah surrender me 11 to him? Will Saul come as I have heard? O LORD God of Israel, I pray thee, tell thy servant.' The LORD answered, 'He will come.' Then David 12 asked, 'Will the citizens of Keilah surrender me and my men to Saul?', and the LORD answered, 'They will.' Then David left Keilah at once with 13 his men, who numbered about six hundred, and moved about from place to place. When the news reached Saul that David had escaped from Keilah, he made no further move.

While David was living in the fastnesses of the wilderness of Ziph, in 14
the hill-country, Saul searched for him day after day, but God did not put him into his power. David well knew that Saul had come out to seek his 15 life; and while he was at Horesh in the wilderness of Ziph, Saul's son Jonathan came to him there and gave him fresh courage in God's name:
'Do not be afraid,' he said; 'my father's hand shall not touch you. You will 17 become king of Israel and I shall hold rank after you; and my father knows

18 it.' The two of them made a solemn compact before the LORD; then David 19 remained in Horesh and Jonathan went home. While Saul was at Gibeath the Ziphites brought him this news: 'David, we hear, is in hiding among us in the fastnesses of Horesh on the hill of Hachilah, south of Jeshimon.
 20 Come down, your majesty, come whenever you will, and we are able to 21 surrender him to you.' Saul said, 'The LORD has indeed blessed you; you 22 have saved me a world of trouble. Go now and make further inquiry, and find out exactly where he is and who saw him there. They tell me that he 23 by himself is crafty enough to outwit me. Find out which of his hiding-places he is using; then come back to me at such and such a place, and I will go along with you. So long as he stays in this country, I will hunt him 24 down, if I have to go through all the clans of Judah one by one.' They set out for Ziph without delay, ahead of Saul; David and his men were in the 25 wilderness of Maon in the Arabah to the south of Jeshimon. Saul set off with his men to look for him; but David got wind of it and went down to a refuge in the rocks, and there he stayed in the wilderness of Maon. Hearing 26 of this, Saul went into the wilderness after him; he was on one side of the hill, David and his men on the other. While David and his men were trying desperately to get away and Saul and his followers were closing in 27 for the capture, a runner brought a message to Saul: 'Come at once! the 28 Philistines are harrying the land.' So Saul called off the pursuit and turned back to face the Philistines. This is why that place is called the Dividing 29 Rock. David went up from there and lived in the fastnesses of En-gedi.
 24 When Saul returned from the pursuit of the Philistines, he learnt that 2 David was in the wilderness of En-gedi. So he took three thousand men picked from the whole of Israel and went in search of David and his men 3 to the east of the Rocks of the Wild Goats. There beside the road were some sheepfolds, and near by was a cave, at the far end of which David and his men were sitting concealed. Saul came to the cave and went in to relieve 4-7^a himself. His men said to David, 'The day has come: the LORD has put your enemy into your hands, as he promised he would, and you may do what you please with him.' David said to his men, 'God forbid that I should harm my master, the LORD's anointed, or lift a finger against him; he is the LORD's anointed.' So David reproved his men severely and would not let them attack Saul. He himself got up stealthily and cut off a piece of Saul's cloak; but when he had cut it off, his conscience smote him. Saul rose, left the 8 cave and went on his way; whereupon David also came out of the cave and called after Saul, 'My lord the king!' When Saul looked round, David 9 prostrated himself in obeisance and said to him, 'Why do you listen when 10 they say that David is out to do you harm? Today you can see for yourself that the LORD put you into my power in the cave; I had a mind to kill you, but no, I spared your life and said, "I cannot lift a finger against my master, 11 for he is the LORD's anointed." Look, my dear lord, look at this piece of your cloak in my hand. I cut it off, but I did not kill you; this will show you that I have no thought of violence or treachery against you, and that I have 12 done you no wrong; yet you are resolved to take my life. May the LORD judge between us! but though he may take vengeance on you for my sake,

^a Verses 4-7 are re-arranged thus: 4a, 6, 7a, 4b, 5, 7b.

I will never lift my hand against you; "One wrong begets another", as the old saying goes, yet I will never lift my hand against you. Who has the king of Israel come out against? What are you pursuing? A dead dog, a mere flea. The LORD will be judge and decide between us; let him look into my cause, he will plead for me and will acquit me.'

When David had finished speaking, Saul said, 'Is that you, David my son?', and he wept. Then he said, 'The right is on your side, not mine; you have treated me so well, I have treated you so badly. Your goodness to me this day has passed all bounds: the LORD put me at your mercy but you did not kill me. Not often does a man find his enemy and let him go safely on his way; so may the LORD reward you well for what you have done for me today! I know now for certain that you will become king, and that the kingdom of Israel will flourish under your rule. Swear to me by the LORD then that you will not exterminate my descendants and blot out my name from my father's house.' David swore an oath to Saul; and Saul went back to his home, while David and his men went up to their fastness.

SAMUEL DIED, and all Israel came together to mourn for him, and he was buried in his house in Ramah. Afterwards David went down to the wilderness of Paran.

There was a man at Carmel in Maon, who had great influence and owned three thousand sheep and a thousand goats; and he was shearing his flocks in Carmel. His name was Nabal and his wife's name Abigail; she was a beautiful and intelligent woman, but her husband, a Calebite, was surly and mean. David heard in the wilderness that Nabal was shearing his flocks, and sent ten of his men, saying to them, 'Go up to Carmel, find Nabal and give him my greetings. You are to say, "All good wishes for the year ahead! Prosperity to yourself, your household, and all that is yours! I hear that you are shearing. Your shepherds have been with us lately and we did not molest them; nothing of theirs was missing all the time they were in Carmel. Ask your own people and they will tell you. Receive my men kindly, for this is an auspicious day with us, and give what you can to David your son and your servant."' David's servants came and delivered this message to Nabal in David's name. When they paused, Nabal answered, 'Who is David? Who is this son of Jesse? In these days every slave who breaks away from his master sets himself up as a chief.^a Am I to take my food and my wine and the meat I have provided for my shearers and give it to men who come from I know not where?' David's men turned and made their way back to him and told him all this. He said to his men, 'Buckle on your swords, all of you.' So they buckled on their swords and followed David, four hundred of them, while two hundred stayed behind with the baggage.

One of the young men said to Abigail, Nabal's wife, 'David sent messengers from the wilderness to ask our master politely for a present, and he flew out^b at them. The men have been very good to us and have not molested us, nor did we miss anything all the time we were going about 16 with them in the open country. They were as good as a wall round us, night 17 and day, while we were minding the flocks. Think carefully what you had better do, for it is certain ruin for our master and his whole family; he is 18 such a good-for-nothing that it is no good talking to him.' So Abigail hastily collected two hundred loaves and two skins of wine, five sheep ready dressed, five measures of parched grain, a hundred bunches of 19 raisins, and two hundred cakes of dried figs, and loaded them on asses, but told her husband nothing about it. Then she said to her servants, 'Go on 20 ahead, I will follow you.' As she made her way on her ass, hidden by the hill, there were David and his men coming down towards her, and she met 21 them. David had said, 'It was a waste of time to protect this fellow's property in the wilderness so well that nothing of his was missing. He has 22 repaid me evil for good.' David swore a great oath: 'God do the same to me and more if I leave him a single mother's son alive by morning!'

23 When Abigail saw David she dismounted in haste and prostrated herself 24 before him, bowing low to the ground at his feet, and said, 'Let me take the blame, my lord, but allow me, your humble servant, to speak out and 25 let my lord give me a hearing. How can you take any notice of this good-for-nothing? He is just what his name Nabal means: "Churl" is his name, and churlish his behaviour. I did not myself, sir, see the men you sent.
26 And now, sir, the LORD has restrained you from bloodshed and from giving vent to your anger. As the LORD lives, your life upon it, your enemies and 27 all who want to see you ruined will be like Nabal. Here is the present which I, your humble servant, have brought; give it to the young men under 28 your command. Forgive me, my lord, if I am presuming; for the LORD will establish your family for ever, because you have fought his wars. No 29 calamity shall overtake you as long as you live. If any man sets out to pursue you and take your life, the LORD your God will wrap your life up and put it with his own treasure, but the lives of your enemies he will hurl away like 30 stones from a sling. When the LORD has made good all his promises to you, 31 and has made you ruler of Israel, there will be no reason why you should stumble or your courage falter because you have shed innocent blood or given way to your anger. Then when the LORD makes all you do prosper, 32 you will remember me, your servant.' David said to Abigail, 'Blessed is 33 the LORD the God of Israel who has sent you today to meet me. A blessing on your good sense, a blessing on you because you have saved me today 34 from the guilt of bloodshed and from giving way to my anger. For I swear by the life of the LORD the God of Israel who has kept me from doing you wrong: if you had not come at once to meet me, not a man of Nabal's household, not a single mother's son, would have been left alive by morn-35 ing.' Then David took from her what she had brought him and said, 'Go home in peace, I have listened to you and I grant your request.'

36 On her return she found Nabal holding a banquet in his house, a banquet fit for a king. He grew merry and became very drunk, so drunk that his wife 37 said nothing to him, trivial or serious, till daybreak. In the morning, when the wine had worn off, she told him everything, and he had a seizure and 38 lay there like a stone. Ten days later the LORD struck him again and he 39 died. When David heard that Nabal was dead he said, 'Blessed be the LORD, who has himself punished Nabal for his insult, and has kept me his servant from doing wrong. The LORD has made Nabal's wrongdoing recoil on his own head.' David then sent to make proposals that Abigail should become his wife. And his servants came to Abigail at Carmel and said to her, 'David has sent us to fetch you to be his wife.' She rose and prostrated herself with her face to the ground, and said, 'I am his slave to command, I would wash the feet of my lord's servants.' So Abigail made her preparations with all speed and, with her five maids in attendance, accompanied by David's messengers, rode away on an ass; and she became David's wife. David had also married Ahinoam of Jezreel; both these women became his wives. Saul meanwhile had given his daughter Michal, David's wife, to Palti son of Laish from Gallim.

THE ZIPHITES CAME TO SAUL at Gibeah to report that David was in hiding on the hill of Hachilah overlooking Jeshimon. Saul went down at once to the wilderness of Ziph, taking with him three thousand picked men, to search for David there. He encamped beside the road on the hill of Hachilah overlooking Jeshimon, while David was still in the wilderness. As soon as David knew that Saul had come to the wilderness in pursuit of him, he sent out scouts and found that Saul had reached such and such a place. Without delay, he went to the place where Saul had pitched his camp and observed where Saul and Abner son of Ner, the commander-in-chief, were lying. Saul lay within the lines with his troops encamped in a circle round him. David turned to Ahimelech the Hittite and Abishai son of Zeruiah, Joab's brother, and said, 'Who will venture with me into the camp, to go to Saul?' Abishai answered, 'I will.' David and Abishai entered the camp at night and found Saul lying asleep within the lines with his spear thrust into the ground by his head. Abner and the army were lying all round him. Abishai said to David, 'God has put your enemy into your power today; let me strike him and pin him to the ground with one thrust of the spear; I shall not have to strike twice.' David said to him, 'Do him no harm; who has ever lifted a finger against the LORD's anointed and gone unpunished? As the LORD lives,' went on David, 'the LORD will strike him down; either his time will come and he will die, or he will go down to battle and meet his end. God forbid that I should lift a finger against the LORD's anointed! But now let us take the spear which is by his head, and the water-jar, and go.' So David took the spear and the water-jar from beside Saul's head and they went. The whole camp was asleep; no one saw him, no one knew anything, no one even woke up. A heavy sleep sent by the LORD had fallen on them.

Then David crossed over to the other side and stood on the top of a hill a long way off; there was no little distance between them. David shouted across to the army and hailed Abner, 'Answer me, Abner!' He answered, 'Who are you to shout to the king?' David said to Abner, 'Do you call yourself a man? Is there anyone like you in Israel? Why, then, did you not keep watch over your lord the king, when someone came to harm your lord the king? This was not well done. As the LORD lives, you deserve to die, all of you, because you have not kept watch over your master the LORD's anointed. Look! Where are the king's spear and the water-jar that were by his head?'

- 17 Saul recognized David's voice and said, 'Is that you, David my son?'
 18 'Yes, sir, it is', said David. 'Why must your majesty pursue me? What have 19 I done? What mischief am I plotting? Listen, my lord, to what I have to say. If it is the LORD who has set you against me, may an offering be acceptable to him; but if it is men, a curse on them in the LORD's name; for they have ousted me today from my share in the LORD's inheritance and 20 have banished me to serve other gods! Do not let my blood be shed on foreign soil, far from the presence of the LORD, just because the king of Israel came out to look for a flea, as one might hunt a partridge over the 21 hills.' Saul answered, 'I have done wrong; come back, David my son. You have held my life precious this day, and I will never harm you again. I have 22 been a fool, I have been sadly in the wrong.' David answered, 'Here is the 23 king's spear; let one of your men come across and fetch it. The LORD who rewards uprightness and loyalty will reward the man into whose power he put you today, when I refused to lift a finger against the LORD's anointed.
 24 As I held your life precious today, so may the LORD hold mine precious and 25 deliver me from every distress.' Then Saul said to David, 'A blessing is on you, David my son. You will do great things and be victorious.' So David went on his way and Saul returned home.

- 27 David thought, 'One of these days I shall be killed by Saul. The best thing for me to do will be to escape into Philistine territory; then Saul will lose all further hope of finding me anywhere in Israel, search as he may, and 2 I shall escape his clutches.' So David and his six hundred men crossed the 3 frontier forthwith to Achish son of Maach king of Gath. David settled in Gath with Achish, taking with him his men and their families and his two 4 wives, Ahinoam of Jezreel and Abigail of Carmel, Nabal's widow. Saul was told that David had escaped to Gath, and he gave up the search.
 5 David said to Achish, 'If I stand well in your opinion, grant me a place in one of your country towns where I may settle. Why should I remain in the 6 royal city with your majesty?' Achish granted him Ziklag on that day:
 that is why Ziklag still belongs to the kings of Judah.

- 7 8 David spent a year and four months in Philistine country. He and his men would sally out and raid the Geshurites, the Gizrites, and the Amalekites, for it was they who inhabited the country from Telaim^a all the way 9 to Shur and Egypt. When David raided the country he left no one alive, man or woman; he took flocks and herds, asses and camels, and clothes too, 10 and then came back again to Achish. When Achish asked, 'Where was your raid today?', David would answer, 'The Negeb of Judah' or 'The Negeb 11 of the Jerahmeelites' or 'The Negeb of the Kenites'. Neither man nor woman did David bring back alive to Gath, for fear that they should denounce him and his men for what they had done. This was his practice 12 as long as he remained with the Philistines. Achish trusted David, thinking that he had won such a bad name among his own people the Israelites that he would remain his subject all his life.

Saul and his sons killed

IN THOSE DAYS THE PHILISTINES MUSTERED their army for an attack 28 on Israel. Achish said to David, 'You know that you and your men must take the field with me.' David answered Achish, 'Good, you will 2 learn what your servant can do.' And Achish said to David, 'I will make you my bodyguard for life.'

By this time Samuel was dead, and all Israel had mourned for him and 3 buried him in Ramah, his own city; and Saul had banished from the land all who trafficked with ghosts and spirits. The Philistines mustered and 4 encamped at Shunem, and Saul gathered all the Israelites and encamped on Gilboa; and when Saul saw the Philistine force, fear struck him to the 5 heart. He inquired of the LORD, but the LORD did not answer him, whether by dreams or by Urim or by prophets. So he said to his servants, 'Find me a 6 woman who has a familiar spirit, and I will go and inquire through her.'
 His servants told him that there was such a woman at En-dor. Saul put on 8 different clothes and went in disguise with two of his men. He came to the woman by night and said, 'Tell me my fortunes by consulting the dead, and call up the man I name to you.' But the woman answered, 'Surely you 9 know what Saul has done, how he has made away with those who call up ghosts and spirits; why do you press me to do what will lead to my death?'
 Saul swore her an oath: 'As the LORD lives, no harm shall come to you for 10 this.' The woman asked whom she should call up, and Saul answered,
 'Samuel.' When the woman saw Samuel appear, she shrieked and said to 12 Saul, 'Why have you deceived me? You are Saul!' The king said to her,
 'Do not be afraid. What do you see?' The woman answered, 'I see a ghostly 13 form coming up from the earth.' 'What is it like?' he asked; she answered,
 'Like an old man coming up, wrapped in a cloak.' Then Saul knew it was 14
 Samuel, and he bowed low with his face to the ground, and prostrated himself. Samuel said to Saul, 'Why have you disturbed me and brought 15 me up?' Saul answered, 'I am in great trouble; the Philistines are pressing me and God has turned away; he no longer answers me through prophets or through dreams, and I have summoned you to tell me what I should do.'
 Samuel said, 'Why do you ask me, now that the LORD has turned from you 16 and become your adversary? He has done what he foretold through me. 17
 He has torn the kingdom from your hand and given it to another man, to David. You have not obeyed the LORD, or executed the judgement of his 18 fury against the Amalekites; that is why he has done this to you today.
 For the same reason the LORD will let your people Israel fall into the hands 19 of the Philistines and, what is more, tomorrow you and your sons shall be with me. Yes, indeed, the LORD will give the Israelite army into the hands of the Philistines.' Saul was overcome and fell his full length to the ground, 20 terrified by Samuel's words. He had no strength left, for he had eaten nothing all day and all night.

The woman went to Saul and saw that he was much disturbed, and she 21 said to him, 'I listened to what you said and I risked my life to obey you.
 Now listen to me: let me set before you a little food to give you strength for 22 your journey.' But he refused to eat anything. When his servants joined the 23

- woman in pressing him, he yielded, rose from the ground and sat on the 24 couch. The woman had a fatted calf at home, which she quickly slaughtered.
 25 She took some meal, kneaded it and baked unleavened cakes, which she set before Saul and his servants. They ate the food and departed that same night.
- 29 The Philistines mustered all their troops at Aphek, while the Israelites 2 encamped at En-harod^a in Jezreel. The Philistine princes were advancing with their troops in units of a hundred and a thousand; David and his men 3 were in the rear of the column with Achish. The Philistine commanders asked, 'Why are those Hebrews there?' Achish answered, 'This is David, the servant of Saul king of Israel who has been with me now for a year or more. I have had no fault to find in him ever since he came over to me.' 4 The Philistine commanders were indignant and said to Achish, 'Send the man back to the town which you allotted to him. He shall not fight side by side with us, or he may turn traitor in the battle. What better way to buy 5 his master's favour, than at the price of our lives? This is that David of whom they sang, as they danced:

Saul made havoc among thousands
 but David among tens of thousands.'

- 6 Achish summoned David and said to him, 'As the LORD lives, you are an upright man and your service with my troops has well satisfied me. I have had no fault to find with you ever since you joined me, but the other 7 princes are not willing to accept you. Now go home in peace, and you will 8 then be doing nothing that they can regard as wrong.' David protested, 'What have I done, or what fault have you found in me from the day I first entered your service till now, that I should not come and fight against 9 the enemies of my lord the king?' Achish answered David, 'I agree that you have been as true to me as an angel of God, but the Philistine com-10 manders insist that you shall not fight alongside them. Now rise early in the morning with those of your lord's subjects who have followed you, and go to the town which I allotted to you; harbour no evil thoughts, for I am 11 well satisfied with you. Rise early and start as soon as it is light.' So David and his men rose early to start that morning on their way back to the land of the Philistines, while the Philistines went on to Jezreel.
- 30 On the third day David and his men reached Ziklag. Now the Amalekites 2 had made a raid into the Negeb, attacked Ziklag and set fire to it; they had carried off all the women, high and low, without putting one of them to 3 death. These they drove with them and continued their march. When David and his men approached the town, they found it destroyed by fire, 4 and their wives, their sons, and their daughters carried off. David and the people with him wept aloud until they could weep no more. David's two 5 wives, Ahinoam of Jezreel and Abigail widow of Nabal of Carmel, were 6 among the captives. David was in a desperate position because the people, embittered by the loss of their sons and daughters, threatened to stone him.
 7 So David sought strength in the LORD his God. He told Abiathar the priest, son of Ahimelech, to bring the ephod. When Abiathar had brought the ephod, David inquired of the LORD, 'Shall I pursue these raiders? and shall I overtake them?' The answer came, 'Pursue them: you will overtake them and rescue everyone.' So David and his six hundred men set out and reached the ravine of Besor.^a Two hundred of them who were too weary to cross the ravine stayed behind, and David with four hundred pressed on in pursuit.

In the open country they came across an Egyptian and took him to David. They gave him food to eat and water to drink, also a lump of dried figs and two bunches of raisins. When he had eaten these he revived; for he had had nothing to eat or drink for three days and nights. David asked him, 'Whose slave are you? and where have you come from?' 'I am an Egyptian boy,' he answered, 'the slave of an Amalekite, but my master left me behind because I fell ill three days ago. We had raided the Negeb of the Kerethites, part of Judah, and the Negeb of Caleb; we also set fire to Ziklag.' David asked, 'Can you guide me to this band?' 'Swear to me by God', he answered, 'that you will not put me to death or hand me back to my master, and I will guide you to them.' So he led him down, and there they were scattered everywhere, eating and drinking and celebrating the capture of the great mass of spoil taken from Philistine and Judaeen territory.

David attacked from dawn till dusk and continued till next day; only four hundred young men mounted on camels made good their escape. David rescued all those whom the Amalekites had taken, including his two wives. No one was missing, high or low, sons or daughters, and none of the spoil, nor anything they had taken for themselves: David recovered everything. They took all the flocks and herds, drove the cattle before him^b and said, 'This is David's spoil.' When David returned to the two hundred men who had been too weak to follow him and whom he had left behind at the ravine of Besor, they came forward to meet him and his men. David greeted them all, inquiring how things were with them. But some of those who had gone with David, worthless men and scoundrels, broke in and said, 'These men did not go with us; we will not allot them any of the spoil that we have retrieved, except that each of them may take his own wife and children and then go.' 'That you shall never do,' said David, 'considering what the LORD has given us, and how he has kept us safe and given the raiding party into our hands. Who could agree with what you propose? Those who stayed with the stores shall have the same share as those who went into battle. They shall share and share alike.' From that time onwards, this has been the established custom in Israel down to this day.

When David reached Ziklag, he sent some of the spoil to the elders of Judah and to his friends, with this message: 'This is a present for you out of the spoil taken from the LORD's enemies.' He sent to those in Bethuel, in Ramoth-negeb, in Jattir, in Ararah,^c in Siphmoth, in Eshtemoa, in Rachal, in the cities of the Jerahmeelites, in the cities of the Kenites, in

- 31 Hormah, in Borashan, in Athak, in Hebron, and in all the places over which he and his men had ranged.
- 1^a The Philistines fought a battle against Israel, and the men of Israel were 2 routed, leaving their dead on Mount Gilboa. The Philistines hotly pursued Saul and his sons and killed the three sons, Jonathan, Abinadab and 3 Malchishua. The battle went hard for Saul, for some archers came upon 4 him and he was wounded in the belly by the archers. So he said to his armour-bearer, 'Draw your sword and run me through, so that these uncircumcised brutes may not come and taunt me and make sport of me.' But the armour-bearer refused, he dared not; whereupon Saul took his
 5 own sword and fell on it. When the armour-bearer saw that Saul was dead,
 6 he too fell on his sword and died with him. Thus they all died together on that day, Saul, his three sons, and his armour-bearer, as well as his men.
- 7 And all the Israelites in the district of the Vale and of the Jordan, when they saw that the other Israelites had fled and that Saul and his sons had perished, fled likewise, abandoning their cities, and the Philistines went in and occupied them.
- 8 Next day, when the Philistines came to strip the slain, they found Saul 9 and his three sons lying dead on Mount Gilboa. They cut off his head and stripped him of his weapons; then they sent messengers through the length and breadth of their land to take the good news to idols and people alike. They deposited his armour in the temple of Ashtoreth and nailed his 10 body on the wall of Beth-shan. When the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead
 11 heard what the Philistines had done to Saul, the bravest of them journeyed together all night long and recovered the bodies of Saul and his sons from the wall of Beth-shan; they brought them back to Jabesh and anointed 12 them there with spices. Then they took their bones and buried them under the tamarisk-tree in Jabesh, and fasted for seven days.

THE SECOND BOOK OF SAMUEL

David's rule at Hebron

- 1 WHEN DAVID RETURNED from his victory over the 2 Amalekites, he spent two days in Ziklag. And on the third day after Saul's death a man came from the army with his clothes rent and dust on his head. When he came into David's presence he fell to the ground in obeisance, and David asked him where he had come from.
 3 He answered, 'I have escaped from the army of Israel.' And David said to him, 'What news? Tell me.' 'The army has been driven from the field,'
 4 he answered, 'and many have fallen in battle. Saul and Jonathan his son are dead.' David said to the young man who brought the news, 'How do you know that Saul and Jonathan are dead?' The man answered, 'It so happened that I was on Mount Gilboa and saw Saul leaning on his spear with the chariots and horsemen closing in upon him. He turned round and, seeing me, called to me. I said, "What is it, sir?" He asked who I was, and I said, "An Amalekite." Then he said to me, "Come and stand over me and dispatch me. I still live, but the throes of death have seized me." So I stood over him and gave him the death-blow; for I knew that, broken as he was, he could not live. Then I took the crown from his head and the armband from his arm, and I have brought them here to you, sir.' At that David caught at his clothes and rent them, and so did all the men with him.

^a Verses 1-13: cp. 1 Chr. 10. 1-12.

 They beat their breasts and wept, because Saul and Jonathan his son and the people of the LORD, the house of Israel, had fallen in battle; and they fasted till evening. David said to the young man who brought the news,
 'Where do you come from?', and he answered, 'I am the son of an alien, an Amalekite.' 'How is it', said David, 'that you were not afraid to raise your hand to slay the LORD's anointed?' And he summoned one of his own young men and ordered him to fall upon the man. So the young man struck him down and killed him; and David said, 'Your blood be on your own head; for out of your own mouth you condemned yourself when you said,
 "I killed the LORD's anointed."' "

David made this lament over Saul and Jonathan his son; and he ordered that this dirge over them should be taught to the people of Judah. It was written down and may be found in the Book of Jashar: ^a

O prince of Israel, laid low in death!
 How are the men of war fallen!

Tell it not in Gath,
 proclaim it not in the streets of Ashkelon,
 lest the Philistine women rejoice,
 lest the daughters of the uncircumcised exult.

Hills of Gilboa, let no dew or rain fall on you,
 no showers on the uplands^b!

For there the shields of the warriors lie tarnished,
 and the shield of Saul, no longer bright with oil.
 The bow of Jonathan never held back from the breast of the foeman, from the blood of the slain;
 the sword of Saul never returned empty to the scabbard.

Delightful and dearly loved were Saul and Jonathan;
 in life, in death, they were not parted.
 They were swifter than eagles,
 stronger than lions.

Weep for Saul, O daughters of Israel!
 who clothed you in scarlet and rich embroideries,
 who spangled your dress with jewels of gold.

25 How are the men of war fallen, fallen on the field!
 O Jonathan, laid low in death!
 26 I grieve for you, Jonathan my brother;
 dear and delightful you were to me;
 your love for me was wonderful,
 surpassing the love of women.
 27 Fallen, fallen are the men of war;
 and their armour left on the field.

2 After this David inquired of the LORD, 'Shall I go up into one of the cities of Judah?' The LORD answered, 'Go.' David asked, 'To which city?',
 2 and the answer came, 'To Hebron.' So David went to Hebron with his two wives, Ahinoam of Jezreel and Abigail widow of Nabal of Carmel.
 3 David also brought the men who had joined him, with their families, and 4 they settled in the city^a of Hebron. The men of Judah came, and there they anointed David king over the house of Judah.

Word came to David that the men of Jabesh-gilead had buried Saul,
 5 and he sent them this message: 'The LORD bless you because you kept 6 faith with Saul your lord and buried him. For this may the LORD keep faith and truth with you, and I for my part will show you favour too, because 7 you have done this. Be strong, be valiant, now that Saul your lord is dead, and the people of Judah have anointed me to be king over them.'

8 Meanwhile Saul's commander-in-chief, Abner son of Ner, had taken 9 Saul's son Ishbosheth, brought him across the Jordan to Mahanaim, and made him king over Gilead, the Asherites, Jezreel, Ephraim, and Benjamin, 10 and all Israel. Ishbosheth was forty years old when he became king over 11 Israel, and he reigned two years. The tribe of Judah, however, followed David. David's rule over Judah in Hebron lasted seven years and a half.

12 Abner son of Ner, with the troops of Saul's son Ishbosheth, marched 13 out from Mahanaim to Gibeon, and Joab son of Zeruiah marched out with David's troops from Hebron. They met at the pool of Gibeon and took up their positions one on one side of the pool and the other on the other side.
 14 Abner said to Joab, 'Let the young men come forward and join in single 15 combat before us.' Joab answered, 'Yes, let them.' So they came up, one by one, and took their places, twelve for Benjamin and for Ishbosheth and 16 twelve from David's men. Each man seized his opponent by the head and thrust his sword into his side; and thus they fell together. That is why that place, which lies in Gibeon, was called the Field of Blades.

17 There ensued a fierce battle that day, and Abner and the men of Israel
 18 were defeated by David's troops. All three sons of Zeruiah were there, Joab, Abishai and Asahel. Asahel, who was swift as a gazelle on the plains, 19 ran straight after Abner, swerving neither to right nor left in his pursuit.
 20 Abner turned and asked, 'Is it you, Asahel?' Asahel answered, 'It is.'
 21 Abner said, 'Turn aside to right or left, tackle one of the young men and win his belt for yourself.' But Asahel would not abandon the pursuit.
 22 Abner again urged him to give it up. 'Why should I kill you?' he said. 'How 23 could I look Joab your brother in the face?' When he still refused to turn aside, Abner struck him in the belly with a back-thrust of his spear ^a so that the spear came out behind him, and he fell dead in his tracks. All who came to the place where Asahel lay dead stopped there. But Joab and Abishai kept up the pursuit of Abner, until, at sunset, they reached the hill of Ammah, opposite Giah on the road leading to the pastures of Gibeon. 24

The Benjamites rallied to Abner and, forming themselves into a single company, took up their stand on the top of the hill of Ammah. ^b Abner called to Joab, 'Must the slaughter go on for ever? Can you not see that it will be all the more bitter in the end? Will you never recall the people from the pursuit of their kinsmen?' Joab answered, 'As God lives, if you had not spoken, the people would not have given up the pursuit till morning.' Then Joab sounded the trumpet, and all the people abandoned the pursuit of the men of Israel and the fighting ceased. Abner and his men moved along the Arabah all that night, crossed the Jordan and went on all the morning till they reached Mahanaim. When Joab returned from the pursuit of Abner, he assembled his troops and found that, besides Asahel, nineteen of David's men were missing. David's forces had routed the Benjamites and the followers of Abner, killing three hundred and sixty of them. They took up Asahel and buried him in his father's tomb at Bethlehem. Joab and his men marched all night, and as day broke they reached Hebron. 25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32

THE WAR BETWEEN THE HOUSES of Saul and David was long drawn out, David growing steadily stronger while the house of Saul became weaker and weaker. 3

Sons were born to David at Hebron. His eldest was Amnon, whose mother was Ahinoam of Jezreel; his second Chileab, whose mother was Abigail widow of Nabal of Carmel; the third Absalom, whose mother was Maacah daughter of Talmai king of Geshur; the fourth Adonijah, whose mother was Haggith; the fifth Shephatiah, whose mother was Abital; and the sixth Ithream, whose mother was David's wife Eglah. These were all born to David at Hebron. 4^c 3 4 5

As the war between the houses of Saul and David went on, Abner made his position gradually stronger in the house of Saul. Now Saul had had a concubine named Rizpah daughter of Aiah. Ishbosheth asked Abner, 'Why have you slept with my father's concubine?' Abner was very angry at this and exclaimed, 'Am I a baboon in the pay of Judah? Up to now I have been loyal to the house of your father Saul, to his brothers and friends, and I have not betrayed you into David's hands; yet you choose this moment to charge me with disloyalty over this woman. But now, so help me God, I will do all I can to bring about what the LORD swore to do for David: I will set to work to bring down the house of Saul and to put David on the throne over Israel and Judah from Dan to Beersheba.' Ishbosheth could not say another word; he was too much afraid of Abner. Then Abner, seeking to make friends where he could, instead of going to David himself sent envoys with this message: 'Let us come to terms, and I will do all I can to bring the whole of Israel over to you.' David sent answer: 'Good, I will 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13

14 come to terms with you, but on this one condition, that you do not come into my presence without bringing Saul's daughter Michal to me.' David also sent messengers to Saul's son Ishbosheth with the demand: 'Hand over 15 to me my wife Michal to whom I was betrothed at the price of a hundred Philistine foreskins.' Thereupon Ishbosheth sent and took her away from 16 her husband, Paltiel son of Laish. Paltiel followed her as far as Bahurim, weeping all the way, until Abner ordered him to go back home, and he went.

17 Abner now approached the elders of Israel and said, 'For some time
18 past you have wanted David for your king; now is the time to act, for this is the word of the LORD about David: "By the hand of my servant David I will deliver my people Israel from the Philistines and from all their 19 enemies."' Abner spoke also to the Benjamites and then went on to report to David at Hebron all that the Israelites and the Benjamites had agreed.
20 When Abner was admitted to David's presence, there were twenty men with him and David gave a feast for them all. Then Abner said to David, 21 'I shall now go and bring the whole of Israel over to your majesty, and they shall make a covenant with you. Then you will be king over a realm after your own heart.' David dismissed Abner, granting him safe conduct.

22 David's men and Joab returned from a raid bringing a great deal of plunder with them, and by this time Abner, after his dismissal, was no 23 longer with David in Hebron. So when Joab and his raiding party arrived, they were greeted with the news that Abner son of Ner had been with the king and had departed under safe conduct. Joab went in to the king and 24 said, 'What have you done? Here you have had Abner with you. How could you let him go? He has got clean away! You know Abner son of Ner:
25 he came meaning to deceive you, to learn all about your movements and to find out what you are doing.' When he left David's presence, Joab sent 26 messengers after Abner and they brought him back from the Pool of Sirah;
but David knew nothing of all this. On Abner's return to Hebron, Joab 27 drew him aside in the gateway, as though to speak privately with him, and there, in revenge for his brother Asahel, he stabbed him in the belly, and he 28 died. When David heard the news he said, 'I and my realm are for ever innocent in the sight of the LORD of the blood of Abner son of Ner. May it 29 recoil upon the head of Joab and upon all his family! May the house of Joab never be free from running sore or foul disease, nor lack a son fit 30 only to ply the distaff or doomed to die by the sword or beg his bread!' So Joab and Abishai his brother slew Abner because he had killed their brother 31 Asahel in battle at Gibeon. Then David ordered Joab and all the people with him to rend their clothes, put on sackcloth and beat their breasts for 32 Abner, and the king himself walked behind the bier. They buried Abner in Hebron and the king wept aloud at the tomb, while all the people wept 33 with him. The king made this lament for Abner:

34 Must Abner die so base a death?
Your hands were not bound,
your feet not thrust into fetters;
you fell as one who falls at a ruffian's hands.

And the people wept for him again.

They came to persuade David to eat something; but it was still day and he swore, 'So help me God! I will not touch food of any kind before sunset.' The people took note of this and approved; indeed, everything the king did pleased them. Everyone throughout Israel knew on that day that the king had had no hand in the murder of Abner son of Ner. The king said to his servants, 'Do you not know that a warrior, a great man, has fallen this day in Israel? King though I am, I feel weak and powerless in face of these ruthless sons of Zeruiah; they are too much for me; the LORD will requite the wrongdoer as he deserves.'

When Saul's son Ishbosheth heard that Abner had been killed in Hebron, his courage failed him and all Israel was dismayed. Now Ishbosheth had two officers, who were captains of raiding parties, and whose names were Baanah and Rechab; they were Benjamites, sons of Rimmon of Beeroth, Beeroth being reckoned part of Benjamin; but the Beerothites had fled to Gittaim, where they have lived ever since.

(Saul's son Jonathan had a son lame in both feet. He was five years old when word of the death of Saul and Jonathan came from Jezreel. His nurse had picked him up and fled, but in her hurry to get away he fell and was crippled. His name was Mephibosheth.)

Rechab and Baanah, the sons of Rimmon of Beeroth, came to the house of Ishbosheth in the heat of the day and went in, while he was taking his midday rest. Now the door-keeper had been sifting wheat, but she had grown drowsy and fallen asleep, so Rechab and his brother Baanah crept in, found their way to the room where he was asleep on the bed, and struck him dead. They cut off his head and took it with them, and, making their way along the Arabah all night, came to Hebron. They brought Ishbosheth's head to David at Hebron and said to the king, 'Here is the head of Ishbosheth son of Saul, your enemy, who sought your life. The LORD has avenged your majesty today on Saul and on his family.' David answered Rechab and his brother Baanah, the sons of Rimmon of Beeroth, with an oath: 'As the LORD lives, who has rescued me from all my troubles! I seized the man who brought me word that Saul was dead and thought it good news; I killed him in Ziklag, and that was how I rewarded him for his news. How much more when ruffians have killed an innocent man on his bed in his own house? Am I not to take vengeance on you now for the blood you have shed, and rid the earth of you?' David gave the word, and the young men killed them; they cut off their hands and feet and hung them up beside the pool in Hebron, but the head of Ishbosheth they took and buried in Abner's tomb at Hebron.

David king in Jerusalem

NOW ALL THE TRIBES OF ISRAEL came to David at Hebron and said to him, 'We are your own flesh and blood. In the past, while Saul was still king over us, you led the forces of Israel to war and you brought them home again. And the LORD said to you, "You shall be shepherd of my

3 people Israel; you shall be their prince.” All the elders of Israel came to 4 the king at Hebron; there David made a covenant with them before the 5 LORD, and they anointed David king over Israel. David came to the throne
 6 at the age of thirty and reigned for forty years. In Hebron he had ruled over 7 Judah for seven years and a half, and for thirty-three years he reigned in 8 Jerusalem over Israel and Judah together.

9 The king and his men went to Jerusalem to attack the Jebusites, whose 10 land it was. The Jebusites said to David, ‘Never shall you come in here;
 11 not till you have disposed of the blind and the lame’, meaning that David 12 should never come in. None the less David did capture the stronghold of 13 Zion, and it is now known as the City of David. David said on that day, 14 ‘Everyone who would kill a Jebusite, let him use his grappling-iron to 15 reach the lame and the blind, David’s bitter enemies.’ That is why they 16 say, ‘No blind or lame man shall come into the LORD’s house.’

17 David took up his residence in the stronghold and called it the City of 18 David. He built the city^a round it, starting at the Millo and working 19 inwards. So David steadily grew stronger, for the LORD the God of Hosts 20 was with him.

21 Hiram king of Tyre sent an embassy to David; he sent cedar logs, and 22 with them carpenters and stonemasons, who built David a house. David 23 knew by now that the LORD had confirmed him as king over Israel and had 24 made his royal power stand higher for the sake of his people Israel.

25 After he had moved from Hebron he took more concubines and wives 26 from Jerusalem; and more sons and daughters were born to him. These 27 are the names of the children born to him in Jerusalem: Shammua, 28 Shobab, Nathan, Solomon, Ibhar, Elishua, Nepheg, Japhia, Elishama, 29 Eliada and Eliphelet.

30 When the Philistines learnt that David had been anointed king over 31 Israel, they came up in force to seek him out. David, hearing of this, took 32 refuge in the stronghold. The Philistines had come and overrun the Vale 33 of Rephaim. So David inquired of the LORD, ‘If I attack the Philistines, 34 wilt thou deliver them into my hands?’ And the LORD answered, ‘Go, I 35 will deliver the Philistines into your hands.’ So he went up and attacked
 36 them at Baal-perazim and defeated them there. ‘The LORD has broken 37 through my enemies’ lines,’ David said, ‘as a river breaks its banks.’ That 38 is why the place was named Baal-perazim.^d The Philistines left their idols
 39 behind them there, and David and his men carried them off.

40 The Philistines made another attack and overran the Vale of Rephaim.
 41 David inquired of the LORD, who said, ‘Do not attack now but wheel round
 42 and take them in the rear opposite the aspens. As soon as you hear a rustling
 43 sound in the tree-tops, then act at once; for the LORD will have gone out 44 before you to defeat the Philistine army.’ David did as the LORD had 45 commanded, and drove the Philistines in flight all the way from Geba to 46 Gezer.

47 After that David again summoned the picked men of Israel, thirty thousand in all, and went with the whole army to Baalath-judah^a to fetch 2^b the Ark of God which bears the name of the LORD of Hosts, who is enthroned upon the cherubim. They mounted the Ark of God on a new cart 3 and conveyed it from the house of Abinadab on the hill, with Uzzah and Ahio, sons of Abinadab, guiding the cart. They took it with the Ark of God 4 upon it from Abinadab's house on the hill, with Ahio walking in front.

 David and all Israel danced for joy before the LORD without restraint to the 5 sound of singing,^c of harps and lutes, of tambourines and castanets and cymbals. But when they came to a certain threshing-floor, the oxen 6 stumbled, and Uzzah reached out to the Ark of God and took hold of it.
 The LORD was angry with Uzzah and struck him down there for his rash 7 act. So he died there beside the Ark of God. David was vexed because the 8 LORD's anger had broken out upon Uzzah, and he called the place Perez-uzzah,^d the name it still bears. David was afraid of the LORD that day and 9 said, 'How can I harbour the Ark of the LORD after this?' He felt he could 10 not take the Ark of the LORD with him to the City of David, but turned aside and carried it to the house of Obed-edom the Gittite. Thus the Ark 11 of the LORD remained at Obed-edom's house for three months, and the LORD blessed Obed-edom and all his family.

When they told David that the LORD had blessed Obed-edom's family 12^e and all that was his because of the Ark of God, he went and brought up the Ark of God from the house of Obed-edom to the City of David with much rejoicing. When the bearers of the Ark of the LORD had gone six 13 steps he sacrificed an ox and a buffalo. David, wearing a linen ephod, danced without restraint before the LORD. He and all the Israelites brought 14 up the Ark of the LORD with shouting and blowing of trumpets. But as the Ark of the LORD was entering the City of David, Saul's daughter Michal 15 looked down through a window and saw King David leaping and capering before the LORD, and she despised him in her heart. When they had brought 16 in the Ark of the LORD, they put it in its place inside the tent that David had pitched for it, and David offered whole-offerings and shared-offerings before the LORD. After David had completed these sacrifices, he blessed the 17 people in the name of the LORD of Hosts and gave food to all the people, a flat loaf of bread, a portion of meat, and a cake of raisins, to every man and woman 18 in the whole gathering of the Israelites. Then all the people went home.
 When David returned to greet his household, Michal, Saul's daughter, 19 came out to meet him and said, 'What a glorious day for the king of Israel, when he exposed his person in the sight of his servants' slave-girls like any 20 empty-headed fool!' David answered Michal, 'But it was done in the presence of the LORD, who chose me instead of your father and his family 21 and appointed me prince over Israel, the people of the LORD. Before the LORD I will dance for joy, yes, and I will earn yet more disgrace and lower 22 myself still more in your eyes. But those girls of whom you speak, they will honour me for it.' Michal, Saul's daughter, had no child to her dying day. 23

¹^a As soon as the king was established in his house and the LORD had given

 'Here I live in a house of cedar, while the Ark of God is housed in curtains.'
³ Nathan answered the king, 'Very well, do whatever you have in mind, for ⁴ the LORD is with you.' But that night the word of the LORD came to Nathan:
⁵ 'Go and say to David my servant, "This is the word of the LORD: Are you ⁶ the man to build me a house to dwell in? Down to this day I have never dwelt in a house since I brought Israel up from Egypt; I made my journey ⁷ in a tent and a tabernacle. Wherever I journeyed with Israel, did I ever ask any of the judges ^b whom I appointed shepherds of my people Israel why ⁸ they had not built me a house of cedar?" Then say this to my servant David:
 "This is the word of the LORD of Hosts: I took you from the pastures, and ⁹ from following the sheep, to be prince over my people Israel. I have been with you wherever you have gone, and have destroyed all the enemies in your path. I will make you a great name among the great ones of the earth.
¹⁰ I will assign a place for my people Israel; there I will plant them, and they shall dwell in their own land. They shall be disturbed no more, never again ¹¹ shall wicked men oppress them as they did in the past, ever since the time when I appointed judges over Israel my people; and I will give you peace from all your enemies. The LORD has told you that he would build up your ¹² royal house. When your life ends and you rest with your forefathers, I will set up one of your family, one of your own children, to succeed you ¹³ and I will establish his kingdom. It is he shall build a house in honour of ¹⁴ my name, and I will establish his royal throne for ever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son. When he does wrong, I will punish him as any ¹⁵ father might, and not spare the rod. My love will never be withdrawn from ¹⁶ him as I withdrew it from Saul, whom I removed from your path. Your family shall be established and your kingdom shall stand for all time in my sight, and your throne shall be established for ever.'"^c

¹⁷ Nathan recounted to David all that had been said to him and all that ¹⁸ had been revealed. Then King David went into the presence of the LORD and took his place there and said, 'What am I, Lord GOD, and what is my ¹⁹ family, that thou hast brought me thus far? It was a small thing in thy sight to have planned for thy servant's house in days long past. But such, ²⁰ O Lord GOD, is the lot of a man embarked on a high career. ^c And now what more can I say? for well thou knowest thy servant David, O Lord ²¹ GOD. Thou hast made good thy word; it was thy purpose to spread thy ²² servant's fame, and so thou hast raised me to thy greatness. Great indeed art thou, O Lord GOD; we have never heard of one like thee; there is no ²³ god but thee. And thy people Israel, to whom can they be compared? Is there any other nation on earth whom thou, O God, hast set out to redeem from slavery to be thy people? Any other for whom thou hast done great and terrible things to win fame for thyself? Any other whom thou hast redeemed for thyself from Egypt by driving out other nations and their ²⁴ gods to make way for them? Thou hast established thy people Israel as ²⁵ thy own for ever, and thou, O LORD, hast become their God. But now,

LORD God, perform what thou hast promised for thy servant and his house, and for all time; make good what thou hast said. May thy fame be great for evermore and let men say, "The LORD of Hosts is God over Israel." So shall the house of thy servant David be established before thee. O LORD of Hosts, God of Israel, thou hast shown me thy purpose, in saying to thy servant, "I will build up your house"; and therefore I have made bold to offer this prayer to thee. Thou, O Lord GOD, art God; thou hast made these noble promises to thy servant, and thy promises come true; be pleased now to bless thy servant's house that it may continue always before thee; thou, O Lord GOD, hast promised, and thy blessing shall rest upon thy servant's house for evermore.^a

After this David defeated the Philistines and conquered them, and took from them Metheg-ha-ammah. He defeated the Moabites, and he made them lie along the ground and measured them off with a length of cord; for every two lengths that were to be put to death one full length was spared. The Moabites became subject to him and paid him tribute. David also defeated Hadadezer the Rehobite, king of Zobah, who was on his way to re-erect his monument of victory by^b the river Euphrates. From him David captured seventeen hundred horse and twenty thousand foot; he hamstrung all the chariot-horses, except a hundred which he retained. When the Aramaeans of Damascus came to the help of Hadadezer king of Zobah, David destroyed twenty-two thousand of them, and established garrisons among these Aramaeans; they became subject to him and paid him tribute. Thus the LORD gave David victory wherever he went. David took the gold quivers borne by Hadadezer's servants and brought them to Jerusalem; and he also took a great quantity of bronze^c from Hadadezer's cities, Betah and Berothai.

When Toi king of Hamath heard that David had defeated the entire army of Hadadezer, he sent his son Joram to King David to greet him and to congratulate him on defeating Hadadezer in battle (for Hadadezer had been at war with Toi); and he brought with him vessels of silver, gold, and copper, which King David dedicated to the LORD. He dedicated also the silver and gold taken from all the nations he had subdued, from Edom and Moab, from the Ammonites, the Philistines, and Amalek, as well as part of the spoil taken from Hadadezer the Rehobite, king of Zobah.

David made a great name for himself by the slaughter of eighteen thousand Edomites in the Valley of Salt, and on returning he stationed garrisons throughout Edom, and all the Edomites were subject to him. Thus the LORD gave victory to David wherever he went.

David ruled over the whole of Israel and maintained law and justice among all his people. Joab son of Zeruiah was in command of the army; Jehoshaphat son of Ahilud was secretary of state; Zadok and Abiathar son of Ahimelech, son of Ahitub,^e were priests; Seraiah was adjutant-general;

- 18 Benaiah son of Jehoiada commanded the Kerethite and Pelethite guards. David's sons were priests.
- 9 David asked, 'Is any member of Saul's family left, to whom I can show true kindness for Jonathan's sake?' There was a servant of Saul's family named Ziba; and he was summoned to David. The king asked, 'Are you Ziba?', and he answered, 'Your servant, sir.' So the king said, 'Is no member of Saul's family still alive to whom I may show the kindness that God requires?' 'Yes,' said Ziba, 'there is a son of Jonathan still alive; he is a cripple, lame in both feet.' 'Where is he?' said the king, and Ziba answered, 'He is staying with Machir son of Ammiel in Lo-debar.'
- 5 So the king sent and fetched him from Lo-debar, from the house of 6 Machir son of Ammiel, and when Mephibosheth, son of Jonathan and Saul's grandson, entered David's presence, he prostrated himself and did obeisance. David said to him, 'Mephibosheth,' and he answered, 'Your servant, sir.' Then David said, 'Do not be afraid; I mean to show you kindness for your father Jonathan's sake, and I will give you back the whole estate of your grandfather Saul; you shall have a place for yourself at my table.' So Mephibosheth prostrated himself again and said, 'Who am I that you should spare a thought for a dead dog like me?' Then David summoned Saul's servant Ziba to his presence and said to him, 'I assign to your master's grandson all the property that belonged to Saul and his family. You and your sons and your slaves must cultivate the land and bring in the harvest to provide for your master's household, but Mephibosheth your master's grandson shall have a place at my table.' This man
11 Ziba had fifteen sons and twenty slaves. Then Ziba answered the king, 'I will do all that your majesty commands.' So Mephibosheth took his 12 place in the royal household like one of the king's sons. He had a young son, named Mica; and the members of Ziba's household were all Mephibosheth's servants, while Mephibosheth lived in Jerusalem and had his regular place at the king's table, crippled as he was in both feet.
- 1^a Some time afterwards the king of the Ammonites died and was succeeded
2 by his son Hanun. David said, 'I must keep up the same loyal friendship with Hanun son of Nahash as his father showed me', and he sent a mission to condole with him on the death of his father. But when David's envoys
3 entered the country of the Ammonites, the Ammonite princes said to Hanun their lord, 'Do you suppose David means to do honour to your father when he sends you his condolences? These men of his are spies whom he has sent to find out how to overthrow the city.' So Hanun took
4 David's servants, and he shaved off half their beards, cut off half their garments up to the buttocks, and dismissed them. When David heard
5 how they had been treated, he sent to meet them, for they were deeply humiliated, and ordered them to wait in Jericho and not to return until 6 their beards had grown again. The Ammonites knew that they had fallen into bad odour with David, so they hired the Aramaeans of Beth-rehob and of Zobah to come to their help with twenty thousand infantry; they also hired the king of Maacah with a thousand men, and twelve thousand men
7 from Tob. When David heard of it, he sent out Joab and all the fighting men. The Ammonites came and took up their position at the entrance to the city, while the Aramaeans of Zobah and of Rehob and the men of Tob and Maacah took up theirs in the open country. When Joab saw that he was threatened both front and rear, he detailed some picked Israelite troops and drew them up facing the Aramaeans. The rest of his forces he put under his brother Abishai, who took up a position facing the Ammonites. 'If the Aramaeans prove too strong for me,' he said, 'you must come to my relief; and if the Ammonites prove too strong for you, I will come to yours. Courage! Let us fight bravely for our people and for the cities ^a of our God. And the LORD's will be done.' But when Joab and his men came to close quarters with the Aramaeans, they put them to flight; and when the Ammonites saw them in flight, they too fled before Abishai and entered the city. Then Joab returned from the battle against the Ammonites and came to Jerusalem. The Aramaeans saw that they had been worsted by Israel; but they rallied their forces, and Hadadezer sent to summon other Aramaeans from the Great Bend of the Euphrates, and they advanced to Helam under Shobach, commander of Hadadezer's army. Their movement was reported to David, who immediately mustered all the forces of Israel, crossed the Jordan and advanced to meet them at Helam. There the Aramaeans took up positions facing David and engaged him, but were put to flight by Israel. David slew seven hundred Aramaeans in chariots and forty thousand horsemen, mortally wounding Shobach, who died on the field. When all the vassal kings of Hadadezer saw that they had been worsted by Israel, they sued for peace and submitted to the Israelites. The Aramaeans never dared help the Ammonites again.

AT THE TURN OF THE YEAR, when kings take the field, David sent Joab out with his other officers and all the Israelite forces, and they ravaged Ammon and laid siege to Rabbah, while David remained in Jerusalem. One evening David got up from his couch and, as he walked about on the roof of the palace, he saw from there a woman bathing, and she was very beautiful. He sent to inquire who she was, and the answer came, 'It must be Bathsheba daughter of Eliam and wife of Uriah the Hittite.' So he sent messengers to fetch her, and when she came to him, he had intercourse with her, though she was still being purified after her period, and then she went home. She conceived, and sent word to David that she was pregnant. David ordered Joab to send Uriah the Hittite to him. So Joab sent him to David, and when he arrived, David asked him for news of Joab and the troops and how the campaign was going; and then said to him, 'Go down to your house and wash your feet after your journey.' As he left the palace, a present from the king followed him. But Uriah did not return to his house; he lay down by the palace gate with the king's slaves. David heard that Uriah had not gone home, and said to him, 'You have had a long journey, why did you not go home?' Uriah answered David, 'Israel and Judah are under canvas, ^b and so is the Ark, and my lord Joab and your majesty's officers are camping in the open; how can I go home to eat and drink and to sleep with my wife? By your life, I cannot do this!' David then said to Uriah, 'Stay here another day, and tomorrow I will let you go.' So Uriah stayed in Jerusalem that 13 day. The next day David invited him to eat and drink with him and made him drunk. But in the evening Uriah went out to lie down in his blanket^a among the king's slaves and did not go home.

14 The following morning David wrote a letter to Joab and sent Uriah with
it. He wrote in the letter, 'Put Uriah opposite the enemy where the fighting 15 is fiercest and then fall back, and leave him to meet his death.' Joab had 16 been watching the city, and he stationed Uriah at a point where he knew they would put up a stout fight. The men of the city sallied out and engaged 17 Joab, and some of David's guards fell; Uriah the Hittite was also killed.
19 Joab sent David a dispatch with all the news of the battle and gave the messenger these instructions: 'When you have finished your report to the 20 king, if he is angry and asks, "Why did you go so near the city during the fight? You must have known there would be shooting from the wall.
21 Remember who killed Abimelech son of Jerubbesheth. It was a woman who threw down an upper millstone on to him from the wall of Thebez and killed him! Why did you go so near the wall?"—if he asks this, then tell him, "Your servant Uriah the Hittite also is dead."' "

22 So the messenger set out and, when he came to David, he made his report as Joab had instructed. David was angry with Joab and said to the messenger, 'Why did you go so near the city during the fight? You must have known you would be struck down from the wall. Remember who killed Abimelech son of Jerubbesheth. Was it not a woman who threw down an upper millstone on to him from the wall of Thebez and killed him? Why 23 did you go near the wall?' He answered, 'The enemy massed against us and sallied out into the open; we pressed them back as far as the gateway.
24 There the archers shot down at us from the wall and some of your majesty's 25 men fell; and your servant Uriah the Hittite is dead.' David said to the man, 'Give Joab this message: "Do not let this distress you—there is no knowing where the sword will strike; press home your attack on the city, and you will take it and raze it to the ground"; and tell him to take heart.'

26 When Uriah's wife heard that her husband was dead, she mourned for 27 him; and when the period of mourning was over, David sent for her and brought her into his house. She became his wife and bore him a son. But what David had done was wrong in the eyes of the LORD.

12 The LORD sent Nathan the prophet to David, and when he entered his presence, he said to him, 'There were once two men in the same city, one 23 rich and the other poor. The rich man had large flocks and herds, but the poor man had nothing of his own except one little ewe lamb. He reared it himself, and it grew up in his home with his own sons. It ate from his dish, drank from his cup and nestled in his arms; it was like a daughter to 4 him. One day a traveller came to the rich man's house, and he, too mean to take something from his own flocks and herds to serve to his guest, took 5 the poor man's lamb and served up that.' David was very angry, and burst
6 out, 'As the LORD lives, the man who did this deserves to die! He shall pay for the lamb four times over, because he has done this and shown no pity.'

7 Then Nathan said to David, 'You are the man. This is the word of the LORD

^a in his blanket: or on his pallet.

the God of Israel to you: "I anointed you king over Israel, I rescued you from the power of Saul, I gave you your master's daughter ^a and his wives to be your own, I gave you the daughters of Israel and Judah; and, had this not been enough, I would have added other favours as great. Why then have you flouted the word of the LORD by doing what is wrong in my eyes? You have struck down Uriah the Hittite with the sword; the man himself you murdered by the sword of the Ammonites, and you have stolen his wife. Now, therefore, since you have despised me and taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to be your own wife, your family shall never again have rest from the sword." This is the word of the LORD: "I will bring trouble upon you from within your own family; I will take your wives and give them to another man before your eyes, and he will lie with them in broad daylight. What you did was done in secret; but I will do this in the light of day for all Israel to see." David said to Nathan, 'I have sinned against the LORD.' Nathan answered him, 'The LORD has laid on another the consequences of your sin: you shall not die, but, because in this you have shown your contempt for the LORD, ^b the boy that will be born to you shall die.'

When Nathan had gone home, the LORD struck the boy whom Uriah's wife had borne to David, and he was very ill. David prayed to God for the child; he fasted and went in and spent the night fasting, lying on the ground. The older men of his household tried to get him to rise from the ground, but he refused and would eat no food with them. On the seventh day the boy died, and David's servants were afraid to tell him. 'While the boy was alive,' they said, 'we spoke to him, and he did not listen to us; how can we now tell him that the boy is dead? He may do something desperate.' But David saw his servants whispering among themselves and guessed that the boy was dead. He asked, 'Is the boy dead?', and they answered, 'He is dead.' Then David rose from the ground, washed and anointed himself, and put on fresh clothes; he entered the house of the LORD and prostrated himself there. Then he went home, asked for food to be brought, and when it was ready, he ate it. His servants asked him, 'What is this? While the boy lived you fasted and wept for him, but now that he is dead you rise up and eat.' He answered, 'While the boy was still alive I fasted and wept, thinking, "It may be that the LORD will be gracious to me, and the boy may live." But now that he is dead, why should I fast? Can I bring him back again? I shall go to him; he will not come back to me.' David consoled Bathsheba his wife; he went to her and had intercourse with her, and she gave birth to a son and called him Solomon. And because the LORD loved him, he sent word through Nathan the prophet that for the LORD's sake he should be given the name Jedidiah. ^c

Joab attacked the Ammonite city of Rabbah and took the King's Pool. He sent messengers to David with this report: 'I have attacked Rabbah and have taken the pool. You had better muster the rest of the army yourself, besiege the city and take it; otherwise I shall take the city and the name to be proclaimed over it will be mine.' David accordingly mustered his whole forces, marched to Rabbah, attacked it and took it. He took the crown from the head of Milcom, which weighed a talent of gold and was set with a precious stone, and this he placed on his own head. He also removed a great quantity of booty from the city; he took its inhabitants and set them to work with saws and other iron tools, sharp and toothed, and made them work in the brick-kilns. David did this to all the cities of the Ammonites; then he and all his people returned to Jerusalem.

Absalom's rebellion and other conflicts

NOW DAVID'S SON ABSALOM had a beautiful sister named Tamar, and Amnon, another of David's sons, fell in love with her. Amnon was so distressed that he fell sick with love for his half-sister; for he thought it an impossible thing to approach her since she was a virgin. But he had a friend named Jonadab, son of David's brother Shimeah, who was a very shrewd man. He said to Amnon, 'Why are you so low-spirited morning after morning, my lord? Will you not tell me?' So Amnon told him that he was in love with Tamar, his brother Absalom's sister. Jonadab said to him, 'Take to your bed and pretend to be ill. When your father comes to visit you, say to him, "Please let my sister Tamar come and give me my food. Let her prepare it in front of me, so that I may watch her and then take it from her own hands."' So Amnon lay down and pretended to be ill. When the king came to visit him, he said, 'Sir, let my sister Tamar come and make a few cakes in front of me, and serve them to me with her own hands.' So David sent a message to Tamar in the palace: 'Go to your brother Amnon's quarters and prepare a meal for him.' Tamar came to her brother and found him lying down; she took some dough and kneaded it, made the cakes in front of him and baked them. Then she took the pan and turned them out before him. But Amnon refused to eat and ordered everyone out of the room. When they had all left, he said to Tamar, 'Bring the food over to the recess so that I may eat from your own hands.' Tamar took the cakes she had made and brought them to Amnon in the recess. But when she offered them to him, he caught hold of her and said, 'Come to bed with me, sister.' But she answered, 'No, brother, do not dishonour me, we do not do such things in Israel; do not behave like a beast. Where could I go and hide my disgrace?—and you would sink as low as any beast in Israel. Why not speak to the king for me? He will not refuse you leave to marry me.' He would not listen, but overpowered her, dishonoured her and raped her.

Then Amnon was filled with utter hatred for her; his hatred was stronger than the love he had felt, and he said to her, 'Get up and go.' She answered, 'No. It is wicked to send me away. This is harder to bear than all you have done to me.' He would not listen to her, but summoned the boy who attended him and said, 'Get rid of this woman, put her out and bolt the door after her.' She had on a long, sleeved robe, the usual dress of unmarried princesses; and the boy turned her out and bolted the door. Tamar threw ashes over her head, rent the long, sleeved robe that she was wearing, put her hands on her head and went away, sobbing as she went. Her brother Absalom asked her, 'Has your brother Amnon been with you? Keep this to yourself, he is your brother; do not take it to heart.' So Tamar remained in her brother Absalom's house, desolate. When King David heard the whole story he was very angry; but he would not hurt Amnon because he was his eldest son and he loved him. Absalom did not speak a single word to Amnon, friendly or unfriendly; he hated him for having dishonoured his sister Tamar.

Two years later Absalom invited all the king's sons to his sheep-shearing at Baal-hazor, near Ephron. ^a He approached the king and said, 'Sir, I am shearing; will your majesty and your servants come?' The king answered, 'No, my son, we must not all come and be a burden to you.' Absalom pressed him, but David was still unwilling to go and dismissed him with his blessing. But Absalom said, 'If you cannot, may my brother Amnon come with us?' 'Why should he go with you?' the king asked; but Absalom pressed him again, so he let Amnon and all the other princes go with him.

Then Absalom prepared a feast fit for a king. He gave his servants these orders: 'Bide your time, and when Amnon is merry with wine I shall say to you, "Strike." Then kill Amnon. You have nothing to fear, these are my orders; be bold and resolute.' Absalom's servants did as he had told them, whereupon all the king's sons mounted their mules in haste and set off for home.

While they were on their way, a rumour reached David that Absalom had murdered all the royal princes and that not one was left alive. The king stood up and rent his clothes and then threw himself on the ground; all his servants were standing round him with their clothes rent. Then Jonadab, son of David's brother Shimeah, said, 'Your majesty must not think that they have killed all the young princes; only Amnon is dead; Absalom has looked black ever since Amnon ravished his sister Tamar. Your majesty must not pay attention to a mere rumour that all the princes are dead; only Amnon is dead.'

Absalom made good his escape. Meanwhile the sentry looked up and saw a crowd of people coming down the hill from the direction of Horonaim. ^b He came and reported to the king, 'I see men coming down the hill from Horonaim.' Then Jonadab said to the king, 'Here come the royal princes, just as I said they would.' As he finished speaking, the princes came in and broke into loud lamentations; the king and all his servants also wept bitterly.

But Absalom went to take refuge with Talmai son of Ammihur king of Geshur; and for a long while the king mourned for Amnon. Absalom, having escaped to Geshur, stayed there for three years; and David's heart went out to him with longing, for he became reconciled to the death of Amnon.

Joab son of Zeruah saw that the king's heart was set on Absalom, so he sent to Tekoah and fetched a wise woman. He said to her, 'Pretend to be a mourner; put on mourning, go without anointing yourself, and behave like a bereaved woman who has been long in mourning. Then go to the king and repeat what I tell you.' He then told her exactly what she was to say.

4 When the woman from Tekoah came into the king's presence, she threw herself, face downwards, on the ground and did obeisance, and cried, 5 'Help, your majesty!' The king asked, 'What is it?' She answered, 'O sir, 6 I am a widow; my husband is dead. I had two sons; they came to blows out in the country where there was no one to part them, and one of them struck 7 the other and killed him. Now, sir, the kinsmen have risen against me and they all cry, "Hand over the man who has killed his brother, so that we can put him to death for taking his brother's life, and so cut off the succession."
If they do this, they will stamp out my last live ember and leave my husband 8 no name and no descendant upon earth.' 'Go home,' said the king to the 9 woman, 'and I will settle your case.' But the woman continued, 'The guilt be on me, your majesty, and on my father's house; let the king and his 10 throne be blameless.' The king said, 'If anyone says anything more to you, 11 bring him to me and he shall never molest you again.' Then the woman went on, 'Let your majesty call upon the LORD your God, to prevent his kinsmen bound to vengeance from doing their worst and destroying my son.' The king swore, 'As the LORD lives, not a hair of your son's head shall fall to the ground.'

12 The woman then said, 'May I add one word more, your majesty?' 'Say 13 on', said the king. So she continued, 'How then could it enter your head to do this same wrong to God's people? Out of your own mouth, your majesty, you condemn yourself: you have refused to bring back the man 14 you have banished. We shall all die; we shall be like water that is spilt on the ground and lost; but God will spare the man who does not set himself 15 to keep the outlaw in banishment. I came to say this to your majesty because the people have threatened me. I thought, "If I can only speak to the 16 king, perhaps he will attend to my case; for he will listen, and he will save me from the man who is seeking to cut off me and my son together from 17 Israel, God's own possession." I thought too that the words of my lord the king would be a comfort to me; for your majesty is like the angel of God and can decide between right and wrong. The LORD your God be with 18 you!' Then the king said to the woman, 'Tell me no lies: I shall now ask you 19 a question.' 'Speak on, your majesty', she said. So he asked, 'Is the hand of Joab behind you in all this?' 'Your life upon it, sir!' she answered;
'when your majesty asks a question, there is no way round it, right or left.
Yes, your servant Joab did prompt me; it was he who put the whole story 20 into my mouth. He did it to give a new turn to this affair. Your majesty is as wise as the angel of God and knows all that goes on in the land.'

21 The king said to Joab, 'You have my consent; go and fetch back the 22 young man Absalom.' Then Joab humbly prostrated himself, took leave of the king with a blessing and said, 'Now I know that I have found favour 23 with your majesty, because you have granted my humble petition.' Joab 24 went at once to Geshur and brought Absalom to Jerusalem, but the king said, 'Let him go to his own quarters; he shall not come into my presence.'

25 So Absalom went to his own quarters and did not enter the king's presence.
No one in all Israel was so greatly admired for his beauty as Absalom;

he was without flaw from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot. His hair, when he cut his hair (as he had to do every year, for he found it heavy), weighed two hundred shekels by the royal standard. Three sons were born to Absalom, and a daughter named Tamar, who was a very beautiful woman.

Absalom remained in Jerusalem for two whole years without entering the king's presence. He summoned Joab to send a message by him to the king, but Joab refused to come; he sent for him a second time, but he still refused. Then Absalom said to his servants, 'You know that Joab has a field next to mine with barley growing in it; go and set fire to it.' So Absalom's servants set fire to the field. Joab promptly came to Absalom in his own quarters and said to him, 'Why have your servants set fire to my field?' Absalom answered Joab, 'I had sent for you to come here, so that I could ask you to give the king this message from me: "Why did I leave Geshur? It would be better for me if I were still there. Let me now come into your majesty's presence and, if I have done any wrong, put me to death."' When Joab went to the king and told him, he summoned Absalom, who came and prostrated himself humbly before the king; and he greeted Absalom with a kiss.

AFTER THIS, ABSALOM PROVIDED himself with a chariot and horses and an escort of fifty men. He made it a practice to rise early and stand beside the road which runs through the city gate. He would hail every man who had a case to bring before the king for judgement and would ask him what city he came from. When he answered, 'I come, sir, from such and such a tribe of Israel', Absalom would say to him, 'I can see that you have a very good case, but you will get no hearing from the king.' And he would add, 'If only I were appointed judge in the land, it would be my business to see that everyone who brought a suit or a claim got justice from me.' Whenever a man approached to prostrate himself, Absalom would stretch out his hand, take hold of him and kiss him. By behaving like this to every Israelite who sought the king's justice, Absalom stole the affections of the Israelites.

At the end of four years, Absalom said to the king, 'May I have leave now to go to Hebron to fulfil a vow there that I made to the LORD? For when I lived in Geshur, in Aram, I made this vow: "If the LORD brings me back to Jerusalem, I will become a worshipper of the LORD in Hebron."' The king answered, 'Certainly you may go'; so he set off for Hebron at once. Absalom sent runners through all the tribes of Israel with this message: 'As soon as you hear the sound of the trumpet, then say, "Absalom is king in Hebron."' Two hundred men accompanied Absalom from Jerusalem; they were invited and went in all innocence, knowing nothing of the affair. Absalom also sent to summon Ahithophel the Gilonite, David's counsellor, from Giloh his city, where he was offering the customary sacrifices. The conspiracy gathered strength, and Absalom's supporters increased in number.

When news reached David that the men of Israel had transferred their allegiance to Absalom, he said to those who were with him in Jerusalem,

15 'We must get away at once; or there will be no escape from Absalom for any of us. Make haste, or else he will soon be upon us and bring disaster on us, showing no mercy to anyone in the city.' The king's servants said to him, 'As your majesty thinks best; we are ready.'

16 When the king departed, all his household followed him except ten concubines, whom he left in charge of the palace. At the Far House the king and all the people who were with him halted. His own servants then stood^a beside him, while the Kerethite and Pelethite guards and Ittai^b with the six hundred Gittites under him marched past the king. The king said to Ittai the Gittite, 'Are you here too? Why are you coming with us? Go back and stay with the new king, for you are a foreigner and, what is more, an exile from your own country. You came only yesterday, and today must you be compelled to share my wanderings? I do not know where I am going. Go back home and take your countrymen with you; and may the LORD ever be your steadfast friend.' Ittai swore to the king, 'As the LORD lives, your life upon it, wherever you may be, in life or in death, I, your servant, will be there.' David said to Ittai, 'It is well, march on!' So Ittai the Gittite marched on with his whole company and all the dependants who were with him. The whole country-side re-echoed with their weeping. And the king remained standing^c while all the people crossed the gorge of the Kidron before him, by way of the olive-tree in the wilderness.^d

24 Zadok also was there with all the Levites; they were carrying the Ark of the Covenant of God, which they set down beside Abiathar^e until all the people had passed out of the city. But the king said to Zadok, 'Take the Ark of God back to the city. If I find favour with the LORD, he will bring me back and will let me see the Ark and its dwelling-place again. But if he says he does not want me, then here I am; let him do what he pleases with me.' The king went on to say to Zadok the priest, 'Can you make good use of your eyes? You may safely go back to the city, you and Abiathar,^f and take with you the two young men, Ahimaaz your son and Abiathar's son Jonathan. Do not forget: I will linger at the Fords of the Wilderness until you can send word to me.' Then Zadok and Abiathar took the Ark of God back to Jerusalem and stayed there.

30 David wept as he went up the slope of the Mount of Olives; he was bare-headed and went bare-foot. The people with him all had their heads uncovered and wept as they went. David had been told that Ahithophel was among the conspirators with Absalom, and he prayed, 'Frustrate, O LORD, the counsel of Ahithophel.'

32 As David was approaching the top of the ridge where it was the custom to prostrate oneself to God, Hushai the Archite was there to meet him with his tunic rent and earth on his head. David said to him, 'If you come with me you will only be a hindrance; but you can help me to frustrate Ahithophel's plans if you go back to the city and say to Absalom, "I will be your majesty's servant; up to now I have been your father's servant, and now and Abiathar; tell them everything that you hear in the king's household. 36

They have with them Zadok's son Ahimaaz and Abiathar's son Jonathan, 37 and through them you may pass on to me everything you hear.' So Hushai, David's friend, came to the city as Absalom was entering Jerusalem.

When David had moved on a little from the top of the ridge, he was met 16
by Ziba the servant of Mephibosheth, who had with him a pair of asses saddled and loaded with two hundred loaves, a hundred clusters of raisins, a hundred bunches of summer fruit, and a flagon of wine. The king said 2 to him, 'What are you doing with these?' Ziba answered, 'The asses are for the king's family to ride on, the bread and the summer fruit are for the servants to eat, and the wine for anyone who becomes exhausted in the wilderness.' The king asked, 'Where is your master's grandson?' 'He is 3 staying in Jerusalem,' said Ziba, 'for he thought that the Israelites might now restore to him his grandfather's throne.' The king said to Ziba, 'You 4 shall have everything that belongs to Mephibosheth.' Ziba said, 'I am your humble servant, sir; may I continue to stand well with you.'

As King David approached Bahurim, a man of Saul's family, whose 5 name was Shimei son of Gera, came out, cursing as he came. He showered 6 stones right and left on David and on all the king's servants and on everyone, soldiers and people alike. This is what Shimei said as he cursed him: 7
'Get out, get out, you scoundrel! you man of blood! The LORD has taken 8 vengeance on you for the blood of the house of Saul whose throne you stole, and he has given the kingdom to your son Absalom. You murderer, see how your crimes have overtaken you!'

Then Abishai son of Zeruiah said to the king, 'Why let this dead dog 9 curse your majesty? I will go across and knock off his head.' But the king 10 said, 'What has this to do with you, you sons of Zeruiah? If he curses and if the LORD has told him to curse David, who can question it?' David said 11 to Abishai and to all his servants, 'If my son, my own son, is out to kill me, who can wonder at this Benjamite? Let him be, let him curse; for the LORD 12 has told him to do it. But perhaps the LORD will mark my sufferings and bestow a blessing on me in place of the curse laid on me this day.' David 13 and his men continued on their way, and Shimei moved along the ridge of the hill parallel to David's path, cursing as he went and hurling stones across the valley at him and kicking up the dust. When the king and all the 14 people with him reached the Jordan, they were worn out; and they refreshed themselves there.

By now Absalom and all his Israelites had reached Jerusalem, and 15
Ahitophel with him. When Hushai the Archite, David's friend, met 16
Absalom he said to him, 'Long live the king! Long live the king!' But 17 Absalom retorted, 'Is this your loyalty to your friend? Why did you not go with him?' Hushai answered Absalom, 'Because I mean to attach myself 18 to the man chosen by the LORD, by this people, and by all the men of Israel, and with him I will remain. After all, whom ought I to serve? Should I not 19 serve the son? I will serve you as I have served your father.' Then Absalom 20 said to Ahithophel, 'Give us your advice: how shall we act?' Ahithophel 21 answered, 'Have intercourse with your father's concubines whom he left in charge of the palace. Then all Israel will come to hear that you have given great cause of offence to your father, and this will confirm the resolution of your followers.' So they set up a tent for Absalom on the roof, and he lay with his father's concubines in the sight of all Israel. In those days a man would seek counsel of Ahithophel as readily as he might make an inquiry of the word of God; that was how Ahithophel's counsel was esteemed by David and Absalom.

Ahithophel said to Absalom, 'Let me pick twelve thousand men, and I will pursue David tonight. I shall overtake him when he is tired and dispirited; I will cut him off from his people and they will all scatter; and I shall kill no one but the king. I will bring all the people over to you as a bride is brought to her husband. It is only one man's life that you are seeking; the rest of the people will be unharmed.' Absalom and all the elders of Israel approved of Ahithophel's advice; but Absalom said, 'Summon Hushai the Archite and let us hear what he too has to say.' Hushai came, and Absalom told him all that Ahithophel had said and asked him, 'Shall we do what he says? If not, say what you think.'

Hushai said to Absalom, 'For once the counsel that Ahithophel has given is not good. You know', he went on, 'that your father and the men with him are hardened warriors and savage as a bear in the wilds robbed of her cubs. Your father is an old campaigner and will not spend the night with the main body; even now he will be lying hidden in a pit or in some such place. Then if any of your men are killed at the outset, anyone who hears the news will say, "Disaster has overtaken the followers of Absalom." The courage of the most resolute and lion-hearted will melt away, for all Israel knows that your father is a man of war and has determined men with him. My advice is this. Wait until the whole of Israel, from Dan to Beersheba, is gathered about you, countless as grains of sand on the sea-shore, and then you shall march with them in person. Then we shall come upon him somewhere, wherever he may be, and descend on him like dew falling on the ground, and not a man of his family or of his followers will be left alive. If he retreats into a city, all Israel will bring ropes to that city, and we will drag it into a ravine until not a stone can be found on the site.' Absalom and all the men of Israel said, 'Hushai the Archite gives us better advice than Ahithophel.' It was the LORD's purpose to frustrate Ahithophel's good advice and so bring disaster upon Absalom.

Hushai told Zadok and Abiathar the priests all the advice that Ahithophel had given to Absalom and the elders of Israel, and also his own. 'Now send quickly to David,' he said, 'and warn him not to spend the night at the Fords of the Wilderness but to cross the river at once, before a blow can be struck at the king and his followers.' Jonathan and Ahimaaz were waiting at En-rogel, and a servant girl would go and tell them what happened and they would pass it on to King David; for they could not risk being seen entering the city. But this time a lad saw them and told Absalom; so the two of them hurried to the house of a man in Bahurim. He had a pit in his courtyard, and they climbed down into it. The man's wife took a covering, spread it over the mouth of the pit and strewed grain over it, and no one was any the wiser. Absalom's servants came to the house and asked the woman, 'Where are Ahimaaz and Jonathan?' She answered, 'They went beyond the pool.' The men searched but could not find them; so they went back to Jerusalem. When they had gone the two climbed out of the pit and went off to report to King David and said, 'Over the water at once, make haste!', and they told him Ahithophel's plan against him. So David and all his company began at once to cross the Jordan; by daybreak there was not one who had not reached the other bank.

When Ahithophel saw that his advice had not been taken he saddled his ass, went straight home to his own city, gave his last instructions to his household, and hanged himself. So he died and was buried in his father's grave.

By the time that Absalom had crossed the Jordan with the Israelites, David was already at Mahanaim. Absalom had appointed Amasa as commander-in-chief instead of Joab; he was the son of a man named Ithra, an Ishmaelite, by Abigail daughter of Nahash and sister to Joab's mother Zeruiah. The Israelites and Absalom camped in the district of Gilead. When David came to Mahanaim, he was met by Shobi son of Nahash from the Ammonite town Rabbah, Machir son of Ammiel from Lo-debar, and Barzillai the Gileadite from Rogelim, bringing mattresses and blankets, bowls and jugs.^a They brought also wheat and barley, meal and parched grain, beans and lentils, honey and curds, sheep and fat cattle, and offered them to David and his people to eat, knowing that the people must be hungry and thirsty and weary in the wilderness.

David mustered the people who were with him, and appointed officers over units of a thousand and a hundred. Then he divided the army in three, one division under the command of Joab, one under Joab's brother Abishai son of Zeruiah, and the third under Ittai the Gittite. The king announced to the army that he was coming out himself with them to battle. But they said, 'No, you must not come out; if we turn and run, no one will take any notice, nor will they, even if half of us are killed; but you are worth ten thousand of us, and it would be better now for you to remain in the city in support.' 'I will do what you think best', answered the king; and he then stood beside the gate, and the army marched past in their units of a thousand and a hundred. The king gave orders to Joab, Abishai, and Ittai: 'Deal gently with the young man Absalom for my sake.' The whole army heard the king giving all his officers this order to spare Absalom.

The army took the field against the Israelites and the battle was fought in the forest of Ephron.^b There the Israelites were routed before the onslaught of David's men; so great was the rout that twenty thousand men fell that day. The fighting spread over the whole country-side, and the forest took toll of more people that day than the sword.

Now some of David's men caught sight of Absalom. He was riding a mule and, as it passed beneath a great oak,^c his head was caught in its boughs; he found himself in mid air and the mule went on from under him. One of the men who saw it went and told Joab, 'I saw Absalom hanging from an oak.' While the man was telling him, Joab broke in, 'You saw him?'

Why did you not strike him to the ground then and there? I would have given you ten pieces of silver and a belt.' The man answered, 'If you were put in my hands a thousand pieces of silver, I would not lift a finger against the king's son; for we all heard the king giving orders to you and Abishai and Ittai that whoever finds himself near the young man Absalom must take great care of him. If I had dealt him a treacherous blow, the king would soon have known, and you would have kept well out of it.' 'That is a lie!' said Joab. 'I will make a start and show you.'^a So he picked up three stout sticks and drove them against Absalom's chest while he was held fast in the tree and still alive. Then ten young men who were Joab's armour-bearers closed in on Absalom, struck at him and killed him. Joab sounded the trumpet, and the army came back from the pursuit of Israel because he had called it off. They took Absalom's body and flung it into a great pit in the forest, and raised over it a huge pile of stones. The Israelites all fled to their homes.

The pillar in the King's Vale had been set up by Absalom in his lifetime, for he said, 'I have no son to carry on my name.' He had named the pillar after himself; and to this day it is called Absalom's Monument.

Ahimaaz son of Zadok said, 'Let me run and take the news to the king that the LORD has avenged him and delivered him from his enemies.' But Joab replied, 'This is no day for you to be the bearer of news. Another day you may have news to carry, but not today, because the king's son is dead.' Joab told a Cushite to go and report to the king what he had seen. The Cushite bowed low before Joab and set off running. Ahimaaz pleaded again with Joab, 'Come what may,' he said, 'let me run after the Cushite.' 'Why should you, my son?' asked Joab. 'You will get no reward for your news.' 'Come what may,' he said, 'I will run.' 'Go, then,' said Joab. So Ahimaaz ran by the road through the Plain of the Jordan and outstripped the Cushite.

David was sitting between the two gates when the watchman went up to the roof of the gatehouse by the wall and, looking out, saw a man running alone. The watchman called to the king and told him. 'If he is alone,' said the king, 'then he has news.' The man came nearer and nearer. Then the watchman saw another man running. He called down to the gate-keeper and said, 'Look, there is another man running alone.' The king said, 'He too brings news.' The watchman said, 'I see by the way he runs that the first runner is Ahimaaz son of Zadok.' The king said, 'He is a good fellow and shall earn the reward for good news.' Ahimaaz called out to the king, 'All is well!' He bowed low before him and said, 'Blessed be the LORD your God who has given into your hands the men who rebelled against your majesty.' The king asked, 'Is all well with the young man Absalom?' Ahimaaz answered, 'Sir, your servant Joab sent me,^b I saw a great commotion, but I did not know what had happened.' The king told him to stand on one side; so he turned aside and stood there. Then the Cushite came in and said, 'Good news, your majesty! The LORD has avenged you this day on all those who rebelled against you.' The king said to the Cushite, 'Is all well with the young man Absalom?' The Cushite answered, 'May all the king's enemies and all rebels who would do you harm be as that young man is.' The king was deeply moved and went up to the roof-chamber over the gate and wept, crying out as he went, 'O, my son! Absalom my son, my son Absalom! If only I had died instead of you! O Absalom, my son, my son.'

Joab was told that the king was weeping and mourning for Absalom; and that day victory was turned to mourning for the whole army, because they heard how the king grieved for his son; they stole into the city like men ashamed to show their faces after a defeat in battle. The king hid his face and cried aloud, 'My son Absalom; O Absalom, my son, my son.' But Joab came into the king's quarters and said to him, 'You have put to shame this day all your servants, who have saved you and your sons and daughters, your wives and your concubines. You love those that hate you and hate those that love you; you have made us feel, officers and men alike, that we are nothing to you; for it is plain that if Absalom were still alive and all of us dead, you would be content. Now go at once and give your servants some encouragement; if you refuse, I swear by the LORD that not a man will stay with you tonight, and that would be a worse disaster than any you have suffered since your earliest days.' Then the king rose and took his seat in the gate; and when the army was told that the king was sitting in the gate, they all appeared before him.

Various events of David's reign

MEANWHILE THE ISRAELITES had all scattered to their homes. Throughout all the tribes of Israel people were discussing it among themselves and saying, 'The king has saved us from our enemies and freed us from the power of the Philistines, and now he has fled the country because of Absalom. But Absalom, whom we anointed king, has fallen in battle; so now why have we no plans for bringing the king back?'

What all Israel was saying came to the king's ears.^a So he sent word to Zadok and Abiathar the priests: 'Ask the elders of Judah why they should be the last to bring the king back to his palace. Tell them, "You are my brothers, my flesh and my blood; why are you last to bring me back?" And tell Amasa, "You are my own flesh and blood. You shall be my commander-in-chief, so help me God, for the rest of your life in place of Joab."' David's message won all hearts in Judah, and they sent to the king, urging him to return with all his men.

So the king came back to the Jordan; and the men of Judah came to Gilgal to meet him and escort him across the river. Shimei son of Gera the Benjamite from Bahurim hastened down among the men of Judah to meet King David with a thousand men from Benjamin; Ziba was there too, the servant of Saul's family, with his fifteen sons and twenty servants. They rushed into the Jordan under the king's eyes and crossed to and fro conveying his household in order to win his favour. Shimei son of Gera,

^a What . . . cars: prob. rdg.; Heb. has these words after back to his palace and adds to his palace.

19 when he had crossed the river, fell down before the king and said to him, 'I beg your majesty not to remember how disgracefully your servant behaved when your majesty left Jerusalem; do not hold it against me or take it to heart. For I humbly acknowledge that I did wrong, and today I am the first of all the house of Joseph to come down to meet your majesty.'

20 But Abishai son of Zeruiah objected, 'Ought not Shimei to be put to death because he cursed the LORD's anointed prince?' David answered, 'What right have you, you sons of Zeruiah, to oppose me today? Why should any man be put to death this day in Israel? I know now that I am king of Israel.'

21 Then the king said to Shimei, 'You shall not die', and confirmed it with an oath.

22 Saul's grandson Mephibosheth also went down to meet the king. He had not dressed his feet, combed his beard or washed his clothes, from the day the king went out until he returned victorious. When he came from Jerusalem to meet the king, David said to him, 'Why did you not go with me, Mephibosheth?' He answered, 'Sir, my servant deceived me; I did intend to harness my ass and ride with the king (for I am lame), but his stories set your majesty against me. Your majesty is like the angel of God; you must do what you think right. My father's whole family, one and all, deserved to die at your majesty's hands, but you gave me, your servant, my place at your table. What further favour can I expect of the king?' The king answered, 'You have said enough. My decision is that you and Ziba are to share the estate.' Mephibosheth said, 'Let him have it all, now that your majesty has come home victorious.'

31 Barzillai the Gileadite too had come down from Rogelim, and he went as far as the Jordan with the king to send him on his way. Now Barzillai was very old, eighty years of age; it was he who had provided for the king while he was at Mahanaim, for he was a man of high standing. The king said to Barzillai, 'Cross over with me and I will provide for your old age in my household in Jerusalem.' Barzillai answered, 'Your servant is far too old to go up with your majesty to Jerusalem. I am already eighty; and I cannot tell good from bad. I cannot taste what I eat or drink; I cannot hear the voices of men and women singing. Why should I be a burden any longer on your majesty? Your servant will attend the king for a short way across the Jordan; and why should the king reward me so handsomely? Let me go back and end my days in my own city near the grave of my father and mother. Here is my son Kimham; let him cross over with your majesty, and do for him what you think best.' The king answered, 'Kimham shall cross with me and I will do for him whatever you think best; and I will do for you whatever you ask.'

32 All the people crossed the Jordan while the king waited. The king then kissed Barzillai and gave him his blessing. Barzillai went back to his own home; the king crossed over to Gilgal, Kimham with him. All the people of Judah escorted the king over the river, and so did half the people of Israel.

41 The men of Israel came to the king in a body and said, 'Why should our brothers of Judah have got possession of the king's person by joining King David's own men and then escorting him and his household across the Jordan?' The men of Judah replied, 'Because his majesty is our near kins- 42 man. Why should you resent it? Have we eaten at the king's expense? Have we received any gifts?' The men of Israel answered, 'We have ten times 43 your interest in the king and, what is more, we are senior to you; why do you disparage us? Were we not the first to speak of bringing the king back?'

The men of Judah used language even fiercer than the men of Israel.

There happened to be a man there, a scoundrel named Sheba son of 20
Bichri, a man of Benjamin. He blew the trumpet and cried out:

What share have we in David?

We have no lot in the son of Jesse.

Away to your homes, O Israel.

The men of Israel all left David, to follow Sheba son of Bichri, but the men 2 of Judah stood by their king and followed him from the Jordan to Jerusalem.

When David came home to Jerusalem he took the ten concubines whom 3
he had left in charge of the palace and put them under guard; he maintained them but did not have intercourse with them. They were kept in confinement to the day of their death, widowed in the prime of life.

The king said to Amasa, 'Call up the men of Judah and appear before 4 me again in three days' time.' So Amasa went to call up the men of Judah, but it took longer than the time fixed by the king. David said to Abishai, 5
'Sheba son of Bichri will give us more trouble than Absalom; take the royal bodyguard and follow him closely. If he has occupied some fortified 6 cities, he may escape us.' Abishai was followed by Joab ^a with the Kerethite and Pelethite guards and all the fighting men; they left Jerusalem in 7 pursuit of Sheba son of Bichri. When they reached the great stone in 8 Gibeon, Amasa came towards them. Joab was wearing his tunic and over it a belt supporting a sword in its scabbard. He came forward, concealing his treachery, and said to Amasa, 'I hope you are well, my brother', and with 9 his right hand he grasped Amasa's beard to kiss him. Amasa was not on his guard against the sword in Joab's hand. Joab struck him with it in the 10 belly and his entrails poured out to the ground; he did not strike a second blow, for Amasa was dead. Joab and his brother Abishai went on in pursuit of Sheba son of Bichri. One of Joab's young men stood over Amasa 11 and called out, 'Follow Joab, all who are for Joab and for David!' Amasa's body lay soaked in blood in the middle of the road, and when the man 12 saw how all the people stopped, he rolled him off the road into the field and threw a cloak over him; for everyone who came by saw the body and stopped. When he had been dragged from the road, they all went on 13 after Joab in pursuit of Sheba son of Bichri.

Sheba passed through all the tribes of Israel until he came to Abel-beth- 14
maacah,^b and all the clan of Bichri^c rallied to him and followed him into the city. Joab's forces came up and besieged him in Abel-beth-maacah, 15 raised a siege-ramp against it and began undermining the wall to bring it down. Then a wise woman stood on the rampart^d and called from the city, 16

- 17 'Listen, listen! Tell Joab to step forward and let me speak with him.' So he came forward and the woman said, 'Are you Joab?' He answered, 'I am.' 'Listen to what I have to say, sir', she went on, to which he replied, 'I am listening.' 'In the old days', she said, 'there was a saying, "Go to Abel for the answer"', and that settled the matter. My city is known to be one of the most peaceable and loyal^a in Israel; she is like a watchful mother in Israel, and you are seeking to kill her. Would you destroy the LORD's own possession?' Joab answered, 'God forbid, far be it from me to ruin or destroy! That is not our aim; but a man from the hill-country of Ephraim named Sheba son of Bichri has raised a revolt against King David; surrender this one man, and I will retire from the city.' The woman said to Joab, 'His head shall be thrown to you over the wall.' Then the woman withdrew, and her wisdom won over the assembled people; they cut off Sheba's head and threw it to Joab. Then he sounded the trumpet and the whole army left the city and dispersed to their homes, while Joab went back to the king in Jerusalem.
- 23^b Joab was in command of the army,^c and Benaiah son of Jehoiada commanded the Kerethite and Pelethite guards. Adoram was in charge of the forced levy, and Jehoshaphat son of Ahilud was secretary of state. Sheva was adjutant-general, and Zadok and Abiathar were priests; Ira the Jairite was David's priest.

- 21 IN DAVID'S REIGN there was a famine that lasted year after year for three years. So DAVID consulted the LORD, and he answered, 'Blood-guilt rests on Saul and on his family because he put the Gibeonites to death.' (The Gibeonites were not of Israelite descent; they were a remnant of Amorite stock whom the Israelites had sworn that they would spare. Saul, however, had sought to exterminate them in his zeal for Israel and Judah.) King David summoned the Gibeonites, therefore, and said to them, 'What can be done for you? How can I make expiation, so that you may have cause to bless the LORD's own people?' The Gibeonites answered, 'Our feud with Saul and his family cannot be settled in silver and gold, and there is no one man in Israel whose death would content us.' 'Then what do you want me to do for you?' asked David. They answered, 'Let us make an end of the man who caused our undoing and ruined us, so that he shall never again have his place within the borders of Israel. Hand over to us seven of that man's sons, and we will hurl them down to their death before^d the LORD in Gibeah of Saul, the LORD's chosen king.' The king agreed to hand them over, but he spared Mephibosheth son of Jonathan, son of Saul, because of the oath that had been taken in the LORD's name by David and Saul's son Jonathan. The king then took the two sons whom Rizpah daughter of Aiah had borne to Saul, Armoni and Mephibosheth, and the five sons whom Merab, Saul's daughter, had borne to Adriel son of Barzillai of Meholah. He handed them over to the Gibeonites, and they flung them down from the mountain before the LORD; the seven of them fell together. They were put to death in the first days of harvest at the beginning of the barley harvest. Rizpah daughter of Aiah took sackcloth and spread it out as a bed for herself on the rock, from the beginning of harvest until the rains came and fell from heaven upon the bodies. She allowed no bird to set upon them by day nor any wild beast by night. When David was told what Rizpah daughter of Aiah the concubine of Saul had done, he went and took the bones of Saul and his son Jonathan from the citizens of Jabesh-gilead, who had stolen them from the public square at Beth-shan, where the Philistines had hung them on the day they defeated Saul at Gilboa. He removed the bones of Saul and Jonathan from there and gathered up the bones of the men who had been hurled to death. They buried the bones of Saul and his son Jonathan in the territory of Benjamin at Zela, in the grave of his father Kish. Everything was done as the king ordered, and thereafter the LORD was willing to accept prayers offered for the country.

Once again war broke out between the Philistines and Israel. David and his men went down to the battle, but as he fought with the Philistines he fell exhausted. Then Benob, one of the race of the Rephaim, whose bronze spear weighed three hundred shekels^a and who wore a belt of honour, took David prisoner and was about to kill him. But Abishai son of Zeruiah came to David's help, struck the Philistine down and killed him. Then David's officers took an oath that he should never again go out with them to war, for fear that the lamp of Israel might be extinguished.

Some time later war with the Philistines broke out again in Gob: it was then that Sibbechai of Hushah killed Saph, a descendant of the Rephaim. In another war with the Philistines in Gob, Elhanan son of Jair^c of Bethlehem killed Goliath of Gath, whose spear had a shaft like a weaver's beam. In yet another war in Gath there appeared a giant with six fingers on each hand and six toes on each foot, twenty-four in all. He too was descended from the Rephaim; and, when he defied Israel, Jonathan son of David's brother Shimeai killed him. These four giants were the descendants of the Rephaim in Gath, and they all fell at the hands of David and his men.

THESE ARE THE WORDS OF THE SONG David sang to the LORD on the day when the LORD delivered him from the power of all his enemies and from the power of Saul:

The LORD is my stronghold, my fortress and my champion,
 my God, my rock where I find safety;
 my shield, my mountain fastness, my strong tower,
 my refuge, my deliverer, who saves me from violence.
 I will call on the LORD to whom all praise is due,
 and I shall be delivered from my enemies.
 When the waves of death swept round me,
 and torrents of destruction overtook me,
 the bonds of Sheol tightened about me,
 the snares of death were set to catch me;

7 then in anguish of heart I cried to the LORD,
I called for help to my God;
he heard me from his temple,
and my cry rang in his ears.
8 The earth heaved and quaked,
heaven's foundations shook;
they heaved, because he was angry.
9 Smoke rose from his nostrils,
devouring fire came out of his mouth,
glowing coals and searing heat.
10 He swept the skies aside as he descended,
thick darkness lay under his feet.
11 He rode on a cherub, he flew through the air;
he swooped^a on the wings of the wind.
12 He curtained himself in darkness
and made dense vapour his canopy.
13 Thick clouds came out of the radiance before him;
glowing coals burned brightly.
14 The LORD thundered from the heavens
and the voice of the Most High spoke out.
15 He loosed his arrows, he sped them far and wide,
his lightning shafts, and sent them echoing.
16 The channels of the sea-bed were revealed,
the foundations of earth laid bare
at the LORD's rebuke,
at the blast of the breath of his nostrils.
17 He reached down from the height and took me,
he drew me out of mighty waters,
18 he rescued me from my enemies, strong as they were,
from my foes when they grew too powerful for me.
19 They confronted me in the hour of my peril,
but the LORD was my buttress.
20 He brought me out into an open place,
he rescued me because he delighted in me.
21 The LORD rewarded me as my righteousness deserved;
my hands were clean, and he requited me.
22 For I have followed the ways of the LORD
and have not turned wickedly from my God;
23 all his laws are before my eyes,
I have not failed to follow his decrees.
24 In his sight I was blameless
and kept myself from wilful sin;
25 the LORD requited me as my righteousness deserved
and my purity in his eyes.

- 47 The LORD lives, blessed is my rock,
high above all is God my rock and safe refuge.
- 48 O God, who grantest me vengeance,
who dost subdue peoples under me, 49 who dost snatch me from my foes and set me over my enemies, thou dost deliver me from violent men.
- 50 Therefore, LORD, I will praise thee among the nations and sing psalms to thy name, 51 to one who gives his king great victories and in all his acts keeps faith with his anointed king, with David and his descendants for ever.

23 These are the last words of David:

- The very word of David son of Jesse,
the very word of the man whom the High God raised up,
the anointed prince of the God of Jacob,
and the singer of Israel's psalms:
- 2 the spirit of the LORD has spoken through me,
and his word is on my lips.
- 3 The God of Israel spoke,
the Rock of Israel spoke of me:
'He who rules men in justice,
who rules in the fear of God,
4 is like the light of morning at sunrise,
a morning that is cloudless after rain
and makes the grass sparkle from the earth.'
- 5 Surely, surely my house is true to God;
for he has made a pact with me for all time,
its terms spelled out and faithfully kept,
my whole salvation, all my ^a delight.
- 6 But the ungodly put forth no shoots,
they are all like briars tossed aside;
none dare put out his hand to pick them up,
7 none touch them but ^b with tool of iron or of wood;
they are fit only for burning in the fire. ^c

- 8^d THESE ARE THE NAMES OF DAVID'S HEROES. First came Ishbosheth
the Hachmonite, ^e chief of the three; it was he who brandished his spear ^f 9 over eight hundred dead, all slain at one time. Next to him was Eleazar son of Dodo the Ahohite, ^g one of the heroic three. He was with David at Pas-dammim where the Philistines ^h had gathered for battle. When the Israelites fell back, he stood his ground and rained blows on the Philistines 10 until, from sheer weariness, his hand stuck fast to his sword; and so the LORD brought about a great victory that day. Afterwards the people rallied 11 behind him, but it was only to strip the dead. Next to him was Shammah son of Agee a Hararite. The Philistines had gathered at Lehi, where there was a field with a fine crop of lentils; and, when the Philistines put the people to 12 flight, he stood his ground in the field, saved it ^a and defeated them. So the LORD again brought about a great victory.

Three of the thirty went down towards the beginning of harvest to join 13
 David at the cave of Adullam, while a band of Philistines was encamped in the Vale of Rephaim. At that time David was in the stronghold and a Philis- 14 tine garrison held Bethlehem. One day a longing came over David, and he 15 exclaimed, 'If only I could have a drink of water from the well ^b by the gate of Bethlehem!' At this the heroic three made their way through the 16 Philistine lines and drew water from the well by the gate of Bethlehem and brought it to David. But David refused to drink it; he poured it out to the 17 LORD and said, 'God forbid that I should do such a thing! Can I drink ^c the blood of these men who risked their lives for it?' So he would not drink it. Such were the exploits of the heroic three.

Abishai the brother of Joab son of Zeruiah was chief of the thirty. He 18 once brandished his spear over three hundred dead, and he was famous among the thirty. Some think he even surpassed the rest of the thirty ^d in 19 reputation, and he became their captain, but he did not rival the three.
 Benaiah son of Jehoiada, from Kabzeel, was a hero of many exploits. It 20 was he who smote the two champions of Moab, and who went down into a pit and killed a lion on a snowy day. It was he who also killed the Egyptian, 21 a man of striking appearance armed with a spear: he went to meet him with a club, snatched the spear out of the Egyptian's hand and killed him with his own weapon. Such were the exploits of Benaiah son of Jehoiada, 22 famous among the heroic thirty. ^d He was more famous than the rest of the 23 thirty, but he did not rival the three. David appointed him to his household.

Asahel the brother of Joab was one of the thirty, and Elhanan son of 24
 Dodo from Bethlehem; Shammah from Harod, and Elika from Harod; 25
 Helez from Beth-pelet, ^e and Ira son of Ikkesh from Tekoa; Abiezer from Anathoth, and Mebunnai from Hushah; Zalmon the Ahothite, and Maharai 26 27 from Netophah; Heled son of Baanah from Netophah, and Ittai son of Ribai from Gibeah of Benjamin; Benaiah from Pirathon, and Hiddai 29 from the ravines of Gaash; Abi-albon from Beth-arabah, ^f and Azmoth 30 from Bahurim; ^g Eliahba from Shaalbon, and Hashem the Gizonite; 31
 Jonathan son of ^h Shammah the Hararite, and Ahiam son of Sharar the 32
 Hararite; ⁱ Eliphelet son of Ahasbai son of the Maacathite, and Eliam son 34 of Ahithophel the Gilonite; Hezrai from Carmel, and Paarai the Arbite; 35

 38 and Naharai from Beeroth, armour-bearer to Joab son of Zeruiah; Ira the 39 Ithrite, Gareb the Ithrite, and Uriah the Hittite: there were thirty-seven in all.

4 ^a ONCE AGAIN THE ISRAELITES felt the LORD's anger, when he incited David against them and gave him orders that Israel and Judah should 2 be counted. So he instructed Joab and the officers of the army ^b with him to go round all the tribes of Israel, from Dan to Beersheba, and make a 3 record of the people and report the number to him. Joab answered, 'Even if the LORD your God should increase the people a hundredfold and your majesty should live to see it, what pleasure would that give your majesty?' 4 But Joab and the officers were overruled by the king and they left his 5 presence in order to count the people. They crossed the Jordan and began at Aroer and the level land of the gorge, proceeding towards Gad ^c and 6 Jazer. They came to Gilead and to the land of the Hittites, to Kadesh, 7 and then to Dan and Iyyon ^d and so round towards Sidon. They went as far as the walled city of Tyre and all the towns of the Hivites and Canaan-8 ites, and then went on to the Negeb of Judah at Beersheba. They covered the whole country and arrived back at Jerusalem after nine months and 9 twenty days. Joab reported to the king the total number of people: the number of able-bodied men, capable of bearing arms, was eight hundred thousand in Israel and five hundred thousand in Judah.

10 After he had counted the people David's conscience smote him, and he said to the LORD, 'I have done a very wicked thing: I pray thee, LORD, 11 remove thy servant's guilt, for I have been very foolish.' He rose next morning, and meanwhile the command of the LORD had come to the 12 prophet Gad, David's seer, to go and speak to David: 'This is the word of the LORD: I have three things in store for you; choose one and I will bring 13 it upon you.' So Gad came to David and repeated this to him and said, 'Is it to be three years of famine in your land, or three months of flight with the enemy at your heels, or three days of pestilence in your land? Consider 14 carefully what answer I am to take back to him who sent me.' Thereupon David said to Gad, 'I am in a desperate plight; let us fall into the hands of the LORD, for his mercy is great; and let me not fall into the hands of men.' 15 So the LORD sent a pestilence throughout Israel from morning till the hour of dinner, and from Dan to Beersheba seventy thousand of the people died.
 16 Then the angel stretched out his arm towards Jerusalem to destroy it; but the LORD repented of the evil and said to the angel who was destroying the people, 'Enough! Stay your hand.' At that moment the angel of the LORD was standing by the threshing-floor of Araunah the Jebusite.

17 When David saw the angel who was striking down the people, he said to the LORD, 'It is I who have done wrong, the sin is mine; but these poor sheep, what have they done? Let thy hand fall upon me and upon my up an altar to the LORD on the threshing-floor of Araunah the Jebusite.' 18

David did what Gad told him to do, and went up as the LORD had com- 19 manded. When Araunah looked down and saw the king and his servants 20 coming over towards him, he went out, prostrated himself low before the king and said, 'Why has your majesty come to visit his servant?' David 21 answered, 'To buy the threshing-floor from you to build an altar to the LORD, so that the plague which has attacked the people may be stopped.'
Araunah answered David, 'I beg your majesty to take it and sacrifice what 22 you think fit. I have here the oxen for a whole-offering, and their harness and the threshing-sledges for the fuel.' Araunah^a gave it all to the king 23 for his own use and said to him, 'May the LORD your God accept you.'
But the king said to Araunah, 'No, I will buy it from you; I will not offer 24 to the LORD my God whole-offerings that have cost me nothing.' So David bought the threshing-floor and the oxen for fifty shekels of silver.
He built an altar to the LORD there and offered whole-offerings and shared- 25 offerings. Then the LORD yielded to his prayer for the land; and the plague in Israel stopped.

THE FIRST BOOK OF KINGS

The death of David and accession of Solomon

1 KING DAVID WAS NOW A VERY OLD MAN and, though
2 they wrapped clothes round him, he could not keep warm. So 3 his household said to him, 'Let us find a young virgin for your 4 majesty, to attend you and take care of you; and let her lie in your bosom,
5 sir, and make you warm.' So they searched all over Israel for a beautiful
6 maiden and found Abishag, a Shunammite, and brought her to the king.
7 She was a very beautiful girl, and she took care of the king and waited on 8 him, but he had no intercourse with her.

9 Now Adonijah, whose mother was Haggith, was boasting that he was 10 to be king; and he had already provided himself with chariots and horse-
11 men^a and fifty outrunners. Never in his life had his father corrected
12 him or asked why he behaved as he did. He was a very handsome man, too, 13 and was next in age to Absalom. He talked with Joab son of Zeruiah and 14 with Abiathar the priest, and they gave him their strong support; but 15 Zadok the priest, Benaiah son of Jehoiada, Nathan the prophet, Shimei, 16 Rei, and David's bodyguard of heroes, did not take his side. Adonijah
17 then held a sacrifice of sheep, oxen, and buffaloes at the stone Zohaleth 18 beside En-rogel, and he invited all his royal brothers and all those 19 officers of the household who were of the tribe of Judah. But he did 20 not invite Nathan the prophet, Benaiah and the bodyguard, or Solomon 21 his brother.

22 Then Nathan said to Bathsheba, the mother of Solomon, 'Have you not 23 heard that Adonijah son of Haggith has become king, all unknown to our 24 lord David? Now come, let me advise you what to do for your own safety
25 and for the safety of your son Solomon. Go in and see King David and say 26 to him, "Did not your majesty swear to me, your servant, that my son 27 Solomon should succeed you as king; that it was he who should sit on 28 your throne? Why, then, has Adonijah become king?" Then while you 29 are still speaking there with the king, I will follow you in and tell the whole 30 story.'

31 So Bathsheba went to the king in his private chamber; he was now very 32 old, and Abishag the Shunammite was waiting on him. Bathsheba bowed 33 before the king and prostrated herself. 'What do you want?' said the king.
34 She answered, 'My lord, you swore to me your servant, by the LORD your 35 God, that my son Solomon should succeed you as king, and that he should 36 sit on your throne. But now, here is Adonijah become king, all unknown to your majesty. He has sacrificed great numbers of oxen, buffaloes, and sheep, and has invited to the feast all the king's sons, and Abiathar the priest, and Joab the commander-in-chief, but he has not invited your servant Solomon. And now, your majesty, all Israel is looking to you to announce who is to succeed you on the throne. Otherwise, when you, sir, rest with your forefathers, my son Solomon and I shall be treated as criminals.' She was still speaking to the king when Nathan the prophet arrived. The king was told that Nathan was there; he came into the king's presence and prostrated himself with his face to the ground. 'My lord,' he said, 'your majesty must, I suppose, have declared that Adonijah should succeed you and that he should sit on your throne. He has today gone down and sacrificed great numbers of oxen, buffaloes, and sheep, and has invited to the feast all the king's sons, Joab the commander-in-chief, and Abiathar the priest; and at this very moment they are eating and drinking in his presence and shouting, "Long live King Adonijah!" But he has not invited me: your servant, Zadok the priest, Benaiah son of Jehoiada, or your servant Solomon. Has this been done by your majesty's authority, while we^a your servants have not been told who should succeed you on the throne?' Thereupon King David said, 'Call Bathsheba', and she came into the king's presence and stood before him. Then the king swore an oath to her: 'As the LORD lives, who has delivered me from all my troubles: I swore by the LORD the God of Israel that Solomon your son should succeed me and that he should sit on my throne, and this day I give effect to my oath.' Bathsheba bowed low to the king and prostrated herself; and she said, 'May my lord King David live for ever!'

Then King David said, 'Call Zadok the priest, Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah son of Jehoiada.' They came into the king's presence and he gave them these orders: 'Take the officers of the household with you; mount my son Solomon on the king's mule and escort him down to Gihon. There Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet shall anoint him king over Israel. Sound the trumpet and shout, "Long live King Solomon!" Then escort him home again, and he shall come and sit on my throne and reign in my place; for he is the man that I have appointed prince over Israel and Judah.' Benaiah son of Jehoiada answered the king, 'It shall be done. And may the LORD, the God of my lord the king, confirm it! As the LORD has been with your majesty, so may he be with Solomon; may he make his throne even greater than the throne of my lord King David.' So Zadok the priest, Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah son of Jehoiada, together with the Kerethite and Pelethite guards, went down and mounted Solomon on King David's mule and escorted him to Gihon. Zadok the priest took the horn of oil from the Tent of the LORD and anointed Solomon; they sounded the trumpet and all the people shouted, 'Long live King Solomon!' Then all the people escorted him home in procession, with great rejoicing and playing of pipes, so that the very earth split with the noise.

Adonijah and his guests had finished their banquet when the noise reached their ears. Joab, hearing the sound of the trumpet, exclaimed, ^a Has this . . . while we: or If this has been done by your majesty's authority, then we . . .

42 'What is all this uproar in the city? What has happened?' While he was still speaking, Jonathan son of Abiathar the priest arrived. 'Come in', said 43 Adonijah. 'You are an honourable man and bring good news.' 'Far otherwise,' Jonathan replied; 'our lord King David has made Solomon king 44 and has sent with him Zadok the priest, Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah son of Jehoiada, together with the Kerethite and Pelethite guards; they 45 have mounted him on the king's mule, and Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet have anointed him king at Gihon, and they have now escorted him home rejoicing, and the city is in an uproar. That was the noise you 46 heard. More than that, Solomon has taken his seat on the royal throne.
47 Yes, and the officers of the household have been to greet our lord King David with these words: "May your God make the name of Solomon your son more famous than your own and his throne even greater than yours", 48 and the king bowed upon his couch. What is more, he said this: "Blessed be the LORD the God of Israel who has set a successor on my throne this 49 day while I am still alive to see it." Then Adonijah's guests all rose in 50 panic and scattered. Adonijah himself, in fear of Solomon, sprang up and 51 went to the altar and caught hold of its horns. Then a message was sent to Solomon: 'Adonijah is afraid of King Solomon; he has taken hold of the horns of the altar and has said, "Let King Solomon first swear to me that 52 he will not put his servant to the sword."' Solomon said, 'If he proves himself a man of worth, not a hair of his head shall fall to the ground; but 53 if he is found to be troublesome, he shall die.' Then King Solomon sent and had him brought down from the altar; he came in and prostrated himself before the king, and Solomon ordered him home.

2 When the time of David's death drew near, he gave this last charge to 2 his son Solomon: 'I am going the way of all the earth. Be strong and show 3 yourself a man. Fulfil your duty to the LORD your God; conform to his ways, observe his statutes and his commandments, his judgements and his solemn precepts, as they are written in the law of Moses, so that you 4 may prosper in whatever you do and whichever way you turn, and that the LORD may fulfil this promise that he made about me: "If your descendants take care to walk faithfully in my sight with all their heart and with all their soul, you shall never lack a successor on the throne of Israel."
5 You know how Joab son of Zeruiah treated me and what he did to two commanders-in-chief in Israel, Abner son of Ner and Amasa son of Jether. He killed them both, breaking the peace by bloody acts of war; and with that blood he stained the belt about my waist and the sandals on my 6 feet. Do as your wisdom prompts you, and do not let his grey hairs go 7 down to the grave in peace. Show constant friendship to the family of Barzillai of Gilead; let them have their place at your table; they befriended
8 me when I was a fugitive from your brother Absalom. Do not forget Shimei son of Gera, the Benjamite from Bahurim, who cursed me bitterly the day I went to Mahanaim. True, he came down to meet me at the 9 Jordan, and I swore by the LORD that I would not put him to death. But you do not need to let him go unpunished now; you are a wise man and will know how to deal with him; bring down his grey hairs in blood to the grave.'

So David rested with his forefathers and was buried in the city of David, 10 having reigned over Israel for forty years, seven in Hebron and thirty- 11 three in Jerusalem; and Solomon succeeded his father David as king and 12 was firmly established on the throne.

The reign of Solomon

THEN ADONIJAH SON OF HAGGITH came to Bathsheba, the mother 13 of Solomon. 'Do you come as a friend?' she asked. 'As a friend,' he answered; 'I have something to say to you.' 'Tell me', she said. 'You 14 15 know', he went on, 'that the throne was mine and that all Israel was looking to me to be king; but I was passed over and the throne has gone to my brother; it was his by the LORD's will. And now I have one request to make 16 of you; do not refuse me.' 'What is it?' she said. He answered, 'Will you 17 ask King Solomon (he will never refuse you) to give me Abishag the Shunammite in marriage?' 'Very well,' said Bathsheba, 'I will speak for 18 you to the king.' So Bathsheba went in to King Solomon to speak for 19 Adonijah. The king rose to meet her and kissed her, and seated himself on his throne. A throne was set for the king's mother and she sat at his right hand. Then she said, 'I have one small request to make of you; do not 20 refuse me.' 'What is it, mother?' he replied; 'I will not refuse you.' 'It is 21 this, that Abishag the Shunammite should be given to your brother Adonijah in marriage.' At that Solomon answered his mother, 'Why do you 22 ask for Abishag the Shunammite as wife for Adonijah? you might as well ask for the throne, for he is my elder brother and has both Abiathar the 23 priest and Joab son of Zeruah on his side.' Then King Solomon swore by the LORD: 'So help me God, Adonijah shall pay for this with his life.
As the LORD lives, who has established me and set me on the throne of 24
David my father and has founded a house for me as he promised, this very day Adonijah shall be put to death!' Thereupon King Solomon 25 gave Benaiah son of Jehoiada his orders, and he struck him down and he died.

Abiathar the priest was told by the king to go off to Anathoth to his own 26 estate. 'You deserve to die,' he said, 'but in spite of this day's work I shall not put you to death, for you carried the Ark of the Lord GOD before my 27 father David, and you shared in all the hardships that he endured.' So Solomon dismissed Abiathar from his office as priest of the LORD, and so fulfilled the sentence that the LORD had pronounced against the house of Eli in Shiloh.

News of all this reached Joab, and he fled to the Tent of the LORD and 28 caught hold of the horns of the altar; for he had sided with Adonijah, though not with Absalom. When King Solomon learnt that Joab had fled 29 to the Tent of the LORD and that he was by the altar, he sent Benaiah son of Jehoiada with orders to strike him down. Benaiah came to the Tent of the 30
LORD and ordered Joab in the king's name to come away; but he said, 'No;
I will die here.' Benaiah reported Joab's answer to the king, and the king 31 said, 'Let him have his way; strike him down and bury him, and so rid me

32 and my father's house of the guilt for the blood that he wantonly shed. The LORD will hold him responsible for his own death, because he struck down two innocent men who were better men than he, Abner son of Ner, commander of the army of Israel, and Amasa son of Jether, commander of the army of Judah, and ran them through with the sword, without my father David's knowledge. The guilt of their blood shall recoil on Joab and his descendants for all time; but David and his descendants, his house and his throne, will enjoy perpetual prosperity from the LORD.' So Benaiah son of Jehoiada went up to the altar and struck Joab down and killed him, and he was buried in his house on the edge of the wilderness. Thereafter the king appointed Benaiah son of Jehoiada to command the army in his place, and installed Zadok the priest in place of Abiathar.

36 Next the king sent for Shimei and said to him, 'Build yourself a house in Jerusalem and stay there; you are not to leave the city for any other place. If ever you leave it and cross the gorge of the Kidron, you shall die; make no mistake about that. Your blood will be on your own head.' And Shimei said to the king, 'I accept your sentence; I will do as your majesty commands.' So for a long time Shimei remained in Jerusalem; but three years later two of his slaves ran away to Achish son of Maacah, king of Gath. When Shimei heard that his slaves were in Gath, he immediately saddled his ass and went there to Achish in search of his slaves; he came to Gath and returned with them. When King Solomon was told that Shimei had gone from Jerusalem to Gath and back, he sent for him and said, 'Did I not require you to swear by the LORD? Did I not give you this solemn warning: "If ever you leave this city for any other place, you shall die; make no mistake about it"? And you said, "I accept your sentence; I obey." Why then have you not kept the oath which you swore by the LORD, and the order which I gave you? Shimei, you know in your own heart all the mischief you did to my father David; the LORD is now making that mischief recoil on your own head. But King Solomon is blessed and the throne of David will be secure before the LORD for all time.' The king then gave orders to Benaiah son of Jehoiada, and he went out and struck Shimei down; and he died. Thus Solomon's royal power was securely established.

3 Solomon allied himself to Pharaoh king of Egypt by marrying his daughter. He brought her to the City of David, until he had finished building his own house and the house of the LORD and the wall round Jerusalem. The people however continued to sacrifice at the hill-shrines, for till then no house had been built in honour of the name of the LORD. Solomon himself loved the LORD, conforming to the precepts laid down by his father David; but he too slaughtered and burnt sacrifices at the hill-shrines.

4 Now King Solomon went to Gibeon to offer a sacrifice, for that was the chief hill-shrine, and he used to offer a thousand whole-offerings on its altar. There that night the LORD God appeared to him in a dream and said, 'What shall I give you? Tell me.' And Solomon answered, 'Thou didst show great and constant love to thy servant David my father, because he walked before thee in loyalty, righteousness, and integrity of heart; and thou hast maintained this great and constant love towards him and hast now given him a son to succeed him on the throne. Now, O LORD my God, 7 thou hast made thy servant king in place of my father David, though I am a mere child, unskilled in leadership. And I am here in the midst of thy 8 people, the people of thy choice, too many to be numbered or counted. Give thy servant, therefore, a heart with skill to listen, so that he may 9 govern thy people justly and distinguish good from evil. For who is equal to the task of governing this great people of thine?' The Lord was well 10 pleased that Solomon had asked for this, and he said to him, 'Because you 11 have asked for this, and not for long life for yourself, or for wealth, or for the lives of your enemies, but have asked for discernment in administering 12 justice, I grant your request; I give you a heart so wise and so understanding that there has been none like you before your time nor will be after you. 13

I give you furthermore those things for which you did not ask, such wealth and honour^a as no king of your time can match. And if you conform to 14 my ways and observe my ordinances and commandments, as your father David did, I will give you long life.' Then he awoke, and knew it was a 15 dream.

Solomon came to Jerusalem and stood before the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord; there he sacrificed whole-offerings and brought shared-offerings, and gave a feast to all his household.

Then there came into the king's presence two women who were prostitutes and stood before him. The first said, 'My lord, this woman and I share the same house, and I gave birth to a child when she was there with me. On the third day after my baby was born she too gave birth to a child. We were quite alone; no one else was with us in the house; only the two of us were there. During the night this woman's child died because she overlaid it, and she got up in the middle of the night, took my baby from my side while I, your servant, was asleep, and laid it in her bosom, putting her dead child in mine. When I got up in the morning to feed my baby, I found him dead; but when I looked at him closely, I found that it was not the child that I had borne.' The other woman broke in, 'No; the living child is mine; yours is the dead one', while the first retorted, 'No; the dead child is yours; mine is the living one.' So they went on arguing in the king's presence. The king thought to himself, 'One of them says, "This is my child, the living one; yours is the dead one." The other says, "No; it is your child that is dead and mine that is alive."' Then he said, 'Fetch me a sword.' They brought in a sword and the king gave the order: 'Cut the living child in two and give half to one and half to the other.' At this the woman who was the mother of the living child, moved with love for her child, said to the king, 'Oh! sir, let her have the baby; whatever you do, do not kill it.' The other said, 'Let neither of us have it; cut it in two.' Thereupon the king gave judgement: 'Give the living baby to the first woman; do not kill it. She is its mother.' When Israel heard the judgement which the king had given, they all stood in awe of him; for they saw that he had the wisdom of God within him to administer justice.

1 2^a KING SOLOMON REIGNED OVER ISRAEL. His officers were as follows:

In charge of the calendar: ^b Azariah son of Zadok the priest.

3 Adjutant-general: ^c Ahijah son^d of Shisha.

Secretary of state: Jehoshaphat son of Ahilud.

4 Commander of the army: Benaiah son of Jehoiada.

Priests: Zadok and Abiathar.

5 Superintendent of the regional governors: Azariah son of Nathan.

King's Friend: Zabud son of Nathan.

6 Comptroller of the household: Ahishar.

Superintendent of the forced levy: Adoniram son of Abda.

7 Solomon had twelve regional governors over Israel and they supplied the food for the king and the royal household, each being responsible for 8 one month's provision in the year. These were their names:

Ben-hur in the hill-country of Ephraim.

9 Ben-dekar in Makaz, Shaalbim, Beth-shemesh, Elon, and Beth-hanan.

10 Ben-hesed in Aruboth; he had charge also of Socoh and all the land of Hopher.

11 Ben-abinadab, who had married Solomon's daughter Taphath, in all the district of Dor.

12 Baana son of Ahilud in Taanach and Megiddo, all Beth-shean as far as Abel-meholah beside Zartanah, and from Beth-shean below Jezreel as far as Jokmeam.

13 Ben-geber in Ramoth-gilead, including the tent-villages of Jair son of Manasseh in Gilead and the region of Argob in Bashan, sixty large walled cities with gate-bars of bronze.

14 Ahinadab son of Iddo in Mahanaim.

15 Ahimaaz in Naphtali; he also had married a daughter of Solomon, Basmath.

16 Baanah son of Hushai in Asher and Aloth.

17 Jehoshaphat son of Paruah in Issachar.

18 Shimei son of Elah in Benjamin.

19 Geber son of Uri in Gilead, the land of Sihon king of the Amorites and of Og king of Bashan.

In addition, one governor over all the governors ^e in the land.

20 The people of Judah and Israel were countless as the sands of the sea;
21 they ate and they drank, and enjoyed life. Solomon ruled over all the kingdoms from the river Euphrates to Philistia and as far as the frontier of Egypt; they paid tribute and were subject to him all his life.

22 Solomon's provision for one day was thirty kor of flour and sixty kor 23 of meal, ten fat oxen and twenty oxen from the pastures and a hundred 24 sheep, as well as stags, gazelles, roebucks, and fattened fowl. For he was paramount over all the land west of the Euphrates from Tiphseh to Gaza, 25 ruling all the kings west of the river; and he enjoyed peace on all sides. All through his reign Judah and Israel continued at peace, every man under his own vine and fig-tree, from Dan to Beersheba.

Solomon had forty thousand chariot-horses in his stables and twelve thousand cavalry horses.

The regional governors, each for a month in turn, supplied provisions for King Solomon and for all who came to his table; they never fell short in their deliveries. They provided also barley and straw, each according to his duty, for the horses and chariot-horses where it was required.

And God gave Solomon depth of wisdom and insight, and understanding as wide as the sand on the sea-shore, so that Solomon's wisdom surpassed that of all the men of the east and of all Egypt. For he was wiser than any man, wiser than Ethan the Ezrahite, and Heman, Kalcol, and Darda, the sons of Mahol; his fame spread among all the surrounding nations. He uttered three thousand proverbs, and his songs numbered a thousand and five. He discoursed of trees, from the cedar of Lebanon down to the marjoram that grows out of the wall, of beasts and birds, of reptiles and fishes. Men of all races came to listen to the wisdom of Solomon, and from all the kings of the earth who had heard of his wisdom he received gifts.

WHEN HIRAM KING OF TYRE heard that Solomon had been anointed king in his father's place, he sent envoys to him, because he had always been a friend of David. Solomon sent this answer to Hiram: 'You know that my father David could not build a house in honour of the name of the LORD his God, because he was surrounded by armed nations until the LORD made them subject to him. But now on every side the LORD my God has given me peace; there is no one to oppose me, I fear no attack. So I propose to build a house in honour of the name of the LORD my God, following the promise given by the LORD to my father David: "Your son whom I shall set on the throne in your place will build the house in honour of my name." If therefore you will now give orders that cedars be felled and brought from Lebanon, my men will work with yours, and I will pay you for your men whatever sum you fix; for, as you know, we have none so skilled at felling timber as your Sidonians.'

When Hiram received Solomon's message, he was greatly pleased and said, 'Blessed be the LORD today who has given David a wise son to rule over this great people.' And he sent this reply to Solomon: 'I have received your message. In this matter of timber, both cedar and pine, I will do all you wish. My men shall bring down the logs from Lebanon to the sea and I will make them up into rafts to be floated to the place you appoint; I will have them broken up there and you can remove them. You, on your part, will meet my wishes if you provide the food for my household.' So Hiram kept Solomon supplied with all the cedar and pine that he wanted, and Solomon supplied Hiram with twenty thousand kor of wheat as food for his household and twenty kor of oil of pounded olives; Solomon gave this yearly to Hiram. (The LORD had given Solomon wisdom as he had promised him; there was peace between Hiram and Solomon and they

13 concluded an alliance.) King Solomon raised a forced levy from the whole 14 of Israel amounting to thirty thousand men. He sent them to Lebanon in monthly relays of ten thousand, so that the men spent one month in Lebanon and two at home; Adoniram was superintendent of the whole 15 levy. Solomon had also seventy thousand hauliers and eighty thousand 16 quarrymen, apart from the three thousand three hundred foremen in 17 charge of the work who superintended the labourers. By the king's orders they quarried huge, massive blocks for laying the foundation of the LORD's 18 house in hewn stone. Solomon's and Hiram's builders and the Gebalites shaped the blocks and prepared both timber and stone for the building of the house.

1^a It was in the four hundred and eightieth year after the Israelites had come out of Egypt, in the fourth year of Solomon's reign over Israel, in the second month of that year, the month of Ziv, that he began to build the house of the LORD.

2 The house which King Solomon built for the LORD was sixty cubits
3 long by twenty cubits broad, and its height was thirty cubits. The vestibule in front of the sanctuary was twenty cubits long, spanning the whole breadth of the house, while it projected ten cubits in front of the house;
4 5 and he furnished the house with embrasures. Then he built a terrace against its wall round both the sanctuary and the inner shrine. He made 6 arcades all round: the lowest arcade was five cubits in depth, the middle six, and the highest seven; for he made rebates all round the outside of the main wall so that the bearer beams might not be set into the walls.
7 In the building of the house, only blocks of undressed stone direct from the quarry were used; no hammer or axe or any iron tool whatever was heard in the house while it was being built.

8 The entrance to the lowest arcade was in the right-hand corner of the house; there was access by a spiral stairway from that to the middle arcade,
-10 and from the middle arcade to the highest. So he built the house and finished it, having constructed the terrace five cubits high against the whole building, braced the house with struts of cedar and roofed it with beams and coffering of cedar.

12 Then the word of the LORD came to Solomon, saying, 'As for this house which you are building, if you are obedient to my ordinances and conform to my precepts and loyally observe all my commands, then I will fulfil my 13 promise to you, the promise I gave to your father David, and I will dwell among the Israelites and never forsake my people Israel.'

15 So Solomon built the LORD's house and finished it. He lined the inner walls of the house with cedar boards, covering the interior from floor to 16 rafters with wood; the floor he laid with boards of pine. In the innermost part of the house he partitioned off a space of twenty cubits with cedar boards from floor to rafters and made of it an inner shrine, to be the Most 18 Holy Place. The sanctuary in front of this was forty cubits long. The cedar inside the house was carved with open flowers and gourds; all was cedar,
no stone was left visible.

19 He prepared an inner shrine in the furthest recesses of the house to receive the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD. This inner shrine was twenty cubits square and it stood twenty cubits high; he overlaid it with red gold and made an altar of cedar. And Solomon overlaid the inside of the house with red gold and drew a Veil^a with golden chains across in front of the inner shrine.^b The whole house he overlaid with gold until it was all covered; and the whole of the altar by the inner shrine he overlaid with gold.

In the inner shrine he made two cherubim of wild olive, each ten cubits high. Each wing of the cherubim was five cubits long, and from wing-tip to wing-tip was ten cubits. Similarly the second cherub measured ten cubits; the two cherubim were alike in size and shape, and each ten cubits high. He put the cherubim within the shrine at the furthest recesses and their wings were outspread, so that a wing of the one cherub touched the wall on one side and a wing of the other touched the wall on the other side, and their other wings met in the middle; and he overlaid the cherubim with gold.

Round all the walls of the house he carved figures of cherubim, palm-trees, and open flowers, both in the inner chamber and in the outer. The floor of the house he overlaid with gold, both in the inner chamber and in the outer. At the entrance to the inner shrine he made a double door of wild olive; the pilasters and the^d door-posts were pentagonal. The doors were of wild olive, and he carved cherubim, palms, and open flowers on them, overlaying them with gold and hammering the gold upon the cherubim and the palms. Similarly for the doorway of the sanctuary he made a square frame of wild olive and a double door of pine, each leaf having two swivel-pins. On them he carved cherubim, palms, and open flowers, overlaying them evenly with gold over the carving.

He built the inner court with three courses of dressed stone and one course of lengths of cedar.

In the fourth year of Solomon's reign the foundation of the house of the LORD was laid, in the month of Ziv; and in the eleventh year, in the month of Bul, which is the eighth month, the house was finished in all its details according to the specification. It had taken seven years to build.

Solomon had been engaged on his building for thirteen years by the time he had finished it. He built the House of the Forest of Lebanon, a hundred cubits long, fifty broad, and thirty high, constructed of four rows of cedar columns, over which were laid lengths of cedar. It had a cedar roof, extending over the beams, which rested on the columns, fifteen in each row; and the number of the beams was forty-five. There were three rows of window-frames, and the windows corresponded to each other at three levels. All the doorways and the windows had square frames, and window corresponded to window at three levels.

He made also the colonnade, fifty cubits long and thirty broad,^e with a cornice above.

He built the Hall of Judgement, the hall containing the throne where he was to give judgement; this was panelled in cedar from floor to rafters.

8 His own house where he was to reside, in a court set back from the colonnade, and the house he made for Pharaoh's daughter whom he had married, were constructed like the hall.

9 All these were made of heavy blocks of stone, hewn to measure and trimmed with the saw on the inner and outer sides, from foundation to coping and from the court of the house^a as far as the great court. At the base were heavy stones, massive blocks, some ten and some eight cubits in size, and above were heavy stones dressed to measure, and cedar. The great court had three courses of dressed stone all around and a course of lengths of cedar; so had the inner court of the house of the LORD, and so had the vestibule of the house.

14 King Solomon fetched from Tyre Hiram, the son of a widow of the tribe of Naphtali. His father, a native of Tyre, had been a worker in bronze, and he himself was a man of great skill and ingenuity, versed in every kind of craftsmanship in bronze. Hiram came to King Solomon and executed all his works.

5^b He cast in a mould the two bronze pillars. One stood eighteen cubits high and it took a cord twelve cubits long to go round it; it was hollow, and the metal was four fingers thick.^c The second pillar was the same. He made two capitals of solid copper to set on the tops of the pillars, each capital five cubits high. He made two bands of ornamental network, in festoons of chain-work, for the capitals on the tops of the pillars, a band of network for each capital. Then he made pomegranates in two rows all round on top of the ornamental network of the one pillar; he did the same with the other capital. (The capitals at the tops of the pillars in the vestibule were shaped like lilies and were four cubits high.) Upon the capitals at the tops of the two pillars, immediately above the cushion, which was beyond the network upwards, were two hundred pomegranates in rows all round on the two capitals.^d Then he erected the pillars at the vestibule of the sanctuary. When he had erected the pillar on the right side, he named it Jachin; ^e and when he had erected the one on the left side, he named it Boaz. ^f On the tops of the pillars was lily-work. Thus the work of the pillars was finished.

3^g He then made the Sea of cast metal; it was round in shape, the diameter from rim to rim being ten cubits; it stood five cubits high, and it took a line thirty cubits long to go round it. All round the Sea on the outside under its rim, completely surrounding the thirty^h cubits of its circumference, were two rows of gourds, cast in one piece with the Sea itself. It was mounted on twelve oxen, three facing north, three west, three south, and three east, their hind quarters turned inwards; the Sea rested on top of them. Its thickness was a hand-breadth; its rim was made like that of a cup, shaped like the calyx of a lily; it held two thousand bath of water.

2⁷ He also made the ten trolleys of bronze; each trolley was four cubits long, 2⁸ four wide, and three high. This was the construction of the trolleys. They had panels set in frames; on these panels were portrayed lions, oxen, and cherubim, and similarly on the frames. Above and below the lions, oxen, and cherubim^a were fillets of hammered work of spiral design. Each trolley had four bronze wheels with axles of bronze; it also had four flanges and handles beneath the laver, and these handles were of cast metal with a spiral design on their sides. The opening for the basin was set within a crown which projected one cubit; the opening was round with a level edge,^b and it had decorations in relief. (The panels of the trolleys were square, not round.) The four wheels were beneath the panels, and the wheel-forks were made in one piece with the trolleys; the height of each wheel was a cubit and a half. The wheels were constructed like those of a chariot, their axles, hubs, spokes, and felloes being all of cast metal. The four handles were at the four corners of each trolley, of one piece with the trolley. At the top of the trolley there was a circular band half a cubit high; the struts and panels on^c the trolley were of one piece with it. On the plates, that is on the panels,^d he carved cherubim, lions, and palm-trees, wherever there was a blank space, with spiral work all round it. This is how the ten trolleys were made; all of them were cast alike, having the same size and the same shape.

He then made ten bronze basins, each holding forty bath and measuring four cubits; there was a basin for each of the ten trolleys. He put five trolleys on the right side of the house and five on the left side; and he put the Sea in the south-east corner of it.

Hiram made also the pots, the shovels, and the tossing-bowls. So he finished all the work which he had undertaken for King Solomon on the house of the LORD: the two pillars; the two bowl-shaped capitals on the tops of the pillars; the two ornamental networks to cover the two bowl-shaped capitals on the tops of the pillars; the four hundred pomegranates for the two networks, two rows of pomegranates for each network, to cover the bowl-shaped capitals on the two pillars; the ten trolleys and the ten basins on the trolleys; the one Sea and the twelve oxen which supported it; the pots, the shovels, and the tossing-bowls—all these objects in the house of the LORD which Hiram made for King Solomon being of bronze, burnished work. In the Plain of the Jordan the king cast them, in the foundry between Succoth and Zarethan.

Solomon put all these objects in their places; so great was the quantity of bronze used in their making that the weight of it was beyond all reckoning. He made also all the furnishings for the house of the LORD: the golden altar and the golden table upon which was set the Bread of the Presence; the lamp-stands of red gold, five on the right side and five on the left side of the inner shrine; the flowers, lamps, and tongs, of gold; the cups, snuffers, tossing-bowls, saucers, and firepans, of red gold; and the panels for the doors of the inner sanctuary, the Most Holy Place, and for the doors of the house,^f of gold.

When all the work which King Solomon did for the house of the LORD was completed, he brought in the sacred treasures of his father David, the silver, the gold, and the vessels, and deposited them in the storehouses of the house of the LORD.

1^a THEN SOLOMON SUMMONED THE ELDERS of Israel, all the heads of the tribes who were chiefs of families in Israel, to assemble in Jerusalem, in order to bring up the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD from the City of David, which is called Zion. All the men of Israel assembled in King Solomon's presence at the pilgrim-feast in the month Ethanim, the seventh month. When the elders of Israel had all come, the priests took the Ark of the LORD and carried it up with the Tent of the Presence and all the sacred furnishings of the Tent: it was the priests and the Levites together who carried them up. King Solomon and the whole congregation of Israel, assembled with him before the Ark, sacrificed sheep and oxen in numbers past counting or reckoning. Then the priests brought in the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD to its place, the inner shrine of the house, the Most Holy Place, beneath the wings of the cherubim. The cherubim spread their wings over the place of the Ark; they formed a screen above the Ark and its poles. The poles projected, and their ends could be seen from the Holy Place immediately in front of the inner shrine, but from nowhere else outside; they are there to this day. There was nothing inside the Ark but the two tablets of stone which Moses had deposited there at Horeb, the tablets of the covenant which the LORD made with the Israelites when they left Egypt.

10 Then the priests came out of the Holy Place, since the cloud was filling 11 the house of the LORD, and they could not continue to minister because of 2^b it, for the glory of the LORD filled his house. And Solomon said:

O LORD who hast set the sun in heaven,
but hast chosen to dwell in thick darkness,
13 here have I built thee a lofty house,
a habitation for thee to occupy for ever.

14 And as they stood waiting, the king turned round and blessed all the 15 assembly of Israel in these words: 'Blessed be the LORD the God of Israel who spoke directly to my father David and has himself fulfilled his promise. For he said, "From the day when I brought my people Israel out of Egypt, I chose no city out of all the tribes of Israel where I should build a house for my Name to be there, but I chose David to be over my people Israel." My father David had in mind to build a house in honour of the name of the LORD the God of Israel, but the LORD said to him, "You purposed to build a house in honour of my name; and your purpose was good. Nevertheless, you shall not build it; but the son who is to be born to you, he shall build the house in honour of my name." The LORD has now fulfilled his promise: I have succeeded my father David and taken his place on the throne of Israel, as the LORD promised; and I have built the 21 house in honour of the name of the LORD the God of Israel. I have assigned

^a Verses 1-9: cp. 2 Chr. 5. 2-10.

^b Verses 12-50: cp. 2 Chr. 6. 1-39.

therein a place for the Ark containing the Covenant of the LORD, which he made with our forefathers when he brought them out of Egypt.'

Then Solomon, standing in front of the altar of the LORD in the presence of the whole assembly of Israel, spread out his hands towards heaven and said, 'O LORD God of Israel, there is no god like thee in heaven above or on earth beneath, keeping covenant with thy servants and showing them constant love while they continue faithful to thee in heart and soul. Thou hast kept thy promise to thy servant David my father; by thy deeds this day thou hast fulfilled what thou didst say to him in words. Now therefore, O LORD God of Israel, keep this promise of thine to thy servant David my father: "You shall never want for a man appointed by me to sit on the throne of Israel, if only your sons look to their ways and walk before me as you have walked before me." And now, O God of Israel, let the words which thou didst speak to thy servant David my father be confirmed.

'But can God indeed dwell on earth? Heaven itself, the highest heaven, cannot contain thee; how much less this house that I have built! Yet attend to the prayer and the supplication of thy servant, O LORD my God, listen to the cry and the prayer which thy servant utters this day, that thine eyes may ever be upon this house night and day, this place of which thou didst say, "My Name shall be there"; so mayest thou hear thy servant when he prays towards this place. Hear the supplication of thy servant and of thy people Israel when they pray towards this place. Hear thou in heaven thy dwelling and, when thou hearest, forgive.

'When a man wrongs his neighbour and he is adjured to take an oath, and the adjuration is made before thy altar in this house, then do thou hear in heaven and act: be thou thy servants' judge, condemning the guilty man and bringing his deeds upon his own head, acquitting the innocent and rewarding him as his innocence may deserve.

'When thy people Israel are defeated by an enemy because they have sinned against thee, and they turn back to thee, confessing thy name and making their prayer and supplication to thee in this house, do thou hear in heaven; forgive the sin of thy people Israel and restore them to the land which thou gavest to their forefathers.

'When the heavens are shut up and there is no rain because thy servant and thy people Israel have sinned against thee, and when they pray towards this place, confessing thy name and forsaking their sin when they feel thy punishment, do thou hear in heaven and forgive their sin; so mayest thou teach them the good way which they should follow; and grant rain to thy land which thou hast given to thy people as their own possession.

'If there is famine in the land, or pestilence, or black blight or red, or locusts new-sloughed or fully grown; or if their enemies besiege them in any of their cities; or if plague or sickness befall them, then hear the prayer or supplication of every man among thy people Israel, as each one, prompted by the remorse of his own heart, spreads out his hands towards this house: hear it in heaven thy dwelling and forgive, and act. And, as thou knowest a man's heart, reward him according to his deeds, for thou alone knowest the hearts of all men; and so they will fear thee all their lives in the land thou gavest to our forefathers.

41 'The foreigner too, the man who does not belong to thy people Israel, 42 but has come from a distant land because of thy fame (for men shall hear of thy great fame and thy strong hand and arm outstretched), when he 43 comes and prays towards this house, hear in heaven thy dwelling and respond to the call which the foreigner makes to thee, so that like thy people Israel all peoples of the earth may know thy fame and fear thee, and learn that this house which I have built bears thy name.

44 'When thy people go to war with an enemy, wherever thou dost send them, when they pray to the LORD, turning towards this city which thou hast chosen and towards this house which I have built in honour of thy 45 name, do thou in heaven hear their prayer and supplication, and grant them justice.

46 'Should they sin against thee (and what man is free from sin?) and shouldst thou in thy anger give them over to an enemy, who carries them 47 captive to his own land, far or near; if in the land of their captivity they learn their lesson and make supplication again to thee in that land and say, 48 "We have sinned and acted perversely and wickedly", if they turn back to thee with heart and soul in the land of their captors, and pray to thee, turning towards their land which thou gavest to their forefathers and towards this city which thou didst choose and this house which I have 49 built in honour of thy name; then in heaven thy dwelling do thou hear their prayer and supplication, and grant them justice. Forgive thy people 50 their sins and transgressions against thee; put pity for them in their captors' hearts. For they are thy possession, thy people whom thou didst 51 bring out of Egypt, from the smelting-furnace, and so thine eyes are ever open to the entreaty of thy servant and of thy people Israel, and thou dost 52 hear whenever they call to thee. Thou thyself hast singled them out from all the peoples of the earth to be thy possession; so thou didst promise through thy servant Moses when thou didst bring our forefathers from 53 Egypt, O Lord God.'

54 When Solomon had finished this prayer and supplication to the LORD, he rose from before the altar of the LORD, where he had been kneeling with his hands spread out to heaven, stood up and in a loud voice blessed the 55 whole assembly of Israel: 'Blessed be the LORD who has given his people Israel rest, as he promised: not one of the promises he made through his 57 servant Moses has failed. The LORD our God be with us as he was with our forefathers; may he never leave us nor forsake us. May he turn our 58 hearts towards him, that we may conform to all his ways, observing his commandments, statutes, and judgements, as he commanded our fore-59 fathers. And may the words of my supplication to the LORD be with the LORD our God day and night, that, as the need arises day by day, he may 60 grant justice to his servant and justice to his people Israel. So all the peoples of the earth will know that the LORD is God, he and no other, and 61 you will be perfect in loyalty to the LORD our God as you are this day, conforming to his statutes and observing his commandments.'

62 When the king and all Israel came to offer sacrifices before the LORD, 63 Solomon offered as shared-offerings to the LORD twenty-two thousand oxen and a hundred and twenty thousand sheep; thus it was that the king and the Israelites dedicated the house of the LORD. On that day also the king consecrated the centre of the court which lay in front ^b of the house of the LORD; there he offered the whole-offering, the grain-offering, and the fat portions of the shared-offerings, because the bronze altar which stood before the LORD was too small to take them all, the whole-offering, the grain-offering, and the fat portions of the shared-offerings. 64^d

So Solomon and all Israel with him, a great assembly from Lebohamath to the Torrent of Egypt, celebrated the pilgrim-feast at that time before the LORD our God for seven days. On the eighth day he dismissed the people; and they blessed the king, and went home happy and glad at heart for all the prosperity granted by the LORD to his servant David and to his people Israel. 65

WHEN SOLOMON HAD FINISHED the house of the LORD and the royal palace and all the plans for building on which he had set his heart, the LORD appeared to him a second time, as he had appeared to him at Gibeon. The LORD said to him, 'I have heard the prayer and supplication which you have offered me; I have consecrated this house which you have built, to receive my Name for all time, and my eyes and my heart shall be fixed on it for ever. And if you, on your part, live in my sight as your father David lived, in integrity and uprightness, doing all I command you and observing my statutes and my judgements, then I will establish your royal throne over Israel for ever, as I promised your father David when I said, "You shall never want for a man upon the throne of Israel." But if you or your sons turn back from following me and do not observe my commandments and my statutes which I have set before you, and if you go and serve other gods and prostrate yourselves before them, then I will cut off Israel from the land which I gave them; I will renounce this house which I have consecrated in honour of my name, and Israel shall become a byword and an object lesson among all peoples. And this house will become a ruin; every passer-by will be appalled and gasp at the sight of it; and they will ask, "Why has the LORD so treated this land and this house?" The answer will be, "Because they forsook the LORD their God, who brought their forefathers out of Egypt, and clung to other gods, prostrating themselves before them and serving them; that is why the LORD has brought this great evil on them."' 9 1^c

Solomon had taken twenty years to build the two houses, the house of the LORD and the royal palace. Hiram king of Tyre had supplied him with all the timber, both cedar and pine, and all the gold, that he desired, and King Solomon gave Hiram twenty cities in the land of Galilee. But when Hiram went from Tyre to inspect the cities which Solomon had given him, they did not satisfy him, and he said, 'What kind of cities are these you have given me, my brother?' And so he called them the Land of Cabul,^e the name they still bear. Hiram sent a hundred and twenty talents of gold to the king. 10^d to build the house of the LORD, his own palace, the Millo, the wall of 16 Jerusalem, and Hazor, Megiddo, and Gezer. Gezer had been attacked and captured by Pharaoh king of Egypt, who had burnt it to the ground, put its Canaanite inhabitants to death, and given it as a marriage gift to his 17 daughter, Solomon's wife; and Solomon rebuilt it. He also built Lower 18 19 Beth-horon, Baalath, and Tamar in the wilderness, as well as all his store-cities, and the towns where he quartered his chariots and horses; and he carried out all his cherished plans for building in Jerusalem, in the Lebanon, 20 and throughout his whole dominion. All the survivors of the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites, who did not belong to Israel—21 that is their descendants who survived in the land, wherever the Israelites had been unable to annihilate them—were employed by Solomon on 22 perpetual forced labour, as they still are. But Solomon put none of the Israelites to forced labour; they were his fighting men,^a his captains and 23 lieutenants, and the commanders of his chariots and of his cavalry. The number of officers in charge of the foremen over Solomon's work was five hundred and fifty; these superintended the people engaged on the work.

24 Then Solomon brought Pharaoh's daughter up from the City of David to her own house which he had built for her; later on he built the Millo.

25 Three times a year Solomon used to offer whole-offerings and shared-offerings on the altar which he had built to the LORD, making smoke-offerings before the LORD. So he completed the house.

26 King Solomon built a fleet of ships at Ezion-geber, near Eloth^b on the 27 shore of the Red Sea,^c in Edom. Hiram sent men of his own to serve with 28 the fleet, experienced seamen, to work with Solomon's men; and they went to Ophir and brought back four hundred and twenty talents of gold, which they delivered to King Solomon.

0 1^d THE QUEEN OF SHEBA HEARD of Solomon's fame^e and came to test him
 2 with hard questions. She arrived in Jerusalem with a very large retinue, camels laden with spices, gold in great quantity, and precious stones. When 3 she came to Solomon, she told him everything she had in her mind, and Solomon answered all her questions; not one of them was too abstruse for 4 the king to answer. When the queen of Sheba saw all the wisdom of Sol-
 5 omon, the house which he had built, the food on his table, the courtiers sitting round him, and his attendants standing behind in their livery, his cupbearers, and the whole-offerings which he used to offer in the house of 6 the LORD, there was no more spirit left in her. Then she said to the king,
 'The report which I heard in my own country about you and your wisdom
 7 was true, but I did not believe it until I came and saw for myself. Indeed
 I was not told half of it; your wisdom and your prosperity go far beyond
 8 the report which I had of them. Happy are your wives, happy these courtiers 9 of yours who wait on you every day and hear your wisdom! Blessed be the LORD your God who has delighted in you and has set you on the throne of Israel; because he loves Israel for ever, he has made you their king to maintain law and justice.' Then she gave the king a hundred and twenty talents of gold, spices in great abundance, and precious stones. Never again came such a quantity of spices as the queen of Sheba gave to King Solomon. 10

Besides all this, Hiram's fleet of ships, which had brought gold from Ophir, brought in also from Ophir cargoes of almuq wood and precious stones. The king used the wood to make stools for the house of the LORD and for the royal palace, as well as harps and lutes for the singers. No such almuq wood has ever been imported or even seen since that time. 11 12

And King Solomon gave the queen of Sheba all she desired, whatever she asked, in addition to all that he gave her of his royal bounty. So she departed and returned with her retinue to her own land. 13

Now the weight of gold which Solomon received yearly was six hundred and sixty-six talents, in addition to the tolls levied by the customs officers and profits on foreign trade, and the tribute of ^a the kings of Arabia and the regional governors. 14 15

King Solomon made two hundred shields of beaten gold, and six hundred shekels of gold went to the making of each one; he also made three hundred bucklers of beaten gold, and three minas of gold went to the making of each buckler. The king put these into the House of the Forest of Lebanon. 16 17

The king also made a great throne of ivory and overlaid it with fine gold. Six steps led up to the throne; at the back of the throne there was the head of a calf. There were arms on each side of the seat, with a lion standing beside each of them, and twelve lions stood on the six steps, one at either end of each step. Nothing like it had ever been made for any monarch. All Solomon's drinking vessels were of gold, and all the plate in the House of the Forest of Lebanon was of red gold; no silver was used, for it was reckoned of no value in the days of Solomon. The king had a fleet of merchantmen at sea with Hiram's fleet; once every three years this fleet of merchantmen came home, bringing gold and silver, ivory, apes and monkeys. 18 19 20 21 22

Thus King Solomon outdid all the kings of the earth in wealth and wisdom, and all the world courted him, to hear the wisdom which God had put in his heart. Each brought his gift with him, vessels of silver and gold, garments, perfumes and spices, horses and mules, so much year by year. 23 24 25

And Solomon got together many chariots and horses; he had fourteen hundred chariots and twelve thousand horses, and he stabled some in the chariot-towns and kept others at hand in Jerusalem. The king made silver as common in Jerusalem as stones, and cedar as plentiful as sycomore-fig in the Shephelah. Horses were imported from Egypt and Coa for Solomon; the royal merchants obtained them from Coa by purchase. Chariots were imported from Egypt for six hundred silver shekels each, and horses for a hundred and fifty; in the same way the merchants obtained them for export from all the kings of the Hittites and the kings of Aram. 26^b 27 28 29

King Solomon was a lover of women, and besides Pharaoh's daughter he married many foreign women, Moabite, Ammonite, Edomite, Sidonian, and Hittite, from the nations with whom the LORD had forbidden the 11 2

Israelites to intermarry, 'because', he said, 'they will entice you to serve 3 their gods.' But Solomon was devoted to them and loved them dearly. He 4 had seven hundred wives, who were princesses, and three hundred con-cubines, and they turned his heart from the truth. When he grew old, his 5 wives turned his heart to follow other gods, and he did not remain wholly 6 loyal to the LORD his God as his father David had been. He followed 7 Ashtoreth, goddess of the Sidonians, and Milcom, the loathsome god of the Ammonites. Thus Solomon did what was wrong in the eyes of the 8 LORD, and was not loyal to the LORD like his father David. He built a 9 hill-shrine for Kemosh, the loathsome god of Moab, on the height to the 10 east of Jerusalem, and for Molech, the loathsome god of the Ammonites.
11 Thus he did for the gods to which all his foreign wives burnt offerings and made sacrifices. The LORD was angry with Solomon because his heart had 12 turned away from the LORD the God of Israel, who had appeared to him twice and had strictly commanded him not to follow other gods; but he 13 disobeyed the LORD's command. The LORD therefore said to Solomon, 'Because you have done this and have not kept my covenant and my statutes as I commanded you, I will tear the kingdom from you and give 14 it to your servant. Nevertheless, for the sake of your father David I will 15 not do this in your day; I will tear it out of your son's hand. Even so not the whole kingdom; I will leave him one tribe for the sake of my servant
David and for the sake of Jerusalem, my chosen city.'

14 Then the LORD raised up an adversary for Solomon, Hadad the Edomite, 15 of the royal house of Edom. At the time when David reduced Edom, his commander-in-chief Joab had destroyed every male in the country when 16 he went into it to bury the slain. He and the armies of Israel remained there 17 for six months, until he had destroyed every male in Edom. Then Hadad, who was still a boy, fled the country with some of his father's Edomite 18 servants, intending to enter Egypt. They set out from Midian, made their way to Paran and, taking some men from there, came to Pharaoh king of 19 Egypt, who assigned Hadad a house and maintenance and made him a grant of land. Hadad found great favour with Pharaoh, who gave him in 20 marriage a sister of Queen Tahpenes his wife. She bore him his son Genubath; Tahpenes weaned the child in Pharaoh's house, and he lived 21 there along with Pharaoh's children. When Hadad heard in Egypt that David rested with his forefathers and that his commander-in-chief Joab was also dead, he said to Pharaoh, 'Let me go so that I may return to my 22 own country.' 'What is it that you find wanting in my country', said
Pharaoh, 'that you want to go back to your own?' 'Nothing,' said Hadad, 23 'but do, pray, let me go.' He remained an adversary for Israel all through Solomon's reign. This is the harm that Hadad caused: he maintained a stranglehold on Israel and became king of Edom.

23 Then God raised up another adversary against Solomon, Rezon son of 24 Eliada, who had fled from his master Hadadezer king of Zobah. He gathered men about him and became a captain of freebooters, who came to Damascus and occupied it; he became king there.

26^a Jeroboam son of Nebat, one of Solomon's courtiers, an Ephrathite from

^a Verse 25 transposed to follow verse 22.

Zeredah, whose widowed mother was named Zeruah, rebelled against the king. And this is the story of his rebellion. Solomon had built the Millo and closed the breach in the wall of the city of his father David. Now this Jeroboam was a man of great energy; and Solomon, seeing how the young man worked, had put him in charge of all the labour-gangs in the tribal district of Joseph. On one occasion Jeroboam had left Jerusalem, and the prophet Ahijah from Shiloh met him on the road. The prophet was wrapped in a new cloak, and the two of them were alone in the open country. Then Ahijah took hold of the new cloak he was wearing, tore it into twelve pieces and said to Jeroboam, 'Take ten pieces, for this is the word of the LORD the God of Israel: "I am going to tear the kingdom from the hand of Solomon and give you ten tribes. But one tribe will remain his, for the sake of my servant David and for the sake of Jerusalem, the city I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel. I have done this because Solomon has forsaken me; he has prostrated himself before Ashtoreth goddess of the Sidonians, Kemosh god of Moab, and Milcom god of the Ammonites, and has not conformed to my ways. He has not done what is right in my eyes or observed my statutes and judgements as David his father did. Nevertheless I will not take the whole kingdom from him, but will maintain his rule as long as he lives, for the sake of my chosen servant David, who did observe my commandments and statutes. But I will take the kingdom, that is the ten tribes, from his son and give it to you. One tribe I will give to his son, that my servant David may always have a flame burning before me in Jerusalem, the city which I chose to receive my Name. But I will appoint you to rule over all that you can desire, and to be king over Israel. If you pay heed to all my commands, if you conform to my ways and do what is right in my eyes, observing my statutes and commandments as my servant David did, then I will be with you. I will establish your family for ever as I did for David; I will give Israel to you, and punish David's descendants as they have deserved, but not for ever."'

After this Solomon sought to kill Jeroboam, but he fled to King Shishak in Egypt and remained there till Solomon's death.

The other acts and events of Solomon's reign, and all his wisdom, are recorded in the annals of Solomon. The reign of King Solomon in Jerusalem over the whole of Israel lasted forty years. Then he rested with his forefathers and was buried in the city of David his father, and he was succeeded by his son Rehoboam.

The divided kingdom

REHOBAM WENT TO SHECHEM, for all Israel had gone there to make him king. When Jeroboam son of Nebat, who was still in Egypt, heard of it, he remained there, having taken refuge there to escape King Solomon. They now recalled him, and he and all the assembly of Israel came to Rehoboam and said, 'Your father laid a cruel yoke upon us; but if you will now lighten the cruel slavery he imposed on us and the heavy yoke he laid

^a Verses 41-43: cp. 2 Chr. 9. 29-31.

^b Verses 1-19: cp. 2 Chr. 10. 1-19.

5 on us, we will serve you.' 'Give me three days,' he said, 'and come back 6 again.' So the people went away. King Rehoboam then consulted the elders who had been in attendance on his father Solomon while he lived:
7 'What answer do you advise me to give to this people?' And they said, 'If today you are willing to serve this people, show yourself their servant now 8 and speak kindly to them, and they will be your servants ever after.' But he rejected the advice which the elders gave him. He next consulted those 9 who had grown up with him, the young men in attendance, and asked them, 'What answer do you advise me to give to this people's request that 10 I should lighten the yoke which my father laid on them?' The young men replied, 'Give this answer to the people who say that your father made their yoke heavy and ask you to lighten it; tell them: "My little finger is 11 thicker than my father's loins. My father laid a heavy yoke on you; I will make it heavier. My father used the whip on you; but I will use the lash." 12 Jeroboam and the people all came back to Rehoboam on the third day, as 13 the king had ordered. And the king gave them a harsh answer. He rejected 14 the advice which the elders had given him and spoke to the people as the young men had advised: 'My father made your yoke heavy; I will make it 15 heavier. My father used the whip on you; but I will use the lash.' So the king would not listen to the people; for the LORD had given this turn to the affair, in order that the word he had spoken by Ahijah of Shiloh to Jeroboam son of Nebat might be fulfilled.

16 When all Israel saw that the king would not listen to them, they answered:

What share have we in David?

We have no lot in the son of Jesse.

Away to your homes, O Israel;

now see to your own house, David.

17 So Israel went to their homes, and Rehoboam ruled over those Israelites who lived in the cities of Judah.

18 Then King Rehoboam sent out Adoram, the commander of the forced levies, but the Israelites stoned him to death; thereupon King Reho-19 boam mounted his chariot in haste and fled to Jerusalem. From that day to this, the whole of Israel has been in rebellion against the house of David.

20 When the men of Israel heard that Jeroboam had returned, they sent and called him to the assembly and made him king over the whole of Israel. The tribe of Judah alone followed the house of David.

21^a When Rehoboam reached Jerusalem, he assembled all the house of Judah, the tribe of Benjamin also, a hundred and eighty thousand chosen 22 warriors, to fight against the house of Israel and recover his kingdom. But 23 the word of God came to Shemaiah the man of God: 'Say to Rehoboam son of Solomon, king of Judah, and to the house of Judah and to Benjamin 24 and the rest of the people, "This is the word of the LORD: You shall not go up to make war on your kinsmen the Israelites. Return to your homes, for this is my will."' So they listened to the word of the LORD and returned home, as the LORD had told them.

^a Verses 21-24: cp. 2 Chr. 11. 1-4.

THEN JEROBOAM REBUILT SHECHEM in the hill-country of Ephraim and took up residence there; from there he went out and built Penuel. 'As things now stand,' he said to himself, 'the kingdom will revert to the house of David. If this people go up to sacrifice in the house of the LORD in Jerusalem, it will revive their allegiance to their lord Rehoboam king of Judah, and they will kill me and return to King Rehoboam.' After giving thought to the matter he made two calves of gold and said to the people, 'It is too much trouble for you to go up to Jerusalem; here are your gods, Israel, that brought you up from Egypt.' One he set up at Bethel and the other he put at Dan, and this thing became a sin in Israel; the people went to Bethel to worship the one, and all the way to Dan to worship the other. He set up shrines on the hill-tops also and appointed priests from every class of the people, who did not belong to the Levites. He instituted a pilgrim-feast on the fifteenth day of the eighth month like that in Judah, and he offered sacrifices upon the altar. This he did at Bethel, sacrificing to the calves that he had made and compelling the priests of the hill-shrines, which he had set up, to serve at Bethel. So he went up to the altar that he had made at Bethel on the fifteenth day of the eighth month; there, in a month of his own choosing, he instituted for the Israelites a pilgrim-feast and himself went up to the altar to burn the sacrifice.

As Jeroboam stood by the altar to burn the sacrifice, a man of God from Judah, moved by the word of the LORD, appeared at Bethel. He inveighed against the altar in the LORD's name, crying out, 'O altar, altar! This is the word of the LORD: "Listen! A child shall be born to the house of David, named Josiah. He will sacrifice upon you the priests of the hill-shrines who make offerings upon you, and he will burn human bones upon you."' He gave a sign the same day: 'This is the sign which the LORD has ordained: This altar will be rent in pieces and the ashes upon it will be spilt.' When King Jeroboam heard the sentence which the man of God pronounced against the altar at Bethel, he pointed to him from the altar and said, 'Seize that man!' Immediately the hand which he had pointed at him became paralysed, so that he could not draw it back. The altar too was rent in pieces and the ashes were spilt, in fulfilment of the sign that the man of God had given at the LORD's command. The king appealed to the man of God to pacify the LORD his God and pray for him that his hand might be restored. The man of God did as he asked; his hand was restored and became as it had been before. Then the king said to the man of God, 'Come home and take refreshment at my table, and let me give you a present.' But the man of God answered, 'If you were to give me half your house, I would not enter it with you: I will eat and drink nothing in this place, for the LORD's command to me was to eat and drink nothing, and not to go back by the way I came.' So he went back another way; he did not return by the road he had taken to Bethel.

At that time there was an aged prophet living in Bethel. His sons came and recounted to him all that the man of God had done in Bethel that day; they also told their father what he had said to the king. Their father said to them, 'Which road did he take?' They pointed out the road taken by the man of God who had come from Judah. He said to his sons, 'Saddle an

14 ass for me.' They saddled the ass, and he mounted it and went after the man of God. He found him seated under a terebinth and said to him, 'Are you the man of God who came from Judah?' And he said, 'Yes, I am.' 15 16 'Come home and eat with me', said the prophet. 'I cannot go back with you or enter your house,' said the other; 'I can neither eat nor drink with 17 you in this place, for it was told me by the word of the LORD: "You shall eat and drink nothing there, nor shall you go back the way you came."' 18 And the old man said to him, 'I also am a prophet, as you are; and an angel commanded me by the word of the LORD to bring you home with me to eat and drink with me.' He was lying; but the man of Judah went back 19 with him and ate and drank in his house. While they were still seated at table the word of the LORD came to the prophet who had brought him back, 20 and he cried out to the man of God from Judah, 'This is the word of the LORD: "You have defied the word of the LORD your God and have not 21 obeyed his command; you have come back to eat and to drink in the place where he forbade it; therefore your body shall not be laid in the grave of your forefathers."' 22

23 After they had eaten and drunk, he saddled an ass for the prophet whom 24 he had brought back. As he went on his way a lion met him and killed him, and his body was left lying in the road, with the ass and the lion both 25 standing beside it. Some passers-by saw the body lying in the road and the lion standing beside it, and they brought the news to the city where the old 26 prophet lived. When the prophet who had caused him to break his journey heard it, he said, 'It is the man of God who defied the word of the LORD. The LORD has given him to the lion, and it has broken his neck and killed 27 him in fulfilment of the word of the LORD.' He told his sons to saddle an ass and, when they had saddled it, he set out and found the body lying in 28 the road with the ass and the lion standing beside it; the lion had neither devoured the body nor broken the back of the ass. Then the prophet lifted 29 the body of the man of God, laid it on the ass and brought it back to his own city to mourn over it and bury it. He laid the body in his own grave 30 and they mourned for him, saying, 'My brother, my brother!' After burying him, he said to his sons, 'When I die, bury me in the grave where the 31 man of God lies buried; lay my bones beside his; for the sentence which he pronounced at the LORD's command against the altar in Bethel and all the 32 hill-shrines of Samaria shall be carried out.'

33 After this Jeroboam still did not abandon his evil ways but went on appointing priests for the hill-shrines from all classes of the people; any man who offered himself he would consecrate to be priest of a hill-shrine. 34 By doing this he brought guilt upon his own house and doomed it to utter destruction.

1 2 At that time Jeroboam's son Abijah fell ill, and Jeroboam said to his wife, 'Come now, disguise yourself so that people may not be able to recognize you as my wife, and go to Shiloh. Ahijah the prophet is there, the man who 3 said I was to be king over this people. Take with you ten loaves, some raisins, and a flask of syrup, and go to him; he will tell you what will happen to the 4 child.' Jeroboam's wife did so; she set off at once for Shiloh and came to Ahijah's house. Now Ahijah could not see, for his eyes were fixed in the blindness of old age, and the LORD had said to him, 'The wife of Jeroboam 5 is on her way to consult you about her son, who is ill; you shall give her 6 such and such an answer.' When she came in, concealing who she was, and 6 Ahijah heard her footsteps at the door, he said, 'Come in, wife of Jeroboam.

Why conceal who you are? I have heavy news for you. Go and tell Jeroboam: 7
"This is the word of the LORD the God of Israel: I raised you out of the 8 people and appointed you prince over my people Israel; I tore away the 8 kingdom from the house of David and gave it to you; but you have not been like my servant David, who kept my commands and followed me 9 with his whole heart, doing only what was right in my eyes. You have out- 9 done all your predecessors in wickedness; you have provoked me to anger by making for yourself other gods and images of cast metal; and you have 10 turned your back on me. For this I will bring disaster on the house of Jeroboam and I will destroy them all, every mother's son, whether still 10 under the protection of the family or not, and I will sweep away the house of Jeroboam in Israel, as a man sweeps up dung until none is left. Those 11 of that house who die in the city shall be food for the dogs, and those who die in the country shall be food for the birds. It is the word of the LORD."

'You must go home now; the moment you set foot in the city, the child 12 will die. All Israel will mourn for him and bury him; he alone of all Jero- 13 boam's family will have proper burial, because in him alone could the LORD the God of Israel find anything good. Then the LORD will set up a king 14 over Israel who shall put an end to the house of Jeroboam. This first; and what next? The LORD will strike Israel, till it trembles like a reed in the 15 water; he will uproot its people from this good land which he gave to their forefathers and scatter them beyond the Euphrates, because they have 16 made their sacred poles and provoked the LORD's anger. And he will 16 abandon Israel for the sins that Jeroboam has committed and has led Israel to commit.' Jeroboam's wife went home at once to Tirzah and, as 17 she crossed the threshold of the house, the boy died. They buried him, and 18 all Israel mourned over him; and thus the word of the LORD was fulfilled which he had spoken through his servant Ahijah the prophet.

The other events of Jeroboam's reign, in war and peace, are recorded in 19 the annals of the kings of Israel. He reigned twenty-two years; then he 20 rested with his forefathers and was succeeded by his son Nadab.

IN JUDAH REHOBOAM SON OF SOLOMON had become king. He was 21 forty-one years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned for seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the LORD had chosen out of all the tribes of Israel to receive his Name. Rehoboam's mother was a woman of 22 Ammon called Naamah. Judah did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD, rousing his jealous indignation by the sins they committed, beyond any- 22 thing that their forefathers had done. They erected hill-shrines, sacred pillars, and sacred poles, on every high hill and under every spreading tree. 23 Worse still, all over the country there were male prostitutes attached to the shrines, and the people adopted all the abominable practices of the nations 24 whom the LORD had dispossessed in favour of Israel.

25^a In the fifth year of Rehoboam's reign Shishak king of Egypt attacked 26 Jerusalem. He removed the treasures of the house of the LORD and of the 27 royal palace, and seized everything, including all the shields of gold that 28 Solomon had made. King Rehoboam replaced them with bronze shields and entrusted them to the officers of the escort who guarded the entrance of the royal palace. Whenever the king entered the house of the LORD, the escort carried them; afterwards they returned them to the guard-room.

29^b The other acts and events of Rehoboam's reign are recorded in the annals 30 of the kings of Judah. There was continual fighting between him and 31 Jeroboam. He rested with his forefathers and was buried with them in the city of David. (His mother was a woman of Ammon, whose name was Naamah.) He was succeeded by his son Abijam.

15 In the eighteenth year of the reign of Jeroboam son of Nebat, Abijam
 2 became king of Judah. He reigned in Jerusalem for three years; his mother
 3 was Maacah granddaughter of Abishalom. All the sins that his father had 4 committed before him he committed too, nor was he faithful to the LORD his God as his ancestor David had been. But for David's sake the LORD his God gave him a flame to burn in Jerusalem, by establishing his dynasty 5 and making Jerusalem secure, because David had done what was right in the eyes of the LORD and had not disobeyed any of his commandments all 7 his life, except in the matter of Uriah the Hittite.^c The other acts and events of Abijam's reign are recorded in the annals of the kings of Judah.
 8 There was fighting between Abijam and Jeroboam. And Abijam rested with his forefathers and was buried in the city of David; and he was succeeded by his son Asa.

9 In the twentieth year of Jeroboam king of Israel, Asa became king of 10 Judah. He reigned in Jerusalem for forty-one years; his grandmother was 11 Maacah granddaughter of Abishalom. Asa did what was right in the eyes 12 of the LORD, like his ancestor David. He expelled from the land the male prostitutes attached to the shrines and did away with all the idols which 13^d his predecessors had made. He even deprived his own grandmother Maacah of her rank as queen mother because she had an obscene object made for the worship of Asherah; Asa cut it down and burnt it in the gorge 14 of the Kidron. Although the hill-shrines were allowed to remain, Asa 15 himself remained faithful to the LORD all his life. He brought into the house of the LORD all his father's votive offerings and his own, gold and silver and sacred vessels.

17^e Asa was at war with Baasha king of Israel all through their reigns. Baasha king of Israel invaded Judah and fortified Ramah to cut off all access to 18 Asa king of Judah. So Asa took all the gold and silver that remained in the treasuries of the house of the LORD and of the royal palace, and sent his servants with them to Ben-hadad son of Tabrimmon, son of Hezion, king 19 of Aram, whose capital was Damascus, with instructions to say, 'There is an alliance between us, as there was between our fathers. I now send you this present of silver and gold; break off your alliance with Baasha king of Israel, so that he may abandon his campaign against me.' Ben-hadad listened willingly to King Asa; he ordered the commanders of his armies to move against the cities of Israel, and they attacked Iyyon, Dan, Abell-beth-maacah, and that part of Kinnereth which marches with the land of Naphtali. When Baasha heard of it, he stopped fortifying Ramah and fell back on Tirzah. Then King Asa issued a proclamation requiring every man in Judah to join in removing the stones of Ramah and the timbers with which Baasha had fortified it; no one was exempted; and he used them to fortify Geba of Benjamin and Mizpah.

All the other events of Asa's reign, his exploits and his achievements, and the cities he built, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Judah. But in his old age his feet were crippled by disease. He rested with his forefathers and was buried with them in the city of his ancestor David; and he was succeeded by his son Jehoshaphat.

Nadab son of Jeroboam became king of Israel in the second year of Asa king of Judah, and he reigned for two years. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD and followed in his father's footsteps, repeating the sin which he had led Israel to commit. Baasha son of Ahijah, of the house of Issachar, conspired against him and attacked him at Gibbethon, a Philistine city, which Nadab was besieging with all his forces. And Baasha slew him and usurped the throne in the third year of Asa king of Judah. As soon as he became king, he struck down all the family of Jeroboam, destroying every living soul and leaving not one survivor. Thus the word of the LORD was fulfilled which he spoke through his servant Ahijah the Shilonite. This happened because of the sins of Jeroboam and the sins which he led Israel to commit, and because he had provoked the anger of the LORD the God of Israel. The other events of Nadab's reign and all his acts are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel. Asa was at war with Baasha king of Israel all through their reigns.

In the third year of Asa king of Judah, Baasha son of Ahijah became king of all Israel in Tirzah and reigned twenty-four years. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD and followed in Jeroboam's footsteps, repeating the sin which he had led Israel to commit. Then the word of the LORD came to Jehu son of Hanani concerning Baasha: 'I raised you from the dust and made you a prince over my people Israel, but you have followed in the footsteps of Jeroboam and have led my people Israel into sin, and have provoked me to anger with their sins. Therefore I will sweep away Baasha and his house and will deal with it as I dealt with the house of Jeroboam son of Nebat. Those of Baasha's family who die in the city shall be food for the dogs, and those who die in the country shall be food for the birds.' The other events of Baasha's reign, his achievements and his exploits, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel. Baasha rested with his forefathers and was buried in Tirzah; and he was succeeded by his son Elah. Moreover the word of the LORD concerning Baasha and his family came through the prophet Jehu son of Hanani, because of all the wrong that he had done in the eyes of the LORD, thereby provoking his anger: because he had not only sinned like the house of Jeroboam, but had also brought destruction upon it.

8 In the twenty-sixth year of Asa king of Judah, Elah son of Baasha be-9 came king of Israel and he reigned in Tirzah two years. Zimri, who was in his service commanding half the chariotry, plotted against him. The king was in Tirzah drinking himself drunk in the house of Arza, comptroller 10 of the household there, when Zimri broke in and attacked him, assassinated him and made himself king. This took place in the twenty-seventh 11 year of Asa king of Judah. As soon as he had become king and was enthroned, he struck down all the family of Baasha and left not a single 12 mother's son alive, kinsman or friend. He destroyed the whole family of Baasha, and thus fulfilled the word of the LORD concerning Baasha, spoken 13 through the prophet Jehu. This was what came of all the sins which Baasha and his son Elah had committed and the sins into which they had led 14 Israel, provoking the anger of the LORD the God of Israel with their worthless idols. The other events and acts of Elah's reign are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel.

15 In the twenty-seventh year of Asa king of Judah, Zimri reigned in Tirzah for seven days. At the time the army was investing the Philistine 16 city of Gibbethon. When the Israelite troops in the field heard of Zimri's conspiracy and the murder of the king, there and then in the camp they 17 made their commander Omri king of Israel by common consent. Then Omri and his whole force withdrew from Gibbethon and laid siege to 18 Tirzah. Zimri, as soon as he saw that the city had fallen, retreated to the keep of the royal palace, set the whole of it on fire over his head and so 19 perished. This was what came of the sin he had committed by doing what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD and following in the footsteps of Jero-20 boam, repeating the sin into which he had led Israel. The other events of Zimri's reign, and his conspiracy, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel.

21 Thereafter the people of Israel were split into two factions: one supported Tibni son of Ginath, determined to make him king; the other 22 supported Omri. Omri's party proved the stronger; Tibni lost his life and Omri became king.

23 It was in the thirty-first year of Asa king of Judah that Omri became king 24 of Israel and he reigned twelve years, six of them in Tirzah. He bought the hill of Samaria from Shemer for two talents of silver and built a city on it 25 which he named Samaria after Shemer the owner of the hill. Omri did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD; he outdid all his predecessors in 26 wickedness. He followed in the footsteps of Jeroboam son of Nebat, repeating the sins which he had led Israel to commit, so that they provoked 27 the anger of the LORD their God with their worthless idols. The other events of Omri's reign, and his exploits, are recorded in the annals of the 28 kings of Israel. So Omri rested with his forefathers and was buried in Samaria; and he was succeeded by his son Ahab.

Ahab and Elijah

AHAB SON OF OMRI BECAME KING of Israel in the thirty-eighth year of Asa king of Judah, and he reigned over Israel in Samaria for twenty-two years. He did more that was wrong in the eyes of the LORD than all his predecessors. As if it were not enough for him to follow the sinful ways of Jeroboam son of Nebat, he contracted a marriage with Jezebel daughter of Ethbaal king of Sidon, and went and worshipped Baal; he prostrated himself before him and erected an altar to him in the temple of Baal which he built in Samaria. He also set up a sacred pole; indeed he did more to provoke the anger of the LORD the God of Israel than all the kings of Israel before him. In his days Hiel of Bethel rebuilt Jericho; laying its foundations cost him his eldest son Abiram, and the setting up of its gates cost him Segub his youngest son. Thus was fulfilled what the LORD had spoken through Joshua son of Nun.

Elijah the Tishbite, of Tishbe in Gilead, said to Ahab, 'I swear by the life of the LORD the God of Israel, whose servant I am, that there shall be neither dew nor rain these coming years unless I give the word.' Then the word of the LORD came to him: 'Leave this place and turn eastwards; and go into hiding in the ravine of Kerith east of the Jordan. You shall drink from the stream, and I have commanded the ravens to feed you there.' He did as the LORD had told him: he went and stayed in the ravine of Kerith east of the Jordan, and the ravens brought him bread and meat morning and evening, and he drank from the stream. After a while the stream dried up, for there had been no rain in the land. Then the word of the LORD came to him: 'Go now to Zarephath, a village of Sidon, and stay there; I have commanded a widow there to feed you.' So he went off to Zarephath. When he reached the entrance to the village, he saw a widow gathering sticks, and he called to her and said, 'Please bring me a little water in a pitcher to drink.' As she went to fetch it, he called after her, 'Bring me, please, a piece of bread as well.' But she said, 'As the LORD your God lives, I have no food to sustain me except a handful of flour in a jar and a little oil in a flask. Here I am, gathering two or three sticks to go and cook something for my son and myself before we die.' 'Never fear,' said Elijah; 'go and do as you say; but first make me a small cake from what you have and bring it out to me; and after that make something for your son and yourself. For this is the word of the LORD the God of Israel: "The jar of flour shall not give out nor the flask of oil fail, until the LORD sends rain on the land."' She went and did as Elijah had said, and there was food for him and for her and her family for a long time. The jar of flour did not give out nor did the flask of oil fail, as the word of the LORD foretold through Elijah.

Afterwards the son of this woman, the mistress of the house, fell ill and grew worse and worse, until at last his breathing ceased. Then she said to Elijah, 'What made you interfere, you man of God? You came here to bring my sins to light and kill my son!' 'Give me your son', he said. He took the boy from her arms and carried him up to the roof-chamber where his lodging was, and laid him on his own bed. Then he called out to the LORD, 'O LORD my God, is this thy care for the widow with whom I lodge,

21 that thou hast been so cruel to her son?' Then he breathed deeply ^a upon the 22 child three times and called on the LORD, 'O LORD my God, let the breath of 23 life, I pray, return to the body of this child.' The LORD listened to Elijah's 24 cry, and the breath of life returned to the child's body, and he revived;
Elijah lifted him up and took him down from the roof into the house, gave him to his mother and said, 'Look, your son is alive.' Then she said to Elijah, 'Now I know for certain that you are a man of God and that the word of the LORD on your lips is truth.'

18 Time went by, and in the third year the word of the LORD came to Elijah: 'Go and show yourself to Ahab, and I will send rain upon the land.'
2 So he went to show himself to Ahab. At this time the famine in Samaria 3 was at its height, and Ahab summoned Obadiah, the comptroller of his 4 household, a devout worshipper of the LORD. When Jezebel massacred the prophets of the LORD, he had taken a hundred of them and hidden them in caves, fifty by fifty, giving them food and drink to keep them alive.
5 Ahab said to Obadiah, 'Let us go through the land, both of us, to every spring and gully; if we can find enough grass we may keep the horses and 6 mules alive and lose none of our cattle.' They divided the land between them for their survey, Ahab going one way by himself and Obadiah another.

7 As Obadiah was on his way, Elijah met him. Obadiah recognized him and 8 fell prostrate before him and said, 'Can it be you, my lord Elijah?' 'Yes,' 9 he said, 'it is I; go and tell your master that Elijah is here.' 'What wrong have I done?' said Obadiah. 'Why should you give me into Ahab's hands?
10 He will put me to death. As the LORD your God lives, there is no nation or kingdom to which my master has not sent in search of you. If they said, "He is not here", he made that kingdom or nation swear on oath that they 11 could not find you. Yet now you say, "Go and tell your master that Elijah 12 is here." What will happen? As soon as I leave you, the spirit of the LORD will carry you away, who knows where? I shall go and tell Ahab, and when he fails to find you, he will kill me. Yet I have been a worshipper of the 13 LORD from boyhood. Have you not been told, my lord, what I did when Jezebel put the LORD's prophets to death, how I hid a hundred of them in 14 caves, fifty by fifty, and kept them alive with food and drink? And now you 15 say, "Go and tell your master that Elijah is here"! He will kill me.' Elijah answered, 'As the LORD of Hosts lives, whose servant I am, I swear that I 16 will show myself to him this very day.' So Obadiah went to find Ahab and gave him the message, and Ahab went to meet Elijah.

17 As soon as Ahab saw Elijah, he said to him, 'Is it you, you troubler of 18 Israel?' 'It is not I who have troubled Israel,' he replied, 'but you and your father's family, by forsaking the commandments of the LORD and 19 following Baal. But now, send and summon all Israel to meet me on Mount Carmel, and the four hundred and fifty prophets of Baal with them and the four hundred prophets of the goddess Asherah, who are Jezebel's pen-20 sioners.' So Ahab sent out to all the Israelites and assembled the prophets 21 on Mount Carmel. Elijah stepped forward and said to the people, 'How long will you sit on the fence? If the LORD is God, follow him; but if Baal,

^a Or stretched himself.

then follow him.' Not a word did they answer. Then Elijah said to the people, 'I am the only prophet of the LORD still left, but there are four hundred and fifty prophets of Baal. Bring two bulls; let them choose one for themselves, cut it up and lay it on the wood without setting fire to it, and I will prepare the other and lay it on the wood without setting fire to it. You shall invoke your god by name and I will invoke the LORD by name; and the god who answers by fire, he is God.' And all the people shouted their approval.

Then Elijah said to the prophets of Baal, 'Choose one of the bulls and offer it first, for there are more of you; invoke your god by name, but do not set fire to the wood.' So they took the bull provided for them and offered it, and they invoked Baal by name from morning until noon, crying, 'Baal, Baal, answer us'; but there was no sound, no answer. They danced wildly beside the altar they had set up. At midday Elijah mocked them: 'Call louder, for he is a god; it may be he is deep in thought, or engaged, or on a journey; or he may have gone to sleep and must be woken up.' They cried still louder and, as was their custom, gashed themselves with swords and spears until the blood ran. All afternoon they raved and ranted till the hour of the regular sacrifice, but still there was no sound, no answer, no sign of attention.

Then Elijah said to all the people, 'Come here to me.' They all came, and he repaired the altar of the LORD which had been torn down. He took twelve stones, one for each tribe of the sons of Jacob, the man named Israel by the word of the LORD. With these stones he built an altar in the name of the LORD; he dug a trench round it big enough to hold two measures of seed; he arranged the wood, cut up the bull and laid it on the wood. Then he said, 'Fill four jars with water and pour it on the whole-offering and on the wood.' They did so, and he said, 'Do it again.' They did it again, and he said, 'Do it a third time.' They did it a third time, and the water ran all round the altar and even filled the trench. At the hour of the regular sacrifice the prophet Elijah came forward and said, 'LORD God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known today that thou art God in Israel and that I am thy servant and have done all these things at thy command. Answer me, O LORD, answer me and let this people know that thou, LORD, art God and that it is thou that hast caused them to be backsliders.'^a Then the fire of the LORD fell. It consumed the whole-offering, the wood, the stones, and the earth, and licked up the water in the trench. When all the people saw it, they fell prostrate and cried, 'The LORD is God, the LORD is God.' Then Elijah said to them, 'Seize the prophets of Baal; let not one of them escape.' They seized them, and Elijah took them down to the Kishon and slaughtered them there in the valley.

Elijah said to Ahab, 'Go back now, eat and drink, for I hear the sound of coming rain.' He did so, while Elijah himself climbed to the crest of Carmel. There he crouched on the ground with his face between his knees. He said to his servant, 'Go and look out to the west.' He went and looked; 'There is nothing to see', he said. Seven times Elijah ordered him back, and seven times he went. The seventh time he said, 'I see a cloud no bigger than a man's hand, coming up from the west.' 'Now go', said Elijah, 'and tell Ahab to harness his chariot and be off, or the rain will stop him.' Meanwhile the sky had grown black with clouds, the wind rose, and heavy rain began to fall. Ahab mounted his chariot and set off for Jezreel; but the power of the LORD had come upon Elijah: he tucked up his robe and ran before Ahab all the way to Jezreel.

19 Ahab told Jezebel all that Elijah had done and how he had put all the prophets to death with the sword. Jezebel then sent a messenger to Elijah to say, 'The gods do the same to me and more, unless by this time tomorrow I have taken your life as you took theirs.' He was afraid and fled for his life. When he reached Beersheba in Judah, he left his servant there and himself went a day's journey into the wilderness. He came upon a broom-bush, and sat down under it and prayed for death: 'It is enough,' he said; 'now, LORD, take my life, for I am no better than my fathers before me.' He lay down under the bush and, while he slept, an angel touched him and said, 'Rise and eat.' He looked, and there at his head was a cake baked on hot stones, and a pitcher of water. He ate and drank and lay down again. The angel of the LORD came again and touched him a second time, saying, 'Rise and eat; the journey is too much for you.' He rose and ate and drank and, sustained by this food, he went on for forty days and forty nights to Horeb, the mount of God. He entered a cave and there he spent the night.

Suddenly the word of the LORD came to him: 'Why are you here, Elijah?' 'Because of my great zeal for the LORD the God of Hosts', he said. 'The people of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, torn down thy altars and put thy prophets to death with the sword. I alone am left, and they seek to take my life.' The answer came: 'Go and stand on the mount before the LORD.' For the LORD was passing by: a great and strong wind came rending mountains and shattering rocks before him, but the LORD was not in the wind; and after the wind there was an earthquake, but the LORD was not in the earthquake; and after the earthquake fire, but the LORD was not in the fire; and after the fire a low murmuring sound. When Elijah heard it, he muffled his face in his cloak and went out and stood at the entrance of the cave. Then there came a voice: 'Why are you here, Elijah?' 'Because of my great zeal for the LORD the God of Hosts', he said. 'The people of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, torn down thy altars and put thy prophets to death with the sword. I alone am left, and they seek to take my life.'

The LORD said to him, 'Go back by way of the wilderness of Damascus, enter the city and anoint Hazael to be king of Aram; anoint Jehu son^d of Nimshi to be king of Israel, and Elisha son of Shaphat of Abel-meholah to be prophet in your place. Anyone who escapes the sword of Hazael Jehu will slay, and anyone who escapes the sword of Jehu Elisha will slay. But I will leave seven thousand in Israel, all who have not bent the knee to Baal, all whose lips have not kissed him.'

Elijah departed and found Elisha son of Shaphat ploughing; there were twelve pair of oxen ahead of him, and he himself was with the last of them.

^d Or grandson (cp. 2 Kgs. 9. 2).

As Elijah passed, he threw his cloak over him, and Elisha, leaving his oxen, ran after Elijah and said, 'Let me kiss my father and mother goodbye, and then I will follow you.' 'Go back,' he replied; 'what have I done to prevent you?' He followed him no further but went home, took his pair of oxen, slaughtered them and burnt the wooden gear to cook the flesh, which he gave to the people to eat. Then he followed Elijah and became his disciple.

BEN-HADAD KING OF ARAM, having mustered all his forces, and taking with him thirty-two kings with their horses and chariots, marched against Samaria to take it by siege or assault. He sent envoys into the city to Ahab king of Israel to say, 'Hear what Ben-hadad says: Your silver and gold are mine, your wives and your splendid sons are mine.'^a The king of Israel answered, 'As you say, my lord king, I am yours and all that I have.' The envoys came again and said, 'Hear what Ben-hadad says: I demand that you hand over your silver and gold, your wives and your sons. This time tomorrow I will send my servants to search your house and your subjects' houses and to take possession of everything you prize, and remove it.' The king of Israel then summoned all the elders of the land and said, 'You see this? The man is plainly picking a quarrel; for I did not demur when he sent to claim my wives and my sons, my silver and gold.' All the elders and all the people answered, 'Do not listen to him; you must not consent.' So he gave this reply to Ben-hadad's envoys: 'Say to my lord the king: I accepted your majesty's demands on the first occasion; but what you now ask I cannot do.' The envoys went away and reported to their master, and Ben-hadad sent back word: 'The gods do the same to me and more, if there is enough dust in Samaria to provide a handful for each of my men.' The king of Israel made reply, 'Remind him of the saying: "The lame must not think himself a match for the nimble."' This message reached Ben-hadad while he and the kings were drinking in their quarters.^b At once he ordered his men to attack the city, and they did so.

Meanwhile a prophet had come to Ahab king of Israel and said to him, 'This is the word of the LORD: "You see this great rabble? Today I will give it into your hands and you shall know that I am the LORD."' 'Whom will you use for that?' asked Ahab. 'The young men who serve the district officers', was the answer. 'Who will draw up the line of battle?' asked the king. 'You', said the prophet. Then Ahab called up these young men, two hundred and thirty-two all told, and behind them the people of Israel, seven thousand in all. They went out at midday, while Ben-hadad and his allies, those thirty-two kings, were drinking themselves drunk in their quarters.^b The young men sallied out first, and word was sent to Ben-hadad that a party had come out of Samaria. 'If they have come out for peace,' he said, 'take them alive; if for battle, take them alive.'

So out of the city the young men went, and the army behind them; each struck down his man, and the Aramaeans fled. The Israelites pursued them, but Ben-hadad king of Aram escaped on horseback with some of the cavalry. Then the king of Israel advanced and captured the horses and chariots, inflicting a heavy defeat on the Aramaeans.

^a Or are your wives and your sons any good to me? ^b in their quarters: or at Succoth.

22 Then the prophet came to the king of Israel and said to him, 'Build up your forces; you know what you must do. At the turn of the year the king 23 of Aram will renew the attack.' But the king of Aram's ministers gave him this advice: 'Their gods are gods of the hills; that is why they defeated us.
Let us fight them in the plain; and then we shall have the upper hand.
24 What you must do is to relieve the kings of their command and appoint 25 other officers in their place. Raise another army like the one you have lost.
Bring your cavalry and chariots up to their former strength, and then let us fight them in the plain, and we shall have the upper hand.' He listened to their advice and acted on it.

26 At the turn of the year Ben-hadad mustered the Aramaeans and advanced 27 to Aphek to attack Israel. The Israelites too were mustered and formed into companies, and then went out to meet them and encamped opposite them.
They seemed no better than a pair of new-born kids, while the Aramaeans 28 covered the country-side. The man of God came to the king of Israel and said, 'This is the word of the LORD: The Aramaeans may think that the LORD is a god of the hills and not a god of the valleys; but I will give all this great rabble into your hands and you shall know that I am the LORD.'

29 They lay in camp opposite one another for seven days; on the seventh day battle was joined and the Israelites destroyed a hundred thousand of 30 the Aramaean infantry in one day. The survivors fled to Aphek, into the citadel, and the city wall fell upon the twenty-seven thousand men who were left. Ben-hadad took refuge in the citadel, retreating into an inner room; 31 and his attendants said to him, 'Listen; we have heard that the kings of Israel are men to be trusted. Let us therefore put sackcloth round our waists and wind rough cord round our heads and go out to the king of 32 Israel. It may be that he will spare your life.' So they fastened on the sackcloth and the cord, and went to the king of Israel and said, 'Your servant Ben-hadad pleads for his life.' 'My royal cousin,' he said, 'is he still 33 alive?' The men, taking the word for a favourable omen, caught it up at once and said, 'Your cousin, yes, Ben-hadad.' 'Go and fetch him', he said.
34 Then Ben-hadad came out and Ahab invited him into his chariot. And Ben-hadad said to him, 'I will restore the cities which my father took from your father, and you may establish for yourself a trading quarter in Damascus, as my father did in Samaria.' 'On these terms', said Ahab, 'I will let you go.' So he granted him a treaty and let him go.

35 One of a company of prophets, at the command of the LORD, ordered a certain man to strike him, but the man refused. 'Because you have not 36 obeyed the LORD,' said the prophet, 'when you leave me, a lion will attack you.' When the man left, a lion did meet him and attacked him. The pro-37 phet fell in with another man and ordered him to strike him. He struck and wounded him. Then the prophet went off, with a bandage over his eyes, 38 and thus disguised waited by the wayside for the king. As the king was passing, he called out to him, 'Sir, I went into the thick of the battle, and a soldier came over to me with a prisoner and said, "Take charge of this 39 fellow. If by any chance he gets away, your life shall be forfeit, or you shall pay a talent of silver." As I was busy with one thing and another, sir, he 40 disappeared.' The king of Israel said to him, 'You deserve to die.' And he said to the king of Israel, ^a 'You have passed sentence on yourself.' Then he 41 tore the bandage from his eyes, and the king of Israel saw that he was one of the prophets. And he said to the king, 'This is the word of the LORD: 42

 "Because you let that man go when I had put him under a ban, your life shall be forfeit for his life, your people for his people." ' The king of 43
 Israel went home sullen and angry and entered Samaria.

NABOTH OF JEZREEL HAD A VINEYARD near the palace of Ahab king 21 of Samaria. One day Ahab made a proposal to Naboth: 'Your vineyard is 2 close to my palace; let me have it for a garden; I will give you a better vineyard in exchange for it or, if you prefer, its value in silver.' But Naboth 3 answered, 'The LORD forbid that I should let you have land which has always been in my family.' So Ahab went home sullen and angry because 4 Naboth would not let him have his ancestral land. He lay down on his bed, covered his face and refused to eat. His wife Jezebel came in to him and 5 said, 'What makes you so sullen and why do you refuse to eat?' He told 6 her, 'I proposed to Naboth of Jezreel that he should let me have his vineyard at its value or, if he liked, in exchange for another; but he would not let me have the vineyard.' 'Are you or are you not king in Israel?' said 7 Jezebel. 'Come, eat and take heart; I will make you a gift of the vineyard of Naboth of Jezreel.' So she wrote a letter in Ahab's name, sealed it with 8 his seal and sent it to the elders and notables of Naboth's city, who sat in council with him. She wrote: 'Proclaim a fast and give Naboth the seat of 9 honour among the people. And see that two scoundrels are seated opposite him to charge him with cursing God and the king, then take him out and 10 stone him to death.' So the elders and notables of Naboth's city, who sat with him in council, carried out the instructions Jezebel had sent them in 11 her letter: they proclaimed a fast and gave Naboth the seat of honour, and 12 13 these two scoundrels came in, sat opposite him and charged him publicly with cursing God and the king. Then they took him outside the city and stoned him, and sent word to Jezebel that Naboth had been stoned to 14 death.

As soon as Jezebel heard that Naboth had been stoned and was dead, 15
 she said to Ahab, 'Get up and take possession of the vineyard which Naboth refused to sell you, for he is no longer alive; Naboth of Jezreel is dead.'
 When Ahab heard that Naboth was dead, he got up and went to the vine- 16 yard to take possession. Then the word of the LORD came to Elijah the 17 Tishbite: 'Go down at once to Ahab king of Israel, who is in Samaria; you will find him in Naboth's vineyard, where he has gone to take possession.
 Say to him, "This is the word of the LORD: Have you killed your man, and 19 taken his land as well?" Say to him, "This is the word of the LORD: Where dogs licked the blood of Naboth, there dogs shall lick your blood." ' Ahab 20 said to Elijah, 'Have you found me, my enemy?' 'I have found you', he said, 'because you have sold yourself to do what is wrong in the eyes of the LORD. I will bring ^b disaster upon you; I will sweep you away and destroy 21 every mother's son of the house of Ahab in Israel, whether under protection

22 of the family or not. And I will deal with your house as I did with the house 23 of Jeroboam son of Nebat and of Baasha son of Ahijah, because you have 24 provoked my anger and led Israel into sin.' And the LORD went on to say 25 of Jezebel, 'Jezebel shall be eaten by dogs by the rampart of Jezreel. Of 26 the house of Ahab, those who die in the city shall be food for the dogs, and 27 those who die in the country shall be food for the birds.' (Never was a man 28 who sold himself to do what is wrong in the LORD's eyes as Ahab did, and 29 all at the prompting of Jezebel his wife. He committed gross abominations in going after false gods, doing everything that the Amorites did, whom the LORD had dispossessed in favour of Israel.) When Ahab heard this, he rent his clothes, put on sackcloth and fasted; he lay down in his sackcloth and went about muttering to himself. Then the word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite: 'Have you seen how Ahab has humbled himself before me? Because he has thus humbled himself, I will not bring disaster upon his house in his own lifetime, but in his son's.'

22 FOR THREE YEARS THERE WAS NO WAR between the Aramaeans and 2^a the Israelites, but in the third year Jehoshaphat king of Judah went down
 3 to visit the king of Israel. The latter said to his courtiers, 'You know that 4 Ramoth-gilead belongs to us, and yet we do nothing to recover it from the 5 king of Aram.' He said to Jehoshaphat, 'Will you join me in attacking 6 Ramoth-gilead?' Jehoshaphat said to the king of Israel, 'What is mine is 7 yours: myself, my people, and my horses.' Then Jehoshaphat said to the 8 king of Israel, 'First let us seek counsel from the LORD.' The king of Israel 9 assembled the prophets, some four hundred of them, and asked them,
 'Shall I attack Ramoth-gilead or shall I refrain?' 'Attack,' they answered;
 7 'the Lord will deliver it into your hands.' Jehoshaphat asked, 'Is there no
 8 other prophet of the LORD here through whom we may seek guidance?'
 8 'There is one more', the king of Israel answered, 'through whom we may 9 seek guidance of the LORD, but I hate the man, because he prophesies no
 10 good for me; never anything but evil. His name is Micaiah son of Imlah.'
 Jehoshaphat exclaimed, 'My lord king, let no such word pass your lips!'
 9 So the king of Israel called one of his eunuchs and told him to fetch Micaiah 10 son of Imlah with all speed.

10 The king of Israel and Jehoshaphat king of Judah were seated on their 11 thrones, in shining armour, at the entrance to the gate of Samaria, and all 12 the prophets were prophesying before them. One of them, Zedekiah son 13 of Kenaanah, made himself horns of iron and said, 'This is the word of the 14 LORD: "With horns like these you shall gore the Aramaeans and make an 15 end of them."' In the same vein all the prophets prophesied, 'Attack
 Ramoth-gilead and win the day; the LORD will deliver it into your hands.'
 13 The messenger sent to fetch Micaiah told him that the prophets had with 14 one voice given the king a favourable answer. 'And mind you agree with 15 them', he added. 'As the LORD lives,' said Micaiah, 'I will say only what the LORD tells me to say.'

When Micaiah came into the king's presence, the king said to him,
 'Micaiah, shall we attack Ramoth-gilead or shall we refrain?' 'Attack and win the day,' he said; 'the LORD will deliver it into your hands.' 'How often must I adjure you', said the king, 'to tell me nothing but the truth in the name of the LORD?' Then Micaiah said, 'I saw all Israel scattered on the mountains, like sheep without a shepherd; and I heard the LORD say, "They have no master, let them go home in peace."' The king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, 'Did I not tell you that he never prophesies good for me, nothing but evil?' Micaiah went on, 'Listen now to the word of the LORD. I saw the LORD seated on his throne, with all the host of heaven in attendance on his right and on his left. The LORD said, "Who will entice Ahab to attack and fall on ^a Ramoth-gilead?" One said one thing and one said another; then a spirit came forward and stood before the LORD and said, "I will entice him." "How?" said the LORD. "I will go out", he said, "and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets." "You shall entice him," said the LORD, "and you shall succeed; go and do it." You see, then, how the LORD has put a lying spirit in the mouth of all these prophets of yours, because he has decreed disaster for you.' Then Zedekiah son of Kenaanah came up to Micaiah and struck him in the face: 'And how did the spirit of the LORD pass from me to speak to you?' he said. Micaiah answered, 'That you will find out on the day when you run into an inner room to hide yourself.' Then the king of Israel ordered Micaiah to be arrested and committed to the custody of Amon the governor of the city and Joash the king's son.^b 'Lock this fellow up', he said, 'and give him prison diet of bread and water until I come home in safety.' Micaiah retorted, 'If you do return in safety, the LORD has not spoken by me.'

So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat king of Judah marched on Ramoth-gilead, and the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, 'I will disguise myself to go into battle, but you shall wear your royal robes.' So he went into battle in disguise. Now the king of Aram had commanded the thirty-two captains of his chariots not to engage all and sundry but the king of Israel alone. When the captains saw Jehoshaphat, they thought he was the king of Israel and turned to attack him. But Jehoshaphat cried out and, when the captains saw that he was not the king of Israel, they broke off the attack on him. But one man drew his bow at random and hit the king of Israel where the breastplate joins the plates of the armour. So he said to his driver, 'Wheel round and take me out of the line; I am wounded.' When the day's fighting reached its height, the king was facing the Aramaeans propped up in his chariot, and the blood from his wound flowed down upon the floor of the chariot, and in the evening he died. At sunset the herald went through the ranks, crying, 'Every man to his city, every man to his country.' Thus died the king. He was brought to Samaria and they buried him there. The chariot was swilled out at the pool of Samaria, and the dogs licked up the blood, and the prostitutes washed themselves in it, in fulfilment of the word the LORD had spoken.

Now the other acts and events of Ahab's reign, the ivory house and all the cities he built, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel. So Ahab rested with his forefathers and was succeeded by his son Ahaziah.

Jehoshaphat son of Asa had become king of Judah in the fourth year of ^a Or at. ^b son: or deputy. ^c Verses 41-43: cp. 2 Chr. 20. 31-33.

42 Ahab king of Israel. He was thirty-five years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for twenty-five years; his mother was 43 Azubah daughter of Shilhi. He followed in the footsteps of Asa his father and did not swerve from them; he did what was right in the eyes of the LORD. But the hill-shrines were allowed to remain; the people continued 44 to slaughter and burn sacrifices there. Jehoshaphat remained at peace with 45 the king of Israel. The other events of Jehoshaphat's reign, his exploits 46 and his wars, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Judah. But he did away with such of the male prostitutes attached to the shrines as were still left over from the days of Asa his father.

48 There was no king in Edom, only^a a viceroy of Jehoshaphat; he built merchantmen to sail to Ophir for gold, but they never made the journey 49 because they were wrecked at Ezion-geber. Ahaziah son of Ahab proposed to Jehoshaphat that his own men should go to sea with his; but Jehoshaphat would not consent.

50 Jehoshaphat rested with his forefathers and was buried with them in the city of David his father, and was succeeded by his son Joram.

51 Ahaziah son of Ahab became king of Israel in Samaria in the seventeenth year of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, and reigned over Israel for two years.
 52 He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD, following in the footsteps of his father and mother and in those of Jeroboam son of Nebat, who had 53 led Israel into sin. He served Baal and worshipped him, and provoked the anger of the LORD the God of Israel, as his father had done.

THE SECOND BOOK OF KINGS

Elisha and the end of the house of Ahab

1 AFTER AHAB'S DEATH Moab rebelled against Israel.
 2 Ahaziah fell through a latticed window in his roof-chamber in Samaria and injured himself; he sent messengers to inquire of Baal-3 zebub the god of Ekron whether he would recover from his illness. The angel of the LORD ordered Elijah the Tishbite to go and meet the messengers of the king of Samaria and say to them, 'Is there no god in Israel, 4 that you go to inquire of Baal-zebul the god of Ekron? This is the word of the LORD to your master: "You shall not rise from the bed where you are 5 lying; you will die."' Then Elijah departed. The messengers went back 6 to the king. When asked why they had returned, they answered that a man had come to meet them and had ordered them to return and say to the king who had sent them, 'This is the word of the LORD: "Is there no god in Israel, that you send to inquire of Baal-zebul the god of Ekron? In consequence, you shall not rise from the bed where you are lying; you will die.” The king asked them what kind of man it was who had met them and said this. ‘A hairy man’, they answered, ‘with a leather apron round his waist.’ ‘It is Elijah the Tishbite’, said the king.

Then the king sent a captain to him with his company of fifty. He went up and found the prophet sitting on a hill-top and said to him, ‘Man of God, the king orders you to come down.’ Elijah answered the captain, ‘If I am a man of God, may fire fall from heaven and consume you and your company!’ Fire fell from heaven and consumed the officer and his fifty men. The king sent another captain of fifty with his company, and he went up and said to the prophet, ‘Man of God, this is the king’s command: Come down at once.’ Elijah answered, ‘If I am a man of God, may fire fall from heaven and consume you and your company!’ God’s fire fell from heaven and consumed the man and his company. The king sent the captain of a third company with his fifty men, and this third captain went up the hill to Elijah and knelt down before him and pleaded with him: ‘Man of God, consider me and these fifty servants of yours, and set some value on our lives. Fire fell from heaven and consumed the other two captains of fifty and their companies; but let my life have some value in your eyes.’ The angel of the LORD said to Elijah, ‘Go down with him. Do not be afraid.’ So he rose and went down with him to the king, and he said, ‘This is the word of the LORD: “You have sent to inquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron, and therefore you shall not rise from the bed where you are lying; you will die.”’ The word of the LORD which Elijah had spoken was fulfilled, and Ahaziah died; and because he had no son, his brother Jehoram succeeded him in the second year of Joram son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah.

The other events of Ahaziah’s reign are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel.

The time came when the LORD would take Elijah up to heaven in a whirlwind. Elijah and Elisha left Gilgal, and Elijah said to Elisha, ‘Stay here; for the LORD has sent me to Bethel.’ But Elisha said, ‘As the LORD lives, your life upon it, I will not leave you.’ So they went down country to Bethel. There a company of prophets came out to Elisha and said to him, ‘Do you know that the LORD is going to take your lord and master from you today?’ ‘I do know,’ he replied; ‘say no more.’ Then Elijah said to him, ‘Stay here, Elisha; for the LORD has sent me to Jericho.’ But he replied, ‘As the LORD lives, your life upon it, I will not leave you.’ So they went to Jericho. There a company of prophets came up to Elisha and said to him, ‘Do you know that the LORD is going to take your lord and master from you today?’ ‘I do know,’ he said; ‘say no more.’ Then Elijah said to him, ‘Stay here; for the LORD has sent me to the Jordan.’ The other replied, ‘As the LORD lives, your life upon it, I will not leave you.’ So the two of them went on.

Fifty of the prophets followed them, and stood watching from a distance as the two of them stopped by the Jordan. Elijah took his cloak, rolled it up and struck the water with it. The water divided to right and left, and they both crossed over on dry ground. While they were crossing, Elijah said to Elisha, ‘Tell me what I can do for you before I am taken from you.’ Elisha

10 said, 'Let me inherit a double share of your spirit.' 'You have asked a hard thing', said Elijah. 'If you see me taken from you, may your wish be 11 granted; if you do not, it shall not be granted.' They went on, talking as they went, and suddenly there appeared chariots of fire and horses of fire, 12 which separated them one from the other, and Elijah was carried up in the whirlwind to heaven. When Elisha saw it, he cried, 'My father, my father, 13 the chariots and the horsemen of Israel!'; and he saw him no more. Then he took hold of his mantle and rent it in two, and he picked up the cloak 14 which had fallen from Elijah, and came back and stood on the bank of the Jordan. There he too struck the water with Elijah's cloak and said, 'Where 15 is the LORD the God of Elijah?' When he struck the water, it was again divided to right and left, and he crossed over. The prophets from Jericho, 16 who were watching, saw him and said, 'The spirit of Elijah has settled on Elisha.' So they came to meet him, and fell on their faces before him and 17 said, 'Your servants have fifty stalwart men. Let them go and search for your master; perhaps the spirit of the LORD has lifted him up and cast him 18 on some mountain or into some valley.' But he said, 'No, you must not send them.' They pressed him, however, until he had not the heart to 19 refuse. So they sent out the fifty men but, though they searched for three days, they did not find him. When they came back to Elisha, who had 20 remained at Jericho, he said to them, 'Did I not tell you not to go?'

19 The people of the city said to Elisha, 'You can see how pleasantly our city is situated, but the water is polluted and the country is troubled with 20 miscarriages.' He said, 'Fetch me a new bowl and put some salt in it.' When 21 they had fetched it, he went out to the spring and, throwing the salt into it, he said, 'This is the word of the LORD: "I purify this water. It shall cause 22 no more death or miscarriage."' The water has remained pure till this day, in fulfilment of Elisha's word.

23 He went up from there to Bethel and, as he was on his way, some small boys came out of the city and jeered at him, saying, 'Get along with you, 24 bald head, get along.' He turned round and looked at them and he cursed them in the name of the LORD; and two she-bears came out of a wood and 25 mauled forty-two of them. From there he went on to Mount Carmel, and thence back to Samaria.

3 In the eighteenth year of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, Jehoram son of Ahab became king of Israel in Samaria, and he reigned for twelve years.
2 He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD, though not as his father and his mother had done; he did remove the sacred pillar of the Baal
3 which his father had made. Yet he persisted in the sins into which Jeroboam son of Nebat had led Israel, and did not give them up.

4 Mesha king of Moab was a sheep-breeder, and he used to supply the king of Israel regularly with the wool of a hundred thousand lambs and a 5 hundred thousand rams. When Ahab died, the king of Moab rebelled 6 against the king of Israel. Then King Jehoram came from Samaria and mustered all Israel. He also sent this message to Jehoshaphat king of 7 Judah: 'The king of Moab has rebelled against me. Will you join me in attacking Moab?' 'I will,' he replied; 'what is mine is yours: myself, my 8 people, and my horses.' 'From which direction shall we attack?' Jehoram asked. 'Through the wilderness of Edom', replied the other. So the king of Israel set out with the king of Judah and the king of Edom. When they had been seven days on the march, they had no water left for the army or the pack-animals. Then the king of Israel said, 'Alas, the LORD has brought together three kings, only to put us at the mercy of the Moabites.' But Jehoshaphat said, 'Is there not a prophet of the LORD here through whom we may seek guidance of the LORD?' One of the officers of the king of Israel answered, 'Elisha son of Shaphat is here, the man who poured water on Elijah's hands.' 'The word of the LORD is with him', said Jehoshaphat. So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat and the king of Edom went down to Elisha. Elisha said to the king of Israel, 'Why do you come to me? Go to the prophets of your father and your mother.' But the king of Israel said to him, 'No; the LORD has called us three kings out to put us at the mercy of the Moabites.' 'As the LORD of Hosts lives, whom I serve,' said Elisha, 'I would not spare a look or a glance for you, if it were not for my regard for Jehoshaphat king of Judah. But now, fetch me a minstrel.' They fetched a minstrel, and while he was playing, the power of the LORD came upon Elisha and he said, 'This is the word of the LORD: "Pools will form all over this ravine." The LORD has decreed that you shall see neither wind nor rain, yet this ravine shall be filled with water for you and your army and your pack-animals to drink. But that is a mere trifle in the sight of the LORD; what he will also do, is to put Moab at your mercy. You will raze to the ground every fortified town and every noble city; you will cut down all their fine trees; you will stop up all the springs of water; and you will spoil every good piece of land by littering it with stones.' In the morning at the hour of the regular sacrifice they saw water flowing in from the direction of Edom, and the land was flooded.

Meanwhile all Moab had heard that the kings had come up to fight against them, and every man, young and old, who could carry arms, was called out and stationed on the frontier. When they got up next morning and the sun had risen over the water, the Moabites saw the water in front of them red like blood and cried out, 'It is blood. The kings must have quarrelled and attacked one another. Now to the plunder, Moab!' When they came to the Israelite camp, the Israelites turned out and attacked them and drove the Moabites headlong in flight, and themselves entered the land of Moab, destroying as they went. They razed the cities to the ground; they littered every good piece of land with stones, each man casting one stone on to it; they stopped up every spring of water; they cut down all their fine trees; and they harried Moab until only in Kir-hareseth were any buildings left standing, and even this city the slingers surrounded and attacked.

When the king of Moab saw that the war had gone against him, he took seven hundred men with him, armed with swords, to cut a way through to the king of Aram, but they failed in the attempt. Then he took his eldest son, who would have succeeded him, and offered him as a whole-offering upon the city wall. The Israelites were filled with such consternation at this sight,^a that they struck camp and returned to their own land.

The wife of a member of a company of prophets appealed to Elisha. 4

^a The Israelites . . . sight: or There was such great anger against the Israelites . . .

1 'My husband, your servant, has died', she said. 'You know that he was a 2 man who feared the LORD; but a creditor has come to take away my two boys as his slaves.' Elisha said to her, 'How can I help you? Tell me what you have in the house.' 'Nothing at all', she answered, 'except a flask of 3 oil.' 'Go out then', he said, 'and borrow vessels from all your neighbours;
 4 get as many empty ones as you can. Then, when you come home, shut yourself in with your sons, pour from the flask into all these vessels and, as 5 they are filled, set them aside.' She left him and shut herself in with her 6 sons. As they brought her the vessels she filled them. When they were all full, she said to one of her sons, 'Bring me another.' 'There is not one left', 7 he said. Then the flow of oil ceased. She came out and told the man of God, and he said, 'Go and sell the oil and redeem your boys who are being taken as pledges,^a and you and they can live on what is left.'

8 It happened once that Elisha went over to Shunem. There was a great lady there who pressed him to accept her hospitality, and so, whenever he 9 came that way, he stopped to take food there. One day she said to her husband, 'I know that this man who comes here regularly is a holy man of 10 God. Why not build up the wall to make him a little roof-chamber, and put in it a bed, a table, a seat, and a lamp, and let him stay there whenever 11 he comes to us?' Once when he arrived and went to this roof-chamber and lay down to rest, he said to Gehazi, his servant, 'Call this Shunammite 12 woman.' He called her and, when she appeared before the prophet, he said to his servant, 'Say to her, "You have taken all this trouble for us.
 What can I do for you? Shall I speak for you to the king or to the com-13 mander-in-chief?"' But she replied, 'I am content where I am, among my 14 own people.' He said, 'Then what can be done for her?' Gehazi said, 15 'There is only this: she has no child and her husband is old.' 'Call her 16 back', Elisha said. When she was called, she appeared in the doorway, and he said, 'In due season, this time next year, you shall have a son in your arms.' But she said, 'No, no, my lord, you are a man of God and would not 17 lie to your servant.' Next year in due season the woman conceived and bore a son, as Elisha had foretold.

18 When the child was old enough, he went out one day to the reapers where 19 his father was. All of a sudden he cried out to his father, 'O my head, my 20 head!' His father told a servant to carry him to his mother. He brought him to his mother; the boy sat on her lap till midday, and then he died.
 21 She went up and laid him on the bed of the man of God, shut the door and 22 went out. She called her husband and said, 'Send me one of the servants and a she-ass, I must go to the man of God as fast as I can, and come straight 23 back.' 'Why go to him today?' he asked. 'It is neither new moon nor 24 sabbath.'^b 'Never mind that', she answered. When the ass was saddled, she said to her servant, 'Lead on and do not slacken pace unless I tell you.'
 25 So she set out and came to the man of God on Mount Carmel. The man of God spied her in the distance and said to Gehazi, his servant, 'That is the 26 Shunammite woman coming. Run and meet her, and ask, "Is all well with you? Is all well with your husband? Is all well with the boy?"' She 27 answered, 'All is well.' When she reached the man of God on the hill, she clutched his feet. Gehazi came forward to push her away, but the man of God said, 'Let her alone; she is in great distress, and the LORD has concealed it from me and not told me.' 'My lord,' she said, 'did I ask for a son? Did I not beg you not to raise my hopes and then dash them?' Then he turned to Gehazi: 'Hitch up your cloak; take my staff with you and run. If you meet anyone on the way, do not stop to greet him; if anyone greets you, do not answer him. Lay my staff on the boy's face.' But the mother cried, 'As the LORD lives, your life upon it, I will not leave you.' So he got up and followed her.^a Gehazi went on ahead of them and laid the staff on the boy's face, but there was no sound and no sign of life. So he went back to meet Elisha and told him that the boy had not roused. When Elisha entered the house, there was the boy dead, on the bed where he had been laid. He went into the room, shut the door on the two of them and prayed to the LORD. Then, getting on to the bed, he lay upon the child, put his mouth to the child's mouth, his eyes to his eyes and his hands to his hands; and, as he pressed^b upon him, the child's body grew warm. Elisha got up and walked once up and down the room; then, getting on to the bed again, he pressed^b upon him and breathed into him^c seven times; and the boy opened his eyes. The prophet summoned Gehazi and said, 'Call this Shunammite woman.' She answered his call and the prophet said, 'Take your child.' She came in and fell prostrate before him. Then she took up her son and went out.

Elisha returned to Gilgal at a time when there was a famine in the land. One day, when a group of prophets was sitting at his feet, he said to his servant, 'Set the big pot on the fire and prepare some broth for the company.' One of them went out into the fields to gather herbs and found a wild vine, and filled the skirt of his garment with bitter-apples.^d He came back and sliced them into the pot, not knowing what they were. They poured it out for the men to eat, but, when they tasted it, they cried out, 'Man of God, there is death in the pot', and they could not eat it. The prophet said, 'Fetch some meal.' He threw it into the pot and said, 'Now pour out for the men to eat.' This time there was no harm in the pot.

A man came from Baal-shalisha, bringing the man of God some of the new season's bread, twenty barley loaves, and fresh ripe ears of corn.^e Elisha said, 'Give this to the people to eat.' But his disciple protested, 'I cannot set this before a hundred men.' Still he repeated, 'Give it to the people to eat; for this is the word of the LORD: "They will eat and there will be some left over."' So he set it before them, and they ate and left some over, as the LORD had said.

NAAMAN, COMMANDER of the king of Aram's army, was a great man highly esteemed by his master, because by his means the LORD had given victory to Aram; but he was a leper.^f On one of their raids the Aramaeans brought back as a captive from the land of Israel a little girl, who became a servant to Naaman's wife. She said to her mistress, 'If only my master could meet the prophet who lives in Samaria, he would get rid of the disease for him.' Naaman went in and reported to his master word for word what the girl from the land of Israel had said. 'Very well, you may go,' said the king of Aram, 'and I will send a letter to the king of Israel.' So Naaman went, taking with him ten talents of silver, six thousand shekels of gold, and ten changes of clothing. He delivered the letter to the king of Israel, which read thus: 'This letter is to inform you that I am sending to you my servant Naaman, and I beg you to rid him of his disease.' When the king of Israel read the letter, he rent his clothes and said, 'Am I a god^a to kill and to make alive, that this fellow sends to me to cure a man of his disease? Surely you must see that he is picking a quarrel with me.' When Elisha, the man of God, heard how the king of Israel had rent his clothes, he sent to him saying, 'Why did you rend your clothes? Let the man come to me, and he will know that there is a prophet in Israel.' So Naaman came with his horses and chariots and stood at the entrance to Elisha's house. Elisha sent out a messenger to say to him, 'If you will go and wash seven times in the Jordan, your flesh will be restored and you will be clean.' Naaman was furious and went away, saying, 'I thought he would at least have come out and stood, and invoked the LORD his God by name, waved his hand over the place and so rid me of the disease. Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel? Can I not wash in them and be clean?' So he turned and went off in a rage. But his servants came up to him and said, 'If the prophet had bidden you do something difficult, would you not do it? How much more then, if he tells you to wash and be clean?' So he went down and dipped himself in the Jordan seven times as the man of God had told him, and his flesh was restored as a little child's, and he was clean.

Then he and his retinue went back to the man of God and stood before him; and he said, 'Now I know that there is no god anywhere on earth except in Israel. Will you accept a token of gratitude from your servant?' 'As the LORD lives, whom I serve,' said the prophet, 'I will accept nothing.' He was pressed to accept, but he refused. 'Then if you will not,' said Naaman, 'let me, sir, have two mules' load of earth. For I will no longer offer whole-offering or sacrifice to any god but the LORD. In this one matter only may the LORD pardon me: when my master goes to the temple of Rimmon to worship, leaning on my arm, and I worship in the temple of Rimmon when he worships there, for this let the LORD pardon me.' And Elisha bade him farewell.

Naaman had gone only a short distance on his way, when Gehazi, the servant of Elisha the man of God, said to himself, 'What? Has my master let this Aramaean, Naaman, go scot-free, and not accepted what he brought? As the LORD lives, I will run after him and get something from him.' So Gehazi hurried after Naaman. When Naaman saw him running after him, he jumped down from his chariot to meet him and said, 'Is anything wrong?' 'Nothing,' said Gehazi, 'but my master sent me to say that two young men of the company of prophets from the hill-country of Ephraim have just arrived. Could you provide them with a talent of silver and two changes of clothing?' Naaman said, 'By all means; take two talents.' He 23 pressed^a him to take them; so he tied up the two talents of silver in two bags, and the two changes of clothing, and gave them to his two servants, and they walked ahead carrying them. When Gehazi came to the citadel^b 24 he took them from the two servants, deposited them in the house and dismissed the men; and they departed. When he went in and stood before 25 his master, Elisha said, 'Where have you been, Gehazi?' 'Nowhere', said Gehazi. But he said to him, 'Was I not with you in spirit when the man 26 turned back from his chariot to meet you? Is it not true that you have the money? You may buy gardens with it,^{c d} and olive-trees and vineyards, sheep and oxen, slaves and slave-girls; but the disease of Naaman will 27 fasten on you and on your descendants for ever.' Gehazi left his presence, his skin diseased, white as snow.

A COMPANY OF PROPHETS said to Elisha, 'You can see that this place 6 where our community is living, under you as its head, is too small for us.
 Let us go to the Jordan and each fetch a log, and make ourselves a place to 2 live in.' The prophet agreed. Then one of them said, 'Please, sir, come with 3 us.' 'I will', he said, and he went with them. When they reached the 4 Jordan, they began cutting down trees; but it chanced that, as one man was 5 felling a trunk, the head of his axe flew off into the water. 'Oh, master!'
 he exclaimed, 'it was a borrowed one.' 'Where did it fall?' asked the man 6 of God. When he was shown the place, he cut off a piece of wood and threw it in and made the iron float. Then he said, 'There you are, lift it out.' So 7 he stretched out his hand and took it.

Once, when the king of Aram was making war on Israel, he held a con- 8 ference with his staff at which he said, 'I mean to attack in such and such a direction.' But the man of God warned the king of Israel: 'Take care to 9 avoid this place, for the Aramaeans are going down that way.' So the king of Israel sent to the place about which the man of God had given him this 10 warning; and the king took special precautions every time he found himself near that place. The king of Aram was greatly perturbed at this and, 11 summoning his staff, he said to them, 'Tell me, one of you, who has bettrayed us to the king of Israel?' 'None of us, my lord king,' said one of his 12 staff; 'but Elisha, the prophet in Israel, tells the king of Israel the very words you speak in your bedchamber.' 'Go and find out where he is,' said 13 the king, 'and I will send and seize him.' He was told that the prophet was at Dothan, and he sent a strong force there with horses and chariots. They 14 came by night and surrounded the city.

When the disciple of the man of God rose early in the morning and went 15 out, he saw a force with horses and chariots surrounding the city. 'Oh, master,' he said, 'which way are we to turn?' He answered, 'Do not be 16 afraid, for those who are on our side are more than those on theirs.' Then Elisha offered this prayer: 'O LORD, open his eyes and let him see.' And 17 the LORD opened the young man's eyes, and he saw the hills covered with horses and chariots of fire all round Elisha. As they came down towards 18 garments. ^d Is it not . . . with it: or Was it a time to get the money and to get garments?

19 him, Elisha prayed to the LORD: 'Strike this host, I pray thee, with blindness'; and he struck them blind as Elisha had asked. Then Elisha said to them, 'You are on the wrong road; this is not the city. Follow me and I will lead you to the man you are looking for.' And he led them to Samaria. As soon as they had entered Samaria, Elisha prayed, 'O LORD, open the eyes of these men and let them see again.' And he opened their eyes and they saw that they were inside Samaria. When the king of Israel saw them, he said to Elisha, 'My father, am I to destroy them?' 'No, you must not do that', he answered. 'You may destroy ^a those whom you have taken prisoner with your own sword and bow, but as for these men, give them food and water, and let them eat and drink, and then go back to their master.' So he prepared a great feast for them, and they ate and drank and then went back to their master. And Aramaean raids on Israel ceased.

24 But later, Ben-hadad king of Aram called up his entire army and marched to the siege of Samaria. The city was near starvation, and they besieged it so closely that a donkey's head was sold for eighty shekels of silver, and a quarter of a kab of locust-beans for five shekels. One day, as the king of Israel was walking along the city wall, a woman called to him, 'Help, my lord king!' He said, 'If the LORD will not bring you help, where can I find any for you? From threshing-floor or from winepress? What is your trouble?' She replied, 'This woman said to me, "Give up your child for us to eat today, and we will eat mine tomorrow." So we cooked my son and ate him; but when I said to her the next day, "Now give up your child for us to eat", she had hidden him.' When he heard the woman's story, the king rent his clothes. He was walking along the wall at the time, and when the people looked, they saw that he had sackcloth underneath, next to his skin. Then he said, 'The LORD do the same to me and more, if the head of Elisha son of Shaphat stays on his shoulders today.'

32 Elisha was sitting at home, the elders with him. The king had dispatched one of his retinue but, before the messenger arrived, Elisha said to the elders, 'See how this son of a murderer has sent to behead me! Take care, when the messenger comes, to shut the door and hold it fast against him. Can you not hear his master following on his heels?' While he was still speaking, the king ^b arrived and said, 'Look at our plight! This is the LORD's doing. Why should I wait any longer for him to help us?' But Elisha answered, 'Hear this word of the LORD: By this time tomorrow a shekel will buy a measure of flour or two measures of barley in the gateway of Samaria.' Then the lieutenant on whose arm the king leaned said to the man of God, 'Even if the LORD were to open windows in the sky, such a thing could not happen!' He answered, 'You will see it with your own eyes, but none of it will you eat.'

3 At the city gate were four lepers. ^c They said to one another, 'Why should we stay here and wait for death? If we say we will go into the city, there is famine there, and we shall die; if we say we will stay here, we shall die just the same. Well then, let us go to the camp of the Aramaeans and give ourselves up: if they spare us, we shall live; if they put us to death,

we can but die.' And so in the twilight they set out for the Aramaean camp; 5 but when they reached the outskirts, they found no one there; for the 6
Lord had caused the Aramaean army to hear a sound like that of chariots and horses and of a great host, so that the word went round: 'The king of Israel has hired the kings of the Hittites and the kings of Egypt to attack us.' They had fled at once in the twilight, abandoning their tents, their 7 horses and asses, and leaving the camp as it stood, while they fled for their lives. When the four men came to the outskirts of the camp, they went into 8 a tent and ate and drank and looted silver and gold and clothing, and made off and hid them. Then they came back, went into another tent and rifled it, and made off and hid the loot. Then they said to one another, 'What we 9 are doing is not right. This is a day of good news and we are keeping it to ourselves. If we wait till morning, we shall be held to blame. We must go now and give the news to the king's household.' So they came and called 10 to the watch at the city gate and described how they had gone to the Aramaean camp and found not a single man in it and had heard no sound:
nothing but horses and asses tethered, and the tents left as they were. Then 11 the watch called out and gave the news to the king's household in the palace. The king rose in the night and said to his staff, 'I will tell you what 12 the Aramaeans have done. They know that we are starving, and they have left their camp to go and hide in the open country, expecting us to come out, and then they can take us alive and enter the city.' One of his staff said, 13
'Send out a party of men with some of the horses that are left; if they live, they will be as well off as all the other Israelites who are still left; if they die,^a they will be no worse off than all those who have already perished.
Let them go and see what has happened.' So they picked two mounted 14 men, and the king dispatched them in the track of the Aramaean army with the order to go and find out what had happened. They followed as 15 far as the Jordan and found the whole road littered with clothing and equipment which the Aramaeans had flung aside in their haste. The messengers returned and reported this to the king. Then the people went out 16 and plundered the Aramaean camp, and a measure of flour was sold for a shekel and two measures of barley for a shekel, so that the word of the LORD came true. Now the king had appointed the lieutenant on whose 17 arm he leaned to take charge of the gate, and the people trampled him to death there, just as the man of God had foretold when the king visited him.
For when the man of God said to the king, 'By this time tomorrow a shekel 18 will buy two measures of barley or one measure of flour in the gateway of Samaria', the lieutenant had answered, 'Even if the LORD were to open windows in the sky, such a thing could not happen!' And the man of God 19 had said, 'You will see it with your own eyes, but none of it will you eat.'
And this is just what happened to him: the people trampled him to death 20 at the gate.

Elisha said to the woman whose son he had restored to life, 'Go away at 8
once with your household and find lodging where you can, for the LORD has decreed a seven years' famine and it has already come upon the land.'
The woman acted at once on the word of the man of God and went away 2

^a if they live . . . if they die: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure.

with her household; and she stayed in the Philistine country for seven years.

3 When she came back at the end of the seven years, she sought an audience 4 of the king to appeal for the return of her house and land. Now the king was questioning Gehazi, the servant of the man of God, about all the great 5 things Elisha had done; and, as he was describing to the king how he had brought the dead to life, the selfsame woman began appealing to the king 6 for her house and her land. 'My lord king,' said Gehazi, 'this is the very woman, and this is her son whom Elisha brought to life.' The king asked the woman about it, and she told him. Then he entrusted the case to a eunuch and ordered him to restore all her property to her, with all the revenues from her land from the time she left the country till that day.

7 Elisha came to Damascus, at a time when Ben-hadad king of Aram was 8 ill; and when he was told that the man of God had arrived, he bade Hazael take a gift with him and go to the man of God and inquire of the LORD 9 through him whether he would recover from his illness. Hazael went, taking with him as a gift all kinds of wares of Damascus, forty camel-loads. When he came into the prophet's presence, he said, 'Your son Ben-hadad king of Aram has sent me to you to ask whether he will recover from 10 his illness.' 'Go and tell him that he will recover,' he answered; 'but the 11 LORD has revealed to me that in fact he will die.' The man of God stood there with set face like a man stunned, until he could bear it no longer; 12 then he wept. 'Why do you weep, my lord?' said Hazael. He answered, 'Because I know the harm you will do to the Israelites: you will set their 13 fortresses on fire and put their young men to the sword; you will dash their children to the ground and you will rip open their pregnant women.' But Hazael said, 'But I am a dog, a mere nobody; how can I do this great thing?'
Elisha answered, 'The LORD has revealed to me that you will be king of 14 Aram.' Hazael left Elisha and returned to his master, who asked him what 15 Elisha had said. 'He told me that you would recover', he replied. But the next day he took a blanket and, after dipping it in water, laid it over the king's face, and he died; and Hazael succeeded him.

16 In the fifth year of Jehoram son of Ahab king of Israel, Joram son of 17^a Jehoshaphat king of Judah became king. He was thirty-two years old when 18 he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for eight years. He followed the practices of the kings of Israel as the house of Ahab had done, for he had married Ahab's daughter; and he did what was wrong in the 19 eyes of the LORD. But for his servant David's sake the LORD was unwilling to destroy Judah, since he had promised to give him and his sons a flame, to burn for all time.

20 During his reign Edom revolted against Judah and set up its own king.
21 Joram crossed over to Zair with all his chariots. He and his chariot-commanders set out by night, but they were surrounded by the Edomites 22 and defeated,^b whereupon the people fled to their tents. So Edom has remained independent of Judah to this day; Libnah also revolted at the 23 same time. The other acts and events of Joram's reign are recorded in 24 the annals of the kings of Judah. So Joram rested with his forefathers and was buried with them in the city of David, and his son Ahaziah succeeded him.

In the twelfth year of Jehoram son of Ahab king of Israel, Ahaziah son^a of Joram king of Judah became king. Ahaziah was twenty-two years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for one year; his mother was Athaliah granddaughter of Omri king of Israel. He followed the practices of the house of Ahab and did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD like the house of Ahab, for he was connected with that house by marriage. He allied himself with Jehoram son of Ahab to fight against Hazael king of Aram at Ramoth-gilead; but King Jehoram was wounded by the Aramaeans, and returned to Jezreel to recover from the wounds which were inflicted on him at Ramoth in battle with Hazael king of Aram; and because of his illness Ahaziah son of Joram king of Judah went down to Jezreel to visit him.

ELISHA THE PROPHET SUMMONED one of the company of prophets and said to him, 'Hitch up your cloak, take this flask of oil with you and go to Ramoth-gilead. When you arrive, you will find Jehu son of Jehoshaphat, son of Nimshi; go in and call him aside from his fellow-officers, and lead him through to an inner room. Then take the flask and pour the oil on his head and say, "This is the word of the LORD: I anoint you king over Israel"; then open the door and flee for your life.' So the young prophet went to Ramoth-gilead. When he arrived, he found the officers sitting together and said, 'Sir, I have a word for you.' 'For which of us?' asked Jehu. 'For you, sir', he said. He rose and went into the house, and the prophet poured the oil on his head, saying, 'This is the word of the LORD the God of Israel: "I anoint you king over Israel, the people of the LORD. You shall strike down the house of Ahab your master, and I will take vengeance on Jezebel for the blood of my servants the prophets and for the blood of all the LORD's servants. All the house of Ahab shall perish and I will destroy every mother's son of his house in Israel, whether under the protection of the family or not. And I will make the house of Ahab like the house of Jeroboam son of Nebat and the house of Baasha son of Ahijah. Jezebel shall be devoured by dogs in the plot of ground at Jezreel and no one will bury her."' Then he opened the door and fled. When Jehu rejoined the king's officers, they said to him, 'Is all well? What did this crazy fellow want with you?' 'You know him and the way his thoughts run', he said. 'Nonsense!' they replied; 'tell us what happened.' 'I will tell you exactly what he said: "This is the word of the LORD: I anoint you king over Israel."' They snatched up their cloaks and spread them under him on the stones^b of the steps, and sounded the trumpet and shouted, 'Jehu is king.'

Then Jehu son of Jehoshaphat, son of Nimshi, laid his plans against Jehoram, while Jehoram and the Israelites were defending Ramoth-gilead against Hazael king of Aram. King Jehoram had returned to Jezreel to recover from the wounds inflicted on him by the Aramaeans when he fought against Hazael king of Aram. Jehu said to them, 'If you are on my side, see 16 that no one escapes from the city to tell the news in Jezreel.' He mounted his chariot and drove to Jezreel, for Jehoram was laid up there, and Ahaziah king of Judah had gone down to visit him.

17 The watchman standing on the watch-tower in Jezreel saw Jehu and his troop approaching and called out, 'I see a troop of men.' Then Jehoram said, 'Fetch a horseman and send to find out if they come peaceably.' The horseman went to meet him and said, 'The king asks, "Is it peace?"' Jehu said, 'Peace? What is peace to you? Fall in behind me.' Thereupon the watchman reported, 'The messenger has met them but he is not coming back.' A second horseman was sent; when he met them, he also said, 'The king asks, "Is it peace?"' 'Peace?' said Jehu. 'What is peace to you? Fall in behind me.' Then the watchman reported, 'He has met them but he is not coming back. The driving is like the driving of Jehu son ^a of Nimshi, for he drives furiously.' 'Harness my chariot', said Jehoram. They harnessed it, and Jehoram king of Israel and Ahaziah king of Judah went out each in his own chariot to meet Jehu, and met him by the plot of Naboth of Jezreel. When Jehoram saw Jehu, he said, 'Is it peace, Jehu?' But he replied, 'Do you call it peace while your mother Jezebel keeps up her obscene idol-worship and monstrous sorceries?' Jehoram wheeled about and fled, crying out to Ahaziah, 'Treachery, Ahaziah!' Jehu seized his bow and shot Jehoram between the shoulders; the arrow pierced his heart and he sank down in his chariot. Then Jehu said to Bidkar, his lieutenant, 'Pick him up and throw him into the plot of land belonging to Naboth of Jezreel; remember how, when you and I were riding side by side behind Ahab his father, the LORD pronounced this sentence against him: "It is the very word of the LORD: as surely as I saw yesterday the blood of Naboth and the blood of his sons, I will requite you in this plot." So pick him up and throw him into it and thus fulfil the word of the LORD.' When Ahaziah king of Judah saw this, he fled by the road to Beth-haggan. Jehu went after him and said, 'Make sure of him too.' They shot him down in his chariot on the road up the valley ^b near Ibleam, but he escaped to Megiddo and died there. His servants conveyed his body to Jerusalem and buried him in his tomb with his forefathers in the city of David.

29 In the eleventh year of Jehoram son of Ahab, Ahaziah became king over Judah.

30 Jehu came to Jezreel. Now Jezebel had heard what had happened; she had painted her eyes and dressed her hair, and she stood looking down from a window. As Jehu entered the gate, she said, 'Is it peace, you Zimri, you murderer of your master?' He looked up at the window and said, 'Who is on my side, who?' Two or three eunuchs looked out, and he said, 'Throw her down.' They threw her down, and some of her blood splashed on to the wall and the horses, which trampled her underfoot. Then he went in and ate and drank. 'See to this accursed woman', he said, 'and bury her; for she is a king's daughter.' But when they went to bury her they found nothing of her but the skull, the feet, and the palms of the hands; and they went back and told him. Jehu said, 'It is the word of the LORD which his servant Elijah the Tishbite spoke, when he said, "In the plot of ground at Jezeel the dogs shall devour the flesh of Jezebel, and Jezebel's corpse shall lie like dung upon the ground in the plot at Jezreel so that no one will be able to say: 'This is Jezebel.'”

Now seventy sons of Ahab were left in Samaria. Jehu therefore sent a letter to Samaria, to the elders, the rulers of the city, and to the tutors of Ahab's children, in which he wrote: 'Now, when this letter reaches you, since you have in your care your master's family as well as his chariots and horses, fortified cities and weapons, choose the best and the most suitable of your master's family, set him on his father's throne, and fight for your master's house.' They were panic-stricken and said, 'The two kings could not stand against him; what hope is there that we can?' Therefore the comptroller of the household and the governor of the city, with the elders and the tutors, sent this message to Jehu: 'We are your servants. Whatever you tell us we will do; but we will not make anyone king. Do as you think fit.' Then he wrote them a second letter: 'If you are on my side and will obey my orders, then bring the heads of your master's sons to me at Jezreel by this time tomorrow.' Now the royal princes, seventy in all, were with the nobles of the city who were bringing them up. When the letter reached them, they took the royal princes and killed all seventy; they put their heads in baskets and sent them to Jehu in Jezreel. When the messenger came to him and reported that they had brought the heads of the royal princes, he ordered them to be put in two heaps and left at the entrance of the city gate till morning. In the morning he went out, stood there and said to all the people, 'You are fair judges. If I conspired against my master and killed him, who put all these to death? Be sure then that every word which the LORD has spoken against the house of Ahab shall be fulfilled, and that the LORD has now done what he spoke through his servant Elijah.' So Jehu put to death all who were left of the house of Ahab in Jezreel, as well as all his nobles, his close friends, and his priests, until he had left not one survivor.

Then he set out for Samaria, and on the way there, when he had reached a shepherds' shelter,^a he came upon the kinsmen of Ahaziah king of Judah and said, 'Who are you?' 'We are kinsmen of Ahaziah,' they replied; 'and we have come down to greet the families of the king and of the queen mother.' 'Take them alive', he said. So they took them alive; then they slew them and flung them into the pit that was there, forty-two of them; they did not leave a single survivor.

When he had left that place, he found Jehonadab son of Rechab coming to meet him. He greeted him and said, 'Are you with me heart and soul, as I am with you?' 'I am', said Jehonadab. 'Then if you are,' said Jehu, 'give me your hand.' He gave him his hand and Jehu helped him up into his chariot. 'Come with me,' he said, 'and you will see my zeal for the LORD.' So he took him with him in his chariot. When he came to Samaria, he put to death all of Ahab's house who were left there and so blotted it out, in fulfilment of the word which the LORD had spoken to Elijah. Then Jehu called all the people together and said to them, 'Ahab served the Baal a little; Jehu will serve him much. Now, summon all the prophets of Baal,

all his ministers and priests; not one must be missing. For I am holding a great sacrifice to Baal, and no one who is missing from it shall live.' In this way Jehu outwitted the ministers of Baal in order to destroy them. So Jehu said, 'Let a sacred ceremony for Baal be held.' They did so, and Jehu himself sent word throughout Israel, and all the ministers of Baal came; there was not a man left who did not come. They went into the temple of Baal and it was filled from end to end. Then he said to the person who had charge of the wardrobe, 'Bring out robes for all the ministers of Baal'; and he brought them out. Then Jehu and Jehonadab son of Rechab went into the temple of Baal and said to the ministers of Baal, 'Look carefully and make sure that there are no servants of the LORD here with you, but only the ministers of Baal.' Then they went in to offer sacrifices and whole-offerings. Now Jehu had stationed eighty men outside and said to them, 'I am putting these men in your charge, and any man who lets one escape shall answer for it with his life.' When he had finished offering the whole-offering, Jehu ordered the guards and the lieutenants to go and cut them all down, and let not one of them escape; so they slew them without quarter.

The escort and the lieutenants then rushed into the keep of the temple of Baal and brought out the sacred pole^a from the temple of Baal and burnt it; and they pulled down the sacred pillar of the Baal and the temple itself and made a privy of it—as it is today. Thus Jehu stamped out the worship of Baal in Israel. He did not however abandon the sins of Jeroboam son of Nebat who led Israel into sin, but he maintained the worship of the golden calves of Bethel and Dan.

Then the LORD said to Jehu, 'You have done well what is right in my eyes and have done to the house of Ahab all that it was in my mind to do. Therefore your sons to the fourth generation shall sit on the throne of Israel.' But Jehu was not careful to follow the law of the LORD the God of Israel with all his heart; he did not abandon the sins of Jeroboam who led Israel into sin.

In those days the LORD began to work havoc on Israel, and Hazael struck at them in every corner of their territory eastwards from the Jordan: all the land of Gilead, Gad, Reuben, and Manasseh, from Aroer which is by the gorge of the Arnon, including Gilead and Bashan.

The other events of Jehu's reign, his achievements and his exploits, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel. So Jehu rested with his forefathers and was buried in Samaria; and he was succeeded by his son Jehoahaz. Jehu reigned over Israel in Samaria for twenty-eight years.

and his nurse in a bedchamber where he was hidden from Athaliah and was not put to death. He remained concealed with her in the house of the LORD for six years, while Athaliah ruled the country. In the seventh year Jehoiada sent for the captains of units of a hundred, both of the Carites and of the guards, and he brought them into the house of the LORD; he made an agreement with them and put them on their oath in the house of the LORD, and showed them the king's son, and gave them the following orders: 'One third of you who are on duty on the sabbath are to be on guard in the palace; the rest of you are to be on special duty in the house of the LORD, one third at the Sur Gate and the other third at the gate with^a the outrunners. Your two companies who are off duty on the sabbath shall be on duty for the king in the house of the LORD. So you shall be on guard round the king, each man with his arms at the ready, and anyone who comes near the ranks is to be put to death; you must be with the king wherever he goes.'

The captains carried out the orders of Jehoiada the priest to the letter. Each took his men, both those who came on duty on the sabbath and those who came off, and came to Jehoiada. The priest handed out to the captains King David's spears and shields, which were in the house of the LORD. Then the guards took up their stations, each man carrying his arms at the ready, from corner to corner of the house to north and south,^b surrounding the king. Then he brought out the king's son, put the crown on his head, handed him the warrant and anointed him king. The people clapped their hands and shouted, 'Long live the king.' When Athaliah heard the noise made by the guards and the people, she came into the house of the LORD where the people were and found the king standing, as was the custom, on the dais,^c amidst outbursts of song and fanfares of trumpets in his honour, and all the populace rejoicing and blowing trumpets. Then Athaliah rent her clothes and cried, 'Treason! Treason!' Jehoiada the priest gave orders to the captains in command of the troops: 'Bring her outside the precincts and put to the sword anyone in attendance on her'; for the priest said, 'She shall not be put to death in the house of the LORD.' So they laid hands on her and took her out by the entry for horses to the royal palace, and there she was put to death.

Then Jehoiada made a covenant between the LORD and the king and people that they should be the LORD's people, and also between the king and the people. And all the people went into the temple of Baal and pulled it down; they smashed to pieces its altars and images, and they slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars. Then Jehoiada set a watch over the house of the LORD; he took the captains of units of a hundred, the Carites and the guards and all the people, and they escorted the king from the house of the LORD through the Gate of the Guards to the royal palace, and seated him on the royal throne. The whole people rejoiced and the city was tranquil. That is how Athaliah was put to the sword in the royal palace.

Joash was seven years old when he became king. In the seventh year of Jehu, Joash became king, and he reigned in Jerusalem for forty years; his

2 mother was Zibiah of Beersheba. He did what was right in the eyes of the 3 LORD all his days, as Jehoiada the priest had taught him. The hill-shrines, however, were allowed to remain; the people still continued to sacrifice and make smoke-offerings there.

4 Then Joash ordered the priests to take all the silver brought as holy-gifts into the house of the LORD, the silver for which each man was assessed,^a the silver for the persons assessed under his name, and any silver which 5 any man brought voluntarily to the house of the LORD. He ordered the priests, also, each to make a contribution from his own funds, and to repair 6 the house wherever it was found necessary. But in the twenty-third year of the reign of Joash the priests had still not carried out the repairs to the 7 house. King Joash summoned Jehoiada the priest and the other priests and said to them, 'Why are you not repairing the house? Henceforth you need 8 not contribute from your own funds for the repair of the house.' So the priests agreed neither to receive money from the people nor to undertake 9 the repairs of the house. Then Jehoiada the priest took a chest and bored a hole in the lid and put it beside the altar on the right side going into the house of the LORD, and the priests on duty at the entrance put in it all the 10 money brought into the house of the LORD. And whenever they saw that the chest was well filled, the king's secretary and the high priest came and melted down the silver found in the house of the LORD and weighed it.
 11 When it had been checked, they gave the silver to the foremen over the work in the house of the LORD and they paid the carpenters and the builders 12 working on the temple and the masons and the stone-cutters; they used it also to buy timber and hewn stone for the repairs and for all other expenses 13 connected with them. They did not use the silver brought into the house of the LORD to make silver cups, snuffers, tossing-bowls, trumpets, or any gold or silver vessels; but they paid it to the workmen and used it for 14 the repairs. No account was demanded from the foremen to whom the money was given for the payment of the workmen, for they were acting on 15 trust. Money from guilt-offerings and sin-offerings was not brought into 16 the house of the LORD: it belonged to the priests.

17 Then Hazael king of Aram came up and attacked Gath and took it; and 18 he moved on against Jerusalem. But Joash king of Judah took all the holy-gifts that Jehoshaphat, Joram, and Ahaziah his forefathers, kings of Judah, had dedicated, and his own holy-gifts, and all the gold that was found in the treasuries of the house of the LORD and in the royal palace, and sent them to Hazael king of Aram; and he withdrew from Jerusalem.

19 The other acts and events of the reign of Joash are recorded in the annals
 20^b of the kings of Judah. His servants revolted against him and struck him
 21 down in the house of Millo on the descent to Silla. It was his servants Jozachar son of Shimeath and Jehozabad son of Shomer who struck the fatal blow; and he was buried with his forefathers in the city of David. He was succeeded by his son Amaziah.

13 In the twenty-third year of Joash son of Ahaziah king of Judah, Jehoahaz son of Jehu became king over Israel in Samaria and he reigned seventeen years. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD and continued the sinful practices of Jeroboam son of Nebat who led Israel into sin, and did not give them up. So the LORD was roused to anger against Israel and he made them subject for some years to Hazael king of Aram and Ben-hadad son of Hazael. Then Jehoahaz sought to placate the LORD, and the LORD heard his prayer, for he saw how the king of Aram oppressed Israel. The LORD appointed a deliverer for Israel, who rescued them from the power of Aram, and the Israelites settled down again in their own homes. But they did not give up the sinful practices of the house of Jeroboam who led Israel into sin, but continued in them; the goddess Asherah^a remained in Samaria. Hazael had left Jehoahaz no armed force except fifty horsemen, ten chariots, and ten thousand infantry; all the rest the king of Aram had destroyed and made like dust under foot.

The other events of the reign of Jehoahaz, and all his achievements and his exploits, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel. So Jehoahaz rested with his forefathers and was buried in Samaria; and he was succeeded by his son Jehoash.

In the thirty-ninth year of Joash king of Judah, Jehoash son of Jehoahaz became king over Israel in Samaria and reigned sixteen years. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD; he did not give up any of the sinful practices of Jeroboam son of Nebat who led Israel into sin, but continued in them. The other events of the reign of Jehoash, all his achievements, his exploits and his war with Amaziah king of Judah, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel. So Jehoash rested with his forefathers and was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel, and Jeroboam sat upon his throne.

Elisha fell ill and lay on his deathbed, and Jehoash king of Israel went down to him and wept over him and said, 'My father! My father, the chariots and the horsemen of Israel!' 'Take bow and arrows', said Elisha, and he took bow and arrows. 'Put your hand to the bow', said the prophet. He did so, and Elisha laid his hands on those of the king. Then he said, 'Open the window toward the east'; he opened it and Elisha told him to shoot, and he shot. Then the prophet said, 'An arrow for the LORD's victory, an arrow for victory over Aram! You will defeat Aram utterly at Aphek'; and he added, 'Now take up your arrows.' When the king had taken them, Elisha said, 'Strike the ground with them.' He struck three times and stopped. The man of God was furious with him and said, 'You should have struck five or six times; then you would have defeated Aram utterly; as it is, you will strike Aram three times and no more.'

Then Elisha died and was buried.

Year by year Moabite raiders used to invade the land. Once some men were burying a dead man when they caught sight of the raiders. They threw the body into the grave of Elisha and made off; when the body touched the prophet's bones, the man came to life and rose to his feet.

All through the reign of Jehoahaz, Hazael king of Aram oppressed Israel. But the LORD was gracious and took pity on them; because of his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, he looked on them with favour and was unwilling to destroy them; nor has he even yet banished them from his

24 sight. When Hazael king of Aram died and was succeeded by his son Ben-25 hadad, Jehoash son of Jehoahaz recaptured the cities which Ben-hadad had taken in war from Jehoahaz his father; three times Jehoash defeated him and recovered the cities of Israel.

1^a In the second year of Jehoash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel, Amaziah
 2 son of Joash king of Judah succeeded his father. He was twenty-five years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for twenty-3 nine years; his mother was Jehoaddin of Jerusalem. He did what was right in the eyes of the LORD, yet not as his forefather David had done; he 4 followed his father Joash in everything. The hill-shrines were allowed to 5 remain; the people continued to slaughter and burn sacrifices there. When the royal power was firmly in his grasp, he put to death those of his servants 6 who had murdered the king his father; but he spared the murderers' children in obedience to the LORD's command written in the law of Moses:
 7 'Fathers shall not be put to death for their children, nor children for their fathers; a man shall be put to death only for his own sin.' He defeated ten thousand Edomites in the Valley of Salt and captured Sela; he gave it the name Joktheel, which it still bears.

8^b Then Amaziah sent messengers to Jehoash son of Jehoahaz, son of 9 Jehu, king of Israel, to propose a meeting. But Jehoash king of Israel sent this answer to Amaziah king of Judah: 'A thistle in Lebanon sent to a cedar in Lebanon to say, "Give your daughter in marriage to my son." But 10 a wild beast in Lebanon, passing by, trampled on the thistle. You have defeated Edom, it is true; and it has gone to your head. Stay at home and enjoy your triumph. Why should you involve yourself in disaster and bring yourself to the ground, and Judah with you?'

11 But Amaziah would not listen; so Jehoash king of Israel marched out, and he and Amaziah king of Judah met one another at Beth-shemesh in 12 Judah. The men of Judah were routed by Israel and fled to their homes.
 13 But Jehoash king of Israel captured Amaziah king of Judah, son of Joash, son of Ahaziah, at Beth-shemesh. He went to Jerusalem and broke down 14 the city wall from the Gate of Ephraim to the Corner Gate, a distance of four hundred cubits. He also took all the gold and silver and all the vessels found in the house of the LORD and in the treasuries of the royal palace, as well as hostages, and returned to Samaria.

15 The other events of the reign of Jehoash, and all his achievements, his exploits and his wars with Amaziah king of Judah, are recorded in the 16 annals of the kings of Israel. So Jehoash rested with his forefathers and was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel; and he was succeeded by his son Jeroboam.

17^c Amaziah son of Joash, king of Judah, outlived Jehoash son of Jehoahaz, 18 king of Israel, by fifteen years. The other events of Amaziah's reign are 19 recorded in the annals of the kings of Judah. A conspiracy was formed against him in Jerusalem and he fled to Lachish; but they sent after him 20 to Lachish and put him to death there. Then his body was conveyed on horseback to Jerusalem, and there he was buried with his forefathers in the city of David. The people of Judah took Azariah, now sixteen years old, and made him king in succession to his father Amaziah. It was he who built Elath and restored it to Judah after the king rested with his forefathers.

In the fifteenth year of Amaziah son of Joash king of Judah, Jeroboam son of Jehoash king of Israel became king in Samaria and reigned for forty-one years. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD; he did not give up the sinful practices of Jeroboam son of Nebat who led Israel into sin. He re-established the frontiers of Israel from Lebo-hamath to the Sea of the Arabah, in fulfilment of the word of the LORD the God of Israel spoken by his servant the prophet Jonah son of Amittai, of Gath-hepher. For the LORD had seen how bitterly Israel had suffered; no one was safe, whether under the protection of his family or not, and Israel was left defenceless. But the LORD had made no threat to blot out the name of Israel under heaven, and he saved them through Jeroboam son of Jehoash. The other events of Jeroboam's reign, and all his achievements, his exploits, the wars he fought and how he recovered Damascus and Hamath in Jaudi for^a Israel, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel. So Jeroboam rested with his forefathers the kings of Israel; and he was succeeded by his son Zechariah.

In the twenty-seventh year of Jeroboam king of Israel, Azariah^b son of Amaziah king of Judah became king. He was sixteen years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for fifty-two years; his mother was Jecoliah of Jerusalem. He did what was right in the eyes of the LORD, as Amaziah his father had done. But the hill-shrines were allowed to remain; the people still continued to slaughter and burn sacrifices there. The LORD struck the king with leprosy,^d which he had till the day of his death; he was relieved of all duties and lived in his own house, while his son Jotham was comptroller of the household and regent. The other acts and events of Azariah's reign are recorded in the annals of the kings of Judah. So he rested with his forefathers and was buried with them in the city of David; and he was succeeded by his son Jotham.

In the thirty-eighth year of Azariah king of Judah, Zechariah son of Jeroboam became king over Israel in Samaria and reigned six months. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD, as his forefathers had done; he did not give up the sinful practices of Jeroboam son of Nebat who led Israel into sin. Shallum son of Jabesh formed a conspiracy against him, attacked him in Ibleam, killed him and usurped the throne. The other events of Zechariah's reign are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel. Thus the word of the LORD spoken to Jehu was fulfilled: 'Your sons to the fourth generation shall sit on the throne of Israel.'

Shallum son of Jabesh became king in the thirty-ninth year of Uzziah king of Judah, and he reigned one full month in Samaria. Then Menahem son of Gadi came up from Tirzah to Samaria, attacked Shallum son of Jabesh there, killed him and usurped the throne. The other events of Shallum's reign and the conspiracy that he formed are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel.

16 Then Menahem, starting out from Tirzah, destroyed Tappuah and everything in it and ravaged its territory; he ravaged it because it had not opened its gates to him, and he ripped open all the pregnant women.

17 In the thirty-ninth year of Azariah king of Judah, Menahem son of Gadi
18 became king over Israel and he reigned in Samaria for ten years. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD; he did not give up the sinful practices of Jeroboam son of Nebat who led Israel into sin. In his days Pul king of Assyria invaded the country, and Menahem gave him a thousand talents of silver to obtain his help in strengthening his hold on the kingdom.
20 Menahem laid a levy on all the men of wealth in Israel, and each had to give the king of Assyria fifty silver shekels. Then the king of Assyria withdrew without occupying the country. The other acts and events of Menahem's 21 reign are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel. So Menahem rested with his forefathers; and he was succeeded by his son Pekahiah.
22

23 In the fiftieth year of Azariah king of Judah, Pekahiah son of Menahem
24 became king over Israel in Samaria and reigned for two years. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD; he did not give up the sinful practices
25 of Jeroboam son of Nebat who led Israel into sin. Pekah son of Remaliah, his lieutenant, formed a conspiracy against him and, with the help of fifty Gileadites, attacked him in Samaria in the citadel of the royal palace,^a 26 killed him and usurped the throne. The other acts and events of Pekahiah's reign are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel.

27 In the fifty-second year of Azariah king of Judah, Pekah son of Remaliah 28 became king over Israel in Samaria and reigned for twenty years. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD; he did not give up the sinful practices of Jeroboam son of Nebat who led Israel into sin. In the days of 29 Pekah king of Israel, Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria came and seized Iyyon, Abel-beth-maacah, Janoah, Kedesh, Hazor, Gilead, and Galilee, 30 with all the land of Naphtali, and deported the people to Assyria. Then Hoshea son of Elah formed a conspiracy against Pekah son of Remaliah, attacked him, killed him and usurped the throne in the twentieth year of 31 Jotham son of Uzziah. The other acts and events of Pekah's reign are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel.

32 In the second year of Pekah son of Remaliah king of Israel, Jotham son 33 of Uzziah king of Judah became king. He was twenty-five years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for sixteen years; his 34 mother was Jerusha daughter of Zadok. He did what was right in the eyes
35 of the LORD, as his father Uzziah had done; but the hill-shrines were allowed to remain and the people continued to slaughter and burn sacrifices there. It was he who constructed the upper gate of the house of the LORD.
36 The other acts and events of Jotham's reign are recorded in the annals of the 37 kings of Judah. In those days the LORD began to make Rezin king of 38 Aram and Pekah son of Remaliah attack Judah. And Jotham rested with his forefathers and was buried with them in the city of David his forefather; and he was succeeded by his son Ahaz.

Downfall of the northern kingdom

IN THE SEVENTEENTH YEAR OF PEKAH son of Remaliah, Ahaz son 16 of Jotham king of Judah became king. Ahaz was twenty years old when 2^a he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for sixteen years. He did not do what was right in the eyes of the LORD his God like his fore- 3 father David, but followed in the footsteps of the kings of Israel; he even passed his son through the fire, adopting the abominable practice of the 3 nations whom the LORD had dispossessed in favour of the Israelites. He 4 slaughtered and burnt sacrifices at the hill-shrines and on the hill-tops and under every spreading tree. 4

Then Rezin king of Aram and Pekah son of Remaliah king of Israel 5 attacked Jerusalem and besieged Ahaz but could not bring him to battle.
 At that time the king of Edom^b recovered Elath and drove the Judaeans 6 out of it; so the Edomites entered the city and have occupied it to this day.
 Ahaz sent messengers to Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria to say, 'I am your 7 servant and your son. Come and save me from the king of Aram and from the king of Israel who are attacking me.' Ahaz took the silver and gold found 8 in the house of the LORD and in the treasuries of the royal palace and sent them to the king of Assyria as a bribe. The king of Assyria listened to him; 9
 he advanced on Damascus, captured it, deported its inhabitants to Kir and put Rezin to death.

When King Ahaz went to meet Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria at 10
 Damascus, he saw there an altar of which he sent a sketch and a detailed plan to Uriah the priest. Accordingly, Uriah built an altar, following all the 11 instructions that the king had sent him from Damascus, and had it ready against the king's return. When the king returned from Damascus, he saw 12 the altar, approached it and mounted the steps; there he burnt his whole-offering and his grain-offering and poured out his drink-offering, and he 13 flung the blood of his shared-offerings against it. The bronze altar that was before the LORD he removed from the front of the house, from between this 14 altar and the house of the LORD, and put it on the north side of this altar.
 Then King Ahaz gave these instructions to Uriah the priest: 'Burn on the 15 great altar the morning whole-offering and the evening grain-offering, and the king's whole-offering and his grain-offering, and the whole-offering of all the people of the land, their grain-offering and their drink-offerings, and fling against it all the blood of the sacrifices. But the bronze altar shall 16 be mine, to offer morning sacrifice.' Uriah the priest did all that the king told him. Then King Ahaz broke up the trolleys and removed the panels, 17 and he took down the basin and the Sea of bronze from the oxen which supported it and put it on a stone base. In the house of the LORD he 18 turned round the structure they had erected for use on the sabbath, and the outer gate for the king, to satisfy the king of Assyria. The other acts 19^c and events of the reign of Ahaz are recorded in the annals of the kings of Judah. So Ahaz rested with his forefathers and was buried with them in the 20 city of David; and he was succeeded by his son Hezekiah.

17 In the twelfth year of Ahaz king of Judah, Hoshea son of Elah became 2 king over Israel in Samaria and reigned nine years. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD, but not as the previous kings of Israel had done.
3 Shalmaneser king of Assyria made war upon him and Hoshea became 4 tributary to him. But when the king of Assyria discovered that Hoshea was being disloyal to him, sending messengers to the king of Egypt at So,^a and withholding the tribute which he had been paying year by year, the king of 5 Assyria arrested him and put him in prison. Then he invaded the whole
6 country and, reaching Samaria, besieged it for three years. In the ninth year of Hoshea he captured Samaria and deported its people to Assyria and settled them in Halah and on the Habor, the river of Gozan, and in the cities of Media.

7 All this happened to the Israelites because they had sinned against the LORD their God who brought them up from Egypt, from the rule of 8 Pharaoh king of Egypt; they paid homage to other gods and observed the laws and customs of the nations whom the LORD had dispossessed before 9 them and uttered blasphemies against the LORD their God; they built hillshrines for themselves in all their settlements, from watch-tower to fortified 10 city, and set up sacred pillars and sacred poles on every high hill and under 11 every spreading tree, and burnt sacrifices at all the hill-shrines there, as the nations did whom the LORD had displaced before them. By this wicked-12 ness of theirs they provoked the LORD's anger. They worshipped idols, a 13 thing which the LORD had forbidden them to do. Still the LORD solemnly charged Israel and Judah by every prophet and seer, saying, 'Give up your evil ways; keep my commandments and statutes given in the law which I enjoined on your forefathers and delivered to you through my servants the 14 prophets.' They would not listen, however, but were as stubborn and rebel-15 lious as their forefathers had been, who refused to put their trust in the LORD their God; they rejected his statutes and the covenant which he had made with their forefathers and the solemn warnings which he had given to them; they followed worthless idols and became worthless themselves; 16 they imitated the nations round about them, a thing which the LORD had forbidden them to do. Forsaking every commandment of the LORD their God, they made themselves images of cast metal, two calves, and also a sacred pole; they prostrated themselves to all the host of heaven and wor-17 shipped the Baal, and they made their sons and daughters pass through the fire. They practised augury and divination; they sold themselves to do what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD and so provoked his anger.

18 Thus it was that the LORD was incensed against Israel and banished them 19 from his presence; only the tribe of Judah was left. Even Judah did not keep the commandments of the LORD their God but followed the practices 20 adopted by Israel; so the LORD rejected the whole race of Israel and punished them and gave them over to plunderers and finally flung them 21 out of his sight. When he tore Israel from the house of David, they made Jeroboam son of Nebat king, who seduced Israel from their allegiance to 22 the LORD and led them into grave sin. The Israelites persisted in all the 23 sins that Jeroboam had committed and did not give them up, until finally

^a to the king of Egypt at So: prob. rdg.; Heb. to So king of Egypt.

the LORD banished the Israelites from his presence, as he had threatened through his servants the prophets, and they were carried into exile from their own land to Assyria; and there they are to this day.

Then the king of Assyria brought people from Babylon, Cuthah, Avva, Hamath, and Sepharvaim, and settled them in the cities of Samaria in place of the Israelites; so they occupied Samaria and lived in its cities. In the early years of their settlement they did not pay homage to the LORD; and the LORD sent lions among them, and the lions preyed upon them. The king was told that the deported peoples whom he had settled in the cities of Samaria did not know the established usage of the god of the country, and that he had sent lions among them which were preying upon them because they did not know this. The king of Assyria, therefore, gave orders that one of the priests deported from Samaria should be sent back to live there and teach the people the usage of the god of the country. So one of the deported priests came and lived at Bethel, and taught them how they should pay their homage to the LORD. But each of the nations made its own god, and they set them up within^a the hill-shrines which the Samaritans had made, each nation in its own settlements. Succoth-benoth was worshipped by the men of Babylon, Nergal by the men of Cuth, Ashima by the men of Hamath, Nibhaz and Tartak by the Avvites; and the Sepharvites burnt their children as offerings to Adrammelech and Anammelech, the gods of Sepharvaim. While still paying homage to the LORD, they appointed people from every class to act as priests of the hill-shrines and they resorted to them there. They paid homage to the LORD while at the same time they served their own gods, according to the custom of the nations from which they had been carried into exile.

They keep up these old practices to this day; they do not pay homage to the LORD, for they do not keep his^b statutes and his^b judgements, the law and commandment, which he enjoined upon the descendants of Jacob whom he named Israel. When the LORD made a covenant with them, he gave them this commandment: 'You shall not pay homage to other gods or bow down to them or serve them or sacrifice to them, but you shall pay homage to the LORD who brought you up from Egypt with great power and with outstretched arm; to him you shall bow down, to him you shall offer sacrifice. You shall faithfully keep the statutes, the judgements, the law, and the commandments which he wrote for you, and you shall not pay homage to other gods. You shall not forget the covenant which I made with you; you shall not pay homage to other gods. But to the LORD your God you shall pay homage, and he will preserve you from all your enemies.' However, they would not listen but continued their former practices. While these nations paid homage to the LORD they continued to serve their images, and their children and their children's children have maintained the practice of their forefathers to this day.

IN THE THIRD YEAR OF HOSHEA son of Elah king of Israel, Hezekiah son of Ahaz king of Judah became king. He was twenty-five years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for twenty-nine years;

3 his mother was Abi daughter of Zechariah. He did what was right in the 4 eyes of the LORD, as David his forefather had done. It was he who suppressed the hill-shrines, smashed the sacred pillars, cut down every sacred pole and broke up the bronze serpent that Moses had made; for up to that time the Israelites had been burning sacrifices to it; they called it 5 Nehushtan. He put his trust in the LORD the God of Israel; there was nobody like him among all the kings of Judah who succeeded him or among 6 those who had gone before him. He remained loyal to the LORD and did not fail in his allegiance to him, and he kept the commandments which the 7 LORD had given to Moses. So the LORD was with him and he prospered in all that he undertook; he rebelled against the king of Assyria and was no 8 longer subject to him. He conquered the Philistine country as far as Gaza and its boundaries, alike the watch-tower and the fortified city.

9 In the fourth year of Hezekiah's reign (that was the seventh year of Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel) Shalmaneser king of Assyria made an 10 attack on Samaria, invested it and captured it after a siege of three years;
 it was in the sixth year of Hezekiah (the ninth year of Hoshea king of Israel) 11 that Samaria was captured. The king of Assyria deported the Israelites to Assyria and settled them in Halah and on the Habor, the river of Gozan, 12 and in the cities of Media, because they did not obey the LORD their God but violated his covenant and every commandment that Moses the servant of the LORD had given them; they would not listen and they would not obey.

13^a In the fourteenth year of the reign of Hezekiah, Senracherib king of 14 Assyria attacked and took all the fortified cities of Judah. Hezekiah king of Judah sent a message to the king of Assyria at Lachish: 'I have done wrong; withdraw from my land, and I will pay any penalty you impose upon me.' So the king of Assyria laid on Hezekiah king of Judah a penalty 15 of three hundred talents of silver and thirty talents of gold; and Hezekiah gave him all the silver found in the house of the LORD and in the treasuries 16 of the royal palace. At that time Hezekiah broke up the doors of the temple of the LORD and the door-frames which he himself had plated, and gave them to the king of Assyria.

17 From Lachish the king of Assyria sent the commander-in-chief, the chief eunuch, and the chief officer ^b with a strong force to King Hezekiah at Jerusalem, and they went up and came to Jerusalem and halted by the conduit of the Upper Pool on the causeway which leads to the Fuller's 18 Field. When they called for the king, Eliakim son of Hilkiyah, the comptroller of the household, came out to them, with Shebna the adjutant-general and 19 Joah son of Asaph, the secretary of state. The chief officer said to them, 'Tell Hezekiah that this is the message of the Great King, the king of 20 Assyria: "What ground have you for this confidence of yours? Do you think fine words can take the place of skill and numbers? On whom then 21 do you rely for support in your rebellion against me? On Egypt? Egypt is a splintered cane that will run into a man's hand and pierce it if he leans on it. That is what Pharaoh king of Egypt proves to all who rely on him.

^a Verses 13-37: cp. Isa. 36. 1-22; 2 Chr. 32. 1-19.

^b the commander-in-chief, the chief eunuch, and the chief officer: or Tartan, Rab-saris, and Rab-shakeh.

And if you tell me that you are relying on the LORD your God, is he not 22
the god whose hill-shrines and altars Hezekiah has suppressed, telling Judah and Jerusalem that they must prostrate themselves before this altar in Jerusalem?"

'Now, make a bargain with my master the king of Assyria: I will give 23 you two thousand horses if you can find riders for them. Will you reject 24
the authority of even the least of my master's servants and rely on Egypt for chariots and horsemen? Do you think that I have come to attack this 25 place and destroy it without the consent of the LORD? No; the LORD himself said to me, "Attack this land and destroy it."'

Eliakim son of Hilkiah, Shebna, and Joah said to the chief officer, 26
'Please speak to us in Aramaic, for we understand it; do not speak Hebrew 27 to us within earshot of the people on the city wall.' The chief officer answered, 'Is it to your master and to you that my master has sent me to 28 say this? Is it not to the people sitting on the wall who, like you, will have to eat their own dung and drink their own urine?' Then he stood and 29 shouted in Hebrew, 'Hear the message of the Great King, the king of Assyria. These are the king's words: "Do not be taken in by Hezekiah. He 30 cannot save you from me. Do not let him persuade you to rely on the LORD, and tell you that the LORD will save you and that this city will never be 31 surrendered to the king of Assyria." Do not listen to Hezekiah; these are the words of the king of Assyria: "Make peace with me. Come out to me, and then you shall each eat the fruit of his own vine and his own fig-tree, and drink the water of his own cistern, until I come and take you to a land 32 like your own, a land of grain and new wine, of corn and vineyards, of olives, fine oil, and honey—life for you all, instead of death. Do not listen to Hezekiah; he will only mislead you by telling you that the LORD will save 33
you. Did the god of any of these nations save his land from the king of Assyria? Where are the gods of Hamath and Arpad? Where are the gods of 34 Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivvah? Where are the gods of Samaria? Did they save Samaria from me? Among all the gods of the nations is there one who 35 saved his land from me? And how is the LORD to save Jerusalem?"'

The people were silent and answered not a word, for the king had given 36 orders that no one was to answer him. Eliakim son of Hilkiah, comptroller 37 of the household, Shebna the adjutant-general, and Joah son of Asaph, secretary of state, came to Hezekiah with their clothes rent and reported what the chief officer had said.

When King Hezekiah heard their report, he rent his clothes and wrapped 19 1^a himself in sackcloth, and went into the house of the LORD. He sent Eliakim 2 comptroller of the household, Shebna the adjutant-general, and the senior priests, all covered in sackcloth, to the prophet Isaiah son of Amoz, to 3 give him this message from the king: 'This day is a day of trouble for us, a day of reproof and contempt. We are like a woman who has no strength to bear the child that is coming to the birth. It may be that the LORD your 4 God heard all the words of the chief officer whom his master the king of Assyria sent to taunt the living God, and will confute what he, the LORD your God, heard. Offer a prayer for those who still survive.' King Hezekiah's 5

servants came to Isaiah, and he told them to say this to their master: 'This is the word of the LORD: "Do not be alarmed at what you heard when the lackeys of the king of Assyria blasphemed me. I will put a spirit in him and he shall hear a rumour and withdraw to his own country; and there I will make him fall by the sword."' "

So the chief officer withdrew. He heard that the king of Assyria had left Lachish, and he found him attacking Libnah. But when the king learnt that Tirhakah king of Cush was on the way to make war on him, he sent messengers again to Hezekiah king of Judah, to say to him, 'How can you be deluded by your god on whom you rely when he promises that Jerusalem shall not fall into the hands of the king of Assyria? Surely you have heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all countries, exterminating their people; can you then hope to escape? Did their gods save the nations which my forefathers destroyed, Gozan, Harran, Rezep, and the people of Beth-eden living in Telassar? Where are the kings of Hamath, of Arpad, and of Lahir, Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivvah?'

Hezekiah took the letter from the messengers and read it; then he went up into the house of the LORD, spread it out before the LORD and offered this prayer: 'O LORD God of Israel, enthroned on the cherubim, thou alone art God of all the kingdoms of the earth; thou hast made heaven and earth. Turn thy ear to me, O LORD, and listen; open thine eyes, O LORD, and see; hear the message that Sennacherib has sent to taunt the living God. It is true, O LORD, that the kings of Assyria have ravaged the nations and their lands, that they have consigned their gods to the fire and destroyed them; for they were no gods but the work of men's hands, mere wood and stone. But now, O LORD our God, save us from his power, so that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou, O LORD, alone art God.'

Isaiah son of Amoz sent to Hezekiah and said, 'This is the word of the LORD the God of Israel: I have heard your prayer to me concerning Sennacherib king of Assyria. This is the word which the LORD has spoken concerning him:

The virgin daughter of Zion disdains you,
she laughs you to scorn;
the daughter of Jerusalem tosses her head
as you retreat.

Whom have you taunted and blasphemed?
Against whom have you clamoured,
casting haughty glances at the Holy One of Israel?
You have sent your messengers to taunt the Lord,
and said:

I have mounted my chariot and done mighty deeds:
I have gone high up in the mountains,
into the recesses of Lebanon.
I have cut down its tallest cedars,
the best of its pines,
I have reached its farthest corners,
forest and meadow.

I have dug wells
and drunk the waters of a foreign land, and with the soles of my feet I have dried up all the streams of Egypt. 24

Have you not heard long ago?
I did it all. 25

In days gone by I planned it and now I have brought it about, making fortified cities tumble down into heaps of rubble.^a

Their citizens, shorn of strength, disheartened and ashamed,
were but as plants in the field, as green herbs,
as grass on the roof-tops blasted before the east wind.^b 26

I know your rising up^c and your sitting down, your going out and your coming in. 27

The frenzy of your rage against me^d and your arrogance have come to my ears. 28

I will put a ring in your nose
and a hook in your lips,
and I will take you back by the road
on which you have come.

This shall be the sign for you: this year you shall eat shed grain and in the second year what is self-sown; but in the third year sow and reap, plant vineyards and eat their fruit. The survivors left in Judah shall strike fresh root under ground and yield fruit above ground, for a remnant shall come out of Jerusalem and survivors from Mount Zion. The zeal of the LORD will perform this. 29 30
31

‘Therefore, this is the word of the LORD concerning the king of Assyria: 32

He shall not enter this city
nor shoot an arrow there,
he shall not advance against it with shield
nor cast up a siege-ramp against it.

By the way on which he came he shall go back;
this city he shall not enter. 33

This is the very word of the LORD.

I will shield this city to deliver it, for my own sake and for the sake of my servant David.’ 34

That night the angel of the LORD went out and struck down a hundred and eighty-five thousand men in the Assyrian camp; when morning dawned, they all lay dead. So Sennacherib king of Assyria broke camp, went back to Nineveh and stayed there. One day, while he was worshipping in the temple of his god Nisroch, Adrammelech and Sharezer his sons murdered 35 him and escaped to the land of Ararat. He was succeeded by his son Esarhaddon.

¹^a At this time Hezekiah fell dangerously ill and the prophet Isaiah son of Amoz came to him and said, 'This is the word of the LORD: Give your last instructions to your household, for you are a dying man and will not recover.' Hezekiah turned his face to the wall and offered this prayer to the LORD: 'O LORD, remember how I have lived before thee, faithful and loyal in thy service, always doing what was good in thine eyes.' And he wept bitterly. But before Isaiah had left the citadel, the word of the LORD came to him: 'Go back and say to Hezekiah, the prince of my people: "This is the word of the LORD the God of your father David: I have heard your prayer and seen your tears; I will heal you and on the third day you shall go up to the house of the LORD. I will add fifteen years to your life and deliver you and this city from the king of Assyria, and I will protect this city for my own sake and for my servant David's sake."' Then Isaiah told them to apply a fig-plaster; so they made one and applied it to the boil, and he recovered. Then Hezekiah asked Isaiah what sign the LORD would give him that he would be cured and would go up into the house of the LORD on the third day. And Isaiah said, 'This shall be your sign from the LORD that he will do what he has promised; shall the shadow go forward ten steps or back ten steps?' Hezekiah answered, 'It is an easy thing for the shadow to move forward ten steps; rather let it go back ten steps.'

¹³ Hezekiah welcomed them and showed them all his treasury, silver and gold, spices and fragrant oil, his armoury and everything to be found among his treasures; there was nothing in his house and in all his realm that Hezekiah did not show them. Then the prophet Isaiah came to King Hezekiah and asked him, 'What did these men say and where have they come from?' 'They have come from a far-off country,' Hezekiah answered, 'from Babylon.' Then Isaiah asked, 'What did they see in your house?' 'They saw everything,' Hezekiah replied; 'there was nothing among my treasures that I did not show them.' Then Isaiah said to Hezekiah, 'Hear the word of the LORD: The time is coming, says the LORD, when everything in your house, and all that your forefathers have amassed till the present day, will be carried away to Babylon; not a thing shall be left. And some of the sons who will be born to you, sons of your own begetting, shall be taken and shall be made eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.' Hezekiah answered, 'The word of the LORD which you have spoken is good'; thinking to himself that peace and security would last out his lifetime.

²⁰ The other events of Hezekiah's reign, his exploits, and how he made the pool and the conduit and brought water into the city, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Judah. So Hezekiah rested with his forefathers and was succeeded by his son Manasseh.

The last kings of Judah

MANASSEH WAS TWELVE YEARS OLD when he came to the throne, 21 1^a and he reigned in Jerusalem for fifty-five years; his mother was Hephzi-bah. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD, in following 2 the abominable practices of the nations which the LORD had dispossessed in favour of the Israelites. He rebuilt the hill-shrines which his father 3 Hezekiah had destroyed, he erected altars to the Baal and made a sacred pole as Ahab king of Israel had done, and prostrated himself before all the host of heaven and worshipped them. He built altars in the house of the 4 LORD, that house of which the LORD had said, 'Jerusalem shall receive my Name.' He built altars for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the 5 house of the LORD; he made his son pass through the fire, he practised sooth- 6 saying and divination, and dealt with ghosts and spirits. He did much wrong in the eyes of the LORD and provoked his anger; and the image that 7 he had made of the goddess Asherah he put in the house, the place of which the LORD had said to David and Solomon his son, 'This house and Jeru- 8
 salem, which I chose out of all the tribes of Israel, shall receive my Name for all time. I will not again make Israel outcasts from the land which I gave 8 to their forefathers, if only they will be careful to observe all my commands and all the law that my servant Moses gave them.' But they did not obey, 9 and Manasseh misled them into wickedness far worse than that of the nations which the LORD had exterminated in favour of the Israelites.

Then the LORD spoke through his servants the prophets: 'Because 10 11
 Manasseh king of Judah has done these abominable things, outdoing the Amorites before him in wickedness, and because he has led Judah into sin with his idols, this is the word of the LORD the God of Israel: I will bring 12 disaster on Jerusalem and Judah, disaster which will ring in the ears of all who hear of it. I will mark down every stone of Jerusalem with the plumb- 13 line of Samaria and the plummet of the house of Ahab; I will wipe away Jerusalem as when a man wipes his plate and turns it upside down, and I 14 will cast off what is left of my people, my own possession, and hand them over to their enemies. They shall be plundered and fall a prey to all their enemies; for they have done what is wrong in my eyes and have 15 provoked my anger from the day their forefathers left Egypt up to the present day. And this Manasseh shed so much innocent blood that he 16 filled Jerusalem full to the brim, not to mention the sin into which he led Judah by doing what is wrong in my eyes.' The other events and acts of 17 Manasseh's reign, and the sin that he committed, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Judah. So Manasseh rested with his forefathers and 18 was buried in the garden-tomb of his family, in the garden of Uzza; he was succeeded by his son Amon.

Amon was twenty-two years old when he came to the throne, and he 19^b reigned in Jerusalem for two years; his mother was Meshullemeth daughter of Haruz of Jotbah. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD as his 20 father Manasseh had done. He followed in his father's footsteps and served 21 the idols that his father had served and prostrated himself before them. He 22

^a Verses 1-9: cp. 2 Chr. 33. 1-9.^b Verses 19-24: cp. 2 Chr. 33. 21-25.

forsook the LORD the God of his fathers and did not conform to his ways.
 23 King Amon's courtiers conspired against him and murdered him in his 24 house; but the people of the land killed all the conspirators and made his 25 son Josiah king in his place. The other events of Amon's reign are recorded 26 in the annals of the kings of Judah. He was buried in his grave in the garden of Uzza; he was succeeded by his son Josiah.

2 1^a Josiah was eight years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for thirty-one years; his mother was Jedidah daughter of 2 Adaiah of Bozkath. He did what was right in the eyes of the LORD; he followed closely in the footsteps of his forefather David, swerving neither right nor left.

3^b In the eighteenth year of his reign Josiah sent Shaphan son of Azaliah, 4 son of Meshullam, the adjutant-general, to the house of the LORD. 'Go to the high priest Hilkiah,' he said, 'and tell him to melt down the silver that has been brought into the house of the LORD, which those on duty at the 5 entrance have received from the people, and to hand it over to the foremen in the house of the LORD, to pay the workmen who are carrying out repairs 6 in it, the carpenters, builders, and masons, and to purchase timber and 7 hewn stones for its repair. They are not to be asked to account for the 8 money that has been given them; they are acting on trust.' The high priest Hilkiah told Shaphan the adjutant-general that he had discovered the book of the law in the house of the LORD, and he gave it to him, and Shaphan 9 read it. Then Shaphan came to report to the king and told him that his servants had melted down the silver in the house of the LORD and handed 10 it over to the foremen there. Then Shaphan the adjutant-general told the king that the high priest Hilkiah had given him a book, and he read it out 11 in the king's presence. When the king heard what was in the book of the 12 law, he rent his clothes, and ordered the priest Hilkiah, Ahikam son of Shaphan, Akbor son of Micaiah, Shaphan the adjutant-general, and 13 Asaiah the king's attendant, to go and seek guidance of the LORD for himself, for the people, and for all Judah, about what was written in this book that had been discovered. 'Great is the wrath of the LORD', he said, 'that has been kindled against us, because our forefathers did not obey the commands in this book and do all that is laid upon us.'

14 So Hilkiah the priest, Ahikam, Akbor, Shaphan, and Asaiah went to Huldah the prophetess, wife of Shallum son of Tikvah, son of Harhas, the keeper of the wardrobe, and consulted her at her home in the second 15 quarter of Jerusalem. 'This is the word of the LORD the God of Israel,' she 16 answered: 'Say to the man who sent you to me, "This is the word of the LORD: I am bringing disaster on this place and its inhabitants as foretold 17 in the book which the king of Judah has read, because they have forsaken me and burnt sacrifices to other gods, provoking my anger with all the idols they have made with their own hands; therefore, my wrath is kindled 18 against this place and will not be quenched." This is what you shall say to the king of Judah who sent you to seek guidance of the LORD: "This is the 19 word of the LORD the God of Israel: You have listened to my words and shown a willing heart, you humbled yourself before the LORD when you

^a Verses 1, 2: cp. 2 Chr. 34. 1, 2.

^b Verses 3-20: cp. 2 Chr. 34. 8-28.

heard me say that this place and its inhabitants would become objects of loathing and scorn, you rent your clothes and wept before me. Because of all this, I for my part have heard you. This is the very word of the LORD. Therefore, I will gather you to your forefathers, and you will be gathered to your grave in peace; you will not live to see all the disaster which I am bringing upon this place.”^a So they brought back word to the king. 20

Then the king sent and called all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem together, and went up to the house of the LORD; he took with him the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the priests and the prophets, the whole population, high and low. There he read out to them all the book of the covenant discovered in the house of the LORD; and then, standing on the dais,^b the king made a covenant before the LORD to obey him and keep his commandments, his testimonies, and his statutes, with all his heart and soul, and so fulfil the terms of the covenant written in this book. And all the people pledged themselves to the covenant. 23 1^d

Next, the king ordered the high priest Hilkiah, the deputy high priest, and those on duty at the entrance, to remove from the house of the LORD all the objects made for Baal and Asherah and all the host of heaven; he burnt these outside Jerusalem, in the open country by the Kidron, and carried the ashes to Bethel. He suppressed the heathen priests whom the kings of Judah had appointed to burn sacrifices at the hill-shrines in the cities of Judah and in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem, as well as those who burnt sacrifices to Baal, to the sun and moon and planets and all the host of heaven. He took the symbol of Asherah^d from the house of the LORD to the gorge of the Kidron outside Jerusalem, burnt it there and pounded it to dust, which was then scattered over the common burial-ground. He also pulled down the houses of the male prostitutes attached to the house of the LORD, where the women wove vestments in honour of Asherah. 4 5 6 7

He brought in all the priests from the cities of Judah and desecrated the hill-shrines where they had burnt sacrifices, from Geba to Beersheba, and dismantled the hill-shrines of the demons^e in front of the gate of Joshua, the governor of the city, to the left of the city gate. These priests, however, never came up to the altar of the LORD in Jerusalem but used to eat unleavened bread with the priests of their clan. He desecrated Topheth in the Valley of Ben-hinnom, so that no one might make his son or daughter pass through the fire in honour of Molech.^f He destroyed the horses that the kings of Judah had set up in honour of the sun at the entrance to the house of the LORD, beside the room of Nathan-melek the eunuch in the colonnade, and he burnt the chariots of the sun. He pulled down the altars made by the kings of Judah on the roof by the upper chamber of Ahaz and the altars made by Manasseh in the two courts of the house of the LORD; he pounded them to dust and threw it into the gorge of the Kidron. Also, on the east of Jerusalem, to the south of the Mount of Olives, the king desecrated the hill-shrines which Solomon the king of Israel had built for Ashtoreth the loathsome goddess of the Sidonians, and for Kemosh the 8 9 10 11 12 13

loathsome god of Moab, and for Milcom the abominable god of the Ammonites; he broke down the sacred pillars and cut down the sacred poles and filled the places where they had stood with human bones.

At Bethel he dismantled the altar by^a the hill-shrine made by Jeroboam son of Nebat who led Israel into sin, together with the hill-shrine itself; he broke its stones in pieces, crushed them to dust and burnt the sacred pole. When Josiah set eyes on the graves which were there on the hill, he sent and took the bones from them and burnt them on the altar to desecrate it, thus fulfilling the word of the LORD announced by the man of God when Jeroboam stood by the altar at the feast. But when he caught sight of the grave of the man of God who had foretold these things, he asked, 'What is that monument I see there?' The people of the city answered, 'The grave of the man of God who came from Judah and foretold all that you have done to the altar at Bethel.' 'Leave it alone,' he said; 'let no one disturb his bones.' So they spared his bones and also those of the prophet who came from Samaria. Further, Josiah suppressed all the hill-shrines in the cities of Samaria, which the kings of Israel had set up and thereby provoked the LORD's anger, and he did to them what he had done at Bethel. He slaughtered on the altars all the priests of the hill-shrines who were there, and he burnt human bones upon them. Then he went back to Jerusalem.

The king ordered all the people to keep the Passover to the LORD their God, as this book of the covenant prescribed; no such Passover had been kept either when the judges were ruling Israel or during the times of the kings of Israel and Judah. But in the eighteenth year of Josiah's reign this Passover was kept to the LORD in Jerusalem. Further, Josiah got rid of all who called up ghosts and spirits, of all household gods and idols and all the loathsome objects seen in the land of Judah and in Jerusalem, so that he might fulfil the requirements of the law written in the book which the priest Hilkiah had discovered in the house of the LORD. No king before him had turned to the LORD as he did, with all his heart and soul and strength, following the whole law of Moses; nor did any king like him appear again.

Yet the LORD did not abate his fierce anger; it still burned against Judah because of all the provocation which Manasseh had given him. 'Judah also I will banish from my presence', he declared, 'as I banished Israel; and I will cast off this city of Jerusalem which once I chose, and the house where I promised that my Name should be.'

The other events and acts of Josiah's reign are recorded in the annals of the kings of Judah. It was in his reign that Pharaoh Necho king of Egypt set out for the river Euphrates to help the king of Assyria. King Josiah went to meet him; and when they met at Megiddo, Pharaoh Necho slew him. His attendants conveyed his body in a chariot from Megiddo to Jerusalem and buried him in his own burial place. Then the people of the land took Josiah's son Jehoahaz and anointed him king in place of his father.

Jehoahaz was twenty-three years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for three months; his mother was Hamutal daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD, as his forefathers had done. Pharaoh Necho removed him from the throne^a in Jerusalem, and imposed on the land a fine of a hundred talents of silver and one talent of gold. Pharaoh Necho made Josiah's son Eliakim king in place of his father and changed his name to Jehoiakim. He took Jehoahaz and brought him to Egypt, where he died. Jehoiakim paid the silver and gold to Pharaoh, taxing the country to meet Pharaoh's demands; he exacted it from the people, from every man according to his assessment, so that he could pay Pharaoh Necho.

Jehoiakim was twenty-five years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for eleven years; his mother was Zebidah daughter of Pedaiah of Rumah. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD, as his forefathers had done. During his reign Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took the field, and Jehoiakim became his vassal; but three years later he broke with him and revolted. The LORD launched against him raiding-parties of Chaldaeans, Aramaeans, Moabites, and Ammonites, letting them range through Judah and ravage it, as the LORD had foretold through his servants the prophets. All this happened to Judah in fulfilment of the LORD's purpose to banish them from his presence, because of all the sin that Manasseh had committed and because of the innocent blood that he had shed; he had drenched Jerusalem with innocent blood, and the LORD would not forgive him. The other events and acts of Jehoiakim's reign are recorded in the annals of the kings of Judah. He rested with his forefathers, and was succeeded by his son Jehoiachin. The king of Egypt did not leave his own land again, because the king of Babylon had stripped him of all his possessions, from the Torrent of Egypt to the river Euphrates.

Downfall of the southern kingdom

JHOIACHIN WAS EIGHTEEN YEARS OLD when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for three months; his mother was Nehushta daughter of Elnathan of Jerusalem. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD, as his father had done. At that time the troops of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon advanced on Jerusalem and besieged the city. Nebuchadnezzar arrived while his troops were besieging it, and Jehoiachin king of Judah, his mother, his courtiers, his officers, and his eunuchs, all surrendered to the king of Babylon. The king of Babylon, now in the eighth year of his reign, took him prisoner; and, as the LORD had foretold, he carried off all the treasures of the house of the LORD and of the royal palace and broke up all the vessels of gold which Solomon king of Israel had made for the temple of the LORD. He carried the people of Jerusalem into exile, the officers and the fighting men, ten thousand in number, together with all the craftsmen and smiths; only the weakest class of people were left. He deported Jehoiachin to Babylon; he also took into exile from Jerusalem to Babylon the king's mother and his wives, his eunuchs and the foremost men of the land. He also deported to Babylon all the men of substance, seven thousand in number, and a thousand craftsmen and smiths, all of them able-bodied men and skilled armourers. He made Mattaniah, uncle of Jehoiachin, king in his place and changed his name to Zedekiah.

^a Zedekiah was twenty-one years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for eleven years; his mother was Hamutal daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD, as Jehoiakim had done. Jerusalem and Judah so angered the LORD that in the end he banished them from his sight; and Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon.

^b In the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, on the tenth day of the month, Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon advanced with all his army against Jerusalem, invested it and erected watch-towers against it on every side; the siege lasted till the eleventh year of King Zedekiah. In the fourth month of that year,^c on the ninth day of the month, when famine was severe in the city and there was no food for the common people, the city was thrown open. When Zedekiah king of Judah saw this,^d he and all his armed escort left the city and fled by night through the gate called Between the Two Walls, near the king's garden. They escaped towards the Arabah, although the Chaldaeans were surrounding the city. But the Chaldaean army pursued the king and overtook him in the lowlands of Jericho; and all his company was dispersed. The king was seized and brought before the king of Babylon at Riblah, where he pleaded his case before him. Zedekiah's sons were slain before his eyes; then his eyes were put out, and he was brought to Babylon in fetters of bronze.

In the fifth month, on the seventh day of the month, in the nineteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, Nebuzaradan, captain of the king's bodyguard, came to Jerusalem and set fire to the house of the LORD and the royal palace; all the houses in the city, including the mansion of Gedaliah,^e were burnt down. The Chaldaean forces with the captain of the guard pulled down the walls all round Jerusalem. Nebuzaradan captain of the guard deported the rest of the people left in the city, those who had deserted to the king of Babylon and any remaining artisans.^f He left only the weakest class of people to be vine-dressers and labourers.

The Chaldaeans broke up the pillars of bronze in the house of the LORD, the trolleys, and the Sea of bronze, and took the metal to Babylon. They took also the pots, shovels, snuffers, saucers, and all the vessels of bronze used in the service of the temple. The captain of the guard took away the precious metal, whether gold or silver, of which the firepans and the tossing-bowls were made. The bronze of the two pillars, the one Sea, and the trolleys, which Solomon had made for the house of the LORD, was beyond weighing. The one pillar was eighteen cubits high and its capital was bronze; the capital was three cubits high, and a decoration of network and pomegranates ran all round it, wholly of bronze. The other pillar, with its network, was exactly like it. 17

The captain of the guard took Seraiah the chief priest and Zephaniah the deputy chief priest and the three on duty at the entrance; he took also from the city a eunuch who was in charge of the fighting men, five of those with right of access to the king who were still in the city, the adjutant-general^a whose duty was to muster the people for war, and sixty men of the people who were still there. These Nebuzaradan captain of the guard brought to the king of Babylon at Riblah. There, in the land of Hamath, the king of Babylon had them flogged and put to death. So Judah went into exile from their own land. 18

Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon appointed Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, governor over the few people whom he had left in Judah. When the captains of the armed bands and their men heard that the king of Babylon had appointed Gedaliah governor, they all came to him at Mizpah: Ishmael son of Nethaniah, Johanan son of Kareah, Seraiah son of Tanhumeth of Netophah, and Jaazaniah of Beth-maacah. Then Gedaliah gave them and their men this assurance: 'Have no fear of the Chaldaean officers. Settle down in the land and serve the king of Babylon; and then all will be well with you.' But in the seventh month Ishmael son of Nethaniah, son of Elishama, who was a member of the royal house, came with ten men and murdered Gedaliah and the Jews and Chaldaeans who were with him at Mizpah. Thereupon all the people, high and low, and the captains of the armed bands, fled to Egypt for fear of the Chaldaeans. 22

In the thirty-seventh year of the exile of Jehoiachin king of Judah, on the twenty-seventh day of the twelfth month, Evil-merodach^c king of Babylon in the year of his accession showed favour to Jehoiachin king of Judah. He brought him out of prison, treated him kindly and gave him a seat at table above the kings with him in Babylon. So Jehoiachin discarded his prison clothes and lived as a pensioner of the king for the rest of his life. For his maintenance, a regular daily allowance was given him by the king as long as he lived. 27^b

Adjoining them were the Gadites, occupying the district of Bashan as 11 far as Salcah: Joel the chief; second in rank, Shapham; then Jaanai and 12 Shaphat in Bashan. Their fellow-tribesmen belonged to the families of 13
 Michael, Meshullam, Sheba, Jorai, Jachan, Zia and Heber, seven in all.
 These were the sons of Abihail son of Huri, son of Jaroah, son of Gilead, 14 son of Michael, son of Jeshishai, son of Jahdo, son of Buz. Ahi son of 15
 Abdiel, son of Guni, was head of their family; they lived in Gilead, in 16
 Bashan and its villages, in all the common land of Sharon as far as it stretched. These registers were all compiled in the reigns of Jotham king 17 of Judah and Jeroboam king of Israel.

The sons of Reuben, Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh: of their 18 fighting men armed with shield and sword, their archers and their battle-trained soldiers, forty-four thousand seven hundred and sixty were ready for active service. They made war on the Hagarites, Jetur, 19 Nephish, and Nodab. They were given help against them, for they cried 20 to their God for help in the battle, and because they trusted him he listened to their prayer, and the Hagarites and all their allies surrendered to 21 them.^a They drove off their cattle, fifty thousand camels, two hundred 22 and fifty thousand sheep, and two thousand asses, and they took a hundred thousand captives. Many had been killed, for the war was of God's making, and they occupied the land instead of them until the exile.

23 Half the tribe of Manasseh lived in the land from Bashan to Baal-hermon, Senir, and Mount Hermon, and were numerous also in Lebanon.
 24 The heads of their families were: Ephraim, Ishi, Eliel, Azriel, Jeremiah, Hodaviah, and Jahdiel, all men of ability and repute, heads of their 25 families. But they sinned against the God of their fathers, and turned wantonly to worship the gods of the peoples whom God had destroyed 26 before them. So the God of Israel stirred up Pul king of Assyria, that is Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, and he carried into exile Reuben, Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh. He took them to Halah, Habor, Hara, and the river Gozan, where they are to this day.

a descendant of Merari, Bakbakkar, Heresh, Galal, Mattaniah son of Mica, son of Zichri, son of Asaph, Obadiah son of Shemaiah, son of Galal, son of Jeduthun, and Berechiah son of Asa, son of Elkanah, who lived in the hamlets of the Netophathites.

The door-keepers were Shallum, Akkub, Talmon, and Ahiman; their brother Shallum was the chief. Until then they had all been door-keepers in the quarters of the Levites at the king's gate, on the east. Shallum son of Kore, son of Ebiasaph, son of Korah, and his kinsmen of the Korahite family were responsible for service as guards of the thresholds of the Tabernacle; their ancestors had performed the duty of guarding the entrances to the camp of the LORD. Phinehas son of Eleazar had been their overseer in the past—the LORD be with him! Zechariah son of Meshelemiah was the door-keeper of the Tent of the Presence. Those picked to be door-keepers numbered two hundred and twelve in all, registered in their hamlets. David and Samuel the seer had installed them because they were trustworthy. They and their sons had charge, by watches, of the gates of the house, the tent-dwelling of the LORD. The door-keepers were to be on four sides, east, west, north, and south. Their kinsmen from their hamlets had to come on duty with them for seven days at a time in turn. The four principal door-keepers were chosen for their trustworthiness; they were Levites and had charge of the rooms and the stores in the house of God. They always slept in the precincts of the house of God (for the watch was their duty) and they had charge of the key for opening the gates every morning. Some of them had charge of the vessels used in the service of the temple, keeping count of them as they were brought in and taken out. Some of them were detailed to take charge of the furniture and all the sacred vessels, the flour, the wine, the oil, the incense, and the spices.

Some of the priests compounded the ointment for the spices. Mattithiah the Levite, the eldest son of Shallum the Korahite, was in charge of the preparation of the wafers because he was trustworthy. Some of their Kohathite kinsmen were in charge of setting out the rows of the Bread of the Presence every sabbath.

These, the musicians, heads of Levite families, were lodged in rooms set apart for them, because they were liable for duty by day and by night.

These are the heads of Levite families, chiefs according to their tribal lists, living in Jerusalem.

Jehiel founder of Gibeon lived at Gibeon; his wife's name was Maacah, and his sons were Abdon the eldest, Zur, Kish, Baal, Ner, Nadab, Gedor, Ahio, Zechariah and Mikloth. Mikloth was the father of Shimeam; they lived alongside their kinsmen in Jerusalem.^b Ner was the father of Kish, Kish father of Saul, Saul father of Jonathan, Malchishua, Abinadab and Eshbaal. Ahaz was the father of Jarah, Jarah father of Alemeth, Azmoth, and Zimri; Zimri father of Moza, and Moza father of Binea; his son was Rephaiah, his son Elasa, his son Azel. Azel had six sons, whose names were Azrikam, Bocheru, Ishmael, Sheariah, Obadiah and Hanan. These were the sons of Azel.

The death of Saul

1^a THE PHILISTINES FOUGHT A BATTLE against Israel, and the men
 2 of Israel were routed, leaving their dead on Mount Gilboa. The 3 Philistines hotly pursued Saul and his sons and killed the three sons, 4 Jonathan, Abinadab and Malchishua. The battle went hard for Saul, for 5 some archers came upon him and he was wounded by them. So he said
 6 to his armour-bearer, 'Draw your sword and run me through, so that these 7 uncircumcised brutes may not come and make sport of me.' But the 8 armour-bearer refused, he dared not; whereupon Saul took his own sword
 9 and fell on it. When the armour-bearer saw that Saul was dead, he too fell 10 on his sword and died. Thus Saul died and his three sons; his whole house 11 perished at one and the same time. And all the Israelites in the Vale, when 12 they saw that their army had fled and that Saul and his sons had perished, 13 fled likewise, abandoning their cities, and the Philistines went in and 14 occupied them.

8 Next day, when the Philistines came to strip the slain, they found Saul 9 and his sons lying dead on Mount Gilboa. They stripped him, cut off his 10 head and took away his armour; then they sent messengers through the 11 length and breadth of their land to take the good news to idols and people 12 alike. They deposited his armour in the temple of their god,^b and nailed 13 up his skull in the temple of Dagon. When the people of Jabesh-gilead 14 heard all that the Philistines had done to Saul, the bravest of them set out together to recover the bodies of Saul and his sons; they brought them back to Jabesh and buried their bones under the oak-tree there, and fasted for seven days. Thus Saul paid with his life for his unfaithfulness: he had disobeyed the word of the LORD and had resorted to ghosts for guidance.
 He had not sought guidance of the LORD, who therefore destroyed him and transferred the kingdom to David son of Jesse.

David king over Israel

1^c THEN ALL ISRAEL ASSEMBLED at Hebron to wait upon David. 'We 2 are your own flesh and blood', they said. 'In the past, while Saul was 3 still king, you led the forces of Israel to war, and you brought them home 4 again. And the LORD your God said to you, "You shall be shepherd of my 5 people Israel, you shall be their prince."' All the elders of Israel came to 6 the king at Hebron; there David made a covenant with them before the LORD, and they anointed David king over Israel, as the LORD had said through the lips of Samuel.

4 Then David and all Israel went to Jerusalem (that is Jebus, where the 5 Jebusites, the inhabitants of the land, lived). The people of Jebus said to 6 David, 'Never shall you come in here'; none the less David did capture the stronghold of Zion, and it is now known as the City of David. David said, 'The first man to kill a Jebusite shall become a commander or an officer', and the first man to go up was Joab son of Zeruah; so he was given the command.

David took up his residence in the stronghold: that is why they called it the City of David. He built the city round it, starting at the Millo and including its neighbourhood, while Joab reconstructed the rest of the city. So David steadily grew stronger, for the LORD of Hosts was with him.

Of David's heroes these were the chief, men who lent their full strength to his government and, with all Israel, joined in making him king; such was the LORD's decree for Israel. First came Jashoboam the Hachmonite, chief of the three; he it was who brandished his spear over three hundred, all slain at one time. Next to him was Eleazar son of Dodo the Ahohite, one of the heroic three. He was with David at Pas-dammim where the Philistines had gathered for battle in a field carrying a good crop of barley; and when the people had fled from the Philistines he stood his ground in the field, saved it^b and defeated them. So the LORD brought about a great victory.

Three of the thirty chiefs went down to the rock to join David at the cave of Adullam, while the Philistines were encamped in the Vale of Rephaim. At that time David was in the stronghold, and a Philistine garrison held Bethlehem. One day a longing came over David, and he exclaimed, 'If only I could have a drink of water from the well^c by the gate of Bethlehem!' At this the three made their way through the Philistine lines and drew water from the well by the gate of Bethlehem, and brought it to David. But David refused to drink it; he poured it out to the LORD and said, 'God forbid that I should do such a thing! Can I drink the blood of these men? They have brought it at the risk of their lives.' So he would not drink it. Such were the exploits of the heroic three.

Abishai the brother of Joab was chief of the thirty. He once brandished his spear over three hundred dead, and he was famous among the thirty. He held higher rank than the rest of the thirty and became their captain, but he did not rival the three. Benaiah son of Jehoiada, from Kabzeel, was a hero of many exploits. It was he who smote the two champions of Moab, and who went down into a pit and killed a lion on a snowy day. It was he who also killed the Egyptian, a giant seven and a half feet high armed with a spear as big as the beam of a loom; he went to meet him with a club, snatched the spear out of the Egyptian's hand and killed him with his own weapon. Such were the exploits of Benaiah son of Jehoiada, famous among the heroic thirty.^d He was more famous than the rest of the thirty, but did not rival the three. David appointed him to his household.

These were his valiant heroes: Asahel the brother of Joab, and Elhanan son of Dodo from Bethlehem; Shammoth from Harod,^e and Helez from a place unknown; Ira son of Ikkesh from Tekoa, and Abiezer from Anathoth; Sibbecai from Hushah, and Ilai the Ahohite; Maharai from Netophah, and Heled son of Baanah from Netophah; Ithai son of Ribai from Gibeah of Benjamin, and Benaiah from Pirathon; Hurai from the ravines of Gaash, and Abiel from Beth-arabah; Azmoth from Bahurim, and

 44 son of Maacah, and Joshaphat the Mithnite; Uzzia from Ashtaroth, Shama
 45 and Jeiel the sons of Hotham from Aroer; Jedaiel son of Shimri, and Jaha

12 These are the men who joined David at Ziklag while he was banned from the presence of Saul son of Kish. They ranked among the warriors valiant 2 in battle. They carried bows and could sling stones or shoot arrows with 3 the left hand or the right; they were Benjamites, kinsmen of Saul. The foremost were Ahiezer and Joash, the sons of Shemaah the Gibeathite; Jeziel and Pelet, men of Beth-azmoth; Berachah and Jehu of Anathoth;
 4 Ishmaiah the Gibeonite, a hero among the thirty and a chief among them;
 5 Jeremiah, Jahaziel, Johanan, and Josabad of Gederah; Eluzai, Jerimoth,
 6 Bealiah, Shemariah, and Shephatiah the Haruphite; Elkanah, Isshiah, 7 Azareel, Joezer, Jashobeam, the Korahites; and Joelah and Zebadiah sons of Jeroham, of Gedor.

8 Some Gadites also joined David at the stronghold in the wilderness, valiant men trained for war, who could handle the heavy shield and spear, 9 grim as lions and swift as gazelles on the hills. Ezer was their chief, Obadiah 10 the second, Eliab the third; Mishmannah the fourth and Jeremiah the 11 12 fifth; Attai the sixth and Eliel the seventh; Johanan the eighth and Elzabad 13 14 the ninth; Jeremiah the tenth and Machbanai the eleventh. These were chiefs of the Gadites in the army, the least of them a match for a hundred, 15 the greatest a match for a thousand. These were the men who in the first month crossed the Jordan, which was in full flood in all its reaches, and wrought havoc in the valleys, east and west.

16 Some men of Benjamin and Judah came to David at the stronghold.
 17 David went out to them and said, 'If you come as friends to help me, join me and welcome; but if you come to betray me to my enemies, innocent though I am of any crime of violence, may the God of our fathers see and 18 judge.' At that a spirit took possession of Amasai, the chief of the thirty, and he said:

We are on your side, David!
 We are with you, son of Jesse!
 Greetings, greetings to you and greetings to your ally!
 For your God is your ally.

So David welcomed them and attached them to the columns of his raiding parties.

Some men of Manasseh had deserted to David when he went with the Philistines to war against Saul, though he did not, in fact, fight on the side of the Philistines. Their princes brusquely dismissed him, saying to themselves that he would desert them for his master Saul, and that would cost them their heads. The men of Manasseh who deserted to him when he went to Ziklag were these: Adnah, Jozabad, Jediel, Michael, Jozabad, Elihu, and Zilthai, each commanding his thousand in Manasseh. It was they who stood valiantly by David against the raiders, for they were all good fighters, and they were given commands in his forces. From day to day men came in to help David, until he had gathered an immense army.

These are the numbers of the armed bands which joined David at Hebron to transfer Saul's sovereignty to him, as the LORD had said: men of Judah, bearing heavy shield and spear, six thousand eight hundred, drafted for active service; of Simeon, fighting men drafted for active service, seven thousand one hundred; of Levi, four thousand six hundred, together with Jehoiada prince of the house of Aaron and three thousand seven hundred men, and Zadok a valiant fighter, with twenty-two officers of his own clan; of Benjamin, Saul's kinsmen, three thousand, though most of them had hitherto remained loyal to the house of Saul; of Ephraim, twenty thousand eight hundred, fighting men, famous in their own clans; of the half tribe of Manasseh, eighteen thousand, who had been nominated to come and make David king; of Issachar, whose tribesmen were skilled in reading the signs of the times to discover what course Israel should follow, two hundred chiefs, with all their kinsmen under their command; of Zebulun, fifty thousand troops well-drilled for battle, armed with every kind of weapon, bold and single-minded; of Naphtali, a thousand officers with thirty-seven thousand men bearing heavy shield and spear; of the Danites, twenty-eight thousand six hundred well-drilled for battle; of Asher, forty thousand troops well-drilled for battle; of the Reubenites and the Gadites and the half tribe of Manasseh east of Jordan, a hundred and twenty thousand, armed with every kind of weapon.

All these warriors, bold men in battle, came to Hebron, loyally determined to make David king over the whole of Israel; the rest of Israel, too, had but one thought, to make him king. They spent three days there with David, eating and drinking, for their kinsmen made provision for them. Their neighbours also round about, as far away as Issachar, Zebulun, and Naphtali, brought food on asses and camels, on mules and oxen, supplies of meal, fig-cakes, raisin-cakes, wine and oil, oxen and sheep, in plenty; for there was rejoicing in Israel.

DAVID CONSULTED THE OFFICERS over units of a thousand and a hundred on every matter brought forward. Then he said to the whole assembly of Israel, 'If you approve, and if the LORD our God opens a way, let us^a send to our kinsmen who have stayed behind, in all the districts of Israel, and also to the priests and Levites in the cities where they have common lands, bidding them join us. Let us fetch the Ark of our God, for

^a and if . . . let us: or and if it is from the LORD our God, let us seize the opportunity and . . .

4 while Saul lived we never resorted to it.' The whole assembly resolved to do this; the entire nation approved it.

5 So David assembled all Israel from the Shihor in Egypt to Lebo-hamath,
6^a in order to fetch the Ark of God from Kiriath-jearim. Then David and all Israel went up to Baalah, to Kiriath-jearim, which belonged to Judah, to fetch the Ark of God, the LORD enthroned upon the cherubim, the Ark
7 which bore his name.^b And they conveyed the Ark of God on a new cart
8 from the house of Abinadab, with Uzza and Ahio guiding the cart. David and all Israel danced for joy before God without restraint to the sound of singing, of harps and lutes, of tambourines, and cymbals and trumpets.
9 But when they came to the threshing-floor of Kidon, the oxen stumbled,
10 and Uzza put out his hand to hold the Ark. The LORD was angry with Uzza and struck him down because he had put out his hand to the Ark.
11 So he died there before God. David was vexed because the LORD's anger had broken out upon Uzza, and he called the place Perez-uzza,^c the name
12 it still bears. David was afraid of God that day and said, 'How can I harbour
13 the Ark of God after this?' So he did not take the Ark with him into the City of David, but turned aside and carried it to the house of Obed-edom 14 the Gittite. Thus the Ark of God remained beside the house of Obed-edom, in its tent,^d for three months, and the LORD blessed the family of Obed-edom and all that he had.

14 1^e Hiram king of Tyre sent an embassy to David; he sent cedar logs, and
2 masons and carpenters with them to build him a house. David knew by now that the LORD had confirmed him as king over Israel and had made his royal power stand higher for the sake of his people Israel.

3 David married more wives in Jerusalem, and more sons and daughters
4^f were born to him. These are the names of the children born to him in 5 Jerusalem: Shammua, Shobab, Nathan, Solomon, Ibhah, Elishua, Elpelet, 6⁷ Nogah, Nepheg, Japhia, Elishama, Beeliada and Eliphelet.

8 When the Philistines learnt that David had been anointed king over the whole of Israel, they came up in force to seek him out. David, hearing of this, went out to face them. Now the Philistines had come and raided the 9 Vale of Rephaim. So David inquired of God, 'If I attack the Philistines, wilt thou deliver them into my hands?' And the LORD answered, 'Go; I will deliver them into your hands.' So he went up and attacked them at 10 Baal-perazim and defeated them there. 'God has used me to break through my enemies' lines,' David said, 'as a river breaks its banks'; that is why the 12 place was named Baal-perazim.^g The Philistines left their gods behind them there, and by David's orders these were burnt.

13 14 The Philistines made another raid on the Vale. Again David inquired of God, and God said to him, 'No, you must go up towards their rear; wheel round without making contact and^h come upon them opposite the aspens. Then, as soon as you hear a rustling sound in the tree-tops, you shall give battle, for God will have gone out before you to defeat the Philistine army.' David did as God commanded, and they drove the Philistine army in flight all the way from Gibeon to Gezer. So David's fame spread through every land, and the LORD inspired all nations with dread of him.

DAVID BUILT HIMSELF QUARTERS in the City of David, and prepared a place for the Ark of God and pitched a tent for it. Then he decreed that only Levites should carry the Ark of God, since they had been chosen by the LORD to carry it and to serve him^a for ever. Next David assembled all Israel at Jerusalem, to bring up the Ark of the LORD to the place he had prepared for it. He gathered together the sons of Aaron and the Levites: of the sons of Kohath, Uriel the chief with a hundred and twenty of his kinsmen; of the sons of Merari, Asaiah the chief with two hundred and twenty of his kinsmen; of the sons of Gershon, Joel the chief with a hundred and thirty of his kinsmen; of the sons of Elizaphan, Shemaiah the chief with two hundred of his kinsmen; of the sons of Hebron, Eliel the chief with eighty of his kinsmen; of the sons of Uzziel, Amminadab the chief with a hundred and twelve of his kinsmen. And David summoned Zadok and Abiathar the priests, together with the Levites, Uriel, Asaiah, Joel, Shemaiah, Eliel, and Amminadab, and said to them, 'You who are heads of families of the Levites, hallow yourselves, you and your kinsmen, and bring up the Ark of the LORD the God of Israel to the place which I have prepared for it. It was because you were not present the first time, that the LORD our God broke out upon us. For we had not sought his guidance as we should have done.' So the priests and the Levites hallowed themselves to bring up the Ark of the LORD the God of Israel, and the Levites carried the Ark of God, bearing it on their shoulders with poles as Moses had prescribed at the command of the LORD.

David also ordered the chiefs of the Levites to install as musicians those of their kinsmen who were players skilled in making joyful music on their instruments, lutes and harps and cymbals. So the Levites installed Heman son of Joel and, from his kinsmen, Asaph son of Berechiah; and from their kinsmen the Merarites, Ethan son of Kushaiah, together with their kinsmen of the second degree, Zechariah, Jaaziel, Shemiramoth, Jehiel, Unni, Eliab, Benaiah, Maaseiah, Mattithiah, Eliphelehu, and Mikneiah, and the door-keepers Obed-edom and Jeiel. They installed the musicians Heman, Asaph, and Ethan to sound the cymbals of bronze; Zechariah, Jaaziel, Shemiramoth, Jehiel, Unni, Eliab, Maaseiah, and Benaiah to play on lutes;^b Mattithiah, Eliphelehu, Mikneiah, Obed-edom, Jeiel, and Azariah to play on harps.^c Kenaniah, officer of the Levites, was precentor in charge of the music because of his proficiency. Berechiah and Elkanah were door-keepers for the Ark, while the priests Shebaniah, Jehoshaphat, Nethaneel, Amasai, Zechariah, Benaiah, and Eliezer sounded the trumpets before the Ark of God; and Obed-edom and Jehiah also were door-keepers for the Ark.

25^a Then David and the elders of Israel and the captains of units of a 26 thousand went to bring up the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD with much rejoicing from the house of Obed-edom. Because God had helped the Levites who carried the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD, they sacrificed seven bulls and seven rams.

27 Now David and all the Levites who carried the Ark, and the musicians, and Kenaniah the precentor,^b were arrayed in robes of fine linen; and 28 David had on a linen ephod. All Israel escorted the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD with shouts of acclamation, blowing on horns and trumpets, 29 clashing cymbals and playing on lutes and harps. But as the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD was entering the city of David, Saul's daughter Michal looked down through a window and saw King David dancing and making merry, and she despised him in her heart.

16 1^c When they had brought in the Ark of God, they put it inside the tent that David had pitched for it, and they offered whole-offerings and shared-2 offerings before God. After David had completed these sacrifices, he 3 blessed the people in the name of the LORD and gave food, a loaf of bread, a portion of meat, and a cake of raisins, to each Israelite, man or woman.
 4 He appointed certain Levites to serve before the Ark of the LORD, to repeat the Name, to confess and to praise the LORD the God of Israel.
 5 Their leader was Asaph; second to him was Zechariah; then came Jaaziel,^d Shemiramoth, Jehiel, Mattithiah, Eliab, Benaiah, Obed-edom, and Jeiel, 6 with lutes and harps, Asaph, who sounded the cymbals; and Benaiah and Jahaziel the priests, who blew the trumpets before the Ark of the Covenant 7 of God continuously throughout that day. It was then that David first ordained the offering of thanks to the LORD by Asaph and his kinsmen:

8^e Give the LORD thanks and invoke him by name,
 make his deeds known in the world around.
 9 Pay him honour with song and psalm and think upon all his wonders.
 10 Exult in his hallowed name;
 let those who seek the LORD be joyful in heart.
 11 Turn to the LORD, your strength,^f seek his presence always.
 12 Remember the wonders that he has wrought,
 his portents and the judgements he has given,
 13 O offspring of Israel his servants, O chosen sons of Jacob.
 14 He is the LORD our God;
 his judgements fill the earth.
 15 He called to mind his covenant from long ago,^g
 the promise he extended to a thousand generations—

 his oath given to Isaac,

^d Verses 35, 36: cp. Ps. 106. 47, 48.

37 David left Asaph and his kinsmen there before the Ark of the Covenant
 38 of the LORD, to perform regular service before the Ark as each day's duty
 39 required; as door-keepers he left Obed-edom son of Jeduthun, and Hosah.
 40 (Obed-edom and his kinsmen were sixty-eight in number.) He left Zadok
 41 the priest and his kinsmen the priests before the Tabernacle of the LORD 42 at the hill-shrine in Gibeon, to make offerings there to the LORD upon the 43 altar of whole-offering regularly morning and evening, exactly as it is 44 written in the law enjoined by the LORD upon Israel. With them he left 45 Heman and Jeduthun and the other men chosen and nominated to give 46 thanks to the LORD, 'for his love endures for ever.' They had trumpets 47 and cymbals for the players, and the instruments used for sacred song. The 48 sons of Jeduthun kept the gate.

49 So all the people went home, and David returned to greet his household.

17 1^a AS SOON AS DAVID WAS ESTABLISHED in his house, he said to Nathan
 2 the prophet, 'Here I live in a house of cedar, while the Ark of the Covenant
 3 of the LORD is housed in curtains.' Nathan answered David, 'Do whatever 4 you have in mind, for God is with you.' But that night the word of God
 5 came to Nathan: 'Go and say to David my servant, "This is the word of 6 the LORD: It is not you who shall build me a house to dwell in. Down to 7 this day I have never dwelt in a house since I brought Israel up from 8 Egypt; I lived in a tent and a tabernacle.^b Wherever I journeyed with 9 Israel, did I ever ask any of the judges whom I appointed shepherds of my 10 people why they had not built me a house of cedar?" Then say this to my 11 servant David: "This is the word of the LORD of Hosts: I took you from 12 the pastures, and from following the sheep, to be prince over my people
 13 Israel. I have been with you wherever you have gone, and have destroyed
 14 all the enemies in your path. I will make you as famous as the great ones
 15 of the earth. I will assign a place for my people Israel; there I will plant 16 them, and they shall dwell in their own land. They shall be disturbed no 17 more, never again shall wicked men wear them down as they did from the 18 time when I first appointed judges over Israel my people, and I will sub-19 due all your enemies. But I will make you great and the LORD shall build 20 up your royal house. When your life ends and you go to join your fore-
 21 fathers, I will set up one of your family, one of your own sons, to succeed 22 you, and I will establish his kingdom. It is he shall build me a house, and 23 I will establish his throne for all time. I will be his father, and he shall be 24 my son. I will never withdraw my love from him as I withdrew it from your 25 predecessor. But I will give him a sure place in my house and kingdom for 26 all time, and his throne shall be established for ever."'

27 Nathan recounted to David all that had been said to him and all that 28 had been revealed. Then King David went into the presence of the LORD
 29 and took his place there and said, 'What am I, LORD God, and what is my 30 family, that thou hast brought me thus far? It was a small thing in thy 31 sight, O God, to have planned for thy servant's house in days long past, career, O LORD God. What more can David say to thee of the honour thou hast done thy servant, well though thou knowest him? For the sake of thy servant, LORD, and according to thy purpose, thou hast brought me to all this greatness. O LORD, we have never heard of one like thee; there is no god but thee. And thy people Israel, to whom can they be compared? Is there any other nation on earth whom God has gone out to redeem from slavery, to make them his people? Thou hast won a name for thyself by great and terrible deeds, driving out nations before thy people whom thou didst redeem from Egypt. Thou hast made thy people Israel thy own for ever, and thou, O LORD, hast become their God. But now, LORD, let what thou hast promised for thy servant and his house stand fast for all time; make good what thou hast said. Let it stand fast, that thy fame may be great for ever, and let men say, "The LORD of Hosts, the God of Israel, is Israel's God." So shall the house of thy servant David be established before thee. Thou, my God, hast shown me thy purpose to build up thy servant's house; therefore I have been able to pray before thee. Thou, O LORD, art God, and thou hast made these noble promises to thy servant; thou hast been pleased to bless thy servant's house, that it may continue always before thee; thou it is who hast blessed it, and it shall be blessed for ever.'

After this David defeated the Philistines and conquered them, and took from them Gath with its villages; he defeated the Moabites, and they became subject to him and paid him tribute. He also defeated Hadadezer king of Zobah-hamath, who was on his way to set up a monument of victory by the river Euphrates. From him David captured a thousand chariots, seven thousand horsemen and twenty thousand foot; he hamstrung all the chariot-horses, except a hundred which he retained. When the Aramaeans of Damascus came to the help of Hadadezer king of Zobah, David destroyed twenty-two thousand of them, and established garrisons among these Aramaeans; they became subject to him and paid him tribute. Thus the LORD gave David victory wherever he went. David took the gold quivers borne by Hadadezer's servants and brought them to Jerusalem. He also took a great quantity of bronze^b from Hadadezer's cities, Tibhath and Kun; from this Solomon made the Sea of bronze,^b the pillars, and the bronze^b vessels.

When Tou king of Hamath heard that David had defeated the entire army of Hadadezer king of Zobah, he sent his son Hadoram to King David to greet him and to congratulate him on defeating Hadadezer in battle (for Hadadezer had been at war with Tou); and he brought with him vessels of gold, silver, and copper, which King David dedicated to the LORD. He dedicated also the silver and the gold which he had carried away from all the other nations, from Edom and Moab, from the Ammonites and the Philistines, and from Amalek.

Edom was defeated by Abishai son of Zeruiah, who destroyed eighteen thousand of them in the Valley of Salt and stationed garrisons in the country. All the Edomites now became subject to David. Thus the LORD gave victory to David wherever he went.

^a Verses 1-13: cp. 2 Sam. 8. 1-14.

^b Or copper.

14^a David ruled over the whole of Israel and maintained law and justice
 15 among all his people. Joab son of Zeruiah was in command of the army;
 16 Jehoshaphat son of Ahilud was secretary of state; Zadok and Abiathar son of Ahimelech, son of Ahitub,^b were priests; Shavsha was adjutant-17 general; Benaiah son of Jehoiada commanded the Kerethite and Pelethite guards. The eldest sons of David were in attendance on the king.

19 1^c Some time afterwards Nahash king of the Ammonites died and was 2 succeeded by his son. David said, 'I must keep up the same loyal friendship with Hanun son of Nahash as his father showed me', and he sent a mission to condole with him on the death of his father. But when David's 3 envoys entered the country of the Ammonites to condole with Hanun, the Ammonite princes said to Hanun, 'Do you suppose David means to do honour to your father when he sends you his condolences? These men of his are spies whom he has sent to find out how to overthrow the country.'
 4 So Hanun took David's servants, and he shaved them, cut off half their 5 garments up to the hips, and dismissed them. When David heard how they had been treated, he sent to meet them, for they were deeply humiliated, and ordered them to wait in Jericho and not to return until their beards 6 had grown again. The Ammonites knew that they had brought themselves into bad odour with David, so Hanun and the Ammonites sent a thousand talents of silver to hire chariots and horsemen from Aram-naharaim,^d 7 Maacah, and Aram-zobah.^e They hired thirty-two thousand chariots and the king of Maacah and his people, who came and encamped before Medeba, while the Ammonites came from their cities and mustered for 8 battle. When David heard of it, he sent out Joab and all the fighting men.
 9 The Ammonites came and took up their position at the entrance to the 10 city, while the allied kings took up theirs in the open country. When Joab saw that he was threatened both front and rear, he detailed some picked 11 Israelite troops and drew them up facing the Aramaeans. The rest of his forces he put under his brother Abishai, who took up a position facing the 12 Ammonites. 'If the Aramaeans prove too strong for me,' he said, 'you must come to my relief; and if the Ammonites prove too strong for you, I will 13 relieve you. Courage! Let us fight bravely for our people and for the cities^f
 14 of our God. And the LORD's will be done.' But when Joab and his men came 15 to close quarters with the Aramaeans, they put them to flight; and when the Ammonites saw them in flight, they too fled before his brother Abishai and 16 entered the city. Then Joab came to Jerusalem. The Aramaeans saw that they had been worsted by Israel, and they sent messengers to summon other Aramaeans from the Great Bend of the Euphrates under Shophach, com-17 mander of Hadadezer's army. Their movement was reported to David, who immediately mustered all the forces of Israel, crossed the Jordan and advanced against them and took up battle positions. The Aramaeans like-18 wise took up positions facing David and engaged him, but were put to flight by Israel. David slew seven thousand Aramaeans in chariots and forty thousand infantry, killing Shophach the commander of the army. When Hadadezer's men saw that they had been worsted by Israel, they sued for peace and submitted to David. The Aramaeans were never again willing to give support to the Ammonites. 19

AT THE TURN OF THE YEAR, when kings take the field, Joab led the army out and ravaged the Ammonite country. He came to Rabbah and laid siege to it, while David remained in Jerusalem; he reduced the city and razed it to the ground. David took the crown from the head of Milcom and found that it weighed a talent of gold and was set with a precious stone, and this he placed on his own head. He also removed a great quantity of booty from the city; he took its inhabitants and set them to work with saws and other iron tools, sharp and toothed. David did this to all the cities of the Ammonites; then he and all his people returned to Jerusalem. 20 1^a

Some time later war with the Philistines broke out in Gezer; it was then that Sibbechai of Hushah killed Sippai, a descendant of the Rephaim, and the Philistines were reduced to submission. In another war with the Philistines, Elhanan son of Jair killed Lahmi brother of Goliath of Gath, whose spear had a shaft like a weaver's beam. In yet another war in Gath, there appeared a giant with six fingers on each hand and six toes on each foot, twenty-four in all; he too was descended from the Rephaim, and when he defied Israel, Jonathan son of David's brother Shimea killed him. These giants were the descendants of the Rephaim in Gath, and they all fell at the hands of David and his men. 4b

NOW SATAN, SETTING HIMSELF AGAINST ISRAEL, incited David to count the people. So he instructed Joab and his public officers to go out and number Israel, from Beersheba to Dan, and to report the number to him. Joab answered, 'Even if the LORD should increase his people a hundredfold, would not your majesty still be king and all the people your slaves? Why should your majesty want to do this? It will only bring guilt on Israel.' But Joab was overruled by the king; he set out and went up and down the whole country. He then came to Jerusalem and reported to David the numbers recorded: those capable of bearing arms were one million one hundred thousand in Israel, and four hundred and seventy thousand in Judah. Levi and Benjamin were not counted by Joab, so deep was his repugnance against the king's order. 21 1^c

God was displeased with all this and proceeded to punish Israel. David said to God, 'I have done a very wicked thing: I pray thee remove thy servant's guilt, for I have been very foolish.' And the LORD said to Gad, David's seer, 'Go and tell David, "This is the word of the LORD: I have three things to offer you; choose one of them and I will bring it upon you."' So Gad came to David and said to him, 'This is the word of the LORD: "Make your choice: three years of famine, three months of harrying by your foes and close pursuit by the sword of your enemy, or three days of the LORD's own sword, bringing pestilence throughout the country, and the 7 8 9 10 11 12

13 LORD's angel working destruction in all the territory of Israel." Consider now what answer I am to take back to him who sent me.' Thereupon David said to Gad, 'I am in a desperate plight; let me fall into the hands of the LORD, for his mercy is very great; and let me not fall into the hands of man.'
 14 So the LORD sent a pestilence throughout Israel, and seventy thousand men 15 of Israel died. And God sent an angel to Jerusalem to destroy it; but, as he was destroying it, the LORD saw and repented of the evil, and said to the destroying angel at the moment when he was standing beside the threshing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite, 'Enough! Stay your hand.'

16 When David looked up and saw the angel of the LORD standing between earth and heaven, with his sword drawn in his hand and stretched out over Jerusalem, he and the elders, clothed in sackcloth, fell prostrate to the ground; and David said to God, 'It was I who gave the order to count the 17 people. It was I who sinned, I, the shepherd,^a who did wrong. But these poor sheep, what have they done? O LORD my God, let thy hand fall upon me and upon my family, but check this plague on the people.'^b

18 The angel of the LORD, speaking through the lips of Gad, commanded David to go to the threshing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite and to set up there 19 an altar to the LORD. David went up as Gad had bidden him in the LORD's 20 name. Ornan's four sons who were with him hid themselves, but he was 21 busy threshing his wheat when he turned and saw the angel. As David approached, Ornan looked up and, seeing the king, came out from the 22 threshing-floor and prostrated himself before him. David said to Ornan,
 'Let me have the site of the threshing-floor that I may build on it an altar to the LORD; sell it me at the full price, that the plague which has attacked 23 my people may be stopped.' Ornan answered David, 'Take it and let your majesty do as he thinks fit; see, here are the oxen for whole-offerings, the threshing-sledges for the fuel, and the wheat for the grain-offering; I give 24 you everything.' But King David said to Ornan, 'No, I will pay the full price; I will not present to the LORD what is yours, or offer a whole-offering 25 which has cost me nothing.' So David gave Ornan six hundred shekels of 26 gold for the site, and built an altar to the LORD there; on this he offered whole-offerings and shared-offerings, and called upon the LORD, who answered him with fire falling from heaven on the altar of whole-offering.
 27 Then, at the LORD's command, the angel sheathed his sword.

28 It was when David saw that the LORD had answered him at the threshing-29 floor of Ornan the Jebusite that he offered sacrifice there. The tabernacle of the LORD and the altar of whole-offering which Moses had made in the 30 wilderness were then at the hill-shrine in Gibeon; but David had been unable to go there and seek God's guidance, so shocked and shaken was he 22 at the sight of the angel's sword. Then David said, 'This is to be the house of the LORD God, and this is to be an altar of whole-offering for Israel.'

The temple and its organization

DAVID NOW GAVE ORDERS to assemble the aliens resident in Israel, and he set them as masons to dress hewn stones and to build the house of God. He laid in a great store of iron to make nails and clamps for the doors, more bronze than could be weighed and cedar-wood without limit; the men of Sidon and Tyre brought David an ample supply of cedar. David said, 'My son Solomon is a boy of tender years, and the house that is to be built to the LORD must be exceedingly magnificent, renowned and celebrated in every land; therefore I must make preparations for it myself.' So David made abundant preparation before his death.

He sent for Solomon his son and charged him to build a house for the LORD the God of Israel. 'Solomon, my son,' he said, 'I had intended to build a house in honour of the name of the LORD my God; but the LORD forbade me and said, "You have shed much blood in my sight and waged great wars; for this reason you shall not build a house in honour of my name. But you shall have a son who shall be a man of peace; I will give him peace from all his enemies on every side; his name shall be Solomon, 'Man of Peace', and I will grant peace and quiet to Israel in his days. He shall build a house in honour of my name; he shall be my son and I will be a father to him, and I will establish the throne of his sovereignty over Israel for ever." Now, Solomon my son, the LORD be with you! May you prosper and build the house of the LORD your God, as he promised you should. But may the LORD grant you wisdom and discretion, so that when he gives you authority in Israel you may keep the law of the LORD your God. You will prosper only if you are careful to observe the decrees and ordinances which the LORD enjoined upon Moses for Israel; be strong and resolute, neither faint-hearted nor dismayed.

'In spite of all my troubles, I have here ready for the house of the LORD a hundred thousand talents of gold and a million talents of silver, with great quantities of bronze and iron, more than can be weighed; timber and stone, too, I have got ready; and you may add to them. Besides, you have a large force of workmen, masons, sculptors, and carpenters, and countless men skilled in work of every kind, in gold and silver, bronze and iron. So now to work, and the LORD be with you!'

David ordered all the officers of Israel to help Solomon his son: 'Is not the LORD your God with you? Will he not give you peace on every side? For he has given the inhabitants of the land into my power, and they will be subject to the LORD and his people. Devote yourselves, therefore, heart and soul, to seeking guidance of the LORD your God, and set about building his sanctuary, so that the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD and God's holy vessels may be brought into a house built in honour of his name.'

David was now an old man, weighed down with years, and he appointed Solomon his son king over Israel. He gathered together all the officers of Israel, the priests, and the Levites. The Levites were enrolled from the age of thirty upwards, their males being thirty-eight thousand in all. Of these, twenty-four thousand were to be responsible for the maintenance and service of the house of the LORD, six thousand to act as officers and magistrates, four thousand to be door-keepers, and four thousand to praise the LORD on the musical instruments which David had made for the service of praise. David organized them in divisions, called after Gershon, Kohath, and Merari, the sons of Levi.

The sons of Gershon: Laadan and Shimei. The sons of Laadan: Jehiel the chief, Zetham and Joel, three.^a These were the heads of the families grouped under Laadan. The sons of Shimei: Jahath, Ziza, Jeush and Beriah, four. Jahath was the chief and Ziza the second, but Jeush and Beriah, having few children, were reckoned for duty as a single family.

The sons of Kohath: Amram, Izhar, Hebron and Uzziel, four. The sons of Amram: Aaron and Moses. Aaron was set apart, he and his sons in perpetuity, to dedicate the most holy gifts,^b to burn sacrifices before the LORD, to serve him, and to give the blessing in his name for ever, but the sons of Moses, the man of God, were to keep the name of Levite. The sons of Moses: Gershom and Eliezer. The sons of Gershom: Shubael the chief. The sons of Eliezer: Rehabiah the chief. Eliezer had no other sons, but Rehabiah had very many. The sons of Izhar: Shelomoth the chief. The sons of Hebron: Jeriah the chief, Amariah the second, Jahaziel the third and Jekameam the fourth. The sons of Uzziel: Micah the chief and Isshiah the second.

The sons of Merari: Mahli and Mushi. The sons of Mahli: Eleazar and Kish. When Eleazar died, he left daughters but no sons, and their cousins, the sons of Kish, married them. The sons of Mushi: Mahli, Eder and Jeremoth, three.

Such were the Levites, grouped by families in the father's line whose heads were entered in the detailed list; they performed duties in the service of the house of the LORD, from the age of twenty upwards. For David said, 'The LORD the God of Israel has given his people peace and has made his abode in Jerusalem for ever. The Levites will no longer have to carry the Tabernacle or any of the vessels for its service.' By these last words of David the Levites were enrolled from the age of twenty upwards. Their duty was to help the sons of Aaron in the service of the house of the LORD: they were responsible for the care of the courts and the rooms, for the cleansing of all holy things, and the general service of the house of God; for the rows of the Bread of the Presence, the flour for the grain-offerings, unleavened wafers, cakes baked on the griddle, and pastry, and for the weights and measures. They were to be on duty continually before the LORD every morning and evening, giving thanks and praise to him, and at every offering of whole-offerings to the LORD, on sabbaths, new moons and at the appointed seasons, according to their prescribed number. The Levites were to have charge of the Tent of the Presence and of the sanctuary, but the sons of Aaron their kinsmen were charged with the service of worship in the house of the LORD.

The divisions of the sons of Aaron: his sons were Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar. Nadab and Abihu died before their father, leaving no sons; therefore Eleazar and Ithamar held the office of priest. David, acting with Zadok of the sons of Eleazar and with Ahimelech of the sons of Ithamar, organized them in divisions for the discharge of the duties of their office. The male heads of families proved to be more numerous in the line of Eleazar than in that of Ithamar, so that sixteen heads of families were grouped under the line of Eleazar and eight under that of Ithamar. He organized them by drawing lots among them, for there were sacred officers^a and officers of God in the line of Eleazar and in that of Ithamar. Shemaiah the clerk, a Levite, son of Nethaneel, wrote down the names in the presence of the king, the officers, Zadok the priest, and Ahimelech son of Abiathar, and of the heads of the priestly and levitical families, one priestly family being taken from the line of Eleazar and one from that of Ithamar. The first lot fell to Jehoiarib, the second to Jedaiah, the third to Harim, the fourth to Seorim, the fifth to Malchiah, the sixth to Mijamin, the seventh to Hakkoz, the eighth to Abiah, the ninth to Jeshua, the tenth to Shecaniah, the eleventh to Eliashib, the twelfth to Jakim, the thirteenth to Huppah, the fourteenth to Jeshebeab, the fifteenth to Bilgah, the sixteenth to Immer, the seventeenth to Hezir, the eighteenth to Aphses, the nineteenth to Pethahiah, the twentieth to Jehezekel, the twenty-first to Jachin, the twenty-second to Gamul, the twenty-third to Delaiah, and the twenty-fourth to Maaziah. This was their order of duty for the discharge of their service when they entered the house of the LORD, according to the rule prescribed for them by their ancestor Aaron, who had received his instructions from the LORD the God of Israel.

Of the remaining Levites: of the sons of Amram: Shubael. Of the sons of Shubael: Jehdeiah. Of Rehabiah: Isshiah, the chief of Rehabiah's sons. Of the line of Izhar: Shelomoth. Of the sons of Shelomoth: Jahath. The sons of Hebron: Jeriah the chief, Amariah the second, Jahaziel the third and Jekameam the fourth. The sons of Uzziel: Micah. Of the sons of Micah: Shamir; Micah's brother: Isshiah. Of the sons of Isshiah: Zechariah. The sons of Merari: Mahli and Mushi and also^b Jaaziah his son. The sons of Merari: of Jaaziah: Beno, Shoham, Zaccur and Ibri. Of Mahli: Eleazar, who had no sons; of Kish: the sons of Kish: Jerahmeel; and the sons of Mushi: Mahli, Eder and Jerimoth. These were the Levites by families. These also, side by side with their kinsmen the sons of Aaron, cast lots in the presence of King David, Zadok, Ahimelech, and the heads of the priestly and levitical families, the senior and junior houses casting lots side by side.

David and his chief officers assigned special duties to the sons of Asaph, of Heman, and of Jeduthun, leaders in inspired prophecy to the accompaniment of harps, lutes, and cymbals; the number of the men who performed this work in the temple was as follows. Of the sons of Asaph: Zaccur, Joseph, Nethaniah and Asarelah; these were under Asaph, a leader in inspired prophecy under the king. Of the sons of Jeduthun: Gedaliah, Izri,^c Isaiah, Shimei, Hashabiah, Mattithiah, these six under their father Jeduthun, a leader in inspired prophecy to the accompaniment

 8 through the promises of God for his greater glory. God had given Heman
 9 fourteen sons and three daughters, and they all served under their father 10 for the singing in the house of the LORD; they took part in the service of 11 the house of God, with cymbals, lutes, and harps, while Asaph, Jeduthun, 12 and Heman were under the king. Reckoned with their kinsmen, trained 13 singers of the LORD, they brought the total number of skilled musicians up

 11 they, their sons and brothers, were men of ability, fit for service in the 12 temple; total: sixty-two. Sons and brothers of Meshelemiah, all men of abil-

The male heads of families constituted the divisions of the door-keepers; their duty was to serve in the house of the LORD side by side with their kinsmen. Young and old, family by family, they cast lots for the gates. The lot for the east gate fell to Shelemiah; then lots were cast for his son Zechariah, a prudent counsellor, and he was allotted the north gate. To Obed-edom was allotted the south gate, and the gatehouse to his sons. Hosah^a was allotted the west gate, together with the Shallecheth gate on the ascending causeway. Guard corresponded to guard. Six Levites were on duty daily on the east side, four on the north and four on the south, and two at each gatehouse; at the western colonnade there were four at the causeway and two at the colonnade itself. These were the divisions of the door-keepers, Korahites and Merarites. 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19

Fellow-Levites were in charge of the stores of the house of God and of the stores of sacred gifts. Of the children of Laadan, descendants of the Gershonite line through Laadan, heads of families in the group of Laadan the Gershonite, Jehiel and^b his brothers Zetham and Joel were in charge of the stores of the house of the LORD. Of the families of Amram, Izhar, Hebron and Uzziel, Shubael son of Gershom, son of Moses, was overseer of the stores. The line of Eliezer his brother: his son Rehabiah, his son Isaiah, his son Joram, his son Zichri, and his son Shelomoth. This Shelomoth and his kinsmen were in charge of all the stores of the sacred gifts dedicated by David the king, the heads of families, the officers over units of a thousand and a hundred, and other officers of the army. They had dedicated some of the spoils taken in the wars for the upkeep of the house of the LORD. Everything which Samuel the seer, Saul son of Kish, Abner son of Ner, and Joab son of Zeruiah had dedicated, in short every sacred gift, was under the charge of Shelomoth and his kinsmen. Of the family of Izhar, Kenaniah and his sons acted as clerks and magistrates in the secular affairs of Israel. Of the family of Hebron, Hashabiah and his kinsmen, men of ability to the number of seventeen hundred, had the oversight of Israel west of the Jordan, both in the work of the LORD and in the service of the king. Also of the family of Hebron, Jeriah was the chief. (In the fortieth year of David's reign search was made in the family histories of the Hebronites, and men of great ability were found among them at Jazer in Gilead.) His kinsmen, all men of ability, two thousand seven hundred of them, heads of families, were charged by King David with the oversight of the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh, in religious and civil affairs alike. 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32

THE NUMBER OF THE ISRAELITES—that is to say, of the heads of families, the officers over units of a thousand and a hundred, and the clerks who had their share in the king's service in the various divisions which took monthly turns of duty throughout the year—was twenty-four thousand in each division. 27

 24 officers in charge of the tribes of Israel.

23 David took no census of those under twenty years of age, for the LORD wine-cellar. Baal-hanan the Gederite supervised the wild olives and the sycamore-figs in the Shephelah; Joash was in charge of the oil-stores. Shitrai of Sharon was in charge of the herds grazing in Sharon, Shaphat son of Adlai of the herds in the vales. Obil the Ishmaelite was in charge of the camels, Jehdeiah the Meronothite of the asses. Jaziz the Hagerite was in charge of the flocks. All these were the officers in charge of King David's possessions. David's favourite nephew Jonathan, a counsellor, a discreet and learned man, and Jehiel the Hachmonite, were tutors to the king's sons. Ahithophel was a king's counsellor; Hushai the Archite was the King's Friend. Ahithophel was succeeded by Jehoiada son of Benaiah, and Abiathar. Joab was commander of the army.

DAVID ASSEMBLED AT JERUSALEM all the officers of Israel, the officers over the tribes, over the divisions engaged in the king's service, over the units of a thousand and a hundred, and those in charge of all the property and the cattle of the king and of his sons, as well as the eunuchs, the heroes and all the men of ability. Then King David rose to his feet and said, 'Hear me, kinsmen and people. I had in mind to build a house as a resting-place for the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD which might serve as a footstool for the feet of our God, and I made preparations to build it. But God said to me, "You shall not build a house in honour of my name, for you have been a fighting man and you have shed blood." Nevertheless, the LORD the God of Israel chose me out of all my father's family to be king over Israel in perpetuity; for it was Judah that he chose as ruling tribe, and, out of the house of Judah, my father's family; and among my father's sons it was I whom he was pleased to make king over all Israel. And out of all my sons—for the LORD gave me many sons—he chose Solomon to sit upon the throne of the LORD's sovereignty over Israel; and he said to me, "It is Solomon your son who shall build my house and my courts, for I have chosen him to be a son to me and I will be a father to him. I will establish his sovereignty in perpetuity, if only he steadfastly obeys my commandments and my laws as they are now obeyed." Now therefore, in the presence of all Israel, the assembly of the LORD, and within the hearing of our God, I bid you all study carefully the commandments of the LORD your God, that you may possess this good land and hand it down as an inheritance for all time to your children after you. And you, Solomon my son, acknowledge your father's God and serve him with whole heart and willing mind, for the LORD searches all hearts and discerns every invention of men's thoughts. If you search for him, he will let you find him, but if you forsake him, he will cast you off for ever. Remember, then, that the LORD has chosen you to build a house for a sanctuary: be steadfast and do it.'

David gave Solomon his son the plan of the porch of the temple ^a and its buildings, strong-rooms, roof-chambers and inner courts, and the shrine of expiation; ^b also the plans of all he had in mind for the courts of the house of the LORD and for all the rooms around it, for the stores of God's house and for the stores of the sacred gifts, for the divisions of the 14 priests and the Levites, for all the work connected with the service of the house of the LORD and for all the vessels used in its service. He prescribed the weight of gold for all the gold vessels^a used in the various services, and the weight of silver^b for all the silver vessels used in the various services; 15 and the weight of gold for the gold lamp-stands and their lamps; and the weight of silver for the silver lamp-stands, the weight required for each 16 lamp-stand and its lamps according to the use of each; and the weight of gold for each of the tables for the rows of the Bread of the Presence, and 17 of silver for the silver tables. He prescribed also the weight of pure gold for the forks, tossing-bowls and cups, the weight of gold for each of the 18 golden dishes and of silver^b for each of the silver dishes; the weight also of refined gold for the altar of incense, and of gold for the model of the chariot, that is the cherubim with their wings outspread to screen the Ark 19 of the Covenant of the LORD. 'All this was drafted by the LORD's own hand,' said David; 'my part was to consider the detailed working out of the plan.'

20 Then David said to Solomon his son, 'Be steadfast and resolute and do it; be neither faint-hearted nor dismayed, for the LORD God, my God, will be with you; he will neither fail you nor forsake you, until you have finished 21 all the work needed for the service of the house of the LORD. Here are the divisions of the priests and the Levites, ready for all the service of the house of God. In all the work you will have the help of every willing craftsman for any task; and the officers and all the people will be entirely at your command.'

29 King David then said to the whole assembly, 'My son Solomon is the one chosen by God, Solomon alone, a boy of tender years; and this is a 2 great work, for it is a palace not for man but for the LORD God. Now to the best of my strength I have made ready for the house of my God gold for the gold work, silver for the silver, bronze for the bronze, iron for the iron, and wood for the woodwork, together with cornelian and other gems for setting, stones for mosaic work, precious stones of every sort, and marble 3 in plenty. Further, because I delight in the house of my God, I give my own private store of gold and silver for the house of my God—over and 4 above all the store which I have collected for the sanctuary—namely three thousand talents of gold, gold from Ophir, and seven thousand talents of 5 fine silver for overlaying the walls of the buildings, for providing gold for the gold work, silver for the silver, and for any work to be done by skilled craftsmen. Now who is willing to give with open hand to the LORD today?'

6 Then the heads of families, the officers administering the tribes of Israel, the officers over units of a thousand and a hundred, and the officers 7 in charge of the king's service, responded willingly and gave for the work of the house of God five thousand talents of gold, ten thousand darics, ten thousand talents of silver, eighteen thousand talents of bronze, and a 8 hundred thousand talents of iron. Further, those who possessed precious stones gave them to the treasury of the house of the LORD, into the charge 9 of Jehiel the Gershonite. The people rejoiced at this willing response, because in the loyalty of their hearts they had given willingly to the LORD; 10 King David also was full of joy, and he blessed the LORD in the presence of all the assembly and said, 'Blessed art thou, LORD God of our father Israel, from of old and for ever. Thine, O LORD, is the greatness, the power, the glory, the splendour, and the majesty; for everything in heaven and on earth is thine;^a thine, O LORD, is the sovereignty, and thou art exalted over all as head. Wealth and honour come from thee; thou rulest over all; might and power are of thy disposing; thine it is to give power and strength to all. And now, we give thee thanks, our God, and praise thy glorious name.

'But what am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to give willingly like this? For everything comes from thee, and it is only of thy gifts that we give to thee. We are aliens before thee and settlers, as were all our fathers; our days on earth are like a shadow, we have no abiding place. O LORD our God, from thee comes all this wealth that we have laid up to build a house in honour of thy holy name, and everything is thine. I know, O my God, that thou dost test the heart and that plain honesty pleases thee; with an honest heart I have given all these gifts willingly, and have rejoiced now to see thy people here present give willingly to thee. O LORD God of Abraham, Isaac and Israel our fathers, maintain this purpose for ever in thy people's thoughts and direct their hearts toward thyself. Grant that Solomon my son may loyally keep thy commandments, thy solemn charge, and thy statutes, that he may fulfil them all and build the palace for which I have prepared.'

Then, turning to the whole assembly, David said, 'Now bless the LORD your God.' So all the assembly blessed the LORD the God of their fathers, bowing low and prostrating themselves before the LORD and the king. The next day they sacrificed to the LORD and offered whole-offerings to him, a thousand oxen, a thousand rams, a thousand lambs, with the prescribed drink-offerings, and abundant sacrifices for all Israel. So they ate and drank before the LORD that day with great rejoicing. They then appointed Solomon, David's son, king a second time and anointed him as the LORD's prince, and Zadok as priest. So Solomon sat on the LORD's throne as king in place of his father David, and he prospered and all Israel obeyed him. All the officers and the warriors, as well as all the sons of King David, swore fealty to King Solomon. The LORD made Solomon stand very high in the eyes of all Israel, and bestowed upon him sovereignty such as no king in Israel had had before him.

David son of Jesse had ruled over the whole of Israel, and the length of his reign over Israel was forty years; he ruled for seven years in Hebron, and for thirty-three in Jerusalem. He died in ripe old age, full of years, wealth, and honour; and Solomon his son ruled in his place. The events of King David's reign from first to last are recorded in the books of Samuel the seer, of Nathan the prophet, and of Gad the seer, with a full account of his reign, his prowess, and of the times through which he and Israel and all the kingdoms of the world had passed.

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES

The reign of Solomon and dedication of the temple

1 KING SOLOMON, DAVID'S SON, strengthened his hold on the kingdom, for the LORD his God was with him and made him very great.

2 Solomon spoke to all Israel, to the officers over units of a thousand and of a hundred, the judges and all the leading men of Israel, the heads of families; and he, together with all the assembled people, went to the hill-shrine at Gibeon; for the Tent of God's Presence, which Moses the LORD's servant had made in the wilderness, was there. (But David had brought up the Ark of God from Kiriath-jearim to the place which he had prepared for it, for he had pitched a tent for it in Jerusalem.) The altar of bronze also, which Bezalel son of Uri, son of Hur, had made, was there in front of the Tabernacle of the LORD; and Solomon and the assembly resorted to it.^a There Solomon went up to the altar of bronze before the LORD in the Tent of the Presence and offered on it a thousand whole-offerings. That night God appeared to Solomon and said, 'What shall I give you? Tell me.' Solomon answered, 'Thou didst show great and constant love to David my father and thou hast made me king in his place. Now, O LORD God, let thy word to David my father be confirmed, for thou hast made me king over a people as numerous as the dust on the earth. Give me now wisdom and knowledge, that I may lead this people; for who is fit to govern this great people of thine?' God answered Solomon, 'Because this is what you desire, because you have not asked for wealth or possessions or honour ^c or the lives of your enemies or even long life for yourself, but have asked for wisdom and knowledge to govern my people over whom I have made you king, wisdom and knowledge are given to you; I shall also give you wealth and possessions and honour ^c such as no king has had before you and none shall have after you.' Then Solomon returned from the hill-shrine at Gibeon, from before the Tent of the Presence, to Jerusalem and ruled over Israel.

14^d Solomon got together many chariots and horses; he had fourteen hundred chariots and twelve thousand horses, and he stabled some in the chariot-towns and kept others at hand in Jerusalem. The king made silver and gold as common in Jerusalem as stones, and cedar as plentiful as sycamore-fig in the Shephelah. Horses were imported from Egypt and Coa for Solomon; the royal merchants obtained them from Coa by purchase. Chariots were imported from Egypt for six hundred silver shekels each, and horses for a hundred and fifty; in the same way the merchants obtained them for export from all the kings of the Hittites and the kings of Aram.

Solomon resolved to build a house in honour of the name of the LORD, and a royal palace for himself. He engaged seventy thousand hauliers and eighty thousand quarrymen, and three thousand six hundred men to superintend them. Then Solomon sent this message to Hiram king of Tyre: 'You were so good as to send my father David cedar-wood to build his royal residence. Now I am about to build a house in honour of the name of the LORD my God and to consecrate it to him, so that I may burn fragrant incense in it before him, and present the rows of the Bread of the Presence regularly, and whole-offerings morning and evening, on the sabbaths and the new moons and the appointed festivals of the LORD our God; for this is a duty laid upon Israel for ever. The house I am about to build will be a great house, because our God is greater than all gods. But who is able to build him a house when heaven itself, the highest heaven, cannot contain him? And who am I that I should build him a house, except that I may burn sacrifices before him? Send me then a skilled craftsman, a man able to work in gold and silver, copper^b and iron, and in purple, crimson, and violet yarn, who is also an expert engraver and will work with my skilled workmen in Judah and in Jerusalem who were provided by David my father. Send me also cedar, pine, and algum timber from Lebanon, for I know that your men are expert at felling the trees of Lebanon; my men will work with yours to get an ample supply of timber ready for me, for the house which I shall build will be great and wonderful. I will supply provisions for your servants, the woodmen who fell the trees: twenty thousand kor of wheat and twenty thousand kor of barley, with twenty thousand bath of wine and twenty thousand bath of oil.'

Hiram king of Tyre sent this answer by letter to Solomon: 'It is because of the love which the LORD has for his people that he has made you king over them.' The letter went on to say, 'Blessed is the LORD the God of Israel, maker of heaven and earth, who has given to King David a wise son, endowed with intelligence and understanding, to build a house for the LORD and a royal palace for himself. I now send you a skilful and experienced craftsman, master Hiram. He is the son of a Danite woman, his father a Tyrian; he is an experienced worker in gold and silver, copper^b and iron, stone and wood, as well as in purple, violet, and crimson yarn, and in fine linen; he is also a trained engraver who will be able to work with your own skilled craftsmen and those of my lord David your father, to any design submitted to him. Now then, let my lord send his servants the wheat and the barley, the oil and the wine, which he promised; we will fell all the timber in Lebanon that you need and float it as rafts to the roadstead at Joppa, and you will convey it from there up to Jerusalem.'

Solomon took a census of all the aliens resident in Israel, similar to the census which David his father had taken; these were found to be a hundred and fifty-three thousand six hundred. He made seventy thousand of them hauliers and eighty thousand quarrymen, and three thousand six hundred superintendents to make the people work.

3 Then Solomon began to build the house of the LORD in Jerusalem on Mount Moriah, where the LORD had appeared to his father David, on the site which David had prepared on the threshing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite. He began to build in the second month of the fourth year of his reign. These are the foundations which Solomon laid for building the house of God: the length, according to the old standard of measurement, 4 was sixty cubits and the breadth twenty. The vestibule in front of the house ^b was twenty cubits long, spanning the whole breadth of the house, and its 5 height was twenty; on the inside he overlaid it with pure gold. He panelled the large chamber with pine, covered it with fine gold and carved on it 6 palm-trees and chain-work. He adorned the house with precious stones for decoration, and the gold he used was from Parvaim. He covered the whole 7 house with gold, its rafters and frames, its walls and doors; and he carved cherubim on the walls.

8 He made the Most Holy Place twenty cubits long, corresponding to the breadth of the house, and twenty cubits broad. He covered it all with six 9 hundred talents of fine gold, and the weight of the nails was fifty shekels of gold. He also covered the upper chambers with gold.

10^c In the Most Holy Place he carved two images of cherubim and overlaid 11 them with gold. The total span of the wings of the cherubim was twenty cubits. A wing of the one cherub extended five cubits to reach the wall of the house, while its other wing reached out five cubits to meet a wing of the 12 other cherub. Similarly, a wing of the second cherub extended five cubits to reach the other wall of the house, while its other wing met a wing of the 13 first cherub. The wings of these cherubim extended twenty cubits; they stood with their feet on the ground, facing the outer chamber. He made 14 the Veil of violet, purple, and crimson yarn, and fine linen, and embroidered cherubim on it.

15^d In front of the house he erected two pillars eighteen cubits high, with an 16 architrave five cubits high on top of each. He made chain-work like a necklace ^e and set it round the tops of the pillars, and he carved a hundred 17 pomegranates and set them in the chain-work. He erected the two pillars in front of the temple, one on the right and one on the left; the one on the right he named Jachin ^f and the one on the left Boaz. ^g

4 He then made an altar of bronze, twenty cubits long, twenty cubits 2^h broad, and ten cubits high. He also made the Sea of cast metal; it was round in shape, the diameter from rim to rim being ten cubits; it stood five cubits 3 high, and it took a line thirty cubits long to go round it. Under the Sea, on every side, completely surrounding the thirty ⁱ cubits of its circumference, were what looked like gourds, ^j two rows of them, cast in one piece. 4 with the Sea itself. It was mounted on twelve oxen, three facing north.

three west, three south, and three east, their hind quarters turned inwards; the Sea rested on top of them. Its thickness was a hand-breadth; its rim was made like that of a cup, shaped like the calyx of a lily; when full it held three thousand bath. He also made ten basins for washing, setting five on the left side and five on the right; in these they rinsed everything used for the whole-offering. The Sea was made for the priests to wash in.

He made ten golden lamp-stands in the prescribed manner and set them in the temple, five on the right side and five on the left. He also made ten tables and placed them in the temple, five on the right and five on the left; and he made a hundred golden tossing-bowls. He made the court of the priests and the great precinct and the doors for it, and overlaid the doors of both with copper; he put the Sea at the right side, at the south-east corner of the temple.

Huram made the pots, the shovels, and the tossing-bowls. So he finished the work which he had undertaken for King Solomon on the house of God. The two pillars; the two bowl-shaped capitals^b on the tops of the pillars; the two ornamental networks to cover the two bowl-shaped capitals on the tops of the pillars; the four hundred pomegranates for the two networks, two rows of pomegranates for each network, to cover the two bowl-shaped capitals on the two^c pillars; the ten^d trolleys and the ten^d basins on the trolleys; the one Sea and the twelve oxen which supported it; the pots, the shovels, and the tossing-bowls^e—all these^f objects master Hiram made of bronze, burnished work for King Solomon for the house of the LORD. In the Plain of the Jordan the king cast them, in the foundry between Succoth and Zeredah. Solomon made great quantities of all these objects; the weight of the copper^g used was beyond reckoning.

Solomon made also all the furnishings for the house of God: the golden altar, the tables upon which was set the Bread of the Presence, the lamp-stands of red gold whose lamps burned before the inner shrine in the prescribed manner, the flowers and lamps and tongs of solid gold, the snuffers, tossing-bowls, saucers, and firepans of red gold, and, at the entrance to the house, the inner doors leading to the Most Holy Place and those leading to the sanctuary, of gold.

When all the work which Solomon did for the house of the LORD was completed, he brought in the sacred treasures of his father David, the silver, the gold, and the vessels, and deposited them in the storehouses of the house of God.

THEN SOLOMON SUMMONED THE ELDERS of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes who were chiefs of families in Israel, to assemble in Jerusalem, in order to bring up the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD from the City of David, which is called Zion. All the men of Israel assembled in the king's

4 presence at the pilgrim-feast in the seventh month. When the elders of 5 Israel had all come, the Levites took the Ark and carried it up with the Tent of the Presence and all the sacred furnishings of the Tent: it was the 6 priests and the Levites together who carried them up. King Solomon and the whole congregation of Israel, assembled with him before the Ark, sacri-7 ficed sheep and oxen in numbers past counting or reckoning. Then the priests brought in the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD to its place, the inner shrine of the house, the Most Holy Place, beneath the wings of 8 the cherubim. The cherubim spread their wings over the place of the Ark, 9 and formed a covering above the Ark and its poles. The poles projected, and their ends could be seen from the Holy Place immediately in front of the inner shrine, but from nowhere else outside; they are there to this day.
 10 There was nothing inside the Ark but the two tablets which Moses had put there at Horeb, the tablets of the covenant^a which the LORD made with the Israelites when they left Egypt.

11 Now when the priests came out of the Holy Place (for all the priests who were present had hallowed themselves without keeping to their divisions), 12 all the levitical singers, Asaph, Heman, and Jeduthun, their sons and their kinsmen, clothed in fine linen, stood with cymbals, lutes, and harps, to the east of the altar, together with a hundred and twenty priests who blew 13 trumpets. Now the trumpeters and the singers joined in unison to sound forth praise and thanksgiving to the LORD, and the song was raised with trumpets, cymbals, and musical instruments, in praise of the LORD, because 'that^b is good, for his love endures for ever'; and the house was 14 filled with the cloud of the glory of the LORD. The priests could not continue to minister because of the cloud, for the glory of the LORD filled the 6 1^c house of God. Then Solomon said:

O LORD who hast chosen to dwell in thick darkness,
 2 here have I built thee a lofty house,
 a habitation for thee to occupy for ever.

3 And as they stood waiting, the king turned round and blessed all the 4 assembly of Israel in these words: 'Blessed be the LORD the God of Israel who spoke directly to my father David and has himself fulfilled his promise.
 5 For he said, "From the day when I brought my people out of Egypt, I chose no city out of all the tribes of Israel where I should build a house for my Name to be there, nor did I choose any man to be prince over my 6 people Israel. But I chose Jerusalem for my Name to be there, and I chose 7 David to be over my people Israel." My father David had in mind to build 8 a house in honour of the name of the LORD the God of Israel, but the LORD said to him, "You purposed to build a house in honour of my name; and 9 your purpose was good. Nevertheless, you shall not build it; but the son who is to be born to you, he shall build the house in honour of my name."
 10 The LORD has now fulfilled his promise: I have succeeded my father David and taken his place on the throne of Israel, as the LORD promised;
 and I have built the house in honour of the name of the LORD the God of Israel. I have installed there the Ark containing the covenant of the LORD 11 which he made with Israel.'

Then Solomon, standing in front of the altar of the LORD, in the presence 12 of the whole assembly of Israel, spread out his hands. He had made a 13 bronze^a platform, five cubits long, five cubits broad, and three cubits high, and had placed it in the centre of the precinct. He mounted it and knelt down in the presence of the assembly, and, spreading out his hands 14 towards heaven, he said, 'O LORD God of Israel, there is no god like thee in heaven or on earth, keeping covenant with thy servants and showing them 15 constant love while they continue faithful to thee in heart and soul. Thou hast kept thy promise to thy servant David my father; by thy deeds this 16 day thou hast fulfilled what thou didst say to him in words. Now, therefore,
O LORD God of Israel, keep this promise of thine to thy servant David my 17 father: "You shall never want for a man appointed by me to sit on the throne of Israel, if only your sons look to their ways and conform to my law, as you have done in my sight." And now, O LORD God of Israel, let 17 the word which thou didst speak to thy servant David be confirmed.

'But can God indeed dwell with man on the earth? Heaven itself, the 18 highest heaven, cannot contain thee; how much less this house that I have built! Yet attend to the prayer and the supplication of thy servant, O LORD 19 my God; listen to the cry and the prayer which thy servant utters before thee, that thine eyes may ever be upon this house day and night, this place 20 of which thou didst say, "It shall receive my Name"; so mayest thou hear thy servant when he prays towards this place. Hear thou the supplications 21 of thy servant and of thy people Israel when they pray towards this place.
Hear from heaven thy dwelling and, when thou hearest, forgive.

'When a man wrongs his neighbour and he is adjured to take an oath, 22 and the adjuration is made before thy altar in this house, then do thou hear 23 from heaven and act: be thou thy servants' judge, requiting the guilty man and bringing his deeds upon his own head, acquitting the innocent and rewarding him as his innocence may deserve.

'When thy people Israel are defeated by an enemy because they have 24 sinned against thee, and they turn back to thee, confessing thy name and making their prayer and supplication before thee in this house, do thou 25 hear from heaven; forgive the sin of thy people Israel and restore them to the land which thou gavest to them and to their forefathers.

'When the heavens are shut up and there is no rain, because thy servant 26 and thy people Israel have sinned against thee, and when they pray towards this place, confessing thy name and forsaking their sin when they feel thy 27 punishment, do thou hear in heaven and forgive their sin; so mayest thou teach them the good way which they should follow, and grant rain to thy land which thou hast given to thy people as their own possession.

'If there is famine in the land, or pestilence, or black blight or red, or 28 locusts new-sloughed or fully grown, or if their enemies besiege them in any^b of their cities, or if plague or sickness befall them, then hear the 29 prayer or supplication of every man among thy people Israel, as each one, prompted by his own suffering and misery, spreads out his hands towards

30 this house; hear it from heaven thy dwelling and forgive. And, as thou knowest a man's heart, reward him according to his deeds, for thou alone
 31 knowest the hearts of all men; and so they will fear and obey thee all their lives in the land thou gavest to our forefathers.

32 'The foreigner too, the man who does not belong to thy people Israel, but has come from a distant land because of thy great fame and thy strong hand and arm outstretched, when he comes and prays towards this house,
 33 hear from heaven thy dwelling and respond to the call which the foreigner makes to thee, so that like thy people Israel all peoples of the earth may know thy fame and fear thee, and learn that this house which I have built bears thy name.

34 'When thy people go to war with their enemies, wherever thou dost send them, and they pray to thee, turning towards this city which thou hast chosen and towards this house which I have built in honour of thy name,
 35 do thou from heaven hear their prayer and supplication, and grant them justice.

36 'Should they sin against thee (and what man is free from sin?) and shouldst thou in thy anger give them over to an enemy, who carries them captive to a land far or near; if in the land of their captivity they learn their lesson and turn back and make supplication to thee in that land and say, "We
 37 have sinned and acted perversely and wickedly", if they turn back to thee with heart and soul in the land of their captivity to which they have been taken, and pray, turning towards their land which thou gavest to their forefathers and towards this city which thou didst choose and this house which 38 I have built in honour of thy name; then from heaven thy dwelling do thou hear their prayer and supplications and grant them justice. Forgive thy 39 people their sins against thee. Now, O my God, let thine eyes be open and thy ears attentive to the prayer made in this place. Arise now, O LORD God, and come to thy place of rest, thou and the Ark of thy might. Let thy 40 priests, O LORD God, be clothed with salvation and thy saints rejoice in prosperity. O LORD God, reject not thy anointed prince; remember thy 41 servant David's loyal service.'^a

7 When Solomon had finished this prayer, fire came down from heaven and consumed the whole-offering and the sacrifices, while the glory of the 2 LORD filled the house. The priests were unable to enter the house of the 3 LORD because the glory of the LORD had filled it. All the Israelites were watching as the fire came down with the glory of the LORD on the house, and where they stood on the paved court they bowed low to the ground and worshipped and gave thanks to the LORD, because 'that^b is good, for his love endures for ever.'

4 5 Then the king and all the people offered sacrifice before the LORD. King Solomon offered a sacrifice of twenty-two thousand oxen and a hundred and twenty thousand sheep; in this way the king and all the people dedicated the house of God. The priests stood at their appointed posts; so too the Levites with their musical instruments for the LORD's service, which King David had made for giving thanks to the LORD—'for his love endures for ever'—whenever he rendered praise with their help; opposite them, the priests sounded their trumpets; and all the Israelites were standing there.

Then Solomon consecrated the centre of the court which lay in front ^a of the house of the LORD; there he offered the whole-offerings and the fat portions of the shared-offerings, because the bronze altar which he had made could not take the whole-offering, the grain-offering, and the fat portions. So Solomon and all Israel with him, a very great assembly from Lebo-hamath to the Torrent of Egypt, celebrated the pilgrim-feast at that time for seven days. On the eighth day they held a closing ceremony; for they had celebrated the dedication of the altar for seven days; the pilgrim-feast lasted seven days. On the twenty-third day of the seventh month he sent the people to their homes, happy and glad at heart for all the prosperity granted by the LORD to David and Solomon and to his people Israel.

When Solomon had finished the house of the LORD and the royal palace and had successfully carried out all that he had planned for the house of the LORD and the palace, the LORD appeared to him by night and said, 'I have heard your prayer and I have chosen this place to be my place of sacrifice. When I shut up the heavens and there is no rain, or command the locusts to consume the land, or send a pestilence against my people, if my people whom I have named my own submit and pray to me and seek me and turn back from their evil ways, I will hear from heaven and forgive their sins and heal their land. Now my eyes will be open and my ears attentive to the prayers which are made in this place. I have chosen and consecrated this house, that my Name may be there for all time and my eyes and my heart be fixed on it for ever. And if you, on your part, live in my sight as your father David lived, doing all I command you, and observing my statutes and my judgements, then I will establish your royal throne, as I promised by a covenant granted to your father David when I said, "You shall never want for a man to rule over Israel." But if you turn away and forsake my statutes and my commandments which I have set before you, and if you go and serve other gods and prostrate yourselves before them, then I will uproot you from my land which I gave you, I will reject this house which I have consecrated in honour of my name, and make it a byword and an object-lesson among all peoples. And this house will become a ruin; every passer-by will be appalled at the sight of it, and they will ask, "Why has the LORD so treated this land and this house?" The answer will be, "Because they forsook the LORD the God of their fathers, who brought them out of Egypt, and clung to other gods, prostrating themselves before them and serving them; that is why the LORD has brought this great evil on them."'

Solomon had taken twenty years to build the house of the LORD and his own palace, and he rebuilt the cities which Hiram had given him and settled Israelites in them. He went to Hamath-zobah and seized it, and rebuilt Tadmor in the wilderness and all the store-cities which he had built in Hamath. He also built Upper Beth-horon and Lower Beth-horon as fortified cities with walls and barred gates, and Baalath, as well as all his store-cities, and all the towns where he quartered his chariots and horses; and he carried out all his cherished plans for building in Jerusalem, in the Lebanon, and throughout his whole dominion. All the survivors of the Hittites, Amorites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites, who did not belong to Israel—that is their descendants who survived in the land, wherever the Israelites had been unable to exterminate them—were employed by Solomon on forced labour, as they still are. He put none of the Israelites to forced labour for his public works; they were his fighting men, his captains and lieutenants, and the commanders of his chariots and of his cavalry. These were King Solomon's officers, two hundred and fifty of them, in charge of the foremen who superintended the people.

Solomon brought Pharaoh's daughter up from the City of David to the house he had built for her, for he said, 'No wife of mine shall live in the house of David king of Israel, because this place which the Ark of the LORD has entered is^a holy.'

Then Solomon offered whole-offerings to the LORD on the altar which he had built to the east of the vestibule, according to what was required for each day, making offerings according to the law of Moses for the sabbaths, the new moons, and the three annual appointed feasts—the pilgrim-feasts of Unleavened Bread, of Weeks, and of Tabernacles.^b Following the practice of his father David, he drew up the roster of service for the priests and that for the Levites for leading the praise and for waiting upon the priests, as each day required, and that for the door-keepers at each gate; for such was the instruction which David the man of God had given. The instructions which David had given concerning the priests and the Levites and concerning the treasuries were not forgotten.

By this time all Solomon's work was achieved, from the foundation of the house of the LORD to its completion; and the house of the LORD was perfect. Then Solomon went to Ezion-geber and to Elath on the coast of Edom, and Hiram sent ships under the command of his own officers and manned by crews of experienced seamen; and these, in company with Solomon's servants, went to Ophir and brought back four hundred and fifty talents of gold, which they delivered to King Solomon.

9 THE QUEEN OF SHEBA HEARD of Solomon's fame and came to test him with hard questions. She arrived in Jerusalem with a very large retinue, camels laden with spices, gold in abundance, and precious stones. When she came to Solomon, she told him everything she had in her mind, and Solomon answered all her questions; not one of them was too abstruse for him to answer. When the queen of Sheba saw the wisdom of Solomon, the house which he had built, the food on his table, the courtiers sitting round him, his attendants and his cupbearers in their livery standing behind, and the stairs by which he went up to the house of the LORD, there was no more spirit left in her. Then she said to the king, 'The report which I heard in my own country about you and your wisdom was true, but I did not believe what they told me until I came and saw for myself. Indeed, I was not told half of the greatness of your wisdom; you surpass the report which I had of you. Happy are your wives, happy these courtiers of yours who wait on you every day and hear your wisdom! Blessed be the LORD your God who has delighted in you and has set you on his throne as his king; because in his love your God has elected Israel to make it endure for ever, he has made you king over it to maintain law and justice.' Then she gave the king a hundred and twenty talents of gold, spices in great abundance, and precious stones. There had never been any spices to equal those which the queen of Sheba gave to King Solomon.

Besides all this, the servants of Hiram and of Solomon, who had brought gold from Ophir, brought also cargoes of algum wood and precious stones. The king used the wood to make stands for the house of the LORD and for the royal palace, as well as harps and lutes for the singers. The like of them had never before been seen in the land of Judah.

King Solomon gave the queen of Sheba all she desired, whatever she asked, besides his gifts in return for ^a what she had brought him. Then she departed and returned with her retinue to her own land.

Now the weight of gold which Solomon received yearly was six hundred and sixty-six talents, in addition to the tolls levied on merchants and on traders who imported goods; all the kings of Arabia and the regional governors also ^b brought gold and silver to the king.

King Solomon made two hundred shields of beaten gold, and six hundred shekels of gold went to the making of each one; he also made three hundred bucklers of beaten gold, and three hundred shekels of gold went to the making of each buckler. The king put these into the House of the Forest of Lebanon.

The king also made a great throne of ivory and overlaid it with pure gold. Six steps and a footstool for the throne were all encased in gold. There were arms on each side of the seat, with a lion standing beside each of them, and twelve lions stood on the six steps, one at either end of each step. Nothing like it had ever been made for any monarch. All Solomon's drinking vessels were of gold, and all the plate in the House of the Forest of Lebanon was of red gold; silver was reckoned of no value in the days of Solomon. The king had a fleet of ships plying to Tarshish with Hiram's men; once every three years this fleet of merchantmen came home, bringing gold and silver, ivory, apes, and monkeys.

Thus King Solomon outdid all the kings of the earth in wealth and wisdom, and all the kings of the earth courted him, to hear the wisdom which God had put in his heart. Each brought his gift with him, vessels of silver and gold, garments, perfumes and spices, horses and mules, so much year by year.

Solomon had standing for four thousand horses and chariots, and twelve thousand cavalry horses, and he stabled some in the chariot-towns and kept others at hand in Jerusalem. He ruled over all the kings from the Euphrates to the land of the Philistines and the border of Egypt. He made fig in the Shephelah. Horses were imported from Egypt and from all countries for Solomon.

29^a The rest of the acts of Solomon's reign, from first to last, are recorded in the history of Nathan the prophet, in the prophecy of Ahijah of Shiloh, and in the visions of Iddo the seer concerning Jeroboam son of Nebat.
30 31 Solomon ruled in Jerusalem over the whole of Israel for forty years. Then he rested with his forefathers and was buried in the city of David his father, and he was succeeded by his son Rehoboam.

The kings of Judah from Rehoboam to Ahaz

10 ^b REHOBOAM WENT TO SHECHEM, for all Israel had gone there to make 1 him king. When Jeroboam son of Nebat heard of it in Egypt, where 2 he had taken refuge to escape Solomon, he returned from Egypt. They 3 now recalled him, and he and all Israel came to Rehoboam and said, 'Your 4 father laid a cruel yoke upon us; but if you will now lighten the cruel slavery he imposed on us and the heavy yoke he laid on us, we will serve 5 you.' 'Give me three days,' he said, 'and come back again.' So the people 6 went away. King Rehoboam then consulted the elders who had been in attendance on his father Solomon while he lived: 'What answer do you 7 advise me to give to this people?' And they said, 'If you show yourself well-disposed to this people and gratify them by speaking kindly to them, 8 they will be your servants ever after.' But he rejected the advice which the elders gave him. He next consulted those who had grown up with him, the 9 young men in attendance, and asked them, 'What answer do you advise me to give to this people's request that I should lighten the yoke which my 10 father laid on them?' The young men replied, 'Give this answer to the people who say that your father made their yoke heavy and ask you to 11 lighten it; tell them: "My little finger is thicker than my father's loins. My father laid a heavy yoke on you; I will make it heavier. My father used the 12 whip on you; but I will use the lash."' Jeroboam and the people all came 13 back to Rehoboam on the third day, as the king had ordered. And the king gave them a harsh answer. He rejected the advice which the elders had given 14 him and spoke to the people as the young men had advised: 'My father made your yoke heavy; I will make it heavier. My father used the whip on 15 you; but I will use the lash.' So the king would not listen to the people; for the LORD had given this turn to the affair, in order that the word he had spoken by Ahijah of Shiloh to Jeroboam son of Nebat might be fulfilled.

16 When all Israel saw ^c that the king would not listen to them, they answered:

What share have we in David?

We have no lot in the son of Jesse.

Away to your homes, O Israel;

now see to your own house, David.

^c saw.

So all Israel went to their homes, and Rehoboam ruled over those Israelites 17
who lived in the cities of Judah.

Then King Rehoboam sent out Hadoram, the commander of the forced 18 levies, but the Israelites stoned him to death; whereupon King Rehoboam mounted his chariot in haste and fled to Jerusalem. From that day to this, 19 Israel has been in rebellion against the house of David.

When Rehoboam reached Jerusalem, he assembled the tribes of Judah 11 1^a and Benjamin, a hundred and eighty thousand chosen warriors, to fight against Israel and recover his kingdom. But the word of the LORD came to 2
Shemaiah the man of God: 'Say to Rehoboam son of Solomon, king of 3 Judah, and to all the Israelites in Judah and Benjamin, "This is the word 4 of the LORD: You shall not go up to make war on your kinsmen. Return to your homes, for this is my will."' So they listened to the word of the LORD and abandoned their campaign against Jeroboam.

Rehoboam resided in Jerusalem and built up the defences of certain 5 cities in Judah. The cities in Judah and Benjamin which he fortified were 6
Bethlehem, Etam, Tekoa, Beth-zur, Socco, Adullam, Gath, Mareshah, 7 8
Ziph, Adoraim, Lachish, Azekah, Zorah, Aijalon, and Hebron. He 9 10 11 strengthened the fortifications of these fortified cities, and put governors in them, as well as supplies of food, oil, and wine. Also he stored shields 12 and spears in every one of the cities, and strengthened their fortifications.
Thus he retained possession of Judah and Benjamin.

Now the priests and the Levites throughout the whole of Israel resorted 13 to Rehoboam from all their territories; for the Levites had left all their 14 common land and their own patrimony and had gone to Judah and Jerusalem, because Jeroboam and his successors rejected their services as priests of the LORD, and he appointed his own priests for the hill-shrines, 15 for the demons,^b and for the calves which he had made. Those, from all 16 the tribes of Israel, who were resolved to seek the LORD the God of Israel followed the Levites to Jerusalem to sacrifice to the LORD the God of their fathers. So they strengthened the kingdom of Judah and for three years 17 made Rehoboam son of Solomon secure, because he followed the example of David and Solomon during that time.

Rehoboam married Mahalath, whose father was Jerimoth son of David 18 and whose mother was Abihail daughter of Eliab son of Jesse. His sons 19 by her were: Jeush, Shemariah and Zaham. Next he married Maacah 20 granddaughter of Absalom, who bore him Abijah, Attai, Ziza and Shelomith.
Of all his wives and concubines, Rehoboam loved Maacah most; 21
he had in all eighteen wives and sixty concubines and became the father of twenty-eight sons and sixty daughters. He appointed Abijah son of 22 Maacah chief among his brothers, making him crown prince and planning to make him his successor on the throne. He showed discretion in detailing 23 his sons to take charge of all the fortified cities throughout the whole territory of Judah and Benjamin; he also made generous provision for them and procured them^c wives.

2 strong, he forsook the law of the LORD, he and all Israel with him. In the 3 fifth year of Rehoboam's reign, because of this disloyalty to the LORD,
 4 Shishak king of Egypt attacked Jerusalem with twelve hundred chariots
 5 and sixty thousand horsemen, and brought with him from Egypt an 6 innumerable following of Libyans, Sukkites, and Cushites.^a He captured 7 the fortified cities of Judah and reached Jerusalem. Then Shemaiah the 8 prophet came to Rehoboam and the leading men of Judah, who had 9 assembled in Jerusalem before the advance of Shishak, and said to them,
 10 'This is the word of the LORD: You have abandoned me; therefore I now 11 abandon you to Shishak.' The princes of Israel and the king submitted and 12 said, 'The LORD is just.' When the LORD saw that they had submitted, 13 there came from him this word to Shemaiah: 'Because they have sub-
 14 mitted I will not destroy them, I will let them barely escape; my wrath 15 shall not be poured out on Jerusalem by means of Shishak, but they shall 16 become his servants; then they will know the difference between serving 17 me and serving the rulers of other countries.' Shishak king of Egypt in his 18 attack on Jerusalem removed the treasures of the house of the LORD and 19 of the royal palace. He seized everything, including the shields of gold that 20 Solomon had made. King Rehoboam replaced them with bronze shields
 21 and entrusted them to the officers of the escort who guarded the entrance 22 of the royal palace. Whenever the king entered the house of the LORD, the 23 escort entered, carrying the shields; afterwards they returned them to the 24 guard-room. Because Rehoboam submitted, the LORD's wrath was 25 averted from him, and he was not utterly destroyed; Judah enjoyed 26 prosperity.

13^c Thus King Rehoboam increased his power in Jerusalem. He was forty-14 one years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned for seventeen
 15 years in Jerusalem, the city which the LORD had chosen out of all the tribes
 16 of Israel as the place to receive his Name. Rehoboam's mother was a 17 woman of Ammon called Naamah. He did what was wrong, he did not 18 make a practice of seeking guidance of the LORD. The events of Rehoboam's 19 reign, from first to last, are recorded in the histories of Shemaiah the 20 prophet and Iddo the seer.^d There was continual fighting between 21 Rehoboam and Jeroboam. He rested with his forefathers and was buried 22 in the city of David; and he was succeeded by his son Abijah.

13 IN THE EIGHTEENTH YEAR of King Jeroboam's reign Abijah became 2 king of Judah. He reigned in Jerusalem for three years; his mother was 3 Maacah daughter of Uriel of Gibeah. There was fighting between Abijah
 4 and Jeroboam. Abijah drew up his army of four hundred thousand picked 5 troops in order of battle, while Jeroboam formed up against him with 6 eight hundred thousand picked troops. Abijah took up position on the 7 slopes of Mount Zemaraim in the hill-country of Ephraim and called out,
 8 'Hear me, Jeroboam and all Israel: Ought you not to know that the LORD
 9 the God of Israel gave the kingship over Israel to David and his descend-10 ants in perpetuity by a covenant of salt? Yet Jeroboam son of Nebat, the servant of Solomon son of David, rose in rebellion against his lord, and certain worthless scoundrels gathered round him, who stubbornly opposed Solomon's son Rehoboam when he was young and inexperienced, and he was no match for them. Now you propose to match yourselves against the kingdom of the LORD as ruled by David's sons, you and your mob of supporters and the golden calves which Jeroboam has made to be your gods. Have you not dismissed from office the Aaronites, priests of the LORD, and the Levites, and followed the practice of other lands in appointing priests? Now, if any man comes for consecration with an offering of a young bull and seven rams, you accept him as a priest to a god that is no god. But as for us, the LORD is our God and we have not forsaken him; we have Aaronites as priests ministering to the LORD with the Levites, duly discharging their office. Morning and evening, these burn whole-offerings and fragrant incense to the LORD and offer the Bread of the Presence arranged in rows on a table ritually clean; they also kindle the lamps on the golden lamp-stand every evening. Thus we do indeed keep the charge of the LORD our God, whereas you have forsaken him. God is with us at our head, and his priests stand there with trumpets to signal the battle-cry against you. Men of Israel, do not fight the LORD the God of your fathers; you will have no success.'

Jeroboam sent a detachment of his troops to go round and lay an ambush in the rear, so that his main body faced Judah while the ambush lay behind them. The men of Judah turned to find that they were engaged front and rear. Then they cried to the LORD for help. The priests sounded their trumpets, and the men of Judah raised a shout, and when they did so, God put Jeroboam and all Israel to rout before Abijah and Judah. The Israelites fled before the men of Judah, and God delivered them into their power. So Abijah and his men defeated them with very heavy losses, and five hundred thousand picked Israelites fell in the battle. After this, the Israelites were reduced to submission, and Judah prevailed because they relied on the LORD the God of their fathers. Abijah followed up his victory over Jeroboam and captured from him the cities of Bethel, Jeshanah, and Ephron, with their villages. Jeroboam did not regain his power during the days of Abijah; finally the LORD struck him down and he died.

But Abijah established his position; he married fourteen wives and became the father of twenty-two sons and sixteen daughters. The other events of Abijah's reign, both what he said and what he did, are recorded in the story of the prophet Iddo. Abijah rested with his forefathers and was buried in the city of David; and he was succeeded on the throne by his son Asa. In his days the land was at peace for ten years.

Asa did what was good and right in the eyes of the LORD his God. He suppressed the foreign altars and the hill-shrines, smashed the sacred pillars and hacked down the sacred poles, and ordered Judah to seek guidance of the LORD the God of their fathers and to keep the law and the commandments. He also suppressed the hill-shrines and the incense-altars in all the cities, and the kingdom was at peace under him. He built fortified cities in Judah, for the land was at peace. He had no war to fight during those years, because the LORD had given him security. He said to the men of Judah, 'Let us build these cities and fortify them, with walls round them, and towers and barred gates. The land still lies open before us. Because we have sought guidance of the LORD our God, he has sought us and given us security on every side.' So they built and prospered.

8 Asa had an army equipped with shields and spears; three hundred thousand men came from Judah, and two hundred and eighty thousand from Benjamin, shield-bearers and archers; all were valiant warriors. 9 Zerah the Cushite came out against them with an army a million strong and three hundred chariots. When he reached Mareshah, Asa came out to meet him and they took up position in the valley of Zephathah at Mareshah. 10 Asa called upon the LORD his God and said, 'There is none like thee, O LORD, to help men, whether strong or weak; help us, O LORD our God, for on thee we rely and in thy name we have come out against this horde. 11 O LORD, thou art our God, how can man vie with thee?' So the LORD gave Asa and Judah victory over the Cushites and they fled, and Asa and his men pursued them as far as Gerar. The Cushites broke before the LORD and his army, and many of them fell mortally wounded; and Judah carried off great loads of spoil. They destroyed all the cities around Gerar, for the LORD had struck the people with panic; and they plundered the cities, 12 finding rich spoil in them all. They also killed the herdsmen and seized many sheep and camels, and then they returned to Jerusalem.

15 12 The spirit of God came upon Azariah son of Oded, and he went out to meet Asa and said to him, 'Hear me, Asa and all Judah and Benjamin. The LORD is with you when you are with him; if you look for him, he will let himself be found; if you forsake him, he will forsake you. For a long time Israel was without the true God, without a priest to interpret the law and without law.^a But when, in their distress, they turned to the LORD the God of Israel and sought him, he let himself be found by them. At those times there was no safety for people as they went about their business; the inhabitants of every land had their fill of trouble; there was ruin on every side, nation at odds with nation, city with city, for God harassed them with every kind of distress. But now you must be strong and not let your courage fail; for your work will be rewarded.' When Asa heard these words,^b he resolutely suppressed the loathsome idols in all Judah and Benjamin and in the cities which he had captured in the hill-country of Ephraim; and he repaired the altar of the LORD which stood before the vestibule of the LORD's house.^c Then he assembled all Judah and Benjamin and all who had come from Ephraim, Manasseh, and Simeon to reside among them; for great numbers had come over to him from Israel, when they saw that the LORD his God was with him. So they assembled at Jerusalem in the third month of the fifteenth year of Asa's reign, and that day they sacrificed to the LORD seven hundred oxen and seven thousand sheep from the spoil which they had brought. And they entered into a covenant to seek guidance of the LORD the God of their fathers with all their heart and soul; all who would not seek the LORD the God of Israel were to be put to death, young and old, men and women alike. Then they bound themselves by an oath to the LORD, with loud shouts of acclamation while trumpets and horns sounded; and all Judah rejoiced at the oath, because they had bound themselves with all their heart and had sought him earnestly, and he had let himself be found by them. So the LORD gave them security on every side. King Asa also deprived Maacah his grandmother of her rank as queen mother because she had an obscene object made for the worship of Asherah; Asa cut it down, ground it to powder and burnt it in the gorge of the Kidron. Although the hill-shrines were allowed to remain in Israel, Asa himself remained faithful all his life. He brought into the house of God all his father's votive offerings and his own, gold and silver and sacred vessels. And there was no more war until the thirty-fifth year of Asa's reign.

In the thirty-sixth year of the reign of Asa, Baasha king of Israel invaded Judah and fortified Ramah to cut off all access to Asa king of Judah. So Asa brought out silver and gold from the treasuries of the house of the LORD and the royal palace, and sent this request to Ben-hadad king of Aram, whose capital was Damascus: 'There is an alliance between us, as there was between our fathers. I now send you herewith silver and gold; break off your alliance with Baasha king of Israel, so that he may abandon his campaign against me.' Ben-hadad listened willingly to King Asa and ordered the commanders of his armies to move against the cities of Israel, and they attacked Iyyon, Dan, Abel-mayim, and all the store-cities of Naphtali. When Baasha heard of it, he ceased fortifying Ramah and stopped all work on it. Then King Asa took with him all the men of Judah and they carried away the stones of Ramah and the timbers with which Baasha had fortified it; and he used them to fortify Geba and Mizpah.

At that time the seer Hanani came to Asa king of Judah and said to him, 'Because you relied on the king of Aram and not on the LORD your God, the army of the king of Israel has escaped. The Cushites and the Libyans, were they not a great army with a vast number of chariots and horsemen? Yet, because you relied on the LORD, he delivered them into your power. The eyes of the LORD range through the whole earth, to bring aid and comfort to those whose hearts are loyal to him. You have acted foolishly in this affair; you will have wars from now on.' Asa was angry with the seer and put him in the stocks; for these words of his had made the king very indignant. At the same time he treated some of the people with great brutality.

The events of Asa's reign, from first to last, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Judah and Israel. In the thirty-ninth year of his reign Asa became gravely affected with gangrene in his feet; he did not seek guidance of the LORD but resorted to physicians. He rested with his forefathers, in the forty-first year of his reign, and was buried in the tomb which he had bought^d for himself in the city of David, being laid on a bier^e which had been heaped with all kinds of spices skilfully compounded; and they kindled a great fire in his honour.

17 ASA WAS SUCCEEDED BY HIS SON JEHOSEPHAT, who determined
2 to resist Israel by force. He posted troops in all the fortified cities of Judah
3 and stationed officers ^a throughout Judah and in the cities of Ephraim 4 which his father Asa had captured. The LORD was with Jehoshaphat, for 5 he followed the example his father had set in his early years and did not 6 resort to the Baalim; he sought guidance of the God of his father and 7 obeyed his commandments and did not follow the practices of Israel. So 8 the LORD established the kingdom under his rule, and all Judah brought 9 him gifts, and his wealth and fame ^b became very great. He took pride in 10 the service of the LORD; he also suppressed the hill-shrines and the sacred 11 poles in Judah.

12 In the third year of his reign he sent his officers, Ben-hayil, Obadiah, 13 Zechariah, Nethaneel, and Micaiah, to teach in the cities of Judah, to-14 gether with the Levites, Shemaiah, Nethaniah, Zebadiah, Asahel, Shemira-15 moth, Jehonathan, Adonijah, Tobiah, and Tob-adonijah, ^c accompanied 16 by the priests Elishama and Jehoram. They taught in Judah, having with 17 them the book of the law of the LORD; they went round the cities of Judah, 18 teaching the people.

19 So the dread of the LORD fell upon all the rulers of the lands surrounding 20 Judah, and they did not make war on Jehoshaphat. Certain Philistines
21 brought a gift, a great quantity of silver, to Jehoshaphat; the Arabs too
22 brought him seven thousand seven hundred rams and seven thousand 23 seven hundred he-goats. Jehoshaphat became ever more powerful and 24 built fortresses and store-cities in Judah; and he had much work on hand
25 in the cities of Judah. He had regular, seasoned troops in Jerusalem, 26 enrolled according to their clans in this way: of Judah, the officers over 27 units of a thousand: Adnah the commander, together with three hundred 28 thousand seasoned troops; and next to him the commander Johanan, with 29 two hundred and eighty thousand; and next to him Amasiah son of 30 Zichri, who had volunteered for the service of the LORD, with two hundred 31 thousand seasoned troops; and of Benjamin: an experienced soldier 32 Eliada, with two hundred thousand men armed with bows and shields;
33 next to him Jehozabad, with a hundred and eighty thousand fully-armed 34 men. These were the men who served the king, apart from those whom 35 the king had posted in the fortified cities throughout Judah.

36 When Jehoshaphat had become very wealthy and famous, ^d he allied 37 himself with Ahab by marriage. Some years afterwards he went down to 38 visit Ahab in Samaria, and Ahab slaughtered many sheep and oxen for 39 him and his retinue, and incited him to attack Ramoth-gilead. What Ahab 40 king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat king of Judah was this: 'Will you join 41 me in attacking Ramoth-gilead?' And he answered, 'What is mine is yours, 42 myself and my people; I will join with you in the war.' Then Jehoshaphat 43 said to the king of Israel, 'First let us seek counsel from the LORD.' The 44 king of Israel assembled the prophets, some four hundred of them, and 45 asked them, 'Shall I attack Ramoth-gilead or shall I refrain?' 'Attack,' 46 they answered; 'God will deliver it into your hands.' Jehoshaphat asked,

^e Verses 2-34: cp. 1 Kgs. 22. 2-35.

'Is there no other prophet of the LORD here through whom we may seek guidance?' 'There is one more', the king of Israel answered, 'through whom we may seek guidance of the LORD, but I hate the man, because he never prophesies any good for me; never anything but evil. His name is Micaiah son of Imla.' Jehoshaphat exclaimed, 'My lord king, let no such word pass your lips!' So the king of Israel called one of his eunuchs and told him to fetch Micaiah son of Imla with all speed.

The king of Israel and Jehoshaphat king of Judah were seated on their thrones, clothed in their royal robes and in shining armour, at the entrance to the gate of Samaria, and all the prophets were prophesying before them. One of them, Zedekiah son of Kenaanah, made himself horns of iron and said, 'This is the word of the LORD: "With horns like these you shall gore the Aramaeans and make an end of them."' In the same vein all the prophets prophesied, 'Attack Ramoth-gilead and win the day; the LORD will deliver it into your hands.' The messenger sent to fetch Micaiah told him that the prophets had with one voice given the king a favourable answer. 'And mind you agree with them', he added. 'As the LORD lives,' said Micaiah, 'I will say only what my God tells me to say.'

When Micaiah came into the king's presence, the king said to him, 'Micaiah, shall I attack Ramoth-gilead or shall I refrain?' 'Attack and win the day,' he said, 'and it will fall into your hands.' 'How often must I adjure you', said the king, 'to tell me nothing but the truth in the name of the LORD?' Then Micaiah said, 'I saw all Israel scattered on the mountains, like sheep without a shepherd; and I heard the LORD say, "They have no master; let them go home in peace."' The king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, 'Did I not tell you that he never prophesies good for me, nothing but evil?' Micaiah went on, 'Listen now to the word of the LORD: I saw the LORD seated on his throne, with all the host of heaven in attendance on his right and on his left. The LORD said, "Who will entice Ahab to attack and fall on Ramoth-gilead?" One said one thing and one said another; then a spirit came forward and stood before the LORD and said, "I will entice him." "How?" said the LORD. "I will go out", he said, "and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets." "You shall entice him," said the LORD, "and you shall succeed; go and do it." You see, then, how the LORD has put a lying spirit in the mouth of all these prophets of yours, because he has decreed disaster for you.' Then Zedekiah son of Kenaanah came up to Micaiah and struck him in the face: 'And how did the spirit of the LORD pass from me to speak to you?' he said. Micaiah answered, 'That you will find out on the day when you run into an inner room to hide yourself.' Then the king of Israel ordered Micaiah to be arrested and committed to the custody of Amon the governor of the city and Joash the king's son. 'Lock this fellow up', he said, 'and give him prison diet of bread and water until I come home in safety.' Micaiah retorted, 'If you do return in safety, the LORD has not spoken by me.'

So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat king of Judah marched on Ramoth-gilead, and the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, 'I will disguise myself

^a Or at. ^b son: or deputy. ^c Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds and he said, 'Listen, peoples, all together.'

to go into battle, but you shall wear your royal robes.' So he went into battle 30 in disguise. Now the king of Aram had commanded the captains of his 31 chariots not to engage all and sundry but the king of Israel alone. When the captains saw Jehoshaphat, they thought he was the king of Israel and wheeled to attack him. But Jehoshaphat cried out, and the LORD came to 32 his help; and God drew them away from him. When the captains saw that 33 he was not the king of Israel, they broke off the attack on him. But one man drew his bow at random and hit the king of Israel where the breast-plate joins the plates of the armour. So he said to his driver, 'Wheel round 34 and take me out of the line; I am wounded.' When the day's fighting reached its height, the king of Israel was facing the Aramaeans, propped up in his chariot; he remained so till evening, and at sunset he died.

19 As Jehoshaphat king of Judah returned in safety to his home in Jeru-
 2 salem, Jehu son of Hanani, the seer, went out to meet him and said, 'Do you take delight in helping the wicked and befriending the enemies of the 3 LORD? The LORD will make you suffer for this. Yet there is some good in you, for you have swept away the sacred poles from the land and have made a practice of seeking guidance of God.'

4 Jehoshaphat had his residence in Jerusalem, but he went out again among his people from Beersheba to the hill-country of Ephraim and 5 brought them back to the LORD the God of their fathers. He appointed judges throughout the land, one in each of the fortified cities of Judah, 6 and said to them, 'Be careful what you do; you are there as judges, to please 7 not man but the LORD, who is with you when you pass sentence. Let the dread of the LORD be upon you, then; take care what you do, for the LORD our God will not tolerate injustice, partiality, or bribery.'

8 In Jerusalem Jehoshaphat appointed some of the Levites and priests and some heads of families by paternal descent in Israel to administer the law of the LORD and to arbitrate in lawsuits among the inhabitants ^d 9 of the city, and he gave them these instructions: 'You must always act in the 10 fear of the LORD, faithfully and with singleness of mind. In every suit which comes before you from your kinsmen, in whatever city they live, whether cases of bloodshed or offences against the law or the commandments, against statutes or regulations, you shall warn them to commit no offence against the LORD; otherwise you and your kinsmen will suffer for 11 it. If you act thus, you will be free of all offence. Your authority in all matters which concern the LORD is Amariah the chief priest, and in those which concern the king it is Zebediah son of Ishmael, the prince of the house of Judah; the Levites are your officers. Be strong and resolute, and may the LORD be on the side of the good!'

20 It happened some time afterwards that the Moabites, the Ammonites, 2 and some of the Meunites made war on Jehoshaphat. News was brought to him that a great horde of them was attacking him from beyond the Dead Sea, from Edom, and was already at Hazazon-tamar, which is En-gedi.
 3 Jehoshaphat in his alarm resolved to seek guidance of the LORD and pro-4 claimed a fast for all Judah. Judah gathered together to ask counsel of the 5 LORD; from every city of the land they came to consult him. Jehoshaphat stood up in the assembly of Judah and Jerusalem in the house of the LORD, in front of the New Court, and said, 'O LORD God of our fathers, art not thou God in heaven? Thou rulest over all the kingdoms of the nations; in thy hand are strength and power, and there is none who can withstand thee. Didst not thou, O God our God, dispossess the inhabitants of this land in favour of thy people Israel, and give it for ever to the descendants of Abraham thy friend? So they lived in it and have built a sanctuary in it in honour of thy name and said, "Should evil come upon us, war or flood,^a pestilence or famine, we will stand before this house and before thee, for in this house is thy Name, and we will cry to thee in our distress and thou wilt hear and save." Thou didst not allow Israel, when they came out of Egypt, to enter the land of the Ammonites, the Moabites, and the people of the hill-country of Seir, so they turned aside and left them alone and did not destroy them. Now see how these people repay us: they are coming to drive us out of thy possession which thou didst give to us. Judge them, O God our God, for we have no strength to face this great horde which is invading our land; we know not what we ought to do; we lift our eyes to thee.'

So all Judah stood there before the LORD, with their dependants, their wives and their children. Then, in the midst of the assembly, the spirit of the LORD came upon Jahaziel son of Zechariah, son of Benaiah, son of Jeiel, son of Mattaniah, a Levite of the line of Asaph, and he said, 'Attend, all Judah, all inhabitants of Jerusalem, and King Jehoshaphat; this is the word of the LORD to you: "Have no fear; do not be dismayed by this great horde, for the battle is in God's hands, not yours. Go down to meet them tomorrow; they will come up by the Ascent of Ziz. You will find them at the end of the valley, east of the wilderness of Jeruel. It is not you who will fight this battle; stand firm and wait, and you will see the deliverance worked by the LORD: he is on your side, O Judah and Jerusalem. Do not fear or be dismayed; go out tomorrow to face them; for the LORD is on your side." ' Jehoshaphat bowed his face to the ground, and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell down before the LORD to make obeisance to him. Then the Levites of the lines of Kohath and Korah stood up and praised the LORD the God of Israel with a mighty shout.

So they rose early in the morning and went out to the wilderness of Tekoa; and, as they were starting, Jehoshaphat took his stand and said, 'Hear me, O Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem: hold firmly to your faith in the LORD your God and you will be upheld; have faith in his prophets and you will prosper.' After consulting with the people, he appointed men to sing to the LORD and praise the splendour of his holiness^b as they went before the armed troops, and they sang:

Give thanks to the LORD,
for his love endures for ever.

As soon as their loud shouts of praise were heard, the LORD deluded the Ammonites and Moabites and the men of the hill-country of Seir, who

23 were invading Judah, and they were defeated. It turned out that the Ammonites and Moabites had taken up a position against the men of the hill-country of Seir, and set themselves to annihilate and destroy them; and when they had exterminated the men of Seir, they savagely attacked
 24 one another. So when Judah came to the watch-tower in the wilderness and looked towards the enemy horde, there they were all lying dead upon 25 the ground; none had escaped. When Jehoshaphat and his men came to collect the booty, they found a large number of cattle, goods, clothing, and precious things, which they plundered until they could carry away no more. They spent three days collecting the booty, there was so much of it.
 26 On the fourth day they assembled in the Valley of Berakah,^a the name that 27 it bears to this day because they blessed the LORD there. Then all the men of Judah and Jerusalem, with Jehoshaphat at their head, returned home to the city in triumph; for the LORD had given them cause to triumph over 28 their enemies. They entered Jerusalem with lutes, harps, and trumpets playing, and went into the house of the LORD. So the dread of God fell upon the rulers of every country, when they heard that the LORD had 29 fought against the enemies of Israel; and the realm of Jehoshaphat was at peace, God giving him security on all sides.

31^b Thus Jehoshaphat reigned over Judah. He was thirty-five years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for twenty-five 32 years; his mother was Azubah daughter of Shilhi. He followed in the footsteps of Asa his father and did not swerve from them; he did what was right in the eyes of the LORD. But the hill-shrines were allowed to remain, 33 and the people did not set their hearts upon the God of their fathers. The other events of Jehoshaphat's reign, from first to last, are recorded in the history of Jehu son of Hanani, which is included in the annals of the kings 34 of Israel.

35 Later Jehoshaphat king of Judah allied himself with Ahaziah king of 36 Israel; he did wrong in joining with him to build ships for trade with Tarshish; these were built in Ezion-geber. But Eliezer son of Dodavahu of Mareshah denounced Jehoshaphat with this prophecy: 'Because you have joined with Ahaziah, the LORD will bring your work to nothing.' So the ships were wrecked and could not make the voyage to Tarshish.

21 JEHOSHAPHAT RESTED WITH HIS FOREFATHERS and was buried with
 2 them in the city of David. He was succeeded by his son Joram, whose brothers were Azariah, Jehiel, Zechariah, Azariah, Michael, and Shephatiah, sons of Jehoshaphat. All of them were sons of Jehoshaphat king of 3 Judah, and their father gave them many gifts, silver and gold and other costly things, as well as fortified cities in Judah; but the kingship he gave to Joram because he was the eldest.

4 When Joram was firmly established on his father's throne, he put to 5^c the sword all his brothers and also some of the princes of Israel. He was thirty-two years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for eight years. He followed the practices of the kings of Israel as the house of Ahab had done, for he had married Ahab's daughter; and he did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD. But for the sake of the covenant which he had made with David, the LORD was unwilling to destroy the house of David, since he had promised to give him and his sons a flame, to burn for all time. 7

During his reign Edom revolted against Judah and set up its own king. Joram, with his commanders and all his chariots, advanced into Edom. He and his chariot-commanders set out by night, but they were surrounded by the Edomites and defeated.^a So Edom has remained independent of Judah to this day. Libnah revolted against him at the same time, because he had forsaken the LORD the God of his fathers, and because he had built hill-shrines in the hill-country of Judah and had seduced the inhabitants of Jerusalem into idolatrous practices and corrupted Judah. 8 9 10 11

A letter reached Joram from Elijah the prophet, which ran thus: 'This is the word of the LORD the God of David your father: "You have not followed in the footsteps of Jehoshaphat your father and of Asa king of Judah, but have followed the kings of Israel and have seduced Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, as the house of Ahab did; and you have put to death your own brothers, sons of your father's house, men better than yourself. Because of all this, the LORD is about to strike a heavy blow at your people, your children, your wives, and all your possessions, and you yourself will suffer from a chronic disease of the bowels, until they prolapse and become severely ulcerated."' Then the LORD aroused against Joram the anger of the Philistines and of the Arabs who live near the Cushites, and they invaded Judah and made their way right through it, carrying off all the property which they found in the king's palace, as well as his sons and wives; not a son was left to him except the youngest, Jehoahaz. It was after all this that the LORD struck down the king with an incurable disease of the bowels. It continued for some time, and towards the end of the second year the disease caused his bowels to prolapse, and the painful ulceration brought on his death. But his people kindled no fire in his honour as they had done for his fathers. He was thirty-two years old when he became king, and he reigned in Jerusalem for eight years. His passing went unsung, and he was buried in the city of David, but not in the burial-place of the kings. 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20

Then the inhabitants of Jerusalem made Ahaziah, his youngest son, king in his place, for the raiders who had joined the Arabs in the campaign had killed all the elder sons. So Ahaziah son of Joram became king of Judah. He was forty-two years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for one year; his mother was Athaliah granddaughter of Omri. He too followed the practices of the house of Ahab, for his mother was his counsellor in wickedness. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD like the house of Ahab, for they had been his counsellors after his father's death, to his undoing. He followed their counsel also in the alliance he made with Jehoram son of Ahab king of Israel, to fight against Hazael king of Aram at Ramoth-gilead. But Jehoram was wounded by the 22 1^b

6 Aramaeans, and returned to Jezreel to recover from the wounds which were inflicted on him at Ramoth in battle with Hazael king of Aram.

7 Because of Jehoram's illness Ahaziah son of Joram king of Judah went down to Jezreel to visit him. It was God's will that the visit of Ahaziah to Jehoram should be the occasion of his downfall. During the visit he went out with Jehoram to meet Jehu son of Nimshi, whom the LORD had
8 anointed to bring the house of Ahab to an end. So it came about that Jehu, who was then at variance with the house of Ahab, found the officers of Judah and the kinsmen of Ahaziah who were his attendants, and killed them. Then he searched out Ahaziah himself, and his men captured him in Samaria, where he had gone into hiding. They brought him to Jehu and put him to death; they gave him burial, for they said, 'He was a son of Jehoshaphat who sought the guidance of the LORD with his whole heart.'
9 Then the house of Ahaziah had no one strong enough to rule.

10^a As soon as Athaliah mother of Ahaziah saw that her son was dead, she 11 set out to extirpate the royal line of the house of Judah. But Jehosheba daughter of King Joram took Ahaziah's son Joash and stole him away from among the princes who were being murdered; she put him and his nurse in a bedchamber. Thus Jehosheba, daughter of King Joram and wife of Jehoiada the priest, because she was Ahaziah's sister, hid Joash from 12 Athaliah so that she did not put him to death. He remained concealed with them in the house of God for six years, while Athaliah ruled the country.

23 In the seventh year Jehoiada felt himself strong enough to make an agreement with Azariah son of Jeroham, Ishmael son of Jehohanan, Azariah son of Obed, Maaseiah son of Adaiah, and Elishaphat son of Zichri, all captains of units of a hundred. They went all through Judah and gathered to Jerusalem the Levites from the cities of Judah and the heads
2 of clans in Israel, and they came to Jerusalem. All the assembly made a compact with the king in the house of God, and Jehoiada said to them, 'Here is the king's son! He shall be king, as the LORD promised that the
3 sons of David should be. This is what you must do: a third of you, priests and Levites, as you come on duty on the sabbath, are to be on guard at the 4 threshold gates, another third are to be in the royal palace, and another third are to be at the Foundation Gate, while all the people will be in the 5 courts of the house of the LORD. Let no one enter the house of the LORD except the priests and the attendant Levites; they may enter, for they are 6 holy, but all the people shall continue to keep the LORD's charge. The Levites shall mount guard round the king, each with his weapons at the 7 ready; anyone who tries to enter the house is to be put to death. They shall stay with the king wherever he goes.'

8 The Levites and all Judah carried out the orders of Jehoiada the priest to the letter. Each captain took his men, both those who came on duty on the sabbath and those who came off, for Jehoiada the priest had not released the outgoing divisions. And Jehoiada the priest handed out to the 9 captains King David's spears, shields, and bucklers, which were in the house of God; and he posted all the people, each man carrying his weapon

at the ready, from corner to corner of the house to north and south,^a surrounding the king. Then they brought out the king's son, put the crown on his head, handed him the warrant and proclaimed him king, and Jehoiada and his sons anointed him; and a shout went up: 'Long live the king.' When Athaliah heard the noise of the people as they ran about cheering for the king, she came into the house of the LORD where the people were and found the king standing on the dais^b at the entrance, amidst outbursts of song and fanfares of trumpets in his honour; all the populace were rejoicing and blowing trumpets, and singers with musical instruments were leading the celebrations. Athaliah rent her clothes and cried, 'Treason! Treason!' Jehoiada the priest gave orders to^c the captains in command of the troops: 'Bring her outside the precincts and let anyone in attendance on her be put to the sword'; for the priest said, 'Do not kill her in the house of the LORD.' So they laid hands on her and took her to the royal palace and killed her there at the passage to the Horse Gate.

Then Jehoiada made a covenant between the LORD^d and the whole people and the king, that they should be the LORD's people. And all the people went into the temple of Baal and pulled it down; they smashed its altars and images, and they slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars. Then Jehoiada committed the supervision of the house of the LORD to the charge of the priests and the Levites whom David had allocated to the house of the LORD, to offer whole-offerings to the LORD as prescribed in the law of Moses, with the singing and rejoicing as handed down from David. He stationed the door-keepers at the gates of the house of the LORD, to prevent anyone entering who was in any way unclean. Then he took the captains of units of a hundred, the nobles, and the governors of the people, and all the people of the land, and they escorted the king from the house of the LORD through the Upper Gate to the royal palace, and seated him on the royal throne. The whole people rejoiced and the city was tranquil. That is how Athaliah was put to the sword.

Joash was seven years old when he became king, and he reigned in Jerusalem for forty years; his mother was Zibiah of Beersheba. He did what was right in the eyes of the LORD as long as Jehoiada the priest was alive. Jehoiada chose him two wives, and he had a family of sons and daughters.

Some time after this, Joash decided to repair the house of the LORD. So he assembled the priests and the Levites and said to them, 'Go through the cities of Judah and collect the annual tax from all the Israelites for the restoration of the house of your God, and do it quickly.' But the Levites did not act quickly. The king then called for Jehoiada the chief priest and said to him, 'Why have you not required the Levites to bring in from Judah and Jerusalem the tax imposed by Moses the servant of the LORD and by the assembly of Israel for the Tent of the Tokens?' For the wicked Athaliah and her adherents had broken into the house of God and had devoted all

8 its holy things to the service of the Baalim. So the king ordered them to 9 make a chest and to put it outside the gate of the house of the LORD; and proclamation was made throughout Judah and Jerusalem that the people should bring to the LORD the tax imposed on Israel in the wilderness by 10 Moses the servant of God. And all the leaders and all the people gladly 11 brought their taxes and cast them into the chest until it was full. Whenever the chest was brought to the king's officers by the Levites and they saw that it was well filled, the king's secretary and the chief priest's officer 12 would come to empty it, after which it was carried back to its place. This they did daily, and they collected a great sum of money. The king and Jehoiada gave it to those responsible for carrying out the work in the house of the LORD, and they hired masons and carpenters to do the repairs, as 13 well as craftsmen in iron and copper^a to restore the house. So the workmen proceeded with their task and the new work progressed under their hands;
they restored the house of God according to its original design and 14 strengthened it. When they had finished, they brought what was left of the money to the king and to Jehoiada, and it was made into vessels for the house of the LORD, both for service and for sacrificing, saucers and other vessels of gold and silver. While Jehoiada lived, whole-offerings were offered in the house of the LORD continually.

15 Jehoiada, now old and weighed down with years, died at the age of a 16 hundred and thirty and was buried with the kings in the city of David, because he had done good in Israel and served God and his house.

17 After the death of Jehoiada the leading men of Judah came and made 18 obeisance to the king. He listened to them, and they forsook the house of the LORD the God of their fathers and worshipped sacred poles and idols.
19 And Judah and Jerusalem suffered for this wickedness. But the LORD sent prophets to bring them back to himself, prophets who denounced them and were not heeded. Then the spirit of God took possession of Zechariah 20 son of Jehoiada the priest, and he stood looking down on the people and said to them, 'This is the word of God: "Why do you disobey the commands of the LORD and court disaster? Because you have forsaken the LORD, he 21 has forsaken you."' But they made common cause against him, and on orders from the king they stoned him to death in the court of the house of 22 the LORD. King Joash did not remember the loyalty of Zechariah's father Jehoiada but killed his son, who said as he was dying, 'May the LORD see this and exact the penalty.'

23 At the turn of the year an Aramaean army advanced against Joash; they invaded Judah and Jerusalem and massacred all the officers, so that the army ceased to exist, and sent all their spoil to the king of Damascus.
24 Although the Aramaeans had invaded with a small force, the LORD delivered a very great army into their hands, because the people had forsaken the LORD the God of their fathers; and Joash suffered just punishment.

25^b When the Aramaeans had withdrawn, leaving the king severely wounded, his servants conspired against him to avenge the death of the son of Jehoiada the priest; and they killed him on his bed. Thus he died and was buried in the city of David, but not in the burial-place of the kings. The 26 conspirators were Zabad son of Shimeath an Ammonite woman and Jehozabad son of Shimrith a Moabite woman. His children, the many 27 oracles about him, and his reconstruction of the house of God are all on record in the story given in the annals of the kings. He was succeeded by his son Amaziah.

AMAZIAH WAS TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OLD when he came to the throne, 25 1^a and he reigned in Jerusalem for twenty-nine years; his mother was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem. He did what was right in the eyes of the LORD, but not whole-heartedly. When the royal power was firmly in his grasp, 2 he put to death those of his servants who had murdered the king his father;
 but he spared their children, in obedience to the LORD's command written 4 in the law of Moses: 'Fathers shall not die for their children, nor children for their fathers; a man shall die only for his own sin.'

Then Amaziah assembled the men of Judah and drew them up by 5 families, all Judah and Benjamin as well, under officers over units of a thousand and a hundred. He mustered those of twenty years old and upwards and found their number to be three hundred thousand, all picked troops ready for service, able to handle spear and shield. He also 6 hired a hundred thousand seasoned troops from Israel for a hundred talents of silver. But a man of God came to him and said, 'My lord king, do not let the Israelite army march with you; the LORD is not with Israel—all these 7 Ephraimites! For, if you make these people ^b your allies in the war, God will overthrow you in battle; he has power to help or to overthrow.' Then 8 Amaziah said to the man of God, 'What am I to do about the hundred talents which I have spent on the Israelite army?' The man of God answered, 'It 9 is in the LORD's power to give you much more than that.' So Amaziah 10 detached the troops which had come to him from Ephraim and sent them home; that infuriated them against Judah and they went home in a rage.

Then Amaziah took heart and led his men to the Valley of Salt and there 11 killed ten thousand men of Seir. The men of Judah captured another ten thousand men alive, brought them to the top of a cliff ^c and hurled them 12 over so that they were all dashed to pieces. Meanwhile the troops which Amaziah had sent home without allowing them to take part in the battle 13 raided the cities of Judah from Samaria to Beth-horon, massacred three thousand people in them and carried off quantities of booty.

After Amaziah had returned from the defeat of the Edomites, he brought 14
 the gods of the people of Seir and, setting them up as his own gods, worshipped them and burnt sacrifices to them. The LORD was angry with 15 Amaziah for this and sent a prophet who said to him, 'Why have you resorted to gods who could not save their own people from you?' But while 16 he was speaking, the king said to him, 'Have we appointed you counsellor to the king? Stop! Why risk your life?' The prophet did stop, but first he said, 'I know that God has determined to destroy you because you have done this and have not listened to my counsel.'

17^a Then Amaziah king of Judah, after consultation, sent messengers to Jehoash son of Jehoahaz, son of Jehu, king of Israel, to propose a meeting.
 18 But Jehoash king of Israel sent this answer to Amaziah king of Judah: "A thistle in Lebanon sent to a cedar in Lebanon to say, "Give your daughter in marriage to my son." But a wild beast in Lebanon, passing by, trampled on the thistle. You have defeated Edom, you say, but it has gone to your head. Enjoy your glory at home and stay there. Why should you involve yourself in disaster and bring yourself to the ground, and Judah with you?"

20 But Amaziah would not listen; and this was God's doing in order to give Judah into the power of Jehoash, because they had resorted to the gods of Edom. So Jehoash king of Israel marched out, and he and Amaziah king of Judah met one another at Beth-shemesh in Judah. The men of Judah were routed by Israel and fled to their homes. But Jehoash king of Israel captured Amaziah king of Judah, son of Joash, son of Jehoahaz, at Beth-shemesh, and brought him to Jerusalem. There he broke down the city wall from the Gate of Ephraim to the Corner Gate, a distance of four hundred cubits; he also took^b all the gold and silver and all the vessels found in the house of God, in the care of Obed-edom, and the treasures of the royal palace, as well as hostages, and returned to Samaria.

25^c Amaziah son of Joash, king of Judah, outlived Jehoash son of Jehoahaz, king of Israel, by fifteen years. The other events of Amaziah's reign, from first to last, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Judah and Israel.
 27 From the time when he turned away from the LORD, there was conspiracy against him in Jerusalem and he fled to Lachish; but they sent after him to Lachish and put him to death there. Then his body was conveyed on horseback to Jerusalem, and there he was buried with his forefathers in the city of David.

26 All the people of Judah took Uzziah, now sixteen years old, and made him king in succession to his father Amaziah. It was he who built Eloth and restored it to Judah after the king rested with his forefathers.

3^d Uzziah was sixteen years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for fifty-two years; his mother was Jecoliah of Jerusalem.
 4 He did what was right in the eyes of the LORD, as Amaziah his father had done. He set himself to seek the guidance of God in the days of Zechariah, who instructed him in the fear of God; as long as he sought guidance of the LORD, God caused him to prosper.

6 He took the field against the Philistines and broke down the walls of Gath, Jabneh, and Ashdod; and he built cities in the territory of Ashdod and among the Philistines. God aided him against them, against the Arabs who lived in Gur-baal, and against the Meunites. The Ammonites brought gifts to Uzziah and his fame spread to the borders of Egypt, for he had become very powerful. Besides, he built towers in Jerusalem at the Corner Gate, at the Valley Gate, and at the escarpment, and fortified them. He built other towers in the wilderness and dug many cisterns, for he had large herds of cattle both in the Shephelah and in the plain. He also had farmers and vine-dressers in the hill-country and in the fertile lands, for he loved the soil.

Uzziah had an army of soldiers trained and ready for service, grouped according to the census made by Jeiel the adjutant-general and Maaseiah the clerk under the direction of Hananiah, one of the king's commanders. The total number of heads of families which supplied seasoned warriors was two thousand six hundred. Under their command was an army of three hundred and seven thousand five hundred, a powerful fighting force to aid the king against his enemies. Uzziah prepared for the whole army shields, spears, helmets, coats of mail, bows, and^a sling-stones. In Jerusalem he had machines designed by engineers for use upon towers and bastions, made to discharge arrows and large stones. His fame spread far and wide, for he was so wonderfully gifted that he became very powerful.

But when he grew powerful his pride led to his own undoing:^b he offended against the LORD his God by entering the temple of the LORD to burn incense on the altar of incense. Azariah the priest and eighty others of the LORD's priests, courageous men, went in after King Uzziah, confronted him and said, 'It is not for you, Uzziah, to burn incense to the LORD, but for the Aaronite priests who have been consecrated for that office. Leave the sanctuary; for you have offended, and that will certainly bring you no honour from the LORD God.' The king, who had a censer in his hand ready to burn incense, was indignant; and because of his indignation at the priests, leprosy broke out on his forehead in the presence of the priests, there in the house of the LORD, beside the altar of incense. When Azariah the chief priest and the other priests looked towards him, they saw that he had leprosy on his forehead and they hurried him out of the temple, and indeed he himself hastened to leave, because the LORD had struck him with the disease. And King Uzziah remained a leper till the day of his death; he lived in his own house as a leper, relieved of all duties and excluded from the house of the LORD, while his son Jotham was comptroller of the household and regent. The other events of Uzziah's reign, from first to last, are recorded by the prophet Isaiah son of Amoz. So he rested with his forefathers and was buried in a burial-ground, but not that of the kings; for they said, 'He is a leper'; and he was succeeded by his son Jotham.

Jotham was twenty-five years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for sixteen years; his mother was Jerushah daughter of Zadok. He did what was right in the eyes of the LORD, as his father Uzziah had done, but unlike him he did not enter the temple of the LORD; the people, however, continued their corrupt practices. He constructed the upper gate of the house of the LORD and built extensively on the wall at Ophel. He built cities in the hill-country of Judah, and forts and towers on the wooded hills. He made war on the king of the Ammonites and defeated him; and that year the Ammonites gave him a hundred talents of silver, ten thousand kor of wheat and ten thousand of barley. They paid him the same tribute in the second and third years. Jotham became very powerful because he maintained a steady course of obedience to the LORD his God. The other events of Jotham's reign, all that he did in war and in peace, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel and Judah. He was twenty-five years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for sixteen years. He rested with his forefathers and was buried in the city of David; and he was succeeded by his son Ahaz.

28 ^{1a} AHAZ WAS TWENTY YEARS OLD when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for sixteen years. He did not do what was right in the eyes of the LORD like his forefather David, but followed in the footsteps of the kings of Israel, and cast metal images for the Baalim. He also burnt sacrifices in the Valley of Ben-hinnom; he even burnt his sons in the fire according to the abominable practice of the nations whom the LORD had dispossessed in favour of the Israelites. He slaughtered and burnt sacrifices at the hill-shrines and on the hill-tops and under every spreading tree.

The LORD his God let him suffer at the hands of the king of Aram, and the Aramaeans defeated him, took many captives and brought them to Damascus; he was also made to suffer at the hands of the king of Israel, who inflicted a severe defeat on him. This was Pekah son of Remaliah, who killed in one day a hundred and twenty thousand men of Judah, seasoned troops, because they had forsaken the LORD the God of their fathers. And Zichri, an Ephraimite hero, killed Maaseiah the king's son ^b and Azrikam the comptroller of the household and Elkanah the king's chief minister. The Israelites took captive from their kinsmen two hundred thousand women and children; they also took a large amount of booty and brought it to Samaria.

A prophet of the LORD was there, Oded by name; he went out to meet the army as it returned to Samaria and said to them, 'It is because the LORD the God of your fathers is angry with Judah that he has given them into your power; and you have massacred them in a rage that has towered up to heaven. Now you propose to force the people of Judah and Jerusalem, male and female, into slavery. Are not you also guilty men before the LORD your God? Now, listen to me. Send back those you have taken captive from your kinsmen, for the anger of the LORD is roused against you.' Next, some Ephraimite chiefs, Azariah son of Jehohanan, Berechiah son of Meshillemoth, Hezekiah ^c son of Shallum, and Amasa son of Hadlai, met those who were returning from the war and said to them, 'You must not bring these captives into our country; what you are proposing would make us guilty before the LORD and add to our sins and transgressions. We are guilty enough already, and there is fierce anger against Israel.' So the armed men left the captives and the spoil with the officers and the assembled people. The captives were put in charge of men nominated for this duty, who found clothes from the spoil for all who were naked. They clothed them and shod them, gave them food and drink, and anointed them; those who were tottering from exhaustion they conveyed on the backs of asses, and so brought them to their kinsmen in Jericho, in the Vale of Palm Trees. Then they themselves returned to Samaria.

At that time King Ahaz sent to the king of Assyria for help. The Edomites had invaded again and defeated Judah and taken away prisoners; and the Philistines had raided the cities of the Shephelah and of the Negeb of Judah and had captured Beth-shemesh, Aijalon, and Gederoth, as well as Soco, Timnah, and Gimzo with their villages, and occupied them. The LORD had reduced Judah to submission because of Ahaz king of Judah; for his actions in Judah had been unbridled and he had been grossly unfaithful to the LORD. Then Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria marched against him and, so far from assisting him, pressed him hard. Ahaz stripped the house of the LORD, the king's palace and the houses of his officers, and gave the plunder to the king of Assyria; but all to no purpose.

This King Ahaz, when hard pressed, became more and more unfaithful to the LORD; he sacrificed to the gods of Damascus who had defeated him and said, 'The gods of the kings of Aram helped them; I will sacrifice to them so that they may help me.' But in fact they caused his downfall and that of all Israel. Then Ahaz gathered together the vessels of the house of God and broke them up, and shut the doors of the house of the LORD; he made himself altars at every corner in Jerusalem, and at every single city of Judah he made hill-shrines to burn sacrifices to other gods and provoked the anger of the LORD the God of his fathers.

The other acts and all the events of his reign, from first to last, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Judah and Israel. So Ahaz rested with his forefathers and was buried in the city of Jerusalem, but was not given burial with the kings of Judah. He was succeeded by his son Hezekiah.

The kings of Judah from Hezekiah to the exile

HEZEKIAH WAS TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OLD when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for twenty-nine years; his mother was Abijah daughter of Zechariah. He did what was right in the eyes of the LORD, as David his forefather had done.

In the first year of his reign, in the first month, he opened the gates of the house of the LORD and repaired them. He brought in the priests and the Levites and gathered them together in the square on the east side, and said to them, 'Levites, listen to me. Hallow yourselves now, hallow the house of the LORD the God of your fathers, and remove the pollution from the sanctuary. For our forefathers were unfaithful and did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD our God: they forsook him, they would have nothing to do with his dwelling-place, they turned their backs on it. They shut the doors of the porch and extinguished the lamps, they ceased to burn incense and offer whole-offerings in the sanctuary to the God of Israel. Therefore the anger of the LORD fell upon Judah and Jerusalem and he made them repugnant, an object of horror and derision, as you see for yourselves. Hence it is that our fathers have fallen by the sword, our sons and daughters and our wives are in captivity. Now I intend that we should pledge ourselves to the LORD the God of Israel, in order that his anger may be averted

11 from us. So, my sons, let no time be lost; for the LORD has chosen you to serve him and to minister to him, to be his ministers and to burn sacrifices.'

12 Then the Levites set to work—Mahath son of Amasai and Joel son of Azariah of the family of Kohath; of the family of Merari, Kish son of Abdi and Azariah son of Jehalelel; of the family of Gershon, Joah son of Zim-
13 mah and Eden son of Joah; of the family of Elizaphan, Shimri and Jeiel;
14 of the family of Asaph, Zechariah and Mattaniah; of the family of Heman, Jehiel and Shimei; and of the family of Jeduthun, Shemaiah and Uzziel.
15 They assembled their kinsmen and hallowed themselves, and then went in, as the king had instructed them at the LORD's command, to purify the 16 house of the LORD. The priests went inside to purify the house of the LORD; they removed all the pollution which they found in the temple into the 17 court of the house of the LORD, and the Levites took it from them and carried it outside to the gorge of the Kidron. They began the rites on the 18 first day of the first month, and on the eighth day they reached the porch; then for eight days they consecrated the house of the LORD, and on the 19 sixteenth day of the first month they finished. Then they went into the palace and said to King Hezekiah, 'We have purified the whole of the house of the LORD, the altar of whole-offering with all its vessels, and the table for the Bread of the Presence arranged in rows with all its vessels; and we have put in order and consecrated all the vessels which King Ahaz cast aside during his reign, when he was unfaithful. They are now in place before the altar of the LORD.'

20 Then King Hezekiah rose early, assembled the officers of the city and 21 went up to the house of the LORD. They brought seven bulls, seven rams, and seven lambs for the whole-offering,^a and seven he-goats as a sin-offering for the kingdom, for the sanctuary, and for Judah; these he com-22 manded the priests of Aaron's line to offer on the altar of the LORD. So the bulls were slaughtered, and the priests took their blood and flung it against the altar; the rams were slaughtered, and their blood was flung against the 23 altar; the lambs were slaughtered, and their blood was flung against the altar. Then the he-goats for the sin-offering were brought before the 24 king and the assembly, who laid their hands on them; and the priests slaughtered them and used their blood as a sin-offering on the altar to make expiation for all Israel. For the king had commanded that the whole-offering and the sin-offering should be made for all Israel.

25 He posted the Levites in the house of the LORD with cymbals, lutes, and harps, according to the rule prescribed by David, by Gad the king's seer and Nathan the prophet; for this rule had come from the LORD through 26 his prophets. The Levites stood ready with the instruments of David, and 27 the priests with the trumpets. Hezekiah gave the order that the whole-offering should be offered on the altar. At the moment when the whole-offering 28 began, the song to the LORD began too, with the trumpets, led by the instruments of David king of Israel. The whole assembly prostrated themselves, the singers sang and the trumpeters sounded; all this con-29 tinued until the whole-offering was complete. When the offering was complete, the king and all his company bowed down and prostrated themselves. And King Hezekiah and his officers commanded the Levites to praise the LORD in the words of David and of Asaph the seer. So they praised him most joyfully and bowed down and prostrated themselves.

Then Hezekiah said, 'You have now given to the LORD with open hands; approach with your sacrifices and thank-offerings for the house of the LORD.' So the assembly brought sacrifices and thank-offerings; and every man of willing spirit brought whole-offerings. The number of whole-offerings which the assembly brought was seventy bulls, a hundred rams, and two hundred lambs; all these made a whole-offering to the LORD. And the consecrated offerings were six hundred bulls and three thousand sheep. But the priests were too few and could not flay all the whole-offerings; so their colleagues the Levites helped them until the work was completed and all the priests had hallowed themselves—for the Levites had been more scrupulous than the priests in hallowing themselves. There were indeed whole-offerings in abundance, besides the fat of the shared-offerings and the drink-offerings for the whole-offerings. In this way the service of the house of the LORD was restored; and Hezekiah and all the people rejoiced over what God had done for the people and because it had come about so suddenly.

Then Hezekiah sent word to all Israel and Judah, and also wrote letters to Ephraim and Manasseh, inviting them to come to the house of the LORD in Jerusalem to keep the Passover of the LORD the God of Israel. The king and his officers and all the assembly in Jerusalem had agreed to keep the Passover in the second month, but they had not been able to keep it at that time, because not enough priests had hallowed themselves and the people had not assembled in Jerusalem. The proposal was acceptable to the king and the whole assembly. So they resolved to make a proclamation throughout all Israel, from Beersheba to Dan, that the people should come to Jerusalem to keep the Passover of the LORD the God of Israel. Never before had so many kept it according to the prescribed form. Couriers went throughout all Israel and Judah with letters from the king and his officers, proclaiming the royal command: 'Turn back, men of Israel, to the LORD the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, so that he may turn back to those of you who escaped capture by the kings of Assyria. Do not be like your forefathers and your kinsmen, who were unfaithful to the LORD the God of their fathers, so that he made them an object of horror, as you yourselves saw. Do not be stubborn as your forefathers were; submit yourselves to the LORD and enter his sanctuary which he has sanctified for ever, and worship the LORD your God, so that his anger may be averted from you. For when you turn back to the LORD, your kinsmen and your children will win compassion from their captors and return to this land. The LORD your God is gracious and compassionate, and he will not turn away from you if you turn back to him.'

So the couriers passed from city to city through the land of Ephraim and Manasseh and as far as Zebulun, but they were treated with scorn and ridicule. However, a few men of Asher, Manasseh, and Zebulun submitted and came to Jerusalem. Further, the hand of God moved the people in Judah with one accord to carry out what the king and his officers had ordered at the LORD's command.

13 Many people, a very great assembly, came together in Jerusalem to 14 keep the pilgrim-feast of Unleavened Bread in the second month. They began by removing the altars in Jerusalem; they removed the altars for 15 burning sacrifices and threw them into the gorge of the Kidron. They killed the passover lamb on the fourteenth day of the second month; and the priests and the Levites were bitterly ashamed. They hallowed 16 themselves and brought whole-offerings to the house of the LORD. They took their accustomed places, according to the direction laid down for them in the law of Moses the man of God; the priests flung against the 17 altar the blood which they received from the Levites. But many in the assembly had not hallowed themselves; therefore the Levites had to kill the passover lamb for every one who was unclean, in order to hallow him 18 to the LORD. For a majority of the people, many from Ephraim, Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, had not kept themselves ritually clean, and therefore kept the Passover irregularly. But Hezekiah prayed for them, saying, 19 'May the good LORD grant pardon to every one who makes a practice of seeking guidance of God, the LORD the God of his fathers, even if he has 20 not observed the rules for the purification of the sanctuary.' The LORD 21 heard Hezekiah and healed the people. And the Israelites who were present in Jerusalem kept the feast of Unleavened Bread for seven days with great rejoicing, and the Levites and the priests praised the LORD every day with 22 unrestrained fervour.^a Hezekiah spoke encouragingly to all the Levites who had shown true understanding in the service of the LORD. So they spent the seven days of the festival sacrificing shared-offerings and making confession to^b the LORD the God of their fathers.

23 Then the whole assembly agreed to keep the feast for another seven days;
 24 so they kept it for another seven days with general rejoicing. For Hezekiah king of Judah set aside for the assembly a thousand bulls and seven thousand sheep, and his officers set aside for the assembly a thousand bulls and ten 25 thousand sheep; and priests hallowed themselves in great numbers. So the whole assembly of Judah, including the priests and the Levites, 26 rejoiced, together with all the assembly which came out of Israel, and the resident aliens from Israel and those who lived in Judah. There was great rejoicing in Jerusalem, the like of which had not been known there since 27 the days of Solomon son of David king of Israel. Then the priests and the Levites stood to bless the people; the LORD listened to their cry, and their prayer came to God's holy dwelling-place in heaven.

31 When this was over, all the Israelites present went out to the cities of Judah and smashed the sacred pillars, hacked down the sacred poles and broke up the hill-shrines and the altars throughout Judah and Benjamin, Ephraim and Manasseh, until they had made an end of them. That done, the Israelites returned, each to his own patrimony in his own city.

2 Then Hezekiah installed the priests and the Levites in office, division by division, allotting to each priest or Levite his own particular duty, for whole-offerings or shared-offerings, to give thanks or to sing praise, or to serve in the gates of the several quarters in the LORD's house.

The king provided from his own resources, as the share due from him, the whole-offerings for both morning and evening, and for sabbaths, new moons, and appointed seasons, as prescribed in the law of the LORD. He ordered the people living in Jerusalem to provide the share due from the priests and the Levites, so that they might devote themselves entirely to the law of the LORD. As soon as the king's order was issued to the Israelites, they gave generously from the firstfruits of their corn and new wine, oil and honey, all the produce of their land; they brought a full tithe of everything. The Israelites and the Judaeans living in the cities of Judah also brought a tithe of cattle and sheep, and a tithe of all produce as offerings dedicated to the LORD their God, and they stacked the produce in heaps. They began to deposit the heaps in the third month and completed them in the seventh. When Hezekiah and his officers came and saw the heaps, they blessed the LORD and his people Israel. Hezekiah asked the priests and the Levites about these heaps, and Azariah the chief priest, who was of the line of Zadok, answered, 'From the time when the people began to bring their contribution into the house of the LORD, they have had enough to eat, enough and to spare; indeed, the LORD has so greatly blessed them that they have this great store left over.'

Then Hezekiah ordered store-rooms to be prepared in the house of the LORD, and this was done; and the people honestly brought in their contributions, the tithe, and their dedicated gifts. The overseer in charge of them was Conaniah the Levite, with Shimei his brother as his deputy; Jehiel, Azariah, Nahath, Asahel, Jerimoth, Jozabad, Eliel, Ismachiah, Mahath, and Benaiah were appointed by King Hezekiah and Azariah, the chief overseer of the house of God, to assist Conaniah and Shimei his brother. And Kore son of Imnah the Levite, keeper of the East Gate, was in charge of the freewill offerings to God, to apportion the contributions made to the LORD and the most sacred offerings. Eden, Miniamin, Jeshua, Shemaiah, Amariah, and Shecaniah in the priestly cities assisted him in the fair distribution of portions to their kinsmen, young and old ^a alike, by divisions. Irrespective of their registration, shares were distributed to all males three years of age and upwards who entered the house of the LORD to take their daily part in the service, according to their divisions, as their office demanded. The priests were registered by families, the Levites from twenty years of age and upwards by their offices in their divisions. They were registered with all their dependants, their wives, their sons, and their daughters, the whole company of them, because in virtue of their permanent standing they had to keep themselves duly hallowed. As for the priests of Aaron's line in the common lands attached to their cities, in every city men were nominated to distribute portions to every male among the priests and to every one who was registered with the Levites.

Such was the action taken by Hezekiah throughout Judah; he did what was good and right and loyal in the sight of the LORD his God. Whatever he undertook in the service of the house of God and in obedience to the law and the commandment to seek guidance of his God, he did with all his heart, and he prospered.

32 1^a After these events and this example of loyal conduct, Sennacherib king of Assyria invaded Judah and encamped against the fortified cities, believing that he could attack them to himself. When Hezekiah saw that he had come and was determined to attack Jerusalem, he consulted his civil and military officers about blocking up the springs outside the city; and they encouraged him. They gathered together a large number of people and blocked up all the springs and the stream which flowed through the land. 'Why', they said, 'should Assyrian kings come here and find plenty of water?' Then the king acted boldly; he made good every breach in the city wall and erected towers on it; he built another wall outside it and strengthened the Millo of the city of David; he also collected a great quantity of weapons and shields. He appointed military commanders over the people and assembled them in the square by the city gate and spoke encouragingly to them in these words: 'Be strong; be brave. Do not let the king of Assyria or the rabble he has brought with him strike terror or panic into your hearts. We have more on our side than he has. He has human strength; but we have the LORD our God to help us and to fight our battles.' So spoke Hezekiah king of Judah, and the people were buoyed up by his words.

After this, Sennacherib king of Assyria, while he and his high command were at Lachish, sent envoys to Jerusalem to deliver this message to Hezekiah king of Judah and to all the Judeans in Jerusalem: 'Sennacherib king of Assyria says, "What gives you confidence to stay in Jerusalem under siege? Hezekiah is misleading you into risking death by famine or thirst where you are, when he tells you that the LORD your God will save you from the grip of the Assyrian king. Was it not Hezekiah himself who suppressed the LORD's hill-shrines and altars and told the people of Judah and Jerusalem that they must prostrate themselves before one altar only and burn sacrifices there? You know very well what I and my forefathers have done to all the peoples of the lands. Were the gods of these nations able to save their lands from me? Not one of the gods of these nations, which my forefathers exterminated, was able to save his people from me. Much less will your god save you! How, then, can Hezekiah deceive you or mislead you like this? How can you believe him, for no god of any nation or kingdom has been able to save his people from me or my forefathers? Much less will your gods save you!"'

The envoys of Sennacherib spoke still more against the LORD God and against his servant Hezekiah. And the king himself wrote a letter to defy the LORD the God of Israel, in these terms: 'Just as the gods of other nations could not save their people from me, so the god of Hezekiah will not save his people from me.' Then they shouted in Hebrew at the top of their voices at the people of Jerusalem on the wall, to strike them with fear and terror, hoping thus to capture the city. They described the god ^b of Jerusalem as being like the gods of the other peoples of the earth—things made by the hands of men.

^a Verses 1-19: cp. 2 Kgs. 18. 13-37; Isa. 36. 1-22.

^b Or gods.

In this plight King Hezekiah and the prophet Isaiah son of Amoz cried to heaven in prayer. So the LORD sent an angel who cut down all the fighting men, as well as the leaders and the commanders, in the camp of the king of Assyria, so that he went home disgraced to his own land. When he entered the temple of his god, certain of his own sons struck him down with their swords. 20^a 21

Thus the LORD saved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from Sennacherib king of Assyria and all their enemies; and he gave them respite on every side. Many people brought to Jerusalem offerings for the LORD and costly gifts for Hezekiah king of Judah. From then on he was held in high honour by all the nations. 22
23

About this time Hezekiah fell dangerously ill and prayed to the LORD; the LORD said, 'I will heal you',^b and granted him a sign. But, being a proud man, he was not grateful for the good done to him, and Judah and Jerusalem suffered for it. Then, proud as he was, Hezekiah submitted, and the people of Jerusalem with him, and the LORD's anger did not fall on them again in Hezekiah's time. 24

Hezekiah enjoyed great wealth and fame.^c He built for himself treasuries for silver and gold, precious stones and spices, shields and other costly things; and barns for the harvests of corn, new wine, and oil; and stalls for every kind of cattle, as well as sheepfolds. He amassed^d a great many flocks and herds; God had indeed given him vast riches. It was this same Hezekiah who blocked the upper outflow of the waters of Gihon and directed them downwards and westwards to the city of David. In fact, Hezekiah was successful in everything he attempted, even in the affair of the envoys sent by the king^e of Babylon—the envoys who came to inquire about the portent which had been seen in the land at the time when God left him to himself, to test him and to discover all that was in his heart. 27

The other events of Hezekiah's reign, and his works of piety, are recorded in the vision of the prophet Isaiah son of Amoz and in the annals of the kings of Judah and Israel. So Hezekiah rested with his forefathers and was buried in the uppermost of the graves of David's sons; all Judah and the people of Jerusalem paid him honour when he died, and he was succeeded by his son Manasseh. 32

MANASSEH WAS TWELVE YEARS OLD when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for fifty-five years. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD, in following the abominable practices of the nations which the LORD had dispossessed in favour of the Israelites. He rebuilt the hill-shrines which his father Hezekiah had dismantled, he erected altars to the Baalim and made sacred poles, he prostrated himself before all the host of heaven and worshipped them. He built altars in the house of the LORD, that house of which the LORD had said, 'In Jerusalem shall my Name be for ever.' He built altars for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the LORD; he made his sons pass through the fire in the Valley 33 1/

of Ben-hinnom, he practised soothsaying, divination, and sorcery, and dealt with ghosts and spirits. He did much wrong in the eyes of the LORD and provoked his anger; and the image that he had had carved in relief he put in the house of God, the place of which God had said to David and Solomon his son, 'This house and Jerusalem, which I chose out of all the tribes of Israel, shall receive my Name for all time. I will not again displace Israel from the land which I assigned to their forefathers, if only they will be careful to observe all that I commanded them through Moses, all the law, the statutes, and the rules.' But Manasseh misled Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem into wickedness far worse than that of the nations which the LORD had exterminated in favour of the Israelites.

The LORD spoke to Manasseh and to his people, but they paid no heed. So the LORD brought against them the commanders of the army of the king of Assyria; they captured Manasseh with spiked weapons, and bound him with fetters, and brought him to Babylon. In his distress he prayed to the LORD his God and sought to placate him, and made his humble submission before the God of his fathers. He prayed, and God accepted his petition and heard his supplication. He brought him back to Jerusalem and restored him to the throne; and thus Manasseh learnt that the LORD was God.

After this he built an outer wall for the city of David, west of Gihon in the gorge, and extended it to the entrance by the Fish Gate, enclosing Ophel; and he raised it to a great height. He also put military commanders in all the fortified cities of Judah. He removed the foreign gods and the carved image from the house of the LORD and all the altars which he had built on the temple mount and in Jerusalem, and threw them out of the city. Moreover, he repaired the altar of the LORD and sacrificed at it shared-offerings and thank-offerings, and commanded Judah to serve the LORD the God of Israel. But the people still continued to sacrifice at the hill-shrines, though only to the LORD their God.

The rest of the acts of Manasseh, his prayer to his God, and the discourses of the seers who spoke to him in the name of the LORD the God of Israel, are recorded in the chronicles of the kings of Israel. His prayer and the answer he received to it, and all his sin and unfaithfulness, and the places where he built hill-shrines and set up sacred poles and carved idols, before he submitted, are recorded in the chronicles of the seers. So Manasseh rested with his forefathers and was buried in the garden-tomb of ^ahis family; he was succeeded by his son Amon.

²¹^b Amon was twenty-two years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for two years. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD as his father Manasseh had done. He sacrificed to all the images that his father Manasseh had made, and worshipped them. He was not submissive before the LORD like his father Manasseh; his guilt was much greater. His courtiers conspired against him and murdered him in his house; but the people of the land killed all the conspirators and made his son Josiah king in his place.

^b Verses 21-25:

JOSIAH WAS EIGHT YEARS OLD when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for thirty-one years. He did what was right in the eyes of the LORD; he followed in the footsteps of his forefather David, swerving neither right nor left. In the eighth year of his reign, when he was still a boy, he began to seek guidance of the God of his forefather David; and in the twelfth year he began to purge Judah and Jerusalem of the hill-shrines and the sacred poles, and the carved idols and the images of metal. He saw to it that the altars for the Baalim were destroyed and he hacked down the incense-altars which stood above them; he broke in pieces the sacred poles and the carved and metal images, grinding them to powder and scattering it on the graves of those who had sacrificed to them. He also burnt the bones of the priests on their altars and purged Judah and Jerusalem. In the cities of Manasseh, Ephraim, and Simeon, and as far as Naphtali, he burnt down their houses wherever he found them; he destroyed the altars and the sacred poles, ground the idols to powder, and hacked down the incense-altars throughout the land of Israel. Then he returned to Jerusalem.

In the eighteenth year of his reign, after he had purified the land and the house, he sent Shaphan son of Azaliah and Maaseiah the governor of the city and Joah son of Joahaz the secretary of state to repair the house of the LORD his God. They came to Hilkiyah the high priest and gave him the silver that had been brought to the house of God, the silver which the Levites, on duty at the threshold, had gathered from Manasseh, Ephraim, and all the rest of Israel, as well as from Judah and Benjamin and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. It was then handed over to the foremen in charge of the work in the house of the LORD, and these men, working in the house, used it for repairing and strengthening the fabric; they gave it also to the carpenters and builders to buy hewn stone, and timber for rafters and beams, for the buildings which the kings of Judah had allowed to fall into ruin. The men did their work honestly under the direction of Jahath and Obadiah, Levites of the line of Merari, and Zechariah and Meshullam, members of the family of Kohath. These also had control of the porters and directed the workmen of every trade. The Levites were all skilled musicians, and some of them were secretaries, clerks, or door-keepers. When they fetched the silver which had been brought to the house of the LORD, the priest Hilkiyah discovered the book of the law of the LORD which had been given through Moses. Then Hilkiyah told Shaphan the adjutant-general, 'I have discovered the book of the law in the house of the LORD.' Hilkiyah gave the book to Shaphan, and he brought it to the king and reported to him: 'Your servants are doing all that was entrusted to them. They have melted down the silver in the house of the LORD and have handed it over to the foremen and the workmen.' Shaphan the adjutant-general also told the king that the priest Hilkiyah had given him a book; and he read it out in the king's presence. When the king heard what was in the book of the law, he rent his clothes, and ordered Hilkiyah, Ahikam son of Shaphan, Abdon son of Micah, Shaphan the adjutant-general, and Asaiah the king's attendant, to go and seek guidance of the LORD, for himself and for all who still remained in Israel and Judah, about the contents of the book that had been discovered. 'Great is the wrath of the LORD,' he said, 'and it has been poured out upon us because our forefathers did not observe the command of the LORD and do all that is written in this book.'

22 So Hilkiah and those whom the king had instructed went to Huldah the 23 prophetess, wife of Shallum son of Tikvah,^a son of Hasrah, the keeper of 24 the wardrobe, and consulted her at her home in the second quarter of 25 Jerusalem. 'This is the word of the LORD the God of Israel,' she answered:
 26 'Say to the man who sent you to me, "This is the word of the LORD: I am bringing disaster on this place and its inhabitants, fulfilling all the imprecations recorded in the book which was read in the presence of the king of 27 Judah, because they have forsaken me and burnt sacrifices to other gods, provoking my anger with all the idols they have made with their own hands;
 therefore my wrath is poured out upon this place and will not be quenched." 28 This is what you shall say to the king of Judah who sent you to seek guidance of the LORD: "This is the word of the LORD the God of Israel: You have listened to my words and shown a willing heart, you humbled yourself before God when you heard what I said about this place and its inhabitants; you humbled yourself and rent your clothes and wept before me. Because of all this,^b I for my part have heard you. This is the very word 28 of the LORD. Therefore, I will gather you to your forefathers, and you will be gathered to your grave in peace; you will not live to see all the disaster which I am bringing upon this place and upon its inhabitants.'" So they brought back word to the king.

29 Then the king sent and called all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem 30 together, and went up to the house of the LORD; he took with him all the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the priests and the Levites, the whole population, high and low. There he read them the whole book 31 of the covenant discovered in the house of the LORD; and then, standing on the dais, the king made a covenant before the LORD to obey him and keep his commandments, his testimonies, and his statutes, with all his heart and soul, and so fulfil the terms of the covenant written in this book.
 32 Then he swore an oath with all who were present in Jerusalem to keep the covenant.^c Thereafter the inhabitants of Jerusalem did obey the covenant 33 of God, the God of their fathers. Josiah removed all abominable things from all the territories of the Israelites, so that everyone living in Israel might serve the LORD his God. As long as he lived they did not fail in their allegiance to the LORD the God of their fathers.

35 Josiah kept a Passover to the LORD in Jerusalem, and the passover lamb
 2 was killed on the fourteenth day of the first month. He appointed the priests to their offices and encouraged them to perform the service of the 3 house of the LORD. He said to the Levites, the teachers of Israel, who were dedicated to the LORD, 'Put the holy Ark in the house which Solomon son of David king of Israel built; it is not to be carried about on your shoulders.
 4 Now is the time to serve the LORD your God and his people Israel: prepare yourselves by families according to your divisions, following the written instructions of David king of Israel and those of Solomon his son; and stand in the Holy Place as representatives of the family groups of the lay people, your brothers, one division of Levites to each family group. Kill the passover lamb and hallow yourselves and prepare for your brothers to fulfil the word of the LORD given through Moses.'

Josiah contributed on behalf of all the lay people present thirty thousand small cattle, that is young rams and goats, for the Passover, in addition to three thousand bulls; all these were from the king's own resources. And his officers contributed willingly for the people, the priests, and the Levites. Hilkiah, Zechariah, and Jehiel, the chief officers of the house of God, gave on behalf of the priests two thousand six hundred small cattle for the Passover, in addition to three hundred bulls. And Conaniah, Shemaiah and Nethaneel his brothers, and Hashabiah, Jeiel, and Jozabad, the chiefs of the Levites, gave on behalf of the Levites for the Passover five thousand small cattle in addition to five hundred bulls.

When the service had been arranged, the priests stood in their places and the Levites in their divisions, according to the king's command. They killed the passover victim, and the priests flung the blood against the altar as the Levites flayed the animals. Then they removed the fat flesh,^a which they allocated to the people by groups of families for them to offer to the LORD, as prescribed in the book of Moses; and so with the bulls. They cooked the passover victim over the fire according to custom, and boiled the holy offerings in pots, cauldrons, and pans, and served them quickly to all the people. After that they made the necessary preparations for themselves and the priests, because the priests of Aaron's line were engaged till nightfall in offering whole-offerings and the fat portions; so the Levites made the necessary preparations for themselves and for the priests of Aaron's line. The singers, the sons of Asaph, were in their places according to the rules laid down by David and by Asaph, Heman, and Jeduthun, the king's seers. The door-keepers stood, each at his gate; there was no need for them to leave their posts, because their kinsmen the Levites had made the preparations for them.

In this manner all the service of the LORD was arranged that day, to keep the Passover and to offer whole-offerings on the altar of the LORD, according to the command of King Josiah. The people of Israel who were present kept the Passover at that time and the pilgrim-feast of Unleavened Bread for seven days. No Passover like it had been kept in Israel since the days of the prophet Samuel; none of the kings of Israel had ever kept such a Passover as Josiah kept, with the priests and Levites and all Judah and Israel who were present and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. In the eighteenth year of Josiah's reign this Passover was kept.

After Josiah had thus organized all the service of the house, Necho king of Egypt marched up to attack Carchemish on the Euphrates; and Josiah went out to confront him. But Necho sent envoys to him, saying, 'What do you want with me, king of Judah? I have no quarrel with you today, only with those with whom I am at war. God has purposed to speed me on my way, and God is on my side; do not stand in his way, or he will

22 destroy you.' Josiah would not be deflected from his purpose but insisted 23 on fighting; he refused to listen to Necho's words spoken at God's com-
 24 mand, and he sallied out to join battle in the vale of Megiddo. The archers
 25 shot at him; he was severely wounded and told his bodyguard to carry him
 26 off. They lifted him out of his chariot and carried him in his viceroy's 27 chariot to Jerusalem. There he died and was buried among the tombs of his ancestors, and all Judah and Jerusalem mourned for him. Jeremiah also made a lament for Josiah; and to this day the minstrels, both men and women, commemorate Josiah in their lamentations. Such laments have become traditional in Israel, and they are found in the written collections.

26 The other events of Josiah's reign, and his works of piety, all performed 27 in accordance with what is laid down in the law of the LORD, and his acts, from first to last, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel and Judah.

36 1^a THE PEOPLE OF THE LAND took Josiah's son Jehoahaz and made him
 2 king in place of his father in Jerusalem. He was twenty-three years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for three months.
 3 Then Necho king of Egypt deposed him and fined the country a hundred 4 talents of silver and one talent of gold, and made his brother Eliakim king over Judah and Jerusalem in his place, changing his name to Jehoiakim;
 5 he also carried away his brother Jehoahaz to Egypt. Jehoiakim was twenty-6 five years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for 7 eleven years. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD his God. So 8 Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon marched against him and put him in 9 fetters and took him to Babylon. He also removed to Babylon some of the 10 vessels of the house of the LORD and put them into his own palace there.
 11 The other events of Jehoiakim's reign, including the abominations he 12 committed, and everything of which he was held guilty, are recorded in the annals of the kings of Israel and Judah. He was succeeded by his son Jehoiachin.

9^b Jehoiachin was eight years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned in Jerusalem for three months and ten days. He did what was 10 wrong in the eyes of the LORD. At the turn of the year King Nebuchadnezzar sent and brought him to Babylon, together with the choicest vessels of the house of the LORD, and made his father's brother Zedekiah king over Judah and Jerusalem.

11 Zedekiah was twenty-one years old when he came to the throne, and he 12 reigned in Jerusalem for eleven years. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the LORD his God; he did not defer to the guidance of the prophet 13 Jeremiah, the spokesman of the LORD. He also rebelled against King Nebuchadnezzar, who had laid on him a solemn oath of allegiance. He was 14 obstinate and stubborn and refused to return to the LORD the God of Israel. All the chiefs of Judah and the priests and the people became more and more unfaithful, following all the abominable practices of the other nations; and they defiled the house of the LORD which he had hallowed in 15 Jerusalem. The LORD God of their fathers had warned them betimes through his messengers, for he took pity on his people and on his dwelling-place; but they never ceased to deride his messengers, scorn his words and scoff at his prophets, until the anger of the LORD burst out against his people and could not be appeased. So he brought against them the king of the Chaldeans, who put their young men to the sword in the sanctuary and spared neither young man nor maiden, neither the old nor the weak; God gave them all into his power. And he brought all the vessels of the house of God, great and small, and the treasures of the house of the LORD and of the king and his officers—all these he brought to Babylon. And they burnt down the house of God, razed the city wall of Jerusalem and burnt down all its stately mansions and all their precious possessions until everything was destroyed. Those who escaped the sword he took captive to Babylon, and they became slaves to him and his sons until the sovereignty passed to the Persians, while the land of Israel ran the full term of its sabbaths. All the time that it lay desolate it kept the sabbath rest, to complete seventy years in fulfilment of the word of the LORD by the prophet Jeremiah.

Now in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, so that the word of the LORD spoken through Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the LORD stirred up the heart of Cyrus king of Persia; and he issued a proclamation throughout his kingdom, both by word of mouth and in writing, to this effect:

This is the word of Cyrus king of Persia: The LORD the God of heaven has given me all the kingdoms of the earth, and he himself has charged me to build him a house at Jerusalem in Judah. To every man of his people now among you I say, the LORD his God be ^c with him, and let him go up.

The return of the exiles to Jerusalem

NOW IN THE FIRST YEAR OF CYRUS king of Persia, so that the word of the LORD spoken through Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the LORD stirred up the heart of Cyrus king of Persia;
 and he issued a proclamation throughout his kingdom, both by word of mouth and in writing, to this effect:

people now among you I say, God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem in Judah, and rebuild the house of the LORD the God of Israel, the God whose city is Jerusalem. And every remaining Jew, wherever he may be living, may claim aid from his neighbours in that place, silver and gold, goods^a and cattle, in addition to the voluntary offerings for the house of God in Jerusalem.

Thereupon the heads of families of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests and the Levites, answered the summons, all whom God had moved to go up to rebuild the house of the LORD in Jerusalem. Their neighbours all assisted them with gifts of every kind, silver^b and gold, goods^a and cattle and valuable gifts in abundance,^c in addition to any voluntary service. Moreover, Cyrus king of Persia produced the vessels of the house of the LORD which Nebuchadnezzar had removed from Jerusalem and placed in the temple of his god; and he handed them over into the charge of Mithredath the treasurer, who made an inventory of them for Sheshbazzar the ruler of Judah. This was the list: thirty gold basins, a thousand silver basins, twenty-nine vessels of various kinds, thirty golden bowls, four hundred and ten silver bowls of various types, and a thousand other vessels. The vessels of gold and silver amounted in all to five thousand four hundred; and Sheshbazzar took them all up to Jerusalem, when the exiles were brought back from Babylon.

Of the captives whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had taken into exile in Babylon, these were the people of the province who returned to Jerusalem and Judah, each to his own city, led by Zerubbabel, Jeshua,^e Nehemiah, Seraiah, Reelaiah, Mordecai, Bilshan, Mispar, Bigvai, Rehum and Baanah.

The temple-servitors and the descendants of Solomon's servants amounted to three hundred and ninety-two in all.

The following were those who returned from Tel-melah, Tel-harsha, Kerub, Addan, and Immer, but could not establish their father's family nor whether by descent they belonged to Israel: the family of Delaiah, the family of Tobiah, and the family of Nekoda, six hundred and fifty-two. 67 hundred singers, men and women. Their horses numbered seven hundred and thirty-six, their mules two hundred and forty-five, their camels four hundred and thirty-five, and their asses six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

68 When they came to the house of the LORD in Jerusalem, some of the heads of families volunteered to rebuild the house of God on its original 69 site. According to their resources they gave for the fabric fund a total of sixty-one thousand drachmas of gold, five thousand minas of silver, and one hundred priestly robes.

70 The priests, the Levites, and some of the people lived in Jerusalem and its suburbs;^a the singers, the door-keepers, and temple-servitors,^b and all other Israelites, lived in their own towns.

Worship restored and the temple rebuilt

3 WHEN THE SEVENTH MONTH CAME, the Israelites now being settled
2 in their towns, the people assembled as one man in Jerusalem. Then Jeshua son of Jozadak and his fellow-priests, and Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel and his kinsmen, set to work and built the altar of the God of Israel, 3 in order to offer upon it whole-offerings as prescribed in the law of Moses the man of God. They put the altar in place first, because they lived in 4 fear of the foreign population; and they offered upon it whole-offerings to the LORD, both morning and evening offerings. They kept the pilgrim-5 feast of Tabernacles^c as ordained, and offered whole-offerings every day in the number prescribed for each day, and, in addition to these, the regular 6 whole-offerings and the offerings for sabbaths,^d for new moons and for all the sacred seasons appointed by the LORD, and all voluntary offerings 7 brought to the LORD. The offering of whole-offerings began from the first day of the seventh month, although the foundation of the temple of the LORD had not yet been laid. They gave money for the masons and car-8 penters, and food and drink and oil for the Sidonians and the Tyrians to fetch cedar-wood from the Lebanon to the roadstead at Joppa, by licence from Cyrus king of Persia.

8 In the second year after their return to the house of God in Jerusalem, and in the second month, Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel and Jeshua son of Jozadak started work, aided by all their fellow-Israelites, the priests and the Levites and all who had returned from captivity to Jerusalem. They 9 appointed Levites from the age of twenty years and upwards to supervise the work of the house of the LORD. Jeshua with his sons and his kinsmen,

Kadmiel, Binnui, and Hodaviah,^a together assumed control of those responsible for the work on the house of God.^b

When the builders had laid the foundation of the temple of the LORD, the priests in their robes took their places with their trumpets, and the Levites, the sons of Asaph, with their cymbals, to praise the LORD in the manner prescribed by David king of Israel; and they chanted praises and thanksgiving to the LORD, singing, 'It is good to give thanks to the LORD,^c for his love towards Israel endures for ever.' All the people raised a great shout of praise to the LORD because the foundation of the house of the LORD had been laid. But many of the priests and Levites and heads of families, who were old enough to have seen the former house, wept and wailed aloud when they saw the foundation of this house laid, while many others shouted for joy at the top of their voice. The people could not distinguish the sound of the shout of joy from that of the weeping and wailing, so great was the shout which the people were raising, and the sound could be heard a long way off.

When the enemies of Judah and Benjamin heard that the returned exiles were building a temple to the LORD the God of Israel, they approached Zerubbabel and Jeshua^d and the heads of families and said to them, 'Let us join you in building, for like you we seek your God, and we have been sacrificing to him ever since the days of Esarhaddon king of Assyria, who brought us here.' But Zerubbabel and Jeshua and the rest of the heads of families in Israel said to them, 'The house which we are building for our God is no concern of yours. We alone will build it for the LORD the God of Israel, as his majesty Cyrus king of Persia commanded us.'

Then the people of the land caused the Jews to lose heart and made them afraid to continue building; and in order to defeat their purpose they bribed officials at court to act against them. This continued throughout the reign of Cyrus and into the reign of Darius king of Persia.

At the beginning of the reign of Ahasuerus, the people of the land brought a charge in writing against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem.

And in the days of Artaxerxes king of Persia, with the agreement of Mithredath, Tabeel and all his colleagues wrote to him; the letter was written in Aramaic and read aloud in Aramaic.

Rehum the high commissioner and Shimshai the secretary wrote a letter to King Artaxerxes concerning Jerusalem in the following terms:

From Rehum the high commissioner, Shimshai the secretary, and all their colleagues, the judges, the commissioners, the overseers, and chief officers, the men of Erech and Babylon, and the Elamites in Susa, and the other peoples whom the great and renowned Asnappar^f deported and settled in the city of Samaria and in the rest of the province of Beyond-Euphrates.

11 Here follows the text of their letter:

To King Artaxerxes from his servants, the men of the province of Beyond-Euphrates:

12 Be it known to Your Majesty that the Jews who left you and came to these parts have reached Jerusalem and are rebuilding that wicked and rebellious city; they have surveyed^a the foundations and are completing 13 the walls. Be it known to Your Majesty that, if their city is rebuilt and the walls are completed, they will pay neither general levy, nor poll-tax, 14 nor land-tax, and in the end^b they will harm the monarchy. Now, because we eat the king's salt and it is not right that we should witness the king's dishonour, therefore we have sent to inform Your Majesty, 15 in order that search may be made in the annals of your predecessors. You will discover by searching through the annals that this has been a rebellious city, harmful to the monarchy and its provinces, and that sedition has long been rife within its walls. That is why the city was laid waste.
16 We submit to Your Majesty that, if it is rebuilt and its walls are completed, the result will be that you will have no more footing in the province of Beyond-Euphrates.

17 The king sent this answer:

To Rehum the high commissioner, Shimshai the secretary, and all your colleagues resident in Samaria and in the rest of the province of 18 Beyond-Euphrates, greeting. The letter which you sent to me has now 19 been read clearly in my presence. I have given orders and search has been made, and it has been found that the city in question has a long history of revolt against the monarchy, and that rebellion and sedition 20 have been rife in it. Powerful kings have ruled in Jerusalem, exercising authority over the whole province of Beyond-Euphrates, and general 21 levy, poll-tax, and land-tax have been paid to them. Therefore, issue orders that these men must desist. This city is not to be rebuilt until a 22 decree to that effect is issued by me. See that you do not neglect your duty in this matter, lest more damage and harm be done to the monarchy.

23 When the text of the letter from King Artaxerxes was read before Rehum the high commissioner, Shimshai the secretary, and their colleagues, they 24 hurried to Jerusalem and forcibly compelled the Jews to stop work. From then onwards the work on the house of God in Jerusalem stopped; and it remained at a standstill till the second year of the reign of Darius king of Persia.

5 But the prophets Haggai^c and Zechariah grandson of Iddo upbraided the Jews in Judah and Jerusalem, prophesying in the name of the God of 2 Israel. Then Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel and Jeshua son of Jozadak at once began to rebuild the house of God in Jerusalem, and the prophets of 3 God were with them and supported them. Tattenai, governor of the province of Beyond-Euphrates, Shethar-bozenai, and their colleagues promptly came to them and said, 'Who issued a decree permitting you to 4 rebuild this house and complete its furnishings?' They also asked them for the names of the men engaged in the building. But the elders of the Jews were under God's watchful eye, and they were not prevented from continuing the work, until such time as a report should reach Darius and a royal letter should be received in answer.

Here follows the text of the letter sent by Tattenai, governor of the province of Beyond-Euphrates, Shethar-bozenai, and his colleagues, the inspectors in the province of Beyond-Euphrates, to King Darius. This is the written report that they sent:

To King Darius, all greetings. Be it known to Your Majesty that we went to the province of Judah and found the house of the great God being rebuilt by the Jewish elders,^a with massive stones and timbers laid in the walls. The work was being done thoroughly and was making good progress under their direction. We asked these elders who had issued a decree for the rebuilding of this house and the completion of the furnishings. We also asked them for their names, so that we might make a list of the leaders for your information. This was their reply: 'We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth, and we are rebuilding the house originally built many years ago; a great king of Israel built it and completed it. But because our forefathers provoked the anger of the God of heaven, he put them into the power of Nebuchadnezzar the Chaldaean, king of Babylon, who pulled down this house and carried the people captive to Babylon. However, Cyrus king of Babylon in the first year of his reign issued a decree that this house of God should be rebuilt. Moreover, there were gold and silver vessels of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar had taken from the temple in Jerusalem and put in the temple in Babylon; and these King Cyrus took out of the temple in Babylon. He gave them to a man named Sheshbazzar, whom he had appointed governor, and said to him, "Take these vessels; go and restore them to the temple in Jerusalem, and let the house of God there be rebuilt on its original site." Then this Sheshbazzar came and laid the foundation of the house of God in Jerusalem; and from that time until now the rebuilding has continued, but it is not yet finished.' Now, therefore, if it please Your Majesty, let search be made in the royal archives in Babylon, to discover whether a decree was issued by King Cyrus for the rebuilding of this house of God in Jerusalem. Then let the king send us his wishes in the matter.

Then King Darius issued an order, and search was made in the archives where the treasures were deposited in Babylon. But it was in Ecbatana, in the royal residence in the province of Media, that a scroll was found, on which was written the following memorandum:

In the first year of King Cyrus, the king issued this decree concerning the house of God in Jerusalem: Let the house be rebuilt as a place where sacrifices are offered and fire-offerings brought. Its height shall be sixty cubits and its breadth sixty cubits, with three courses of massive stones and one^b course of timber, the cost to be defrayed from the royal

5 treasury. Also the gold and silver vessels of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took out of the temple in Jerusalem and brought to Babylon, shall be restored; they shall all be taken back to the temple in Jerusalem, and restored each to its place in the house of God.

6 Then King Darius issued this order:^a

Now, Tattenai, governor of the province of Beyond-Euphrates, Shethar-bozenai, and your colleagues, the inspectors in the province of 7 Beyond-Euphrates, you are to keep away from the place, and to leave the governor of the Jews and their elders free to rebuild this house of 8 God; let them rebuild it on its original site. I also issue an order prescribing what you are to do for these elders of the Jews, so that the said house of God may be rebuilt. Their expenses are to be defrayed in full from the royal funds accruing from the taxes of the province of Beyond-9 Euphrates, so that the work may not be brought to a standstill. And let them have daily without fail whatever they want, young bulls, rams, or lambs as whole-offerings for the God of heaven, or wheat, salt, wine, or 10 oil, as the priests in Jerusalem demand, so that they may offer soothing sacrifices to the God of heaven, and pray for the life of the king and his 11 sons. Furthermore, I decree that, if any man tampers with this edict, a beam shall be pulled out of his house and he shall be fastened erect to 12 it and flogged; and, in addition, his house shall be forfeit.^b And may the God who made that place a dwelling for his Name overthrow any king or people that shall presume to tamper with this edict or to destroy this house of God in Jerusalem. I Darius have issued a decree; it is to be carried out to the letter.

13 Then Tattenai, governor of the province of Beyond-Euphrates, Shethar-bozenai, and their colleagues carried out to the letter the instructions which 14 King Darius had sent them, and the elders of the Jews went on with the rebuilding. As a result of the prophecies of Haggai the prophet and Zechariah grandson of Iddo they had good success and finished the rebuilding as commanded by the God of Israel and according to the decrees 15 of Cyrus and Darius;^c and the house was completed on the twenty-third^d day of the month Adar, in the sixth year of King Darius.

16 Then the people of Israel, the priests and the Levites and all the other exiles who had returned, celebrated the dedication of the house of God 17 with great rejoicing. For its dedication they offered one hundred bulls, two hundred rams, and four hundred lambs, and as a sin-offering for all Israel twelve he-goats, corresponding to the number of the tribes of Israel.
18 And they re-established the priests in their groups and the Levites in their divisions for the service of God in Jerusalem, as prescribed in the book of Moses.

19 On the fourteenth day of the first month the exiles who had returned 20 kept the Passover. The priests and the Levites, one and all, had purified themselves; all of them were ritually clean, and they killed the passover lamb for all the exiles who had returned, for their fellow-priests and for themselves. It was eaten by the Israelites who had come back from exile and by all who had separated themselves from the peoples of the land and their uncleanness and sought the LORD the God of Israel. And they kept the pilgrim-feast of Unleavened Bread for seven days with rejoicing; for the LORD had given them cause for joy by changing the disposition of the king of Assyria towards them, so that he encouraged them in the work of the house of God, the God of Israel.

Ezra's mission to Jerusalem

NOW AFTER THESE EVENTS, in the reign of Artaxerxes king of Persia, there came up from Babylon one Ezra son of Seraiah, son of Azariah, son of Hilkiyah, son of Shallum, son of Zadok, son ^a of Ahitub, son of Amariah, son of Azariah, son of Meraioth, son of Zeremiah, son of Uzzi, son of Bukki, son of Abishua, son of Phinehas, son of Eleazar, son of Aaron the chief priest. He was a scribe ^b learned in the law of Moses which the LORD the God of Israel had given them; and the king granted him all that he asked, for the hand of the LORD his God was upon him. In the seventh year of King Artaxerxes, other Israelites, priests, Levites, singers, door-keepers, and temple-servitors went up with him to Jerusalem; and they reached Jerusalem in the fifth month, in the seventh year of the king. On the first day of the first month Ezra fixed the day for departure from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month he arrived at Jerusalem, for the gracious hand of his God was upon him. For Ezra had devoted himself to the study and observance of the law of the LORD and to teaching statute and ordinance in Israel.

This is a copy of the royal letter which King Artaxerxes had given to Ezra the priest and scribe, a scribe versed in questions concerning the commandments and the statutes of the LORD laid upon Israel:

Artaxerxes, king of kings, to Ezra the priest and scribe learned in the law of the God of heaven:

This is my decision. I hereby issue a decree that any of the people of Israel or of its priests or Levites in my kingdom who volunteer to go to Jerusalem may go with you. You are sent by the king and his seven counsellors to find out how things stand in Judah and Jerusalem with regard to the law of your God with which you are entrusted. You are also to convey the silver and gold which the king and his counsellors have freely offered to the God of Israel whose dwelling is in Jerusalem, together with any silver and gold that you may find throughout the province of Babylon, and the voluntary offerings of the people and of the priests which they freely offer for the house of their God in Jerusalem. In pursuance of this decree you shall use the money solely for the purchase of bulls, rams, and lambs, and the proper grain-offerings and drink-offerings, to be offered on the altar in the house of your God in 18 Jerusalem. Further, should any silver and gold be left over, you and your 19 colleagues may use it at your discretion according to the will of your 20 God. The vessels which have been given you for the service of the house of your God you shall hand over to the God of Jerusalem; and if anything else should be required for the house of your God, which it may fall to you to provide, you may provide it out of the king's treasury.

21 And I, King Artaxerxes, issue an order to all treasurers in the province of Beyond-Euphrates that whatever is demanded of you by Ezra the 22 priest, a scribe learned in the law of the God of heaven, is to be supplied exactly, up to a hundred talents of silver, a hundred kor of wheat, a 23 hundred bath of wine, a hundred bath of oil, and salt without reckoning.
 Whatever is demanded by the God of heaven, let it be diligently carried out for the house of the God of heaven; otherwise wrath may fall upon 24 the realm of the king and his sons. We also make known to you that you have no authority to impose general levy, poll-tax, or land-tax on any of the priests, Levites, musicians, door-keepers, temple-servitors, or other servants of this house of God.

25 And you, Ezra, in accordance with the wisdom of your God with which you are entrusted, are to appoint arbitrators and judges to judge all your people in the province of Beyond-Euphrates, all who acknow-26 ledge the laws of your God; ^a and you and they are to instruct those who do not acknowledge them. Whoever will not obey the law of your God and the law of the king, let judgement be rigorously executed upon him, be it death, banishment, confiscation of property, or imprisonment.

27 Then Ezra said, ^b 'Blessed be the LORD the God of our fathers who has prompted the king thus to add glory to the house of the LORD in Jerusalem, 28 and has made the king and his counsellors and all his high officers well disposed towards me!'

So, knowing that the hand of the LORD my God was upon me, I took courage and assembled leading men out of Israel to go up with me.

8 These are the heads of families, as registered, family by family, of those 2 who went up with me from Babylon in the reign of King Artaxerxes: of the family of Phinehas, Gershom; of the family of Ithamar, Daniel; of the 3 family of David, Hattush son of ^c Shecaniah; of the family of Parosh, 4 Zechariah, and with him a hundred and fifty males in the register; of the family of Pahath-moab, Elihoenai son of Zerariah, and with him two 5 hundred males; of the family of Zattu, ^d Shecaniah son of Jahaziel, and 6 with him three hundred males; of the family of Adin, Ebed son of Jonathan,
 7 and with him fifty males; of the family of Elam, Isaiah son of Athaliah, 8 and with him seventy males; of the family of Shephatiah, Zebadiah son of 9 Michael, and with him eighty males; of the family of Joab, Obadiah son 10 of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen males; of the family of Bani, ^e Shelomith son of Josiphiah, and with him a hundred and sixty males;

^a to judge . . . your God: or all of them versed in the laws of your God, to judge all the people in the province of Beyond-Euphrates.

^b Then Ezra said: prob. rdg., cp. 1 Esdras 8. 25; Heb. om. ^c son of: prob. rdg.; Heb. of the family of. ^d of Zattu:

of the family of Bebai, Zechariah son of Bebai, and with him twenty-eight 11 males; of the family of Azgad, Johanan son of Hakkatan, and with him a hun-12 dred and ten males. The last were the family of Adonikam, and these were 13 their names: Eliphelet, Jeiel, and Shemaiah, and with them sixty males; and the family of Bigvai, Uthai and Zabbud, and with them seventy males.
 14

I assembled them by the river which flows toward Ahava; and we en-15 camped there three days. When I reviewed the people and the priests, I found no Levite there. So I sent Eliezer, Ariel, Shemaiah, Elnathan, Jarib, 16 Elnathan, Nathan, Zechariah, and Meshullam, prominent men, and Joarib and Elnathan, men of discretion, with instructions to go to Iddo, 17 the chief man of the settlement at Casiphia; and I gave them a message for him and his kinsmen, the temple-servitors there, asking for servitors for the house of our God to be sent to us. And, because the gracious hand of 18 our God was upon us, they let us have Sherebiah, a man of discretion, of the family of Mahli son of Levi, son of Israel, together with his sons and kinsmen, eighteen men; also Hashabiah, together with Isaiah of the family 19 of Merari, his kinsmen and their sons, twenty men; besides two hundred 20 and twenty temple-servitors (this was an order instituted by David and his officers to assist the Levites). These were all indicated by name.

Then I proclaimed a fast there by the river Ahava, so that we might 21 mortify ourselves before our God and ask from him a safe journey for our-22 selves, our dependants, and all our possessions. For I was ashamed to ask the king for an escort of soldiers and horsemen to help us against enemies on the way, because we had said to the king, 'The hand of our God is upon all who seek him, working their good; but his fierce anger is on all who forsake him.' So we fasted and asked our God for a safe journey, and he 23 answered our prayer.

Then I separated twelve of the chiefs of the priests, together with ^a 24 Sherebiah and Hashabiah and ten of their kinsmen, and handed over to 25 them the silver and gold and the vessels which had been set aside by the king, his counsellors and his officers and all the Israelites who were present, as their contribution to the house of our God. I handed over to them six 26 hundred and fifty talents of silver, a hundred silver vessels weighing two talents, a hundred talents of gold, twenty golden bowls worth a thousand 27 drachmas, and two vessels of a fine red copper, ^b precious as gold. And I 28 said to the men, 'You are dedicated to the LORD, and the vessels too are sacred; the silver and gold are a voluntary offering to the LORD the God of your fathers. Watch over them and guard them, until you hand them over 29 in the presence of the chiefs of the priests and the Levites and the heads of families of Israel in Jerusalem, in the rooms of the house of the LORD.'

So the priests and Levites received the consignment of silver and gold 30 and vessels, to be taken to the house of our God in Jerusalem; and on the 31 twelfth day of the first month we left the river Ahava bound for Jerusalem.
 The hand of our God was upon us, and he saved us from enemy attack and from ambush on the way. When we arrived at Jerusalem, we rested for 32 three days. And on the fourth day the silver and gold and the vessels were 33 deposited in the house of our God in the charge of Meremoth son of Uriah the priest, who had with him Eleazar son of Phinehas, and they had with them the Levites Jozabad son of Jeshua and Noadiah son of Binnui. Everything was checked as it was handed over, and at the same time a written record was made of the whole consignment. Then those who had come home from captivity, the exiles who had returned, offered as whole-offerings to the God of Israel twelve bulls for all Israel, ninety-six rams and seventy-two^a lambs, with twelve he-goats as a sin-offering; all these were offered as a whole-offering to the LORD. They also delivered the king's commission to the royal satraps and governors in the province of Beyond-Euphrates; and these gave support to the people and the house of God.

9 When all this had been done, some of the leaders approached me and said, 'The people of Israel, including priests and Levites, have not kept themselves apart from the foreign population and from the abominable practices of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites. They have taken women of these nations as wives for themselves and their sons, so that the holy race has become mixed with the foreign population; and the leaders and magistrates have been the chief offenders.' When I heard this news, I rent my robe and mantle, and tore my hair and my beard, and I sat dumbfounded; and all who went in fear of the words of the God of Israel rallied to me because of the offence of these exiles. I sat there dumbfounded till the evening sacrifice.

5 Then, at the evening sacrifice, I rose from my humiliation and, in my rent robe and mantle, I knelt down and spread out my hands to the LORD my God and said, 'O my God, I am humiliated, I am ashamed to lift my face to thee, my God; for we are sunk in our iniquities, and our guilt is so great that it reaches high heaven. From the days of our fathers down to this present day our guilt has been great. For our iniquities we, our kings, and our priests have been subject to death, captivity, pillage, and shameful humiliation at the hands of foreign kings, and such is our present plight. 8 But now, for a brief moment, the LORD our God has been gracious to us, leaving us some survivors and giving us a foothold in his holy place. He has brought light to our eyes again and given us some chance to renew our lives in our slavery. For slaves we are; nevertheless, our God has not forsaken us in our slavery, but has made the kings of Persia so well disposed towards us as to give us the means of renewal, so that we may repair the house of our God and rebuild its ruins, and to give us a wall of defence in^b Judah and Jerusalem. Now, O our God, what are we to say after this? 11 For we have neglected the commands which thou gavest through thy servants the prophets, when thou saidst, "The land which you are entering and will possess is a polluted land, polluted by the foreign population with their abominable practices, which have made it unclean from end to end. 12 Therefore, do not give your daughters in marriage to their sons, and do not marry your sons to their daughters, and never seek their welfare or prosperity. Thus you will be strong and enjoy the good things of the land, and pass it on to your children as an everlasting possession." Now, after all that we have suffered for our evil deeds and for our great guilt—although thou, our God, hast punished us less than our iniquities deserved and hast allowed us to survive as now we do—shall we again disobey thy commands and join in marriage with peoples who indulge in such abominable practices? Would not thy anger against us be unrelenting, until no remnant, no survivor was left? O LORD God of Israel, thou art righteous; now as before, we are only a remnant that has survived. Look upon us, guilty as we are in thy sight; for because of our guilt none of us can stand in thy presence.'

While Ezra was praying and making confession, prostrate in tears before the house of God, a very great crowd of Israelites assembled round him, men, women, and children, and they all wept bitterly. Then Shecaniah son of Jehiel, one of the family of Elam, spoke up and said to Ezra, 'We have committed an offence against our God in marrying foreign wives, daughters of the foreign population. But in spite of this, there is still hope for Israel. Now, therefore, let us pledge ourselves to our God to dismiss all these women and their brood, according to your advice, my lord, and the advice of those who go in fear of the command of our God; and let us act as the law prescribes. Up now, the task is yours, and we will support you. Take courage and act.'

Ezra stood up and made the chiefs of the priests, the Levites, and all the Israelites swear to do as had been said; and they took the oath. Then Ezra left his place in front of the house of God and went to the room of Jehohanan grandson of Eliashib and lodged^a there; he neither ate bread nor drank water, for he was mourning for the offence committed by the exiles who had returned. Next, there was issued throughout Judah and Jerusalem a proclamation that all the exiles should assemble in Jerusalem, and that if anyone did not arrive within three days, it should be within the discretion of the chief officers and the elders to confiscate all his property and to exclude him from the community of the exiles. So all the men of Judah and Benjamin assembled in Jerusalem within the three days; and on the twentieth day of the ninth month the people all sat in the forecourt of the house of God, trembling with apprehension and shivering in the heavy rain. Ezra the priest stood up and said, 'You have committed an offence in marrying foreign wives and have added to Israel's guilt. Make your confession now to the LORD the God of your fathers and do his will, and separate yourselves from the foreign population and from your foreign wives.' Then all the assembled people shouted in reply, 'Yes; we must do what you say. But there is a great crowd of us here, and it is the rainy season; we cannot go on standing out here in the open. Besides, this business will not be finished in one day or even two, because we have committed so grave an offence in this matter. Let our leading men act for the whole assembly, and let all in our cities who have married foreign women present themselves at appointed times, each man with the elders and judges of his own city, until God's anger against us on this account is averted.' Only Jonathan son of Asahel and Jahzeiah son of Tikvah, supported by Meshulam and Shabbethai the Levite, opposed this.

^a Prob. rdg., cp. 1 Esdras 9. 2; Heb. went.

16 So the exiles acted as agreed, and Ezra the priest selected ^a certain men, heads of households representing their families, all of them designated by name. They began their formal inquiry into the matter on the first day of 17 the tenth month, and by the first day of the first month they had finished their inquiry into all the marriages with foreign women.

18 Among the members of priestly families who had married foreign women were found Maaseiah, Eliezer, Jarib, and Gedaliah of the family of 19 Jeshua son of Jozadak and his brothers. They pledged themselves to dismiss their wives, and they brought a ram from the flock as a guilt-offering 20 21 for their sins. Of the family of Immer: Hanani and Zebadiah. Of the family
22 of Harim: Maaseiah, Elijah, Shemaiah, Jehiel and Uziah. Of the family of Pashhur: Elioenai, Maaseiah, Ishmael, Nethaneel, Jozabad and Elasa.

23 Of the Levites: Jozabad, Shimei, Kelaiah (that is Kelita), Pethahiah, 24 Judah and Eliezer. Of the singers: Eliashib. Of the door-keepers: Shallum, Telem and Uri.

25 And of Israel: of the family of Parosh: Ramiah, Izziah, Malchiah, 26 Mijamin, Eleazar, Malchiah and Benaiah. Of the family of Elam: Mattaniah, Zechariah, Jehiel, Abdi, Jeremoth and Elijah. Of the family of

THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAH

Nehemiah's commission

THE NARRATIVE OF NEHEMIAH son of Hacaliah. 1

In the month Kislev in the twentieth year, when I was in Susa the capital city, it happened that one of my brothers, Hanani, arrived 2 with some others from Judah; and I asked them about Jerusalem and about the Jews, the families still remaining of those who survived the captivity. 3
They told me that those still remaining in the province who had survived the captivity were facing great trouble and reproach; the wall of Jerusalem 4 was broken down and the gates had been destroyed by fire. When I heard this news, I sat down and wept; I mourned for some days, fasting and 5 praying to the God of heaven. This was my prayer: 'O LORD God of heaven, O great and terrible God who faithfully keepest covenant with those who 6 love thee and observe thy commandments, let thy ear be attentive and thine eyes open, to hear my humble prayer which I make to thee day and night on behalf of thy servants the sons of Israel. I confess the sins which we Israelites have all committed against thee, and of which I and my father's 7 house are also guilty. We have wronged thee and have not observed the commandments, statutes, and rules which thou didst enjoin upon thy 8 servant Moses. Remember what thou didst impress upon him in these words: "If you are unfaithful, I will disperse you among the nations; but 9 if you return to me and observe my commandments and fulfil them, I will gather your children who have been scattered to the ends of the earth and will bring them home to the place which I have chosen as a dwelling for my Name." They are thy servants and thy people, whom thou hast redeemed 10 with thy great might and thy strong hand. O Lord, let thy ear be attentive 11 to my humble prayer, and to the prayer of thy servants who delight to revere thy name. Grant me good success this day, and put it into this man's heart to show me kindness.'

Now I was the king's cupbearer, and one day, in the month Nisan, in the 2 twentieth year of King Artaxerxes, when his wine was ready, I took it up and handed it to the king, and as I stood before him I was feeling very unhappy. He said to me, 'Why do you look so unhappy? You are not ill; 2 it can be nothing but unhappiness.' I was much afraid and answered, 'The 3 king will live for ever. But how can I help looking unhappy when the city where my forefathers are buried lies waste and its gates are burnt?' 'What 4 are you asking of me?' said the king. I prayed to the God of heaven, and then I answered, 'If it please your majesty, and if I enjoy your favour, I 5 beg you to send me to Judah, to the city where my forefathers are buried, so that I may rebuild it.' The king, with the queen consort sitting beside 6 him, asked me, 'How long will the journey last, and when will you return?' Then the king approved the request and let me go, and I told him how long 7 I should be. Then I said to the king, 'If it please your majesty, let letters be given me for the governors in the province of Beyond-Euphrates with 8 orders to grant me all the help I need for my journey to Judah. Let me have also a letter for Asaph, the keeper of your royal forests, instructing him to supply me with timber to make beams for the gates of the citadel, which adjoins the palace, and for the city wall, and for the palace which I shall occupy.' The king granted my requests, for the gracious hand of my God

 9 was upon me. I came in due course to the governors in the province of Beyond-Euphrates and presented to them the king's letters; the king had 10 given me an escort of army officers with cavalry. But when Sanballat the Horonite and the slave Tobiah, an Ammonite, heard this, they were much vexed that someone should have come to promote the interests of the Israelites.

The walls of Jerusalem rebuilt

11 12 WHEN I ARRIVED IN JERUSALEM, I waited three days. Then I set out by night, taking a few men with me; but I told no one what my God was prompting me to do for Jerusalem. I had no beast with me except 13 the one on which I myself rode. I went out by night through the Valley Gate towards the Dragon Spring and the Dung Gate, and I inspected the places where the walls of Jerusalem had been broken down and her gates
 14 burnt. Then I passed on to the Fountain Gate and the King's Pool; but there was no room for me to ride through. I went up the valley in the night
 15 and inspected the city wall; then I re-entered the city by the Valley Gate. So I arrived back without the magistrates knowing where I had been or 16 what I was doing. I had not yet told the Jews, the priests, the nobles, the magistrates, or any of those who would be responsible for the work.
 17 Then I said to them, 'You see our wretched plight. Jerusalem lies in ruins, its gates destroyed by fire. Come, let us rebuild the wall of Jerusalem and be rid of the reproach.' I told them how the gracious hand of my God had been upon me and also what the king had said to me. They replied, 'Let us start the rebuilding.' So they set about the work vigorously and to good purpose.
 19 But when Sanballat the Horonite, Tobiah the Ammonite slave, and Geshem the Arab heard of it, they jeered at us, asking contemptuously,
 20 'What is this you are doing? Is this a rebellion against the king?' But I answered them, 'The God of heaven will give us success. We, his servants, are making a start with the rebuilding. You have no stake, or claim, or traditional right in Jerusalem.'
 3 Eliashib the high priest and his fellow-priests started work and rebuilt the Sheep Gate. They laid its beams^a and set its doors in place; they carried the work as far as the Tower of the Hundred, as far as the Tower of Hananel,

^a laid its beams: prob. rdg.; Heb. consecrated it.

and consecrated it. Next to Eliashib the men of Jericho worked; and next 2 to them Zaccur son of Imri.

The Fish Gate was built by the sons of Hassenaah; they laid its tie- 3 beams and set its doors in place with their bolts and bars. Next to them 4 Meremoth son of Uriah, son of Hakkoz, repaired his section; next to them
Meshullam son of Berechiah, son of Meshezabel; next to them Zadok son of Baana did the repairs; and next again the men of Tekoa did the repairs, 5 but their nobles would not demean themselves to serve their governor.

The Jeshanah Gate^a was repaired by Joiada son of Paseah and Meshul- 6 lam son of Besodeiah; they laid its tie-beams and set its doors in place with their bolts and bars. Next to them Melatiah the Gibeonite and Jadon the 7 Meronothite, the men of Gibeon and Mizpah, did the repairs as far as the seat of the governor of the province of Beyond-Euphrates. Next to them 8 Uzziel son of Harhailah, a goldsmith, did the repairs, and next Hananiah, a perfumer; they reconstructed Jerusalem as far as the Broad Wall. Next 9 to them Rephaiah son of Hur, ruler of half the district of Jerusalem, did the repairs. Next to them Jedaiah son of Harumaph did the repairs opposite 10 his own house; and next Hattush son of Hashabniah. Malchiah son of Harim and Hasshub son of Pahath-moab repaired a second section includ- 11
ing the Tower of the Ovens.^b Next to them Shallum son of Hallohes, ruler of half the district of Jerusalem, did the repairs with the help of his 12 daughters.

The Valley Gate was repaired by Hanun and the inhabitants of Zanoah; 13 they rebuilt it and set its doors in place with their bolts and bars, and they repaired a thousand cubits of the wall as far as the Dung Gate. The Dung 14 Gate itself was repaired by Malchiah son of Rechab, ruler of the district of Beth-hakkerem; he rebuilt^c it and set its doors in place with their bolts and bars. The Fountain Gate was repaired by Shallun son of Col-hozeh, 15 ruler of the district of Mizpah; he rebuilt^c it and roofed it and set its doors in place with their bolts and bars; and he built the wall of the Pool of Shelah next to the king's garden and onwards as far as the steps leading down from the City of David.

After him Nehemiah son of Azbuk, ruler of half the district of Beth-zur, 16 did the repairs as far as a point opposite the burial-place of David, as far as the artificial pool and the House of the Heroes.^d After him the Levites 17 did the repairs: Rehum son of Bani and next to him Hashabiah, ruler of half the district of Keilah, did the repairs for his district. After him their 18 kinsmen did the repairs: Binnui son of Henadad, ruler of half the district of Keilah; next to him Ezer son of Jeshua, ruler of Mizpah, repaired a 19 second section opposite the point at which the ascent meets the escarpment; after him Baruch son of Zabbai repaired a second section, from the 20 escarpment to the door of the house of Eliashib the high priest. After him 21 Meremoth son of Uriah, son of Hakkoz, repaired a second section, from the door of the house of Eliashib to the end of the house of Eliashib.

After him the priests of the neighbourhood of Jerusalem did the repairs. 22
Next Benjamin and Hasshub did the repairs opposite their own house; 23 and next Azariah son of Maaseiah, son of Ananiah, did the repairs beside 24 his house. After him Binnui son of Henadad repaired a second section, 25 from the house of Azariah as far as the escarpment and the corner. Palal son of Uzai worked opposite the escarpment and the upper tower which projects from the king's house and belongs to the court of the guard. After 26 him Pedaiah son of Parosh^a worked as far as a point on the east opposite 27 the Water Gate and the projecting tower. Next the men of Tekoa repaired a second section, from a point opposite the great projecting tower as far as the wall of Ophel.

28 Above the Horse Gate the priests did the repairs opposite their own 29 houses. After them Zadok son of Immer did the repairs opposite his own house; after him Shemaiah son of Shecaniah, the keeper of the East Gate, 30 did the repairs. After him Hananiah son of Shelemiah and Hanun, sixth son of Zalaph, repaired a second section. After him Meshullam son of 31 Berechiah did the repairs opposite his room. After him Malchiah, a goldsmith, did the repairs as far as the house of the temple-servitors and the merchants, opposite the Mustering Gate, as far as the roof-chamber at 32 the corner. Between the roof-chamber at the corner and the Sheep Gate the goldsmiths and merchants did the repairs.

4 WHEN SANBALLAT HEARD that we were rebuilding the wall, he was very 2 indignant; in his anger he jeered at the Jews and said in front of his companions and of the garrison in Samaria, 'What do these feeble Jews think they are doing? Do they mean to reconstruct the place? Do they hope to offer sacrifice and finish the work in a day? Can they make stones again out 3 of heaps of rubble, and burnt at that?' Tobiah the Ammonite, who was beside him, said, 'Whatever it is they are building, if a fox climbs up their stone walls, it will break them down.'

4 Hear us, our God, for they treat us with contempt. Turn back their reproach upon their own heads and let them become objects of contempt 5 in a land of captivity. Do not condone their guilt or let their sin be struck off the record, for they have openly provoked the builders.

6 We built up the wall until it was continuous all round up to half its 7 height; and the people worked with a will. But when Sanballat and Tobiah, the Arabs and Ammonites and Ashdodites, heard that the new work on the walls of Jerusalem had made progress and that the filling of the breaches 8 had begun, they were very angry; and they all banded together to come and 9 attack Jerusalem and to create confusion. So we prayed to our God, and posted a guard day and night against them.

10 But the men of Judah said, 'The labourers' strength has failed, and there is too much rubble; we shall never be able to rebuild the wall by ourselves.' 11 And our adversaries said, 'Before they know it or see anything, we shall be upon them and kill them, and so put an end to the work.' When the Jews 12 who lived among them came in to the city, they warned us many times that they would gather from every place where they lived to attack us, 13 and that they would station themselves on the lowest levels below the wall, on patches of open ground. Accordingly I posted my people by families,

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds and the temple-servitors lodged on Ophel (cp. 11. 21).

armed with swords, spears, and bows. Then I surveyed the position 14 and at once addressed the nobles, the magistrates, and all the people.
'Do not be afraid of them', I said. 'Remember the Lord, great and terrible, and fight for your brothers, your sons and daughters, your wives and your homes.' Our enemies heard that everything was known to us, and 15 that God had frustrated their plans; and we all returned to our work on the wall.

From that day forward half the men under me were engaged in the 16 actual building, while the other half stood by holding their spears, shields, and bows, and wearing coats of mail; and officers supervised all the people of Judah who were engaged on the wall. The porters carrying the loads had 17 one hand on the load and a weapon in the other. The builders had their 18 swords attached to their belts as they built; the trumpeter was beside me.
I addressed the nobles, the magistrates, and all the people: 'The work is 19 great and covers much ground', I said. 'We are isolated on the wall, each man at some distance from his neighbour. Wherever the trumpet sounds, 20 rally to us there, and our God will fight for us.' So we continued with the 21 work, half the men holding the spears, from daybreak until the stars came out. At the same time I had said to the people, 'Let every man and his 22 servant pass the night in Jerusalem, to act as a guard for us by night and a working party by day.' So neither I nor my kinsmen nor the men under 23 me nor my bodyguard ever took off our clothes, each keeping his right hand on^a his weapon.

THERE CAME A TIME when the common people, both men and women, 5 raised a great outcry against their fellow-Jews. Some complained that they 2 were giving their sons and daughters as pledges^b for food to keep themselves alive; others that they were mortgaging their fields, vineyards, and 3 houses to buy corn in the famine; others again that they were borrowing 4 money on their fields and vineyards to pay the king's tax. 'But', they said, 5
'our bodily needs are the same as other people's, our children are as good as theirs; yet here we are, forcing our sons and daughters to become slaves.
Some of our daughters are already enslaved, and there is nothing we can do, because our fields and vineyards now belong to others.' I was very 6 angry when I heard their outcry and the story they told. I mastered my 7 feelings and reasoned with the nobles and the magistrates. I said to them,
'You are holding your fellow-Jews as pledges for debt.' I rebuked them severely and said, 'As far as we have been able, we have bought back our 8 fellow-Jews who had been sold to other nations; but you are now selling your own fellow-countrymen, and they will have to be bought back by us!'
They were silent and had not a word to say. I went on, 'What you are doing 9 is wrong. You ought to live so much in the fear of God that you are above reproach in the eyes of the nations who are our enemies. Speaking for 10 myself, I and my kinsmen and the men under me are advancing them money and corn. Let us give up this taking of persons as pledges for debt. Give 11 back today to your debtors their fields and vineyards, their olive-groves

^a keeping his right hand on: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure. ^b that they . . . as pledges:

and houses, as well as the income^a in money, and in corn, new wine, and 12 oil.' 'We will give them back', they promised, 'and exact nothing more.
 We will do what you say.' So, summoning the priests, I put the offenders 13 on oath to do as they had promised. Then I shook out the fold of my robe and said, 'So may God shake out from his house and from his property every man who does not fulfil this promise. May he be shaken out like this and emptied!' And all the assembled people said 'Amen' and praised the LORD. And they did as they had promised.

14 Moreover, from the time when I was appointed governor in the land of Judah, from the twentieth to the thirty-second year of King Artaxerxes, a period of twelve years, neither I nor my kinsmen drew the governor's 15 allowance of food. Former governors had laid a heavy burden on the people, exacting from them a daily toll^b of bread and wine to the value of 16 forty shekels of silver. Further, the men under them had tyrannized over the people; but, for fear of God, I did not behave like this. I also put all my 17 energy into the work on this wall, and I acquired no land; and all my men were gathered there for the work. Also I had as guests at my table a hundred and fifty Jews, including the magistrates, as well as men who came to us 18 from the surrounding nations. The provision which had to be made each day was an ox and six prime sheep; fowls also were prepared for me, and every ten days skins of wine in abundance. Yet, in spite of all this, I did not draw the governor's allowance, because the people were so heavily bur-19 dened. Remember for my good, O God, all that I have done for this people.

6 When the news came to Sanballat, Tobiah, Geshem the Arab, and the rest of our enemies, that I had rebuilt the wall and that not a single breach 2 remained in it, although I had not yet set up the doors in the gates, Sanballat and Geshem sent me an invitation to come and confer with them at Hakkephirim in the plain of Ono; this was a ruse on their part to do me 3 harm. So I sent messengers to them with this reply: 'I have important work on my hands at the moment; I cannot come down. Why should the 4 work be brought to a standstill while I leave it and come down to you?' They sent me a similar invitation four times, and each time I gave them the same 5 answer. On a fifth occasion Sanballat made a similar approach, but this 6 time his messenger came with an open letter. It ran as follows: 'It is reported among the nations—and Gashmu^c confirms it—that you and the Jews are plotting rebellion, and it is for this reason that you are rebuilding 7 the wall, and—so the report goes—that you yourself want to be king. You are also said to have put up prophets to proclaim in Jerusalem that Judah has a king, meaning yourself. The king will certainly hear of this. So come 8 at once and let us talk the matter over.' Here is the reply I sent: 'No such thing as you allege has taken place; you have made up the whole story.' 9 They were all trying to intimidate us, in the hope that we should then relax our efforts and that the work would never be finished. So I applied myself 10 to it with greater energy.

One day I went to the house of Shemaiah son of Delaiah, son of Mehet-abel, for he was confined to his house. He said, 'Let us meet in the house of ^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. hundredth.

^b a daily toll: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure

^c Geshem in 2. 19 and 6. 1, 2.

God, within the sanctuary, and let us shut the doors, for they are coming to kill you—they are coming to kill you by night.’ But I said, ‘Should a man like me run away? And can a man like me go into the sanctuary and survive?^a I will not go in.’ Then it dawned on me: God had not sent him. His prophecy aimed at harming me, and Tobiah and Sanballat had bribed him to utter it. He had been bribed to frighten me into compliance and into committing sin; then they could give me a bad name and discredit me. Remember Tobiah and Sanballat, O God, for what they have done, and also the prophetess Noadiah and all the other prophets who have tried to intimidate me.

On the twenty-fifth day of the month Elul the wall was finished; it had taken fifty-two days. When our enemies heard of it, and all the surrounding nations saw it,^b they thought it a very wonderful achievement,^c and they recognized that this work had been accomplished by the help of our God.

All this time the nobles in Judah were sending many letters to Tobiah, and receiving replies from him. For many in Judah were in league with him, because he was a son-in-law of Shecaniah son of Arah, and his son Jehohanan had married a daughter of Meshullam son of Berechiah. They were always praising^d him in my presence and repeating to him what I said. Tobiah also wrote to me to intimidate me.

NOW WHEN THE WALL HAD BEEN REBUILT, and I had set the doors in place and the gate-keepers^e had been appointed, I gave the charge of Jerusalem to my brother Hanani, and to Hananiah, the governor of the citadel, for he was trustworthy and God-fearing above other men. And I said to them, ‘The entrances to Jerusalem are not to be left open during the heat of the day; the gates must be kept shut and barred while the gate-keepers are standing at ease. Appoint guards from among the inhabitants of Jerusalem, some on sentry-duty and others posted in front of their own homes.’

The city was large and spacious; there were few people in it and no houses had yet been rebuilt. Then God prompted me to assemble the nobles, the magistrates, and the people, to be enrolled family by family. And I found the book of the genealogies of those who had been the first to come back. This is what I found written in it: Of the captives whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had taken into exile, these are the people of the province who have returned to Jerusalem and Judah, each to his own town, led by Zerubbabel, Jeshua,^g Nehemiah, Azariah, Raamiah, Nahamani, Mordecai, Bilshan, Mispereth, Bigvai, Nehum and Baanah.

The following were those who returned from Tel-melah, Tel-harsha, Kerub, Addon, and Immer, but could not establish their father's family nor whether by descent they belonged to Israel: the family of Delaiah, the family of Tobiah, the family of Nekoda, six hundred and forty-two. Also of the priests: the family of Hobaiah, the family of Hakkoz, and the family of Barzillai who had married a daughter of Barzillai the Gileadite and went by his^a name. These searched for their names among those enrolled in the genealogies, but they could not be found; they were disqualified for the priesthood as unclean, and the governor forbade them to partake of the most sacred food until there should be a priest able to consult the Urim and the Thummim.

The whole assembled people numbered forty-two thousand three hundred and sixty, apart from their slaves, male and female, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred and thirty-seven; and they had two hundred and forty-five singers, men and women. Their horses numbered seven hundred and thirty-six, their mules two hundred and forty-five, their camels four hundred and thirty-five, and their asses six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

Some of the heads of families gave contributions for the work. The governor gave to the treasury a thousand drachmas of gold, fifty tossing-bowls, and five hundred and thirty priestly robes. Some of the heads of families gave for the fabric fund twenty thousand drachmas of gold and two thousand two hundred minas of silver. What the rest of the people gave was twenty thousand drachmas of gold, two thousand minas of silver, and sixty-seven priestly robes.

The priests, the Levites, and some of the people lived in Jerusalem and its suburbs;^b the door-keepers, the singers, the temple-servitors, and all other Israelites, lived in their own towns.

The law read by Ezra and the covenant renewed

WHEN THE SEVENTH MONTH CAME, and the Israelites were now settled in their towns, the people assembled as one man in the square in front of the Water Gate, and Ezra the scribe^c was asked to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the LORD had enjoined upon Israel. On the first day of the seventh month, Ezra the priest brought the law before the assembly, every man and woman, and all who were capable of understanding what they heard.^d He read from it, facing the square in front of the Water Gate, from early morning till noon, in the presence of the men and the women, and those who could understand;^e all the people listened attentively to the book of the law. Ezra the scribe stood on a wooden platform made for the purpose,^f and beside him stood Mattithiah, Shema, Anaiah, Uriah, Hilkiyah, and Maaseiah on his right hand; and on his left

5 Pedaiah, Mishael, Malchiah, Hashum, Hashbaddanah, Zechariah and 6 Meshullam. Ezra opened the book in the sight of all the people, for he was standing above them; and when he opened it, they all stood. Ezra blessed the LORD, the great God, and all the people raised their hands and answered,
 'Amen, Amen'; and they bowed their heads and prostrated themselves 7 humbly before the LORD. Jeshua, Bani, Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shab-bethai, Hodiah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, the Levites,^a expounded the law to the people while they remained in their 8 places. They read from the book of the law of God clearly, made its sense plain and gave instruction in what was read.

9 Then Nehemiah the governor and Ezra the priest and scribe, and the Levites who instructed the people, said to them all, 'This day is holy to the LORD your God; do not mourn or weep.' For all the people had been 10 weeping while they listened to the words of the law. Then he said to them,
 'You may go now; refresh yourselves with rich food and sweet drinks, and send a share to all who cannot provide for themselves; for this day is holy to our Lord. Let there be no sadness, for joy in the LORD is your strength.' 11 The Levites silenced the people, saying, 'Be quiet, for this day is holy;
 12 let there be no sadness.' So all the people went away to eat and to drink, to send shares to others and to celebrate the day with great rejoicing, because they had understood what had been explained to them.

13 On the second day the heads of families of the whole people, with the priests and the Levites, assembled before Ezra the scribe to study the law.
 14 And they found written in the law that the LORD had given commandment through Moses that the Israelites should live in arbours ^b during the feast 15 of the seventh month, and that they should make proclamation throughout all their cities and in Jerusalem: 'Go out into the hills and fetch branches 16 of olive and wild olive, myrtle and palm, and other leafy boughs to make arbours, as prescribed.' So the people went out and fetched them and made arbours for themselves, each on his own roof, and in their courts and in the courts of the house of God, and in the square at the Water Gate and the 17 square at the Ephraim Gate. And the whole community of those who had returned from the captivity made arbours and lived in them, a thing that the Israelites had not done from the days of Joshua son of Nun to that day; 18 and there was very great rejoicing. And day by day, from the first day to the last, the book of the law of God was read. They kept the feast for seven days, and on the eighth day there was a closing ceremony, according to the rule.

9 ON THE TWENTY-FOURTH DAY of this month the Israelites assembled 2 for a fast, clothed in sackcloth and with earth on their heads. Those who were of Israelite descent separated themselves from all the foreigners; they took their places and confessed their sins and the iniquities of their fore-3 fathers. Then they stood up in their places, and the book of the law of the LORD their God was read for one fourth of the day, and for another fourth 4 they confessed and did obeisance to the LORD their God. Upon the steps assigned to the Levites stood Jeshua, Bani, Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni,

Sherebiah, Bani, and Kenani, and they cried aloud to the LORD their God. Then the Levites, Jeshua, Kadmiel, Bani, Hashabniah, Sherebiah, Hodiah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah, said, 'Stand up and bless the LORD your God, saying: From everlasting to everlasting thy glorious name is blessed^a and exalted above all blessing and praise. Thou alone art the LORD; thou hast made heaven, the highest heaven with all its host, the earth and all that is on it, the seas and all that is in them. Thou preservest all of them, and the host of heaven worships thee. Thou art the LORD, the God who chose Abram and brought him out of Ur of the Chaldees and named him Abraham. Thou didst find him faithful to thee and didst make a covenant with him to give to him and to his descendants the land of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, and the Girgashites; and thou didst fulfil thy promise, for thou art just.

'And thou didst see the misery of our forefathers in Egypt and didst hear their cry for help at the Red Sea,^b and didst work signs and portents against Pharaoh, all his courtiers and all the people of his land, knowing how arrogantly they treated our forefathers, and thou didst win for thyself a name that lives on to this day. Thou didst tear the sea apart before them so that they went through the middle of it on dry ground; but thou didst cast their pursuers into the depths, like a stone cast into turbulent waters. Thou didst guide them by a pillar of cloud in the day-time and by a pillar of fire at night to give them light on the road by which they travelled. Thou didst descend upon Mount Sinai and speak with them from heaven, and give them right judgements and true laws, and statutes and commandments which were good, and thou didst make known to them thy holy sabbath and give them commandments, statutes, and laws through thy servant Moses. Thou gavest them bread from heaven to stay their hunger and thou broughtest water out from a rock for them to quench their thirst, and thou didst bid them enter and take possession of the land which thou hadst solemnly sworn to give them. But they, our forefathers, were arrogant and stubborn, and disobeyed thy commandments. They refused to obey and did not remember the miracles which thou didst accomplish among them; they remained stubborn, and they appointed a man to lead them back to slavery in Egypt. But thou art a forgiving god, gracious and compassionate, long-suffering and ever constant, and thou didst not forsake them. Even when they made the image of a bull-calf in metal and said, "This is your god who brought you up from Egypt", and were guilty of great blasphemies, thou in thy great compassion didst not forsake them in the wilderness. The pillar of cloud did not fail to guide them on their journey by day nor the pillar of fire by night to give them light on the road by which they travelled. Thou gavest thy good spirit to instruct them; thy manna thou didst not withhold from them, and thou gavest them water to quench their thirst. Forty years long thou didst sustain them in the wilderness, and they lacked nothing; their clothes did not wear out and their feet were not swollen.

'Thou gavest them kingdoms and peoples, allotting these to them as spoils of war. Thus they took possession of the land of Sihon king of 23 Heshbon and the land of Og king of Bashan. Thou didst multiply their descendants so that they became countless as the stars in the sky, bringing 24 them into the land which thou didst promise to give to their forefathers as their possession. When their descendants entered the land and took possession of it, thou didst subdue before them the Canaanites who 25 inhabited it and gavest these, kings and peoples alike, into their hands to do with them whatever they wished. They captured fortified cities and a fertile land and took possession of houses full of all good things, rockhewn cisterns, vineyards, olive-trees, and fruit-trees in abundance; so 26 they ate and were satisfied and grew fat and found delight in thy great goodness. But they were defiant and rebelled against thee; they turned their backs on thy law and killed thy prophets, who solemnly warned them 27 to return to thee, and they were guilty of great blasphemies. Because of this thou didst hand them over to their enemies who oppressed them. But when, in the time of their oppression, they cried to thee for help, thou 28 heardest them from heaven and in thy great compassion didst send them saviours to save them from their enemies. But when they had had a respite, they once more did what was wrong in thine eyes; and thou didst abandon them to their enemies who held them in subjection. But again they cried 29 to thee for help, and many times over thou heardest them from heaven and in thy compassion didst save them. Thou didst solemnly warn them to return to thy law, but they grew arrogant and did not heed thy commandments; they sinned against thy ordinances, which bring life to him who 30 keeps them. Stubbornly they turned away in mulish obstinacy and would not obey. Many years thou wast patient with them and didst warn them by thy spirit through thy prophets; but they would not listen. Therefore thou 31 didst hand them over to foreign peoples. Yet in thy great compassion thou didst not make an end of them nor forsake them; for thou art a gracious and compassionate god.

32 'Now therefore, our God, thou great and mighty and terrible God, who faithfully keepest covenant, do not make light of the hardships that have befallen us—our kings, our princes, our priests, our prophets, our forefathers, and all thy people—from the days of the kings of Assyria to this 33 day. In all that has befallen us thou hast been just, thou hast kept faith, but we have done wrong. Our kings, our princes, our priests, and our fore-34 fathers did not keep thy law nor heed thy commandments and the warnings which thou gavest them. Even under their own kings, while they were 35 enjoying the great prosperity which thou gavest them and the broad and fertile land which thou didst bestow upon them, they did not serve thee; 36 they did not abandon their evil ways. Today we are slaves, slaves here in the land which thou gavest to our forefathers so that they might eat its fruits and enjoy its good things. All its produce now goes to the kings 37 whom thou hast set over us because of our sins. They have power over our bodies, and they do as they please with our beasts, while we are in dire distress.

38 'Because of all this we make a binding declaration in writing, and our princes, our Levites, and our priests witness the sealing.

 daughters, all who are capable of understanding, all who for the sake of the law of God have kept themselves apart from the foreign population, join with the leading brethren,^d when the oath is put to them, in swearing to obey God's law given by Moses the servant of God, and to observe and fulfil all the commandments of the LORD our Lord, his rules and his statutes.

'We will not give our daughters in marriage to the foreign population or 30 take their daughters for our sons. If on the sabbath these people bring in 31 merchandise, especially corn, for sale, we will not buy from them on the sabbath or on any holy day. We will forgo the crops of the seventh year and release every person still held as a pledge for debt.

'We hereby undertake the duty of giving yearly the third of a shekel for 32
 the service of the house of our God, for the Bread of the Presence, 33
 the regular grain-offering and whole-offering, the sabbaths, the new moons, the appointed seasons, the holy-gifts, and the sin-offerings to make expiation on behalf of Israel, and for all else that has to be done in the house of our 34 God. We, the priests, the Levites, and the people, have cast lots for the wood-offering, so that it may be brought into the house of our God by 35 each family in turn, at appointed times, year by year, to burn upon the altar of the LORD our God, as prescribed in the law. We undertake to bring 36 the firstfruits of our land and the firstfruits of every fruit-tree, year by year, to the house of the LORD; also to bring to the house of our God, to the 37 priests who minister in the house of our God, the first-born of our sons and of our cattle, as prescribed in the law, and the first-born of our herds and of our flocks; and to bring to the priests the first kneading of our dough, 37 and the first of the fruit of every tree, of the new wine and of the oil, to the store-rooms in the house of our God; and to bring to the Levites the tithes from our land, for it is the Levites who collect the tithes in all our farming villages. The Aaronite priest shall be with the Levites when they collect 38 the tithes; and the Levites shall bring up one tenth of the tithes to the

For the Israelites and the Levites shall bring the contribution of corn, new wine, and oil to the rooms where the vessels of the sanctuary are kept, and where the ministering priests, the door-keepers, and the singers are lodged. We will not neglect the house of our God.⁷

11 THE LEADERS OF THE PEOPLE settled in Jerusalem; and the rest of the people cast lots to bring one in every ten to live in Jerusalem, the holy city, while the remaining nine lived in other towns. And the people were grateful to all those who volunteered to live in Jerusalem.

3 These are the chiefs of the province who lived in Jerusalem; but, in the towns of Judah, other Israelites, priests, Levites, temple-servitors, and descendants of Solomon's servants lived on their own property, in their own towns. Some members of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin lived in Jerusalem. Of Judah: Athaiah son of Uziah, son of Zechariah, son of Amariah, son of Shephatiah, son of Mahalalel of the family of Perez, all of whose family, to the number of four hundred and sixty-eight men of substance, lived in Jerusalem; and Maaseiah son of Baruch, son of Col-hozeh, son of Hazaiah, son of Adaiah, son of Joiarib, son of Zechariah of the Shelanite family.

7 These were the Benjamites: Sallu son of Meshullam, son of Joed, son of Pedaiah, son of Kolaiah, son of Maaseiah, son of Ithiel, son of Isaiah, and his kinsmen Gabbai and Sallai, nine hundred and twenty-eight in all. Joel son of Zichri was their overseer, and Judah son of Hassenuah was second over the city.^a

10 11 Of the priests: Jedaiah son of Joiarib, son of ^b Seraiah, son of Hilkiah, son of Meshullam, son of Zadok, son of Meraioth, son of Ahitub, supervisor of the house of God, and his ^c brethren responsible for the work in the temple, eight hundred and twenty-two in all; and Adaiah son of Jeroham, son of Pelaliah, son of Amzi, son of Zechariah, son of Pashhur, son of Malchiah, and his brethren, heads of fathers' houses, two hundred and forty-two in all; and Amasai^d son of Azarel, son of Ahzai, son of Meshillemoth, son of Immer, and his brethren, men of substance, a hundred and twenty-eight in all; their overseer was Zabdiel son of Hagedolim.

15 And of the Levites: Shemaiah son of Hasshub, son of Azrikam, son of Hashabiah, son of Bunni; and Shabbethai and Jozabad of the chiefs of the Levites, who had charge of the external business of the house of God; and Mattaniah son of Micah, son of Zabdi, son of Asaph, who as precentor led the prayer of thanksgiving, and Bakbukiah who held the second place among his brethren; and Abda son of Shammua, son of Galal, son of Jeduthun. The number of Levites in the holy city was two hundred and eighty-four in all.

19 The gate-keepers who kept guard at the gates were Akkub, Talmon, and 20 their brethren, a hundred and seventy-two. The rest of the Israelites ^e were in all the towns of Judah, each man on his own inherited property. But the temple-servitors lodged on Ophel, and Ziha and Gishpa were in charge of them.

The overseer of the Levites in Jerusalem was Uzzi son of Bani, son of Hashabiah, son of Mattaniah, son of Mica, of the family of Asaph the singers, for the supervision of the business of the house of God. For they were under the king's orders, and there was obligatory duty for the singers every day. Pethahiah son of Meshezabel, of the family of Zerach son of Judah, was the king's adviser on all matters affecting the people.

As for the hamlets with their surrounding fields: some of the men of Judah lived in Kiriath-arba and its villages, in Dibon and its villages, and in Jekabzeel and its hamlets, in Jeshua, Moladah, and Bethpelet, in Hazarshual, and in Beersheba and its villages, in Ziklag and in Meconah and its villages, in Enrimmon, Zorah, and Jarmuth, in Zanoah, Adullam, and their hamlets, in Lachish and its fields and Azekah and its villages. Thus they occupied the country from Beersheba to the Valley of Hinnom.

The men of Benjamin lived in^a Geba, Michmash, Aiah, and Bethel with its villages, in Anathoth, Nob, and Ananiah, in Hazor, Ramah, and Gittaim, in Hadid, Zeboim, and Neballat, in Lod, Ono, and^b Ge-harashim.^c And certain divisions of the Levites in Judah were attached to Benjamin.

These are the priests and the Levites who came back with Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua:^d Seraiah, Jeremiah, Ezra, Amariah, Malluch, Hattush, Shecaniah, Rehum, Meremoth, Iddo, Ginnethon, Abiah, Mijamin, Maadiah, Bilgah, Shemaiah, Joiarib, Jedaiah, Sallu, Amok, Hilkiah, Jedaiah. These were the chiefs of the priests and of their brethren in the days of Jeshua.

And the Levites: Jeshua, Binnui, Kadmiel, Sherebiah, Judah, and Mattaniah, who with his brethren was in charge of the songs of thanksgiving. And Bakbukiah and Unni their brethren stood opposite them in the service. And Jeshua was the father of Joiakim, Joiakim the father of Eliashib, Eliashib of Joiada, Joiada the father of Jonathan, and Jonathan the father of Jaddua. And in the days of Joiakim the priests who were heads of families were: of Seraiah, Meraiah; of Jeremiah, Hananiah; of Ezra, Meshullam; of Amariah, Jehohanan; of Malluch,^e Jonathan; of Shebaniah, Joseph; of Harim, Adna; of Meraioth, Helkai; of Iddo, Zechariah; of Ginnethon, Meshullam; of Abiah, Zichri; of Miniamin^f; of Moadiah, Piltai; of Bilgah, Shammua; of Shemaiah, Jehonathan; of Joiarib, Mattenai; of Jedaiah, Uzzi; of Sallu,^g Kallai; of Amok, Eber; of Hilkiah, Hashabiah; of Jedaiah, Nethaneel.

^hThe heads of the priestly familiesⁱ in the days of Eliashib, Joiada, Johanan, and Jaddua were recorded down to the reign of Darius the Persian. The heads of the levitical families were recorded in the annals only down to the days of Johanan the grandson of Eliashib. And the chiefs of the Levites: Hashabiah, Sherebiah, Jeshua, Binnui,^a Kadmiel, with their brethren in the other turn of duty, to praise and to give thanks, according to the commandment of David the man of God, turn by turn. 25 Mattaniah, Bakbukiah, Obadiah, Meshullam, Talmon, and Akkub were 26 gate-keepers standing guard at the gatehouses. This was the arrangement in the days of Joiakim son of Jeshua, son of Jozadak, and in the days of Nehemiah the governor and of Ezra the priest and scribe.

27 At the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem they sought out the Levites in all their settlements, and brought them to Jerusalem to celebrate the dedication with^b rejoicing, with thanksgiving and song, to the accompaniment of cymbals, lutes, and harps. And the Levites,^c the singers, were assembled from the district round Jerusalem and from the hamlets of the Netophathites; also from Beth-gilgal and from the region of Geba and Beth-azmoth;^d for the singers had built themselves hamlets in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem. The priests and the Levites purified themselves, 31 and they purified the people, the gates, and the wall. Then I brought the leading men of Judah up on to the city wall, and appointed two great choirs to give thanks. One went in procession^e to the right, going along the wall to the Dung Gate; and after it went Hoshaiiah with half the leading men of 32 Judah, and Azariah, Ezra, Meshullam, Judah, Benjamin, Shemaiah, and 33 34 Jeremiah; and certain of the priests with trumpets: Zechariah son of Jonathan, son of Shemaiah, son of Mattaniah, son of Micaiah, son of 35 Zaccur, son of Asaph, and his kinsmen, Shemaiah, Azarel, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nethaneel, Judah, and Hanani, with the musical instruments of David the man of God; and Ezra the scribe led them. They went 36 past the Fountain Gate and thence straight forward by the steps up to the City of David, by the ascent to the city wall, past the house of David, and 37 on to the Water Gate on the east. The other thanksgiving choir went to the left,^f and I followed it with half the leading men of^g the people, continuing 38 along the wall, past the Tower of the Ovens^h to the Broad Wall, and past the Ephraim Gate, and over the Jeshanah Gate,ⁱ and over the Fish Gate, taking in the Tower of Hananel and the Tower of the Hundred, as far as 39 the Sheep Gate; and they halted at the Gate of the Guardhouse. So the two thanksgiving choirs took their place in the house of God, and I and 40 half the magistrates with me; and the priests Eliakim, Maaseiah, Miniamin, 41 Micaiah, Elioenai, Zechariah, and Hananiah, with trumpets; and Maaseiah, Shemaiah, Eleazar, Uzzi, Jehohanan, Malchiah, Elam, and Ezer. The 42 singers, led by Izrahiah, raised their voices. A great sacrifice was celebrated that day, and they all rejoiced because God had given them great cause for rejoicing; the women and children rejoiced with them. And the rejoicing in Jerusalem was heard a long way off.

44 On that day men were appointed to take charge of the store-rooms for the contributions, the firstfruits, and the tithes, to gather in the portions required by the law for the priests and Levites according to the extent of the farmlands round the towns; for all Judah was full of rejoicing at the ministry of the priests and Levites. And they performed the service of their God and the service of purification, as did the singers and the door-keepers, according to the rules laid down by David and his son Solomon. For it was in the days of David that Asaph took the lead as chief of the singers and director^a of praise and thanksgiving to God. And in the days of Zerubbabel and of Nehemiah all Israel gave the portions for the singers and the door-keepers as each day required; and they set apart the portion for the Levites, and the Levites set apart the portion for the Aaronites.

Nehemiah's reforms

ON THAT DAY AT THE PUBLIC READING from the book of Moses, it was found to be laid down that no Ammonite or Moabite should ever enter the assembly of God, because they did not meet the Israelites with food and water but hired Balaam to curse them, though our God turned the curse into a blessing. When the people heard the law, they separated from Israel all who were of mixed blood.

But before this, Eliashib the priest, who was appointed over the store-rooms of the house of our God, and who was connected by marriage with Tobiah, had provided for his use a large room where formerly they had kept the grain-offering, the incense, the temple vessels, the tithes of corn, new wine, and oil prescribed for the Levites, singers, and door-keepers, and the contributions for the priests. All this time I was not in Jerusalem because, in the thirty-second year of Artaxerxes king of Babylon, I had gone to the king. Some time later, I asked permission from him and returned to Jerusalem. There I discovered the wicked thing that Eliashib had done for Tobiah's sake in providing him with a room in the courts of the house of God. I was greatly displeased and threw all Tobiah's belongings out of the room. Then I gave orders that the room should be purified, and that the vessels of the house of God, with the grain-offering and incense, should be put back into it.

I also learnt that the Levites had not been given their portions; both they and the singers, who were responsible for their respective duties, had made off to their farms. So I remonstrated with the magistrates and said, 'Why is the house of God deserted?' And I recalled the men and restored them to their places. Then all Judah brought the tithes of corn, new wine, and oil into the storehouses; and I put in charge of them Shelemiah the priest, Zadok the accountant, and Pedaiah a Levite, with Hanan son of Zaccur, son of Mattaniah, as their assistant, for they were considered trustworthy men; their duty was the distribution of their shares to their brethren. Remember this, O God, to my credit, and do not wipe out of thy memory the devotion which I have shown in the house of my God and in his service.

In those days I saw men in Judah treading winepresses on the sabbath, collecting quantities of produce and piling it on asses—wine, grapes, figs, and every kind of load, which they brought into Jerusalem on the sabbath; and I protested to them about selling food on that day. Tyrians living in Jerusalem also brought in fish and all kinds of merchandise and sold them on the sabbath to the people of Judah, even in Jerusalem. Then I complained to the nobles of Judah and said to them, 'How dare you profane the sabbath in this wicked way? Is not this just what your fathers did, so that our God has brought all this evil on us and on this city? Now you are bringing more wrath upon Israel by profaning the sabbath.' When the entrances to Jerusalem had been cleared in preparation for the sabbath, I gave orders that the gates should be shut and not opened until after the sabbath. And I appointed some of the men under me to have charge of the gates so that no load might enter on the sabbath. Then on one or two occasions the merchants and all kinds of traders camped just outside Jerusalem, but I cautioned them. 'Why are you camping in front of the city wall?' I asked. 'If you do it again, I will take action against you.' After that they did not come on the sabbath again. And I commanded the Levites who were to purify themselves and take up duty as guards at the gates, to ensure that the sabbath was kept holy. Remember this also to my credit, O God, and spare me in thy great love.

In those days also I saw that some Jews had married women from Ashdod, Ammon, and Moab. Half their children spoke the language of Ashdod or of the other peoples and could not speak the language of the Jews. I argued with them and reviled them, I beat them and tore out their hair; and I made them swear in the name of God: 'We will not marry our daughters to their sons, or take any of their daughters in marriage for our sons or for ourselves.' 'Was it not for such women', I said, 'that King Solomon of Israel sinned? Among all the nations there was no king like him; he was loved by his God, and God made him king over all Israel; nevertheless even he was led by foreign women into sin. Are we then to follow your example and commit this grave offence, breaking faith with our God by marrying foreign women?'

Now one of the sons of Joiada son of Eliashib the high priest had married a daughter of Sanballat the Horonite; therefore I drove him out of my presence. Remember, O God, to their shame that they have defiled the priesthood and the covenant of the priests^a and the Levites.

Thus I purified them from everything foreign, and I made the Levites and the priests resume the duties of their office; I also made provision for the wood-offering, at appointed times, and for the firstfruits. Remember me for my good, O God.

ESTHER

Esther chosen as queen by the Persian king

THE EVENTS HERE RELATED happened in the days of 1
Ahasuerus, the Ahasuerus who ruled from India to Ethiopia, a hun- 2 dred and twenty-seven provinces. At this time he sat on his royal 3 throne in Susa the capital city. In the third year of his reign he gave a 4 banquet for all his officers and his courtiers; and when his army of Persians 5 and Medes, with his nobles and provincial governors, were in attendance, 6
he displayed the wealth of his kingdom and the pomp and splendour of his 7 majesty for many days, a hundred and eighty in all. When these days were 8 over, the king gave a banquet for all the people present in Susa the capital 9 city, both high and low; it was held in the garden court of the royal pavilion 10 and lasted seven days. There were white curtains and violet hangings 11 fastened to silver rings with bands of fine linen and purple;^a there were 12 alabaster pillars and couches of gold and silver set on a mosaic pavement of 13 malachite and alabaster, of mother-of-pearl and turquoise. Wine was 14 served in golden cups of various patterns: the king's wine flowed freely as 15 befitted a king, and the law of the drinking was that there should be no 16 compulsion, for the king had laid it down that all the stewards of his palace 17 should respect each man's wishes. In addition, Queen Vashti gave a 18 banquet for the women in the royal apartments of King Ahasuerus.

On the seventh day, when he was merry with wine, the king ordered 19
Mehuman, Biztha, Harbona, Bigtha, Abagtha, Zethar, and Carcas, the 20 seven eunuchs who were in attendance on the king's person, to bring Queen 21
Vashti before him wearing her royal crown, in order to display her beauty 22 to the people and the officers; for she was indeed a beautiful woman. But 23 Queen Vashti refused to come in answer to the royal command conveyed 24 by the eunuchs. This greatly incensed the king, and he grew hot with 25 anger.

Then the king conferred with his wise men versed in misdemeanours;^b 26 for it was his royal custom to consult all who were versed in law and religion, 27 those closest to him being Carshena, Shethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, 28 Marsena, and Memucan, the seven princes of Persia and Media who had 29 access to the king and held first place in the kingdom. He asked them, 30
'What does the law require to be done with Queen Vashti for disobeying 31
the command of King Ahasuerus brought to her by the eunuchs?' Then 32 Memucan made answer before the king and the princes: 'Queen Vashti 33 has done wrong, and not to the king alone, but also to all the officers and to 34 all the peoples in all the provinces of King Ahasuerus. Every woman will 35 come to know what the queen has done, and this will make them treat their 36 husbands with contempt; they will say, "King Ahasuerus ordered Queen 37

^a bands . . . purple: or white and purple cords.

^b Or times.

18 Vashti to be brought before him and she did not come." The great ladies of Persia and Media, who have heard of the queen's conduct, will tell all 19 the king's officers about this day, and there will be endless disrespect and insolence! If it please your majesty, let a royal decree go out from you and let it be inscribed in the laws of the Persians and Medes, never to be revoked, that Vashti shall not again appear before King Ahasuerus; and let the king give her place as queen to another woman who is more worthy 20 of it than she. Thus when this royal edict is heard through the length and breadth of the kingdom, all women will give honour to their husbands, 21 high and low alike.' Memucan's advice pleased the king and the princes, and the king did as he had proposed. Letters were sent to all the royal 22 provinces, to every province in its own script and to every people in their own language, in order that each man might be master in his own house and control all his own womenfolk.^a

2 Later, when the anger of King Ahasuerus had died down, he remembered
2 Vashti and what she had done and what had been decreed against her. So the king's attendants said, 'Let beautiful young virgins be sought out for 3 your majesty; and let your majesty appoint commissioners in all the provinces of your kingdom to bring all these beautiful young virgins into the women's quarters in Susa the capital city. Let them be committed to the care of Hegai, the king's eunuch in charge of the women, and let cosmetics 4 be provided for them; and let the one who is most acceptable to the king become queen in place of Vashti.' This idea pleased the king and he acted on it.

5 Now there was in Susa the capital city a Jew named Mordecai son of 6 Jair, son of Shimei, son of Kish, a Benjamite; he had been carried into exile from Jerusalem among those whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon 7 had carried away with Jeconiah king of Judah. He had a foster-child Hadassah, that is Esther, his uncle's daughter, who had neither father nor mother. She was a beautiful and charming girl, and after the death of her 8 father and mother Mordecai had adopted her as his own daughter. When the king's order and his edict were published, and many girls were brought to Susa the capital city to be committed to the care of Hegai, Esther too 9 was taken to the king's palace to be entrusted to Hegai, who had charge of the women. She attracted his notice and received his special favour: he readily provided her with her cosmetics and her allowance of food, and also with seven picked maids from the king's palace, and he gave her and her maids privileges in the women's quarters.

10 Esther had not disclosed her race or her family, because Mordecai had 11 forbidden her to do so. Every day Mordecai passed along by the forecourt of the women's quarters to learn how Esther was faring and what was happening to her.

12 The full period of preparation prescribed for the women was twelve months, six months with oil and myrrh and six months with perfumes and cosmetics. When the period was complete, each girl's turn came to go to 13 King Ahasuerus, and she was allowed to take with her whatever she asked, 14 when she went from the women's quarters to the king's palace. She went into the palace in the evening and returned in the morning to another part of the women's quarters, to be under the care of Shaashgaz, the king's eunuch in charge of the concubines. She did not again go to the king unless he expressed a wish for her; then she was summoned by name.

When the turn came for Esther, daughter of Abihail the uncle of Mordecai her adoptive father, to go to the king, she asked for nothing to take with her except what was advised by Hegai, the king's eunuch in charge of the women; and Esther charmed all who saw her. When she was taken to King Ahasuerus in the royal palace, in the seventh year of his reign, in the tenth month, that is the month Tebeth, the king loved her more than any of his other women and treated her with greater favour and kindness than the rest of the virgins. He put a royal crown on her head and made her queen in place of Vashti. Then the king gave a great banquet for all his officers and courtiers, a banquet in honour of Esther. He also proclaimed a holiday^a throughout the provinces and distributed gifts worthy of a king.

Mordecai was in attendance at court; on his instructions Esther had not disclosed her family or her race, she had done what Mordecai told her, as she did when she was his ward. One day when Mordecai was in attendance at court, Bighan and Teresh, two of the king's eunuchs, keepers of the threshold, who were disaffected, were plotting to lay hands on King Ahasuerus. This became known to Mordecai, who told Queen Esther; and she told the king, mentioning Mordecai by name. The affair was investigated and the report confirmed; the two men were hanged on the gallows. All this was recorded in the royal chronicle in the presence of the king.

Haman's plot against the Jews

AFTER THIS, KING AHASUERUS promoted Haman son of Hammedatha the Agagite, advancing him and giving him precedence above all his fellow-officers. So the king's attendants at court all bowed down to Haman and did obeisance, for so the king had commanded; but Mordecai did not bow down to him or do obeisance. Then the attendants at court said to Mordecai, 'Why do you flout his majesty's command?' Day by day they challenged him, but he refused to listen to them; so they informed Haman, in order to discover if Mordecai's refusal would be tolerated, for he had told them that he was a Jew. When Haman saw that Mordecai was not bowing down to him or doing obeisance, he was infuriated. On learning who Mordecai's people were, he scorned to lay hands on him alone, and looked for a way to destroy all the Jews throughout the whole kingdom of Ahasuerus, Mordecai and all his race.

In the twelfth year of King Ahasuerus, in the first month, Nisan, they cast lots, Pur as it is called, in the presence of Haman, taking day by day and month by month, and the lot fell on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month,^b the month Adar. Then Haman said to King Ahasuerus, 'There is a certain people, dispersed among the many peoples in all the provinces of your kingdom, who keep themselves apart. Their laws are different from those of every other people; they do not keep your majesty's laws. It does not befitt your majesty to tolerate them. If it please your majesty, let an order be made in writing for their destruction; and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver to your majesty's officials, to be deposited in the royal treasury.' So the king took the signet-ring from his hand and gave it to Haman son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the enemy of the Jews; and he said to him, 'The money and the people are yours; deal with them as you wish.'

On the thirteenth day of the first month the king's secretaries were summoned and, in accordance with Haman's instructions, a writ was issued to the king's satraps and the governor of every province, and to the officers over each separate people: for each province in its own script and for each people in their own language. It was drawn up in the name of King Ahasuerus and sealed with the king's signet. Thus letters were sent by courier to all the king's provinces with orders to destroy, slay, and exterminate all Jews, young and old, women and children, in one day, the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, the month Adar, and to plunder their possessions. A copy of the writ was to be issued as a decree in every province and to be published to all the peoples, so that they might be ready for that day. The couriers were dispatched post-haste at the king's command, and the decree was issued in Susa the capital city. The king and Haman sat down to drink; but the city of Susa was thrown into confusion.

When Mordecai learnt all that had been done, he rent his clothes, put on sackcloth and ashes, and went through the city crying loudly and bitterly. He came within sight of the palace gate, because no one clothed with sackcloth was allowed to pass through the gate. In every province reached by the royal command and decree there was great mourning among the Jews, with fasting and weeping and beating of the breast. Most of them made their beds of sackcloth and ashes. When Queen Esther's maids and eunuchs came and told her, she was distraught, and sent garments for Mordecai, so that they might take off the sackcloth and clothe him with them; but he would not accept them. Then Esther summoned Hathach, one of the king's eunuchs who had been appointed to wait upon her, and ordered him to find out from Mordecai what the trouble was and what it meant. Hathach went to Mordecai in the city square in front of the palace gate, and Mordecai told him all that had happened to him and how much money Haman had offered to pay into the royal treasury for the destruction of the Jews. He also gave him a copy of the writ for their destruction issued in Susa, so that he might show it to Esther and tell her about it, bidding her go to the king to plead for his favour and entreat him for her people. Hathach went and told Esther what Mordecai had said, and she sent him back with this message: 'All the king's courtiers and the people of the provinces are aware that if any person, man or woman, enters the king's presence in the inner court unbidden, there is one law only: that person shall be put to death, unless the king stretches out to him the golden sceptre; then and then only shall he live. It is now thirty days since I myself was called to go to the king.' But when they told Mordecai what Esther had said, he bade 12 13 them go back to her and say, 'Do not imagine that you alone of all the Jews will escape because you are in the royal palace. If you remain silent at such 14 a time as this, relief and deliverance for the Jews will appear from another quarter, but you and your father's family will perish. Who knows whether it is not for such a time as this that you have come to royal estate?' Esther 15 gave them this answer to take back to Mordecai: 'Go and assemble all the 16 Jews to be found in Susa and fast for me; take neither food nor drink for three days, night or day, and I and my maids will fast as you do. After that I will go to the king, although it is against the law; and if I perish, I perish.'

So Mordecai went away and did exactly as Esther had bidden him. 17

5 On the third day Esther put on her royal robes and stood in the inner court of the king's palace, facing the palace itself; the king was seated on his royal throne in the palace, facing the entrance. When the king caught 2 sight of Queen Esther standing in the court, she won his favour and he stretched out to her the golden sceptre which he was holding. Thereupon Esther approached and touched the head of the sceptre. Then the king said 3 to her, 'What is it, Queen Esther? Whatever you ask of me, up to half my kingdom, shall be given to you.' 'If it please your majesty,' said Esther, 4
'will you come today, sire, and Haman with you, to a banquet which I have made ready for you?' The king gave orders that Haman should be fetched 5 quickly, so that Esther's wish might be fulfilled; and the king and Haman went to the banquet which she had prepared. Over the wine the king said 6 to Esther, 'Whatever you ask of me shall be given to you. Whatever you request of me, up to half my kingdom, it shall be done.' Esther said in 7 answer, 'What I ask and request of you is this. If I have won your majesty's 8 favour, and if it please you, sire, to give me what I ask and to grant my request, will your majesty and Haman come tomorrow to the banquet which I shall prepare for you both? Tomorrow I will do as your majesty has said.'

9
So Haman went away that day in good spirits and well pleased with himself. But when he saw Mordecai in attendance at court and how he did not rise nor defer to him, he was filled with rage; but he kept control of 10 himself and went home. Then he sent for his friends and his wife Zeresh and held forth to them about the splendour of his wealth and his many 11 sons, and how the king had promoted him and advanced him above the other officers and courtiers. 'That is not all,' said Haman; 'Queen Esther 12 invited no one but myself to accompany the king to the banquet which she had prepared; and she has invited me again tomorrow with the king. Yet 13 all this means nothing to me so long as I see that Jew Mordecai in attendance at court.' Then his wife Zeresh and all his friends said to him, 'Let a gallows 14 seventy-five feet high be set up, and recommend to the king in the morning to have Mordecai hanged upon it. Then go with the king to the banquet in good spirits.' Haman thought this an excellent plan, and he set up the gallows.

Haman's downfall and Mordecai's triumph

6 THAT NIGHT SLEEP ELUDED THE KING, so he ordered the chronicle
 2 of daily events to be brought; and it was read to him. Therein was recorded that Mordecai had given information about Bigthana and Teresh, the two royal eunuchs among the keepers of the threshold who had plotted 3 to lay hands on King Ahasuerus. Whereupon the king said, 'What honour or dignity has been conferred on Mordecai for this?' The king's courtiers who were in attendance told him that nothing had been done for Mordecai.
 4 The king asked, 'Who is that in the court?' Now Haman had just entered the outer court of the palace to recommend to the king that Mordecai should 5 be hanged on the gallows which he had prepared for him. The king's servants answered, 'It is Haman standing there'; and the king bade him 6 enter. He came in, and the king said to him, 'What should be done for the man whom the king wishes to honour?' Haman said to himself, 'Whom 7 would the king wish to honour more than me?' And he said to the king, 8 'For the man whom the king wishes to honour, let there be brought royal robes which the king himself wears, and a horse which the king rides, with 9 a royal crown upon its head. And let the robes and the horse be delivered to one of the king's most honourable officers, and let him attire the man whom the king wishes to honour and lead him mounted on the horse through the city square, calling out as he goes: "See what is done for the 10 man whom the king wishes to honour."' Then the king said to Haman,
 'Fetch the robes and the horse at once, as you have said, and do all this for Mordecai the Jew who is in attendance at court. Leave nothing undone of 11 all that you have said.' So Haman took the robes and the horse, attired Mordecai, and led him mounted through the city square, calling out as he went: 'See what is done for the man whom the king wishes to honour.'

12 Then Mordecai returned to court and Haman hurried off home mourn-13 ing, with head uncovered. He told his wife Zeresh and all his friends everything that had happened to him. And this was the reply of his friends and his wife Zeresh: 'If Mordecai, in face of whom your fortunes begin to fall, belongs to the Jewish race, you will not get the better of him; he will see your utter downfall.'

14 While they were still talking with Haman, the king's eunuchs arrived and hurried him away to the banquet which Esther had prepared.

7 12 So the king and Haman went to dine with Queen Esther. Again on that second day, over the wine, the king said, 'Whatever you ask of me will be given to you, Queen Esther. Whatever you request of me, up to half my 3 kingdom, it shall be done.' Queen Esther answered, 'If I have found favour with your majesty, and if it please your majesty, my request and petition is 4 that my own life and the lives of my people may be spared. For we have been sold, I and my people, to be destroyed, slain, and exterminated. If it had been a matter of selling us, men and women alike, into slavery, I should have kept silence; for then our plight would not be such as to injure the 5 king's interests.' Then King Ahasuerus said to Queen Esther, 'Who is he,
 6 and where is he, who has presumed to do such a thing as this?' 'An adversary and an enemy,' said Esther, 'this wicked Haman.' At that Haman was dumbfounded in the presence of the king and the queen. The king rose 7 from the banquet in a rage and went to the garden of the pavilion, while Haman remained where he was, to plead for his life with Queen Esther; for he saw that in the king's mind his fate was determined. When the king 8 returned from the garden to the banqueting hall, Haman had flung himself across the couch on which Esther was reclining. The king exclaimed, 'Will he even assault the queen here in my presence?' No sooner had the words left the king's mouth than Haman hid his face in despair. ^a Then Harbona, 9 one of the eunuchs in attendance on the king, said, 'At Haman's house stands the gallows, seventy-five feet high, which he himself has prepared for Mordecai, who once served the king well.' 'Hang Haman on it,' said 10 the king. So they hanged him on the gallows that he himself had prepared for Mordecai. After that the king's rage abated.

On that day King Ahasuerus gave Queen Esther the house of Haman, 8 enemy of the Jews; and Mordecai came into the king's presence, for Esther had told him how he was related to her. Then the king took off his signet- 2 ring, which he had taken back from Haman, and gave it to Mordecai. And Esther put Mordecai in charge of Haman's house.

Once again Esther spoke before the king, falling at his feet in tears and 3 pleading with him to avert the calamity planned by Haman the Agagite and to frustrate his plot against the Jews. The king stretched out the golden 4 sceptre to Esther, and she rose and stood before the king, and said, 'May 5
it please your majesty: if I have found favour with you, and if the proposal seems right to your majesty and I have won your approval, let a writ be issued to recall the letters which Haman son of Hammedatha the Agagite wrote in pursuance of his plan to destroy the Jews in all the royal provinces.
For how can I bear to see the calamity which is coming upon my race? Or 6 how can I bear to see the destruction of my family?' Then King Ahasuerus 7 said to Queen Esther and to Mordecai the Jew, 'I have given Haman's house to Esther, and he has been hanged on the gallows, because he threatened the lives of the Jews. Now you shall issue a writ concerning the Jews in my 8 name, in whatever terms you think fit, and seal it with the royal signet; for an order written in the name of the king and sealed with the royal signet cannot be revoked.'

And so, on the twenty-third day of the third month, the month Sivan, 9
the king's secretaries were summoned; and a writ was issued to the Jews, exactly as Mordecai directed, and to the satraps, the governors, and the officers in the provinces from India to Ethiopia, a hundred and twenty-seven provinces, for each province in its own script and for each people in their own language, and also for the Jews in their own script and language.
The writ was drawn up in the name of King Ahasuerus and sealed with the 10 royal signet, and letters were sent by mounted couriers riding on horses from the royal stables. By these letters the king granted permission to the 11 Jews in every city to unite and defend themselves, and to destroy, slay, and exterminate the whole strength of any people or province which might attack them, women and children too, and to plunder their possessions, throughout all the provinces of King Ahasuerus, in one day, the thirteenth 12

^a Haman . . . despair: prob. rdg.; Heb. they covered Haman's face.

13 day of the twelfth month, the month Adar. A copy of the writ was to be issued as a decree in every province and published to all peoples, and the Jews were to be ready for that day, the day of vengeance on their enemies.

14 So the couriers, mounted on their royal horses, were dispatched post-haste at the king's urgent command; and the decree was issued also in Susa the capital city.

15 Mordecai left the king's presence in royal robes of violet and white, wearing a great golden crown and a cloak of fine linen and purple, and all the city of Susa shouted for joy. For the Jews there was light and joy, gladness and honour. In every province and every city reached by the royal command and decree, there was joy and gladness for the Jews, feasting and holiday. And many of the peoples of the land professed themselves Jews, because fear of the Jews had seized them.

9 ON THE THIRTEENTH DAY of the twelfth month, the month Adar, the time came for the king's command and his edict to be carried out. The very day on which the enemies of the Jews had hoped to gain the upper hand over them was to become the day when the Jews should gain the upper hand over those who hated them. On that day the Jews united in their cities in all the provinces of King Ahasuerus to fall upon those who had planned their ruin. No one could resist them, because fear of them had seized all peoples. All the officers of the provinces, the satraps and the governors, and all the royal officials, aided the Jews, because fear of Mordecai had seized them. Mordecai had become a great personage in the royal palace; his fame had spread throughout all the provinces as the power of the man grew steadily greater. So the Jews put their enemies to the sword, with great slaughter and destruction; they worked their will on those who hated them. In Susa, the capital city, the Jews killed five hundred men and destroyed them; and they killed also Parshandatha, Dalphon and Aspatha, Poratha, Adalia and Aridatha, Parmashta, Arisai, Aridai and Vaizatha, the ten sons of Haman son of Hammedatha, the enemy of the Jews; but they did not touch the plunder.

11 That day when the number of those killed in Susa the capital city came to the notice of the king, he said to Queen Esther, 'In Susa, the capital city, the Jews have killed and destroyed five hundred men and the ten sons of Haman. What have they done in the rest of the king's provinces? Whatever you ask further will be given to you; whatever more you seek shall be done.'

13 Esther answered him, 'If it please your majesty, let tomorrow be granted to the Jews in Susa to do according to the edict for today; and let the bodies of Haman's ten sons be hung up on the gallows.' The king gave orders for this to be done; the edict was issued in Susa and Haman's ten sons were hung up on the gallows. The Jews in Susa united again on the fourteenth day of the month Adar and killed three hundred men in Susa; but they did not touch the plunder.

16 The rest of the Jews in the king's provinces had united to defend themselves; they took vengeance on^a their enemies by killing seventy-five thousand of those who hated them; but they did not touch the plunder.

^a Prob. rdg. ; Heb. got respite from.

This was on the thirteenth day of the month Adar, and they rested on the fourteenth day and made that a day of feasting and joy. The Jews in Susa had united on the thirteenth and fourteenth days of the month, and rested on the fifteenth day and made that a day of feasting and joy. This is why isolated Jews who live in remote villages keep the fourteenth day of the month Adar in joy and feasting, as a holiday on which they send presents of food to one another.

Then Mordecai set these things on record and sent letters to all the Jews in all the provinces of King Ahasuerus, far and near, binding them to keep the fourteenth and fifteenth days of the month Adar, year by year, as the days on which the Jews obtained relief from their enemies and as the month which was changed for them from sorrow into joy, from a time of mourning to a holiday. They were to keep them as days of feasting and joy, days for sending presents of food to one another and gifts to the poor.

So the Jews undertook to continue the practice that they had begun in accordance with Mordecai's letter. This they did because Haman son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the enemy of all the Jews, had plotted to destroy the Jews and had cast lots, Pur as it is called, with intent to crush and destroy them. But when the matter came before the king, he issued written orders that the wicked plot which Haman had devised against the Jews should recoil on his own head, and that he and his sons should be hanged on the gallows. Therefore, these days were named Purim after the word Pur.
 Accordingly, because of all that was written in this letter, because of all they had seen and experienced in this affair, the Jews resolved and undertook, on behalf of themselves, their descendants, and all who should join them, that they would without fail keep these two days as a yearly festival in the prescribed manner and at the appointed time; that these days should be remembered and kept, generation after generation, in every family, province, and city, that the days of Purim should always be observed among the Jews, and that the memory of them should never cease among their descendants.

Queen Esther daughter of Abihail gave full authority in writing to ^a Mordecai the Jew, to confirm this second letter about Purim. Letters wishing peace and security were sent to all the Jews in the hundred and twenty-seven provinces of King Ahasuerus, making the observance of these days of Purim at their appointed time binding on them, as Mordecai the Jew ^b had prescribed. In the same way they had prescribed regulations for fasts and lamentations for themselves and their descendants. The command of Esther confirmed these regulations for Purim, and the record is preserved in writing.

King Ahasuerus imposed forced labour on the land and the coasts and islands. All the king's acts of authority and power, and the dignities which he conferred on Mordecai, are written in the annals of the kings of Media and Persia. For Mordecai the Jew was second only to King Ahasuerus; he was a great man among the Jews and was popular with the mass of his countrymen, for he sought the good of his people and promoted the welfare of all their descendants. ^c

THE BOOK OF JOB

Prologue

1 THERE LIVED IN THE LAND OF UZ a man of blameless and upright life named Job, who feared God and set his face against 2 3 wrongdoing. He had seven sons and three daughters; and he owned seven thousand sheep and three thousand camels, five hundred yoke of oxen and five hundred asses, with a large number of slaves. Thus Job was the greatest man in all the East.

4 Now his sons used to foregather and give, each in turn, a feast in his own house; and they used to send and invite their three sisters to eat and 5 drink with them. Then, when a round of feasts was finished, Job sent for his children and sanctified them, rising early in the morning and sacrificing a whole-offering for each of them; for he thought that they might somehow have sinned against God and committed blasphemy in their hearts. This he always did.

6 The day came when the members of the court of heaven took their places in the presence of the LORD, and Satan^a was there among them.
7 The LORD asked him where he had been. 'Ranging over the earth', he said, 8 'from end to end.' Then the LORD asked Satan, 'Have you considered my servant Job? You will find no one like him on earth, a man of blameless and upright life, who fears God and sets his face against wrongdoing.'
9 Satan answered the LORD, 'Has not Job good reason to be God-fearing?
10 Have you not hedged him round on every side with your protection, him and his family and all his possessions? Whatever he does you have 11 blessed, and his herds have increased beyond measure. But stretch out your hand and touch all that he has, and then he will curse you to your face.' 12 Then the LORD said to Satan, 'So be it. All that he has is in your hands; only Job himself you must not touch.' And Satan left the LORD's presence.

13 When the day came that Job's sons and daughters were eating and drink-14 ing in the eldest brother's house, a messenger came running to Job and 15 said, 'The oxen were ploughing and the asses were grazing near them, when the Sabaeans swooped down and carried them off, after putting the herdsmen 16 to the sword; and I am the only one to escape and tell the tale.' While he was still speaking, another messenger arrived and said, 'God's fire flashed from heaven. It struck the sheep and the shepherds and burnt them 17 up; and I am the only one to escape and tell the tale.' While he was still speaking, another arrived and said, 'The Chaldaeans, three bands of them, have made a raid on the camels and carried them off, after putting the drivers

^a Or the adversary.

to the sword; and I am the only one to escape and tell the tale.' While this man was speaking, yet another arrived and said, 'Your sons and daughters were eating and drinking in the eldest brother's house, when suddenly a whirlwind swept across from the desert and struck the four corners of the house, and it fell on the young people and killed them; and I am the only one to escape and tell the tale.' At this Job stood up and rent his cloak; then he shaved his head and fell prostrate on the ground, saying:

Naked I came from the womb,
naked I shall return whence I came.
The LORD gives and the LORD takes away;
blessed be the name of the LORD.

Throughout all this Job did not sin; he did not charge God with unreason.

Once again the day came when the members of the court of heaven took their places in the presence of the LORD, and Satan was there among them. The LORD asked him where he had been. 'Ranging over the earth', he said, 'from end to end.' Then the LORD asked Satan, 'Have you considered my servant Job? You will find no one like him on earth, a man of blameless and upright life, who fears God and sets his face against wrongdoing. You incited me to ruin him without a cause, but his integrity is still unshaken.' Satan answered the LORD, 'Skin for skin! There is nothing the man will grudge to save himself. But stretch out your hand and touch his bone and his flesh, and see if he will not curse you to your face.'

Then the LORD said to Satan, 'So be it. He is in your hands; but spare his life.' And Satan left the LORD's presence, and he smote Job with running sores from head to foot, so that he took a piece of a broken pot to scratch himself as he sat among the ashes. Then his wife said to him, 'Are you still unshaken in your integrity? Curse God and die!' But he answered, 'You talk as any wicked fool of a woman might talk. If we accept good from God, shall we not accept evil?' Throughout all this, Job did not utter one sinful word.

When Job's three friends, Eliphaz of Teman, Bildad of Shuah, and Zophar of Naamah, heard of all these calamities which had overtaken him, they left their homes and arranged to come and condole with him and comfort him. But when they first saw him from a distance, they did not recognize him; and they wept aloud, rent their cloaks and tossed dust into the air over their heads. For seven days and seven nights they sat beside him on the ground, and none of them said a word to him; for they saw that his suffering was very great.

Job's complaint to God

After this Job broke silence and cursed the day of his birth:

Perish the day when I was born and the night which said, 'A man is conceived'!
May that day turn to darkness; may God above not look for it,
nor light of dawn shine on it.

- 5 May blackness sully it, and murk and gloom,
cloud smother that day, swift darkness eclipse its sun.
- 6 Blind darkness swallow up that night;
count it not among the days of the year,
reckon it not in the cycle of the months.
- 7 That night, may it be barren for ever,
no cry of joy be heard in it.
- 8 Cursed be it by those whose magic binds even the monster of the deep,
who are ready to tame Leviathan himself with spells.
- 9 May no star shine out in its twilight;
may it wait for a dawn that never comes,
nor ever see the eyelids of the morning,
- 10 because it did not shut the doors of the womb that bore me and keep trouble away from my sight.
- 11 Why was I not still-born,
why did I not die when I came out of the womb?
- 12 Why was I ever laid on my mother's knees or put to suck at her breasts?
- 16 Why was I not hidden like an untimely birth,
like an infant that has not lived to see the light?
- 13 For then I should be lying in the quiet grave,
asleep in death, at rest,
- 14 with kings and their ministers
who built themselves palaces,
- 15 with princes rich in gold
who filled their houses with silver.
- 17^a There the wicked man chafes no more,
there the tired labourer rests;
the captive too finds peace there and hears no taskmaster's voice;
- 18 high and low are there,
even the slave, free from his master.
- 20 Why should the sufferer be born to see the light?
Why is life given to men who find it so bitter?
- 21 They wait for death but it does not come,
they seek it more eagerly than ^b hidden treasure.
- 22 They are glad when they reach the tomb,
and when they come to the grave they exult.
- 23 Why should a man be born to wander blindly,
hedged in by God on every side?
- 24 My sighing is all my food,
and groans pour from me in a torrent.
- 25 Every terror that haunted me has caught up with me,
and all that I feared has come upon me.
- 26 There is no peace of mind nor quiet for me;
I chafe in torment and have no rest.

First cycle of speeches

Then Eliphaz the Temanite began:	4
If one ventures to speak with you, will you lose patience?	2
For who could hold his tongue any longer?
Think how once you encouraged those who faltered,	3
how you braced feeble arms,
how a word from you upheld the stumblers	4
and put strength into weak knees.
But now that adversity comes upon you, you lose patience;	5
it touches you, and you are unmanned.
Is your religion no comfort to you?	6
Does your blameless life give you no hope?
For consider, what innocent man has ever perished?	7
Where have you seen the upright destroyed?
This I know, that those who plough mischief and sow trouble	8 reap as they have sown;
they perish at the blast of God	9
and are shrivelled by the breath of his nostrils.
 The roar of the lion, the whimpering of his cubs, fall silent;	10
the teeth of the young lions are broken;
the lion perishes for lack of prey	11
and the whelps of the lioness are abandoned.
 A word stole into my ears,	12
and they caught the whisper of it;
in the anxious visions of the night,	13
when a man sinks into deepest sleep,
terror seized me and shuddering;	14
the trembling of my body frightened me.
A wind brushed my face	15
and made the hairs bristle on my flesh;
and a figure stood there whose shape I could not discern,	16
an apparition loomed before me,
and I heard the sound of a low voice:
‘Can mortal man be more righteous than God,	17
or the creature purer than his Maker?
If God mistrusts his own servants	18
and finds his messengers at fault,
how much more those that dwell in houses whose walls are clay,	19
whose foundations are dust,
which can be crushed like a bird’s nest
or torn down between dawn and dark,	20
how much more shall such men perish outright and unheeded,
^a die, without ever finding wisdom?’	21

^a Prob. rdg.; transposing Their rich possessions are snatched from them to follow 5. 4.

- 5 Call if you will; is there any to answer you?
To which of the holy ones will you turn?[?]
- 2 The fool is destroyed by his own angry passions,
and the end of childish resentment is death.
- 3 I have seen it for myself: a fool uprooted,
his home in sudden ruin about him,^a
- 4 his children past help,
browbeaten in court with none to save them.
- 5 ^b Their rich possessions are snatched from them;
what they have harvested others hungrily devour;
the stronger man seizes it from the panniers,
panting, thirsting for their wealth.
- 6 Mischief does not grow out of the soil
nor trouble spring from the earth;
man is born to trouble,
- 7 as surely as birds fly ^c upwards.
- 8 For my part, I would make my petition to God
and lay my cause before him, 9 who does great and unsearchable things,
 marvels without number.
- 10 He gives rain to the earth
and sends water on the fields;
11 he raises the lowly to the heights,
the mourners are uplifted by victory;
12 he frustrates the plots of the crafty,
and they win no success, 13 he traps the cunning in their craftiness,
and the schemers' plans are thrown into confusion.
- 14 In the daylight they run into darkness,
and grope at midday as though it were night.
- 15 He saves the destitute from their greed,
and the needy from the grip of the strong;
16 so the poor hope again,
and the unjust are sickened.
- 17 Happy the man whom God rebukes!
therefore do not reject the discipline of the Almighty.
- 18 For, though he wounds, he will bind up;
the hands that smite will heal.
- 19 You may meet disaster six times, and he will save you;
seven times, and no harm shall touch you.
- 20 In time of famine he will save you from death,
in battle from the sword.
- 21 You will be shielded from the lash of slander,^d
and when violence comes you need not fear.

^a ruin about him: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure.^b Line transposed from 4. 21.^c Or as sparks shoot.^d from . . . slander: or when slander is rife.

You will laugh at violence and starvation 22
 and have no need to fear wild beasts;
 for you have a covenant with the stones to spare your fields, 23 and the weeds have been constrained to leave you at peace.
 You will know that all is well with your household, 24
 you will look round your home and find nothing amiss;
 you will know, too, that your descendants will be many 25
 and your offspring like grass, thick upon the earth.
 You will come in sturdy old age to the grave 26
 as sheaves come in due season to the threshing-floor.

We have inquired into all this, and so it is; 27
 this we have heard, and you may know it for the truth.

Then Job answered: 6

O that the grounds for my resentment might be weighed, 2
 and my misfortunes set with them on the scales!
 For they would outweigh the sands of the sea: 3
 what wonder if my words are wild? ^a
 The arrows of the Almighty find their mark in me, 4
 and their poison soaks into my spirit;
 God's onslaughts wear me away.
 Does the wild ass bray when he has grass 5
 or the ox low when he has fodder?
 Can a man eat tasteless food unseasoned with salt, 6
 or find any flavour in the juice of mallows?
 Food that should nourish me sticks in my throat, 7
 and my bowels rumble with an echoing sound.

O that I might have my request, 8
 that God would grant what I hope for:
 that he would be pleased to crush me, 9
 to snatch me away with his hand and cut me off!
 For that would bring me relief, 10 and in the face of unsparing anguish I would leap for joy. ^b
 Have I the strength to wait? 11
 What end have I to expect, that I should be patient?
 Is my strength the strength of stone, 12
 or is my flesh bronze?
 Oh how shall I find help within myself? 13
 The power to aid myself is put out of my reach.

Devotion is due from his friends 14
 to one who despairs and loses faith in the Almighty;
 but my brothers have been treacherous as a mountain stream, 15
 like the channels of streams that run dry,

^a what . . . wild?; or therefore words fail me.
 denied the words of the Holy One.

^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds I have not

- 16 which turn dark with ice
or are hidden with piled-up snow;
17 or they vanish the moment they are in spate,
dwindle in the heat and are gone.
18 Then the caravans, winding hither and thither, go up into the wilderness and perish;^a 19 the caravans of Tema look for their waters, travelling merchants of Sheba hope for them;
20 but they are disappointed, for all their confidence,
they reach them only to be balked.
21 So treacherous have you now been to me: ^b
you felt dismay and were afraid.
22 Did I ever say, 'Give me this or that;
open your purses to save my life;
23 rescue me from my enemy;
ransom me out of the hands of ruthless men'?
- 24 Tell me plainly, and I will listen in silence;
show me where I have erred.
25 How harsh are the words of the upright man!
What do the arguments of wise men ^c prove?
26 Do you mean to argue about words or to sift the utterance of a man past hope?
27 Would you assail an orphan ^d?
Would you hurl yourselves on a friend?
28 So now, I beg you, turn and look at me:
am I likely to lie to your faces?
29 Think again, let me have no more injustice;
think again, for my integrity is in question.
30 Do I ever give voice to injustice?
Does my sense not warn me when my words are wild?

- 7 Has not man hard service on earth,
and are not his days like those of a hired labourer,
2 like those of a slave longing for the shade
or a servant kept waiting for his wages?
3 So months of futility are my portion,
troubled nights are my lot.
4 When I lie down, I think,
'When will it be day that I may rise?'
When the evening grows long and I lie down,
I do nothing but toss till morning twilight.
5 My body is infested with worms,
and scabs cover my skin. ^e
6 My days are swifter than a shuttle ^f and come to an end as the thread runs out. ^g

^a Or and are lost. ^b So . . . to me: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure. ^c wise men:
prob. rdg.; Heb. unintelligible. ^d Or a blameless man. ^e Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds it is cracked and discharging. ^f Or a fleeting odour. ^g as . . . out: or without hope.

Remember, my life is but a breath of wind; 7
 I shall never again see good days.
 Thou wilt behold me no more with a seeing eye; 8
 under thy very eyes I shall disappear.
 As clouds break up and disperse, 9
 so he that goes down to Sheol never comes back;
 he never returns home again, 10
 and his place will know him no more. ^a

But I will not hold my peace; 11
 I will speak out in the distress of my mind
 and complain in the bitterness of my soul.
 Am I the monster of the deep, am I the sea-serpent, 12
 that thou settest a watch over me?
 When I think that my bed will comfort me, 13
 that sleep will relieve my complaining, thou dost terrify me with dreams 14
 and affright me with visions.
 I would rather be choked outright; 15
 I would prefer death to all my sufferings.
 I am in despair, I would not go on living; 16
 leave me alone, for my life is but a vapour.
 What is man that thou makest much of him 17
 and turnest thy thoughts towards him, only to punish him morning by morning 18
 or to test him every hour of the day?
 Wilt thou not look away from me for an instant? 19
 Wilt thou not let me be while I swallow my spittle?
 If I have sinned, how do I injure thee, 20
 thou watcher of the hearts of men?
 Why hast thou made me thy butt,
 and why have I become thy target?
 Why dost thou not pardon my offence 21
 and take away my guilt?
 But now I shall lie down in the grave;
 seek me, and I shall not be.

Then Bildad the Shuhite began: 8
 How long will you say such things, 2
 the long-winded ramblings of an old man?
 Does God pervert judgement? 3
 Does the Almighty pervert justice?
 Your sons sinned against him, 4
 so he left them to be victims of their own iniquity.
 If only you will seek God betimes 5
 and plead for the favour of the Almighty,

^a Or and he will not be noticed any more in his place.

- 6 if you are innocent and upright,
then indeed will he watch over you and see your just intent fulfilled.
- 7 Then, though your beginnings were humble,
your end will be great.
- 8 Inquire now of older generations
and consider the experience of their fathers; 9 for we ourselves are of yesterday and are transient;
our days on earth are a shadow.
- 10 Will not they speak to you and teach you and pour out the wisdom of their hearts?
11 Can rushes grow where there is no marsh?
Can reeds flourish without water?
- 12 While they are still in flower and not ready to cut,^a they wither earlier than^b any green plant.
- 13 Such is the fate of all who forget God;
the godless man's life-thread breaks off;
14 his confidence is gossamer,
and the ground of his trust a spider's web.
- 15 He leans against his house but it does not stand;
he clutches at it but it does not hold firm.
- 16 His is the lush growth of a plant in the sun,
pushing out shoots over the garden;
17 but its roots become entangled in a stony patch
and run against a bed of rock.
- 18 Then someone uproots it from its place, which^c disowns it and says, 'I have never known you.'
- 19 That is how its life withers away,
and other plants spring up from the earth.
- 20 Be sure, God will not spurn the blameless man,
nor will he grasp the hand of the wrongdoer.
- 21 He will yet fill your mouth with laughter,
and shouts of joy will be on your lips;
22 your enemies shall be wrapped in confusion,
and the tents of the wicked shall vanish away.

9 Then Job answered:

- 2 Indeed this I know for the truth,
that no man can win his case against God.
- 3 If a man chooses to argue with him,
God will not answer one question in a thousand.^d
- 4 He is wise, he is powerful;
what man has stubbornly resisted him and survived?

^a and . . . cut: or they are surely cut.

^b Or wither like . . .

^c Or and.

^d If a man . . . thousand: or If God is pleased to argue with him, man cannot answer one question in a thousand.

It is God who moves mountains, giving them no rest,
 turning them over in his wrath;
 who makes the earth start from its place
 so that its pillars are convulsed;
 who commands the sun's orb not to rise
 and shuts up the stars under his seal;
 who by himself spread out the heavens and trod on the sea-monster's back;^a who made Aldebaran and Orion,
 the Pleiades and the circle of the southern stars;
 who does great and unsearchable things,
 marvels without number.

He passes by me, and I do not see him;
 he moves on his way undiscerned by me;
 if he hurries on, who can bring him back?
 Who will ask him what he does?
 God does not turn back his wrath;
 the partisans of Rahab lie prostrate at his feet.
 How much less can I answer him
 or find words to dispute with him?
 Though I am right, I get no answer, though I plead with my accuser for mercy.
 If I summoned him to court and he responded, I do not believe that he would listen to my plea—
 for he bears hard upon me for a trifle
 and rains blows on me without cause;
 he leaves me no respite to recover my breath
 but fills me with bitter thoughts.
 If the appeal is to force, see how strong he is;
 if to justice, who can compel him to give me a hearing?
 Though I am right, he condemns me out of my own mouth;
 though I am blameless, he twists my words.
 Blameless, I say; of myself
 I reckon nothing, I hold my life cheap.
 But it is all one; therefore I say,
 'He destroys blameless and wicked alike.'
 When a sudden flood brings death,
 he mocks the plight of the innocent.
 The land is given over to the power of the wicked,
 and the eyes of its judges are blindfold.^b

My days have been swifter than a runner,
 they have slipped away and seen no prosperity;
 they have raced by like reed-built skiffs,
 swift as vultures swooping on carrion.

Or on the crests of the waves.

^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds if not he, then who?

27 If I think, 'I will forget my griefs,
 I will show a cheerful face and smile',
 28 I tremble in every nerve;^a
 I know that thou wilt not hold me innocent.
 29 If I am to be accounted guilty,
 why do I labour in vain?
 30 Though I wash myself with soap
 or cleanse my hands with lye, 31 thou wilt thrust me into the mud
 and my clothes will make me loathsome.
 32 He is not a man as I am, that I can answer him or that we can confront one another in court.
 33 If only there were one to arbitrate between us and impose his authority on us both, 34 so that God might take his rod from my back,
 and terror of him might not come on me suddenly.
 35 I would then speak without fear of him;
 for I know I am not what I am thought to be.

10 I am sickened of life;
 I will give free rein to my griefs,
 I will speak out in bitterness of soul.
 2 I will say to God, 'Do not condemn me,
 but tell me the ground of thy complaint against me.
 3 Dost thou find any advantage in oppression, in spurning the fruit of all thy labour
 and smiling on the policy of wicked men?
 4 Hast thou eyes of flesh
 or dost thou see as mortal man sees?
 5 Are thy days as those of a mortal or thy years as the life of a man, 6 that thou lookest for guilt in me
 and dost seek in me for sin,
 7 though thou knowest that I am guiltless
 and have none to save me from thee?
 8 'Thy hands gave me shape and made me;
 and dost thou at once turn and destroy me?
 9 Remember that thou didst knead me like clay;
 and wouldst thou turn me back into dust?
 10 Didst thou not pour me out like milk
 and curdle me like cheese, 11 clothe me with skin and flesh
 and knit me together with bones and sinews?
 12 Thou hast given me life and continuing favour,
 and thy providence has watched over my spirit.

^a Or I am afraid of all that I must suffer.

Yet this was the secret purpose of thy heart,
 and I know that this was thy intent: 13
 that, if I sinned, thou wouldst be watching me 14
 and wouldst not acquit me of my guilt.
 If I indeed am wicked, the worse for me! 15
 If I am righteous, even so I may lift up my head; ^a if I am proud as a lion, thou dost hunt me down 16
 and dost confront me again with marvellous power;
 thou dost renew thy onslaught upon me, 17
 and with mounting anger against me
 bringest fresh forces to the attack.
 Why didst thou bring me out of the womb? 18
 O that I had ended there and no eye had seen me, that I had been carried from the womb to the grave 19
 and were as though I had not been born.
 Is not my life short and fleeting? 20
 Let me be, that I may be happy for a moment, before I depart to a land of gloom, 21
 a land of deep darkness, never to return,
 a land of gathering shadows, of deepening darkness, 22
 lit by no ray of light, ^b dark ^c upon dark.'

Then Zophar the Naamathite began: 11

Should this spate of words not be answered? 2
 Must a man of ready tongue be always right?
 Is your endless talk to reduce men to silence? 3
 Are you to talk nonsense and no one rebuke you?
 You claim that your opinions are sound; 4
 you say to God, 'I am spotless in thy sight.'
 But if only he would speak 5
 and open his lips to talk with you, and expound to you the secrets of wisdom, 6
 for wonderful are its effects!
 [Know then that God exacts from you less than your sin deserves.]
 Can you fathom the mystery of God, 7
 can you fathom the perfection of the Almighty?
 It is higher than heaven; you can do nothing. 8
 It is deeper than Sheol; you can know nothing.
 Its measure is longer than the earth 9
 and broader than the sea.
 If he passes by, he may keep secret his passing;
 if he proclaims it, who can turn him back? 10
 He surely knows which men are false, 11 and when he sees iniquity, does he not take note of it? ^d

- 13 If only you had directed your heart rightly and spread out your hands to pray to him!
- 14 If you have wrongdoing in hand, thrust it away;
let no iniquity make its home with you.
- 15 Then you could hold up your head without fault,
a man of iron, knowing no fear.
- 16 Then you will forget your trouble;
you will remember it only as flood-waters that have passed;

and their hope is despair.

12 Then Job answered:

^e Verse 10 trans-

In God's hand are the souls of all that live, the spirits of all human kind.	10
Wisdom and might are his, with him are firmness and understanding.	13
If he pulls down, there is no rebuilding; if he imprisons, there is no release.	14
If he holds up the waters, there is drought; if he lets them go, they turn the land upside down.	15
Strength and success belong to him, deceived and deceiver are his to use.	16
He makes counsellors behave like idiots and drives judges mad;	17
he looses the bonds imposed by kings and removes the girdle of office from their waists;	18
he makes priests behave like idiots and overthrows men long in office;	19
those who are trusted he strikes dumb, he takes away the judgement of old men;	20
he heaps scorn on princes and abates the arrogance of nobles.	21
He leads peoples astray and destroys them, he lays them low, and there they lie.	23 ^a
He takes away their wisdom from the rulers of the nations and leaves them wandering in a pathless wilderness;	24
they grope in the darkness without light and are left to wander like a drunkard.	25
He uncovers mysteries deep in obscurity and into thick darkness he brings light.	22
All this I have seen with my own eyes, with my own ears I have heard it, and understood it.	13
What you know, I also know; in nothing do I fall short of you.	2
But for my part I would speak with the Almighty and am ready to argue with God,	3
while you like fools are smearing truth with your falsehoods, stitching a patchwork of lies, one and all.	4
Ah, if you would only be silent and let silence be your wisdom!	5
Now listen to my arguments and attend while I put my case.	6
Is it on God's behalf that you speak so wickedly, or in his defence that you allege what is false?	7
Must you take God's part, or put his case for him?	8
Will all be well when he examines you? Will you quibble with him as you quibble with a man?	9

^a Verse 22 transposed to follow verse 25.

- 10 He will most surely expose you if you take his part by falsely accusing me.
- 11 Will not God's majesty strike you with dread,
and terror of him overwhelm you?
- 12 Your pompous talk is dust and ashes,
your defences will crumble like clay.
- 13 Be silent, leave me to speak my mind,
and let what may come upon me!
- 14 I will put my neck in the noose
and take my life in my hands.
- 15 If he would slay me, I should not hesitate;
I should still argue my cause to his face.
- 16 This at least assures my success,
that no godless man may appear before him.
- 17 Listen then, listen to my words,
and give a hearing to my exposition.
- 18 Be sure of this: once I have stated my case
I know that I shall be acquitted.
- 19 Who is there that can argue so forcibly with me that he could reduce me straightway to silence and death?
- 20 Grant me these two conditions only,
and then I will not hide myself out of thy sight:
21 take thy heavy hand clean away from me and let not the fear of thee strike me with dread.
- 22 Then summon me, and I will answer;
or I will speak first, and do thou answer me.
- 23 How many iniquities and sins are laid to my charge?
let me know my offences and my sin.
- 24 Why dost thou hide thy face
and treat me as thy enemy?
- 25 Wilt thou chase a driven leaf,
wilt thou pursue dry chaff, 26 prescribing punishment for me
and making me heir to the iniquities of my youth, 27 putting my feet in the stocks^a and setting a slave-mark on the arches of my feet?^b

- 14 Man born of woman is short-lived and full of disquiet.
- 2 He blossoms like a flower and then he withers;
he slips away like a shadow and does not stay;
^c he is like a wine-skin that perishes or a garment that moths have eaten.
- 3 Dost thou fix thine eyes on such a creature,
and wilt thou bring him into court to confront thee?^d

^d So one Heb. MS.; others add (4) Who can produce pure out of unclean? No one.

The days of his life are determined, 5
 and the number of his months is known to thee;
 thou hast laid down a limit, which he cannot pass.
 Look away from him therefore and leave him alone 6
 counting the hours day by day like a hired labourer.

If a tree is cut down, 7
 there is hope that it will sprout again
 and fresh shoots will not fail.

Though its roots grow old in the earth, 8
 and its stump is dying in the ground,
 if it scents water it may break into bud 9
 and make new growth like a young plant.
 But a man dies, and he disappears;^a 10 man comes to his end, and where is he?
 As the waters of a lake dwindle, 11
 or as a river shrinks and runs dry,
 so mortal man lies down, never to rise 12
 until the very sky splits open.

If a man dies, can he live again?^b
 He shall never be roused from his sleep.
 If only thou wouldst hide me in Sheol 13
 and conceal me till thy anger turns aside, if thou wouldst fix a limit for my time there, and then remember me!
^c Then I would not lose hope, however long my service, 14 waiting for my relief to come.

Thou wouldst summon me, and I would answer thee; 15
 thou wouldst long to see the creature thou hast made.
 But now thou dost count every step I take, 16
 watching all my course.

Every offence of mine is stored in thy bag;
 thou dost keep my iniquity under seal. 17

Yet as a falling mountain-side is swept away, 18
 and a rock is dislodged from its place,
 as water wears away stones, 19

and a rain-storm scours the soil from the land,
 so thou hast wiped out the hope of frail man;
 thou dost overpower him finally, and he is gone;
 his face is changed, and he is banished from thy sight. 20

His flesh upon him becomes black, 22^d and his life-blood dries up within him.^e

His sons rise to honour, and he sees nothing of it;
 they sink into obscurity, and he knows it not. 21

^a Or and is powerless. ^b Line transposed from beginning of verse 14. ^c See note on verse 12. ^d Verses 21 and 22 transposed. ^e His flesh . . . within him: or His own kin, maybe, regret him, and his slaves mourn his loss.

Second cycle of speeches

- 15 Then Eliphaz the Temanite answered:
- 2 Would a man of sense give vent to such foolish notions and answer with a bellyful of wind?
- 3 Would he bandy useless words and arguments so unprofitable?
- 4 Why! you even banish the fear of God from your mind,
usurping the sole right to speak in his presence;
- 5 your iniquity dictates what you say,
and deceit is the language of your choice.
- 6 You are condemned out of your own mouth, not by me;
your own lips give evidence against you.
- 7 Were you born first of mankind?
were you brought forth before the hills?
- 8 Do you listen in God's secret council or usurp all wisdom for yourself alone?
- 9 What do you know that we do not know?
What insight have you that we do not share?
- 10 We have age and white hairs in our company,
men older than your father.
- 11 Does not the consolation of God suffice you,
a word whispered quietly in your ear?
- 12 What makes you so bold at heart,
and why do your eyes flash,
- 13 that you vent your anger on God
and pour out such a torrent of words?
- 14 What is frail man that he should be innocent,
or any child of woman that he should be justified?
- 15 If God puts no trust in his holy ones,
and the heavens are not innocent in his sight,
- 16 how much less so is man, who is loathsome and rotten and laps up evil like water!
- 17 I will tell you, if only you will listen,
and I will describe what I have seen
- 18 [what has been handed down by wise men
and was not concealed from them by their fathers;
- 19 to them alone the land was given,
and no foreigner settled among them]:
- 20 the wicked are racked with anxiety all their days,
the ruthless man for all the years in store for him.
- 21 The noise of the hunter's scare rings in his ears,
and in time of peace the raider falls on him;
- 22 he cannot hope to escape from dark death;
he is marked down for the sword;

he is flung out as food for vultures; 23
 such a man knows that his destruction is certain.
 Suddenly a black day comes upon him, 24
 distress and anxiety overwhelm him [like a king ready for battle];
 for he has lifted his hand against God 25
 and is pitting himself against the Almighty, charging him head down, 26
 with the full weight of his bossed shield.

Heavy though his jowl is and gross, 27
 and though his sides bulge with fat,
 the city where he lives will lie in ruins, 28
 his house will be deserted;
 it will soon become a heap of rubble.
 He will no longer be rich, his wealth will not last, 29 and he will strike no root in the earth; ^a scorching heat will shrivel his shoots, 30
 and his blossom will be shaken off by the wind.
 He deceives himself, trusting in his high rank, 31
 for all his dealings will come to nothing.
 His palm-trees will wither unseasonably, 32
 and his branches will not spread;
 he will be like a vine that sheds its unripe grapes, 33
 like an olive-tree that drops its blossom.
 For the godless, one and all, are barren, 34
 and their homes, enriched by bribery, are destroyed by fire;
 they conceive mischief and give birth to trouble, 35
 and the child of their womb is deceit.

Then Job answered: 16

I have heard such things often before, 2
 you who make trouble, all of you, with every breath, saying, 'Will this windbag never have done?' 3
 What makes him so stubborn in argument?'
 If you and I were to change places, 4
 I could talk like you;
 how I could harangue you
 and wag my head at you!
 But no, I would speak words of encouragement, 5
 and then my condolences would flow in streams.
 If I speak, my pain is not eased; 6
 if I am silent, it does not leave me.
 Meanwhile, my friend wearies me with false sympathy; 7
 they tear me to pieces, he and his ^b fellows. 8
 He has come forward to give evidence against me;

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds he will not escape from darkness.

^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. my.

- 9 the liar testifies against me to my face,
in his wrath he wears me down, his hatred is plain to see;
he grinds his teeth at me.
- 10 My enemies look daggers at me,
they bare their teeth to rend me,
they slash my cheeks with knives;
they are all in league against me.
- 11 God has left me at the mercy of malefactors
and cast me into the clutches of wicked men.
- 12 I was at ease, but he set upon me and mauled me,
seized me by the neck and worried me.
He set me up as his target;
13 his arrows rained upon me from every side;
pitiless, he cut deep into my vitals,
he spilt my gall on the ground.
- 14 He made breach after breach in my defences;
he fell upon me like a fighting man.
- 15 I stitched sackcloth together to cover my body
and I buried my forelock in the dust; 16 my cheeks were flushed with weeping
and dark shadows were round my eyes, 17 yet my hands were free from violence and my prayer was sincere.
- 18 O earth, cover not my blood
and let my cry for justice find no rest!
19 For look! my witness is in heaven;
there is one on high ready to answer for me.
- 20 My appeal will come before God,
while my eyes turn again and again to him.
- 21 If only there were one to arbitrate between man and God,
as between a man and his neighbour!
- 22 For there are but few years to come before I take the road from which I shall not return.
- 17 My mind is distraught, my days are numbered,
and the grave is waiting for me.
- 2 Wherever I turn, men taunt me,
and my day is darkened by their sneers.
- 3 Be thou my surety with thyself,
for who else can pledge himself for me?
- 4 Thou wilt not let those men triumph,
whose minds thou hast sunk in ignorance;
- 5 if such a man denounces his friends to their ruin,
his sons' eyes shall grow dim.
- 6 I am held up as a byword in every land,
a portent for all to see;

my eyes are dim with grief, my limbs wasted to a shadow.	7
Honest men are bewildered at this, and the innocent are indignant at my plight.	8
In spite of all, the righteous man maintains his course, and he whose hands are clean grows strong again.	9
But come on, one and all, try again! I shall not find a wise man among you.	10
My days die away like an echo; my heart-strings ^a are snapped.	11
Day is turned into night, and morning ^b light is darkened before me.	12
If I measure Sheol for my house, if I spread my couch in the darkness, if I call the grave my father	13
and the worm my mother or my sister, where, then, will my hope be, and who will take account of my piety?	14
I cannot take them down to Sheol with me, nor can they descend with me into the earth.	15
	16
Then Bildad the Shuhite answered:	18
How soon will you bridle ^c your tongue? Do but think, and then we will talk.	2
What do you mean by treating us as cattle? Are we nothing but brute beasts to you? ^d	3
Is the earth to be deserted to prove you right, or the rocks to be moved from their place?	4
No, it is the wicked whose light is extinguished, from whose fire no flame will rekindle;	5
the light fades in his tent, and his lamp dies down and fails him.	6
In his iniquity his steps totter, and his disobedience trips him up;	7
he rushes headlong into a net and steps through the hurdle that covers a pit;	8
his heel is caught in a snare, the noose grips him tight;	9
a cord lies hidden in the ground for him and a trap in the path.	10
The terrors of death suddenly beset him and make him piss over his feet.	11

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. the desires of my heart.^c bridle: prob. rdg.; Heb. unintelligible.^b morning: prob. rdg.; Heb. near.^d Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds rending himself in his anger.

- 12 For all his vigour he is paralysed with fear;
strong as he is, disaster awaits him.
- 13 Disease eats away his skin,
Death's eldest child devours his limbs.
- 14 He is torn from the safety of his home,
and Death's terrors escort him to their king.^a
- 15 Magic herbs lie strewn about his tent,
and his home is sprinkled with sulphur to protect it.
- 16 His roots beneath dry up,
and above, his branches wither.
- 17 His memory vanishes from the face of the earth and he leaves no name in the world.
- 18 He is driven from light into darkness
and banished from the land of the living.
- 19 He leaves no issue or offspring among his people,
no survivor in his earthly home;
- 20 in the west men hear of his doom and are appalled;
in the east they shudder with horror.
- 21 Such is the fate of the dwellings of evildoers, and of the homes of those who care nothing for God.

19 Then Job answered:

- 2 How long will you exhaust me
and pulverize me with words?
- 3 Time and time again you have insulted me
and shamelessly done me wrong.
- 4 If in fact I had erred,
the error would still be mine.
- 5 But if indeed you lord it over me
and try to justify the reproaches levelled at me,
I tell you, God himself has put me in the wrong,
he has drawn the net round me.
- 7 If I cry 'Murder!' no one answers;
if I appeal for help, I get no justice.
- 8 He has walled in my path so that I cannot break away,
and he has hedged in the road before me.
- 9 He has stripped me of all honour
and has taken the crown from my head.
- 10 On every side he beats me down and I am gone;
he has pulled up my tent-rope^b like a tree.
- 11 His anger is hot against me
and he counts me his enemy.
- 12 His raiders gather in force^c
and encamp about my tent.

^a Or and you conduct him to the king of terrors.

^b Or he has uprooted my hope.

^c Prob. rdg. ; Heb. adds they raise an earthquake against me.

My brothers hold aloof from me, 13
 my friends are utterly estranged from me;
 my kinsmen and intimates fall away, 14-15
 my retainers have forgotten me;
 my slave-girls treat me as a stranger,
 I have become an alien in their eyes.
 I summon my slave, but he does not answer, 16
 though I entreat him as a favour.
 My breath is noisome to my wife, 17
 and I stink in the nostrils of my own family.
 Mere children despise me 18
 and, when I rise, turn their backs on me;
 my intimate companions loathe me, 19
 and those whom I love have turned against me.
 My bones stick out through my skin,^a 20
 and I gnaw my under-lip with my teeth.

Pity me, pity me, you that are my friends; 21
 for the hand of God has touched me.
 Why do you pursue me as God pursues me? 22
 Have you not had your teeth in me long enough?
 O that my words might be inscribed, 23
 O that they might be engraved in an inscription, cut with an iron tool and filled with lead 24
 to be a witness^b in hard rock!
 But in my heart I know that my vindicator lives 25
 and that he will rise last to speak in court;
 and I shall discern my witness standing at my side^c 26
 and see my defending counsel, even God himself, whom I shall see with my own eyes, 27
 I myself and no other.

My heart failed me when you said, 28
 'What a train of disaster he has brought on himself!
 The root of the trouble lies in him.'
 Beware of the sword that points at you, 29
 the sword that sweeps away all iniquity;
 then you will know that there is a judge.^d

Then Zophar the Naamathite answered: 20

My distress of mind forces me to reply, 2 and this is why^e I hasten to speak:
 I have heard arguments that are a reproach to me, 3
 a spirit beyond my understanding gives me the answers.

- 4 Surely you know that this has been so since time began,
 since man was first set on the earth:
 5 the triumph of the wicked is short-lived,
 the glee of the godless lasts but a moment?
 6 Though he stands high as heaven,
 and his head touches the clouds,
 7 he will be swept utterly away like his own dung, and all that saw him will say, 'Where is he?'
 8 He will fly away like a dream and be lost, driven off like a vision of the night;
 9 the eye which glimpsed him shall do so no more
 and shall never again see him in his place.
 11^a The youth and strength which filled his bones shall lie with him in the dust.
 10 His sons will pay court to the poor,
 and their^b hands will give back his wealth.
 12 Though evil tastes sweet in his mouth,
 and he savours it, rolling it round his tongue, 13 though he lingers over it and will not let it go,
 and holds it back on his palate, 14 yet his food turns in his stomach,
 changing to asps' venom within him.
 15 He gulps down wealth, then vomits it up,
 or God makes him discharge it.
 16 He sucks the poison of asps,
 and the tongue of the viper kills him.
 17 Not for him to swill down rivers of cream^c or torrents of honey and curds;
 18 he must give back his gains without swallowing them,
 and spew up his profit undigested;
 19 for he has hounded and harassed the poor,
 he has seized houses which he did not build.
 20 Because his appetite gave him no rest,
 and he cannot escape his own desires, 21 nothing is left for him to eat,
 and so his well-being does not last;
 22 with every need satisfied his troubles begin,
 and the full force of hardship strikes him.
 23 God vents his anger upon him and rains on him cruel blows.
 24 He is wounded by weapons of iron and pierced by a bronze-tipped arrow; 25 out at his back the point comes,
 the gleaming tip from his gall-bladder.
 26 Darkness unrelieved awaits him,
 a fire that needs no fanning will consume him.

[Woe betide any survivor in his tent!
 The heavens will lay bare his guilt, 27
 and earth will rise up to condemn him.
 A flood will sweep away his house, 28
 rushing waters on the day of wrath.
 Such is God's reward for the wicked man 29
 and the lot appointed for the rebel^a by God.

Then Job answered: 21

Listen to me, do but listen, 2
 and let that be the comfort you offer me.
 Bear with me while I have my say; 3
 when I have finished, you may mock.
 May not I too voice^b my thoughts? 4
 Have not I as good cause to be impatient?
 Look at my plight, and be aghast; 5
 clap your hand to your mouth.
 When I stop to think, I am filled with horror, 6
 and my whole body is convulsed.

Why do the wicked enjoy long life, 7
 hale in old age, and great and powerful?
 They live to see their children settled, 8
 their kinsfolk and descendants flourishing;
 their families are secure and safe; 9
 the rod of God's justice does not reach them.
 Their bull mounts and fails not of its purpose; 10
 their cow calves and does not miscarry.
 Their children like lambs run out to play, 11
 and their little ones skip and dance;
 they rejoice with tambourine and harp 12
 and make merry to the sound of the flute.
 Their lives close in prosperity, 13
 and they go down to Sheol in peace.
 To God they say, 'Leave us alone; 14
 we do not want to know your ways.
 What is the Almighty that we should worship him, 15 or what should we gain by seeking his favour?'

Is not the prosperity of the wicked in their own hands? 16
 Are not their purposes very different from God's^c?
 How often is the lamp of the wicked snuffed out, 17
 and how often does their ruin come upon them?
 How often does God in his anger deal out suffering, bringing it in full measure to whom he will?^d

- 18 How often is that man like a wisp of straw before the wind,
like chaff which the storm-wind whirls away?
- 19 You say, 'The trouble he has earned, God will keep for his sons';
no, let him be paid for it in full and be punished.
- 20 Let his own eyes see damnation come upon him, and the wrath of the Almighty be the cup he drinks.
- 21 What joy shall he have in his children after him,
if his very months and days are numbered?
- 22 Can any man teach God,
God who judges even those in heaven above?
- 23 One man, I tell you, dies crowned with success,
lapped in security and comfort, 24 his loins full of vigour
and the marrow juicy in his bones;
25 another dies in bitterness of soul
and never tastes prosperity;
26 side by side they are laid in earth,
and worms are the shroud of both.
- 27 I know well what you are thinking and the arguments you are marshalling against me;
- 28 I know you will ask, 'Where is the great man's home now, what has become of the home of the wicked?'
- 29 Have you never questioned travellers?
Can you not learn from the signs they offer, 30 that the wicked is spared when disaster comes and conveyed to safety before the day of wrath?
- 31 No one denounces his conduct to his face,
no one requites him for what he has done.
- 32-33 When he is carried to the grave,
all the world escorts him, before and behind;
the dust of earth is sweet to him,
and thousands keep watch at his tomb.
- 34 How futile, then, is the comfort you offer me!
How false your answers ring!

Third cycle of speeches

- 22 Then Eliphaz the Temanite answered:
- 2 Can man be any benefit to God?
Can even a wise man benefit him?
- 3 Is it an asset to the Almighty if you are righteous?
Does he gain if your conduct is perfect?

Do not think that he reproves you because you are pious, that on this count he brings you to trial.	4
No: it is because you are a very wicked man, and your depravity passes all bounds.	5
Without due cause you take a brother in pledge, you strip men of their clothes and leave them naked.	6
When a man is weary, you give him no water to drink and you refuse bread to the hungry.	7
Is the earth, then, the preserve of the strong and a domain for the favoured few?	8
Widows you have sent away empty-handed, orphans you have struck defenceless.	9
No wonder that there are pitfalls in your path, that scares are set to fill you with sudden fear.	10
The light is turned into darkness, and you cannot see; the flood-waters cover you.	11
Surely God is at the zenith of the heavens and looks down on all the stars, high as they are.	12
But you say, 'What does God know? Can he see through thick darkness to judge?	13
His eyes cannot pierce the curtain of the clouds as he walks to and fro on the vault of heaven.'	14
Consider the course of the wicked man, the path the miscreant treads:	15
see how they are carried off before their time, their very foundation flowing away like a river;	16
these men said to God, 'Leave us alone; what can the Almighty do to us?'	17
Yet it was he that filled their houses with good things, although their purposes and his were very different.	18
The righteous see their fate and exult, the innocent make game of them;	19
for their riches are swept away, and the profusion of their wealth is destroyed by fire.	20
Come to terms with God and you will prosper; that is the way to mend your fortune.	21
Take instruction from his mouth and store his words in your heart.	22
If you come back to the Almighty in true sincerity, if you banish wrongdoing from your home,	23
if you treat your precious metal as dust ^a and the gold of Ophir as stones from the river-bed,	24
then the Almighty himself will be your precious metal; he will be your silver in double measure.	25
Then, with sure trust in ^b the Almighty, you will raise your face to God;	26

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. if you put your precious metal on dust. ^b with . . . in: or delighting in.

- 27 you will pray to him, and he will hear you,
and you will have cause to fulfil your vows.
28 In all your designs you will succeed,
and light will shine on your path;
29 but God brings down the pride of the haughty ^a and keeps safe the man of modest looks.
30 He will deliver the innocent, ^b and you will be delivered, because your hands are clean.

23 Then Job answered:

- 2 My thoughts today are resentful,
for God's hand is heavy on me in my trouble.
3 If only I knew how to find him,
how to enter his court,
4 I would state my case before him and set out my arguments in full;
5 then I should learn what answer he would give and find out what he had to say.
6 Would he exert his great power to browbeat me?
No; God himself would never bring a charge against me.
7 There the upright are vindicated before him,
and I shall win from my judge an absolute discharge.
8 If I go forward, ^c he is not there;
if backward, ^d I cannot find him;
9 when I turn ^e left, ^f I do not descry him;
I face right, ^g but I see him not.
10 But he knows me in action or at rest;
when he tests me, I prove to be gold.
11 My feet have kept to the path he has set me,
I have followed his way and not turned from it.
12 I do not ignore the commands that come from his lips,
I have stored in my heart what he says.
13 He decides, ^h and who can turn him from his purpose?
He does what his own heart desires.
14 What he determines, that he carries out;
his mind is full of plans like these.
15 Therefore I am fearful of meeting him;
when I think about him, ⁱ I am afraid;
16 it is God who makes me faint-hearted
and the Almighty who fills me with fear, 17 yet I am not reduced to silence by the darkness
nor ^j by the mystery which hides him.

^a The day of reckoning is no secret to the Almighty, though those who know him have no hint of its date. 24
 Wicked men move boundary-stones 2
 and carry away flocks and their shepherds.
 In the field they reap what is not theirs, 6b
 and filch the late grapes from the rich ^c man's vineyard.
 They drive off the orphan's ass 3
 and lead away the widow's ox with a rope.
 They snatch the fatherless infant from the breast 9
 and take the poor man's child in pledge.
 They jostle the poor out of the way; 4
 the destitute huddle together, hiding from them.
 The poor rise early like the wild ass, 5
 when it scours the wilderness for food;
 but though they work till nightfall, ^d
 their children go hungry. ^e Naked and bare they pass the night; 7
 in the cold they have nothing to cover them.
 They are drenched by rain-storms from the hills 8
 and hug the rock, their only shelter.
 Naked and bare they go about their work, 10
 and hungry they carry the sheaves;
 they press the oil in the shade where two walls meet, 11
 they tread the winepress but themselves go thirsty.
 Far from the city, they groan like dying men, 12
 and like wounded men they cry out;
 but God pays no heed to their prayer.
 Some there are who rebel against the light of day, 13
 who know nothing of its ways
 and do not linger in the paths of light.
 The murderer rises before daylight 14
 to kill some miserable wretch. ^f
 The seducer watches eagerly for twilight, 15 thinking, 'No eye will catch sight of me.'
 The thief prowls ^g by night, ^h
 his face covered with a mask,
 and in the darkness breaks into houses 16
 which he has marked down in the day.
 One and all, ⁱ they are strangers to the daylight,
 but dark night is morning to them; 17
 and in the welter of night they are at home.
 Such men are scum on the surface of the water; 18
 their fields have a bad name throughout the land, and no labourer will go near their vineyards.

- 20 The womb forgets him, the worm sucks him dry;
he will not be remembered ever after.^b
- 21 He may have wronged the barren childless woman
and been no help to the widow;
22 yet God in his strength carries off even the mighty;
they may rise, but they have no firm hope of life.

They are laid low and wilt like a mallow-flower;
they droop like an ear of corn on the stalk.
- 25 If this is not so, who will prove me wrong
and make nonsense of my argument?

25 Then Bildad the Shuhite answered:

- 2 Authority and awe rest with him
who has established peace in his realm on high.
- 3 His squadrons are without number;
at whom will they not spring from ambush?
- 4 How then can a man be justified in God's sight,
or one born of woman be innocent?
- 5 If the circling moon is found wanting,

26 Then Job answered:

- 2 What help you have given to the man without resource,
what deliverance you have brought to the powerless!
- 3 What counsel you offer to a man at his wit's end,
what sound advice to the foolish!
- 4 Who has prompted you to say such things,
and whose spirit is expressed in your speech?
- 5 In the underworld the shades writhe in fear, the waters and all that live in them are struck with terror.^d
- 6 Sheol is laid bare,

- 16 He may heap up silver like dirt
and get himself piles of clothes ;
17 he may get them, but the righteous will wear them,

18 The house he builds is flimsy as a bird's nest or a shelter put up by a watchman.
19 He may lie down rich one day, but never again ;
he opens his eyes and all is gone.
20 Disaster overtakes him like a flood,

God's unfathomable wisdom

- 28 There are mines for silver and places where men refine gold ;
2 where iron is won from the earth and copper smelted from the ore ;
3 the end of the seam lies in darkness,
and it is followed to its farthest limit.^a 4 Strangers cut the galleries ;^b
they are forgotten as they drive forward far from men.^c 5 While corn is springing from the earth above,
what lies beneath is raked over like a fire, 6 and out of its rocks comes lapis lazuli,
dusted with flecks of gold.
7 No bird of prey knows the way there,
and the falcon's keen eye cannot descry it ;
8 proud beasts do not set foot on it,
and no serpent comes that way.
9 Man sets his hand to the granite rock
and lays bare the roots of the mountains ;
10 he cuts galleries in the rocks,
and gems of every kind meet his eye ;
11 he dams up the sources of the streams and brings the hidden riches of the earth to light.
12 But where can wisdom be found ?
And where is the source of understanding ?
13 No man knows the way to it ;
it is not found in the land of living men.

The depths of ocean say, 'It is not in us', and the sea says, 'It is not with me.'	14
Red gold cannot buy it, nor can its price be weighed out in silver; it cannot be set in the scales against gold of Ophir, against precious cornelian or lapis lazuli; gold and crystal are not to be matched with it, no work in fine gold can be bartered for it; black coral and alabaster are not worth mention, and a parcel of wisdom fetches more than red coral; topaz ^a from Ethiopia is not to be matched with it, it cannot be set in the scales against pure gold. Where then does wisdom come from, and where is the source of understanding? No creature on earth can see it, and it is hidden from the birds of the air. Destruction and death say, 'We know of it only by report.' But God understands the way to it, he alone knows its source; for he can see to the ends of the earth and he surveys everything under heaven. When he made a counterpoise for the wind and measured out the waters in proportion, when he laid down a limit for the rain and a path for the thunderstorm, even then he saw wisdom and took stock of it, he considered it and fathomed its very depths. And he said to man:	15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22
The fear of the Lord is wisdom, and to turn from evil is understanding.	23 24 25 26 27 28

Job's final survey of his case

Then Job resumed his discourse:	29
If I could only go back to the old days, to the time when God was watching over me, when his lamp shone above my head, and by its light I walked through the darkness!	2 3
If I could be as in the days of my prime, when God protected my home, while the Almighty was still there at my side, and my servants stood round me, while my path flowed with milk, and the rocks streamed oil!	4 5 6

- 7 If I went through the gate out of the town
to take my seat in the public square, 8 young men saw me and kept out of sight;
old men rose to their feet,
9 men in authority broke off their talk and put their hands to their lips;
10 the voices of the nobles died away,
and every man held his tongue.
21^a They listened to me expectantly and waited in silence for my opinion.
22 When I had spoken, no one spoke again;
my words fell gently on them;
23 they waited for them as for rain
and drank them in like showers in spring.
24 When I smiled on them, they took heart;
when my face lit up, they lost their gloomy looks.
25 I presided over them, planning their course,

12 how I saved the poor man when he called for help

13 The man threatened with ruin blessed me, and I made the widow's heart sing for joy.
14 I put on righteousness as a garment and it clothed me;
justice, like a cloak or a turban, wrapped me round.
15 I was eyes to the blind
and feet to the lame;
16 I was a father to the needy,
and I took up the stranger's cause.
17 I broke the fangs of the miscreant

Speeches of Elihu

- 32 So these three men gave up answering Job; for he continued to think himself righteous. Then Elihu son of Barakel the Buzite, of the family of Ram, grew angry; angry because Job had made himself out more righteous than God,^d and angry with the three friends because they had found no answer to Job and had let God appear wrong.^e Now Elihu had hung back while they were talking with Job because they were older than he; but, when he saw that the three had no answer, he could no longer contain his anger. So Elihu son of Barakel the Buzite began to speak:

- I am young in years,
 and you are old;
 that is why I held back and shrank
 from displaying my knowledge in front of you.
- 7 I said to myself, 'Let age speak,
 and length of years expound wisdom.'
- 8 But the spirit of God himself is in man,
 and the breath of the Almighty gives him understanding;
- 9 it is not only the old who are wise
 or the aged who understand what is right.
- 10 Therefore I say: Listen to me;
 I too will display my knowledge.
- 11 Look, I have been waiting upon your words,
 listening for the conclusions of your thoughts,
 while you sought for phrases;
- 12 I have been giving thought to your conclusions,
 but not one of you refutes Job or answers his arguments.
- 13 Take care then not to claim that you have found wisdom;
 God will rebut him, not man.
- 14 I will not string f words together like you g
 or answer him as you have done.

If these men are confounded and no longer answer, 15
 if words fail them,
 am I to wait because they do not speak, 16
 because they stand there and no longer answer?
 I, too, have a furrow to plough; 17
 I will express my opinion;
 for I am bursting with words, 18
 a bellyful of wind gripes me.
 My stomach is distended as if with wine, 19
 bulging like a blacksmith's bellows;
 I must speak to find relief, 20
 I must open my mouth and answer;
 I will show no favour to anyone, 21
 I will flatter no one, God or man;^a for I cannot use flattering titles, 22
 or my Maker would soon do away with me.

Come now, Job, listen to my words 33
 and attend carefully to everything I say.
 Look, I am ready to answer;
 the words are on the tip of my tongue.
 My heart assures me that I speak with knowledge,
 and that my lips speak with sincerity. 3
 For the spirit of God made me, and the breath of the Almighty gave me life. 4
 Answer me if you can,
 marshal your arguments and confront me. 5
 In God's sight^b I am just what you are;
 I too am only a handful of clay. 6
 Fear of me need not abash you,
 nor any pressure from me overawe you. 7
 You have said your say and I heard you;
 I have listened to the sound of your words: 8
 'I am innocent', you said, 'and free from offence, blameless and without guilt. 9
 Yet God finds occasions to put me in the wrong
 and counts me his enemy;
 he puts my feet in the stocks 10
 and keeps a close watch on all I do.' 11

Well, this is my answer: You are wrong. 12
 God is greater than man;
 why then plead your case with him? 13
 for no one can answer his arguments.
 Indeed, once God has spoken 14
 he does not speak a second time to confirm it.

 17 To turn a man from reckless conduct,
 to check the pride^a of mortal man, 18 at the edge of the pit he holds him back alive
 and stops him from crossing the river of death.
 19 Or again, man learns his lesson on a bed of pain,
 tormented by a ceaseless ague in his bones;
 20 he turns from his food with loathing
 and has no relish for the choicest meats; 21 his flesh hangs loose upon him,
 his bones are loosened and out of joint,
 22 his soul draws near to the pit,
 his life to the ministers of death.
 23 Yet if an angel, one of thousands, stands by him,
 a mediator between him and God,
 to expound what he has done right
 and to secure mortal man his due;^b 24 if he speaks in the man's favour and says, 'Reprieve him, let him not go down to the pit, I have the price of his release';
 25 then that man will grow sturdier^c than he was in youth,
 he will return to the days of his prime.
 26 If he entreats God to show him favour, to let him see his face and shout for joy;^d 27 if he declares before all men, 'I have sinned, turned right into wrong and thought nothing of it'; 28 then he saves himself from going down to the pit,
 he lives and sees the light.
 29 All these things God may do to a man,
 again and yet again,
 30 bringing him back from the pit
 to enjoy the full light of life.
 31 Listen, Job, and attend to me;
 be silent, and I myself will speak.
 32 If you have any arguments, answer me;
 speak, and I would gladly find you proved right;
 33 but if you have none, listen to me:
 keep silence, and I will teach you wisdom.

^c will

Let us then examine for ourselves what is right; let us together establish the true good.	4
Job has said, 'I am innocent, but God has deprived me of justice, he has falsified my case; my state is desperate, yet I have done no wrong.'	5 6
Was there ever a man like Job with his thirst for irreverent talk, choosing bad company to share his journeys, a fellow-traveller with wicked men?	7 8
For he says that it brings a man no profit to find favour with God. But listen to me, you men of good sense.	9 10
Far be it from God to do evil or the Almighty to play false!
For he pays a man according to his work and sees that he gets what his conduct deserves. The truth is, God does no wrong, the Almighty does not pervert justice.	11 12
Who committed the earth to his keeping? Who but he established the whole world? If he were to turn his thoughts inwards and recall his life-giving spirit, all that lives would perish on the instant, and man return again to dust.	13 14 15
Now Job, if you have the wit, consider this; listen to the words I speak. Can it be that a hater of justice holds the reins? Do you disparage a sovereign whose rule is so fair, who will say to a prince, 'You scoundrel', and call his magnates blackguards to their faces; who does not show special favour to those in office and thinks no more of rich than of poor? All alike are God's creatures, who may die in a moment, in the middle of the night; at his touch the rich are no more, and the mighty vanish though no hand is laid on them. His eyes are on the ways of men, and he sees every step they take; there is nowhere so dark, so deep in shadow, that wrongdoers may hide from him. Therefore he repudiates all that they do; he turns on them in the night, and they are crushed. There are no appointed days for men to appear before God for judgement. He holds no inquiry, but breaks the powerful and sets up others in their place.	16 17 18 19 20 21 22 25 23 24

- 26^a For their crimes he strikes them down^b and makes them disgorge their bloated wealth,^c 27 because they have ceased to obey him and pay no heed to his ways.
28 Then the cry of the poor reaches his ears,
and he hears the cry of the distressed.
29-30 [Even if he is silent, who can condemn him?
If he looks away, who can find fault?
What though he makes a godless man king
over a stubborn nation and all its people?]
- 31 But suppose you were to say to God,
'I have overstepped the mark; I will do no more^d mischief.
32 Vile wretch that I am, be thou my guide;
whatever wrong I have done, I will do wrong no more.'
33 Will he, at these words, condone your rejection of him?
It is for you to decide, not me:
but what can you answer?
34 Men of good sense will say,
any intelligent hearer will tell me, 35 'Job talks with no knowledge,
and there is no sense in what he says.
36 If only Job could be put to the test once and for all for answers that are meant to make mischief!
37 He is a sinner and a rebel as well^e with his endless ranting against God.'

35 Then Elihu went on to say:

- 2 Do you think that this is a sound plea
or maintain that you are in the right against God?— 3 if you say, 'What would be the advantage to me?
how much should I gain from sinning?'
4 I will bring arguments myself against you,
you and your three friends:
5 Look up at the sky and then consider,
observe the rain-clouds towering above you.
6 How does it touch him if you have sinned?
However many your misdeeds, what does it mean to him?
7 If you do right, what good do you bring him,
or what does he gain from you?
8 Your wickedness touches only men, such as you are;
the right that you do affects none but mortal man.
- 9 Men will cry out beneath the burdens of oppression and call for help against the power of the great;

^a Verse 25 transposed to follow verse 22. ^b he strikes them down: prob. rdg.; Heb. om.^c Or and chastises them where people see.^d more: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure.^e Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds between us it is enough.

but none of them asks, 'Where is God my Maker 10
 who gives protection by night, who grants us more knowledge than the beasts of the earth 11
 and makes us wiser than the birds of the air?'
 So, when they cry out, he does not answer, 12
 because they are self-willed and proud.
 All to no purpose! God does not listen, 13
 the Almighty does not see.

The worse for you when you say, 'He does not see me'!
 Humble yourself^d in his presence and wait for his word. 14
 But now, because God does not grow angry and punish 15
 and because he lets folly pass unheeded, Job gives vent to windy nonsense 16
 and makes a parade of empty words.

Then Elihu went on to say: 36

Be patient a little longer, and let me enlighten you; 2
 there is still something more to be said on God's side.
 I will search far and wide to support my conclusions, 3
 as I defend the justice of my Maker.
 There are no flaws in my reasoning; 4
 before you stands one whose conclusions are sound.

God,^b I say, repudiates the high and^c mighty 5
 and does not let the wicked prosper, 6
 but allows the just claims of the poor and suffering;
 he does not deprive the sufferer of his due.^d 7
 Look at kings on their thrones:
 when God gives them sovereign power, they grow arrogant.
 Next you may see them loaded with fetters, 8
 held fast in captives' chains:
 he denounces their conduct to them, 9
 showing how insolence and tyranny was their offence;
 his warnings sound in their ears 10
 and summon them to turn back from their evil courses.
 If they listen to him, they spend^e their days in prosperity 11
 and their years in comfort.
 But, if they do not listen, they die, their lesson unlearned, 12
 and cross the river of death.
 Proud men rage against him 13
 and do not cry to him for help when caught in his toils;
 so they die in their prime, 14
 like male prostitutes,^f worn out.^g

- 15 Those who suffer he rescues through suffering and teaches them by the discipline of affliction.
- 16 Beware, if you are tempted to exchange hardship for comfort,^a for unlimited plenty spread before you, and a generous table; 17 if you eat your fill of a rich man's fare
when you are occupied with the business of the law, 18 do not be led astray by lavish gifts of wine and do not let bribery warp your judgement.
19 Will that wealth of yours, however great, avail you,
or all the resources of your high position?
21^b Take care not to turn to mischief;
for that is why you are tried by affliction.
- 20 Have no fear if in the breathless terrors of the night
you see nations vanish where they stand.
22 God towers in majesty above us;
who wields such sovereign power as he?
23 Who has prescribed his course for him?
Who has said to him, 'Thou hast done wrong'?
- 24 Remember then to sing the praises of his work,
as men have always sung them.
25 All men stand back from^c him;
the race of mortals look on from afar.
26 Consider; God is so great that we cannot know him;
the number of his years is beyond reckoning.
27 He draws up drops of water from the sea^d
and distils rain from the mist he has made; 28 the rain-clouds pour down in torrents,^e
they descend in showers on mankind;
31 thus he sustains the nations and gives them food in plenty.
- 29 Can any man read the secret of the sailing clouds,
spread like a carpet under^f his pavilion?
30 See how he unrolls the mist across the waters,
and its streamers^g cover the sea.
- 32^h He charges the thunderbolts with flame
and launches them straightⁱ at the mark; 33 in his anger he calls up the tempest,
and the thunder is the herald of its coming.^j
- 37 This too makes my heart beat wildly
and start from its place.

and the rumbling of his utterance.

Under the vault of heaven he lets it roll, 3
 and his lightning reaches the ends of the earth; 4
 there follows a sound of roaring 4
 as he thunders with the voice of majesty.^a 5
 God's voice is marvellous in its working; ^b 5
 he does great deeds that pass our knowledge. 6
 For he says to the snow, 'Fall to earth', 6 and to the rainstorms, 'Be fierce.'
 And when his voice is heard,
 the floods of rain pour down unchecked.^c
 He shuts every man fast indoors,^d 7 and all men whom he has made must stand idle; 8
 the beasts withdraw into their lairs 8
 and take refuge in their dens.
 The hurricane bursts from its prison, 9
 and the rain-winds bring bitter cold; 9 at the breath of God the ice-sheet is formed, 10
 and the wide waters are frozen hard as iron. 10
 He gives the dense clouds their load of moisture, 11
 and the clouds spread his mist abroad, 11
 as they travel round in their courses, 12 steered by his guiding hand to do his bidding
 all over the habitable world.^e

Listen, Job, to this argument; 14
 stand still, and consider God's wonderful works.
 Do you know how God assigns them their tasks, 15
 how he sends light flashing from his clouds?
 Do you know why the clouds hang poised overhead, 16
 a wonderful work of his consummate skill, sweating there in your stifling clothes, 17
 when the earth lies sultry under the south wind?
 Can you beat out the vault of the skies, as he does, 18
 hard as a mirror of cast metal?
 Teach us then what to say to him; 19
 for all is dark, and we cannot marshal our thoughts.
 Can any man dictate to God when he is ^f to speak? 20
 or command him to make proclamation?
 At one moment the light is not seen, 21
 it is overcast with clouds and rain;
 then the wind passes by and clears them away,
 and a golden glow comes from the north.^g 22

^a See note on verse 6. ^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. thundering. ^c And when . . . unchecked: prob. rdg.; some words in these lines transposed from verse 4. ^d indoors: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure. ^e Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds (13) whether he makes him attain the rod, or his earth, or constant love. ^f Prob. rdg.; Heb. - 23 But the Almighty we cannot find; his power is beyond our ken,
and his righteousness not slow to do justice.
- 24 Therefore mortal men pay him reverence,
and all who are wise look to him.

God's answer and Job's submission

- 38 Then the LORD answered Job out of the tempest:
- 2 Who is this whose ignorant words
cloud my design in darkness?
- 3 Brace yourself and stand up like a man;
I will ask questions, and you shall answer.
- 4 Where were you when I laid the earth's foundations?
Tell me, if you know and understand.
- 5 Who settled its dimensions? Surely you should know.
Who stretched his measuring-line over it?
- 6 On what do its supporting pillars rest?
Who set its corner-stone in place,
7 when the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted aloud?
- 8 Who watched over the birth of the sea, ^a
when it burst in flood from the womb?—
- 9 when I wrapped it in a blanket of cloud
and cradled it in fog,
10 when I established its bounds,
fixing its doors and bars in place,
11 and said, 'Thus far shall you come and no farther, and here your surging waves shall halt.' ^b
- 12 In all your life have you ever called up the dawn
or shown the morning its place?
- 13 Have you taught it to grasp the fringes of the earth and shake the Dog-star from its place; 14 to bring up the horizon in relief as clay under a seal, until all things stand out like the folds of a cloak, 15 when the light of the Dog-star is dimmed and the stars of the Navigator's Line go out one by one?
- 16 Have you descended to the springs of the sea
or walked in the unfathomable deep?
- 17 Have the gates of death been revealed to you?
Have you ever seen the door-keepers of the place of darkness?
- 18 Have you comprehended the vast expanse of the world?
Come, tell me all this, if you know.
- 19 Which is the way to the home of light and where does darkness dwell?

And can you then take each to its appointed bound 20
 and escort it on its homeward path?
 Doubtless you know all this; for you were born already, 21
 so long is the span of your life!

Have you visited the storehouse of the snow 22
 or seen the arsenal where hail is stored, which I have kept ready for the day of calamity, 23
 for war and for the hour of battle?
 By what paths is the heat spread abroad 24
 or the east wind carried far and wide over the earth?
 Who has cut channels for the downpour 25
 and cleared a passage for the thunderstorm, for rain to fall on land where no man lives 26
 and on the deserted wilderness, clothing lands waste and derelict with green 27
 and making grass grow on thirsty ground^a?
 Has the rain a father? 28
 Who sired the drops of dew?
 Whose womb gave birth to the ice, 29
 and who was the mother of the frost from heaven, which lays a stony cover over the waters 30
 and freezes the expanse of ocean?
 Can you bind the cluster of the Pleiades 31
 or loose Orion's belt?
 Can you bring out the signs of the zodiac in their season 32
 or guide Aldebaran and its train?
 Did you proclaim the rules that govern the heavens, 33
 or determine the laws of nature on earth?
 Can you command the dense clouds 34
 to cover you with their weight of waters?
 If you bid lightning speed on its way, 35
 will it say to you, 'I am ready'?
 Who put wisdom in depths of darkness 36
 and veiled understanding in secrecy^b?
 Who is wise enough to marshal the rain-clouds 37
 and empty the cisterns of heaven,
 when the dusty soil sets hard as iron, 38
 and the clods of earth cling together?
 Do you hunt her prey for the lioness 39
 and satisfy the hunger of young lions,

and bring their offspring to the birth,
4 when the fawns grow and thrive in the open forest,
and go forth and do not return?
5 Who has let the wild ass of Syria range at will and given the wild ass of Arabia its freedom?— 6 whose home I have made in the wilderness and its lair in the saltings;
7 it disdains the noise of the city and is deaf to the driver's shouting;
8 it roams the hills as its pasture

9 Does the wild ox consent to serve you,
does it spend the night in your stall?
10 Can you harness its strength^a with ropes,
or will it harrow the furrows^a after you?
11 Can you depend on it, strong as it is,
or leave your labour to it?
12 Do you trust it to come back

13 The wings of the ostrich are stunted;^b
^c her pinions and plumage are so scanty^d 14 that she abandons her eggs to the ground, letting them be kept warm by the sand.
15 She forgets that a foot may crush them,
or a wild beast trample on them;
16 she treats her chicks heartlessly as if they were not hers,
not caring if her labour is wasted 17 (for God has denied her wisdom and left her without sense), 18 while like a cock she struts over the uplands,
scorning both horse and rider.
19 Did you give the horse his strength?
Did you clothe his neck with a mane?
20 Do you make him quiver like a locust's wings,
when his shrill neighing strikes terror?
21 He shows his mettle as he paws and prances;

Does your skill teach the hawk to use its pinions and spread its wings towards the south? Do you instruct the vulture to fly high and build its nest aloft?	26 27
It dwells among the rocks and there it lodges; its station is a crevice in the rock; from there it searches for food, keenly scanning the distance, that its brood may be gorged with blood; and where the slain are, there the vulture is.	28 29 30
Can you pull out the whale ^b with a gaff or can you slip a noose round its tongue? Can you pass a cord through its nose or put a hook through its jaw?	41 1 ^c 2
Will it plead with you for mercy or beg its life with soft words? Will it enter into an agreement with you to become your slave for life?	3 4
Will you toy with it as with a bird or keep it on a string like a song-bird for your maidens? Do trading-partners haggle over it or merchants share it out?	5 6
 Then the LORD said to Job:	 40
Is it for a man who disputes with the Almighty to be stubborn? Should he that argues with God answer back?	2
 And Job answered the LORD:	 3
What reply can I give thee, I who carry no weight? I put my finger to my lips. I have spoken once and now will not answer again; twice have I spoken, and I will do so no more.	4 5
 Then the LORD answered Job out of the tempest:	 6
Brace yourself and stand up like a man; I will ask questions, and you shall answer. Dare you deny that I am just or put me in the wrong that you may be right?	7 8

- 24 Can a man blind^f his eyes and take him

- 41 7^g Can you fill his skin with harpoons
or his head with fish-hooks?
- 8 If ever you lift your hand against him,
think of the struggle that awaits you, and let be.
- 9 No, such a man is in desperate case,

His breath sets burning coals ablaze, and flames flash from his mouth. Strength is lodged in his neck, and untiring energy dances ahead of him.	21 22
Close knit is his underbelly, no pressure will make it yield.	23
His heart is firm as a rock, firm as the nether millstone.	24
When he raises himself, strong men ^c take fright, bewildered at the lashings of his tail.	25
Sword or spear, dagger or javelin, if they touch him, they have no effect.	26
Iron he counts as straw, and bronze as rotting wood.	27
No arrow can pierce him, and for him sling-stones are turned into chaff; to him a club is a mere reed, and he laughs at the swish of the sabre.	28 29
Armoured beneath with jagged sherds, he sprawls on the mud like a threshing-sledge.	30
He makes the deep water boil like a cauldron, he whips up the lake like ointment in a mixing-bowl.	31
He leaves a shining trail behind him, and the great river is like white hair in his wake.	32

42 Then Job answered the LORD:

- 5 I knew of thee then only by report,

Epilogue

- 7 When the LORD had finished speaking to Job, he said to Eliphaz the Temanite, 'I am angry with you and your two friends, because you have not spoken
8 as you ought about me, as my servant Job has done. So now take seven bulls and seven rams, go to my servant Job and offer a whole-offering for yourselves, and he will intercede for you; I will surely show him favour by not being harsh with you because you have not spoken as you ought about me, 9 as he has done.' Then Eliphaz the Temanite and Bildad the Shuhite and Zophar the Naamathite went and carried out the LORD's command, and the LORD showed favour to Job when he had interceded for his friends.
10 So the LORD restored Job's fortunes and doubled all his possessions.
- 11 Then all Job's brothers and sisters and his former acquaintance came and feasted with him in his home, and they consoled and comforted him for all the misfortunes which the LORD had brought on him; and each of them
12 gave him a sheep^c and a gold ring. Furthermore, the LORD blessed the end of Job's life more than the beginning; and he had fourteen thousand head of small cattle and six thousand camels, a thousand yoke of oxen and 13 14 as many she-asses. He had seven^d sons and three daughters; and he named his eldest daughter Jemimah, the second Keziah and the third Kerenhappuch. There were no women in all the world so beautiful as Job's daughters; and their father gave them an inheritance with their brothers.
- 16 Thereafter Job lived another hundred and forty years, he saw his sons 17 and his grandsons to four generations, and died at a very great age.

1

Happy is the man 1
who does not take the wicked for his guide
nor walk the road that sinners tread
nor take his seat among the scornful;
the law of the LORD is his delight, 2
the law his meditation night and day.
He is like a tree 3
planted beside a watercourse,
which yields its fruit in season
and its leaf never withers:
in all that he does he prospers.
Wicked men are not like this; 4
they are like chaff driven by the wind.
So when judgement comes the wicked shall not stand firm, 5 nor shall sinners stand in the assembly of the righteous.
The LORD watches over the way of the righteous, 6
but the way of the wicked is doomed.

2

Why are the nations in turmoil? 1
Why do the peoples hatch their futile plots?
The kings of the earth stand ready, 2
and the rulers conspire together against the LORD and his anointed king.
'Let us break their fetters,' they cry, 3
'let us throw off their chains!'
The Lord who sits enthroned in heaven 4 laughs them to scorn;
then he rebukes them in anger, 5
he threatens them in his wrath.
Of me he says, 'I have enthroned my king 6
on Zion my holy mountain.'
I will repeat the LORD's decree: 7
'You are my son,' he said;
'this day I become your father.
Ask of me what you will: 8
I will give you nations as your inheritance,
the ends of the earth as your possession.

- 9 You shall break them with a rod of iron,
you shall shatter them like a clay pot.’
- 10 Be mindful then, you kings;
learn your lesson, rulers of the earth:
- 11-12 worship the LORD with reverence;
tremble, and kiss the king,^a lest the LORD be angry and you are struck down in mid course;
for his anger flares up in a moment.
Happy are all who find refuge in him.

3

- 1 LORD, how my enemies have multiplied!
Many rise up against me,
2 many there are who say of me,
‘God will not bring him victory.’
- 3 But thou, LORD, art a shield to cover me:
thou art my glory, and thou dost raise my head high.
- 4 I cry aloud to the LORD,
and he answers me from his holy mountain.
5 I lie down and sleep,
and I wake again, for the LORD upholds me.
- 6 I will not fear the nations in their myriads
who set on me from all sides.
- 7 Rise up, LORD; save me, O my God.
Thou dost strike all my foes across the face and breakest the teeth of the wicked.
- 8 Thine is the victory, O LORD,
and may^b thy blessing rest upon thy people.

4

- 1 Answer me when I call, O God, maintainer of my right,
I was hard pressed, and thou didst set me at large;
be gracious to me now and hear my prayer.
- 2 Mortal men, how long will you pay me not honour but dishonour,
or set your heart on trifles and run after lies?
- 3 Know that the LORD has shown me^c his marvellous love;
the LORD hears when I call to him.
- 4 However angry your hearts, do not do wrong;
though you lie abed resentful,^d do not break silence:
5 pay your due of sacrifice, and trust in the LORD.
- 6 There are many who say, ‘If only we might be prosperous again!
But the light of thy presence has fled from us, O LORD.’

^a tremble . . . king: prob. rdg.; lit. tremble and kiss the mighty one; Heb. obscure.

Yet in my heart thou hast put more happiness 7
 than they enjoyed when there was corn and wine in plenty.
 Now I will lie down in peace, and sleep; 8
 for thou alone, O LORD, makest me live unafraid.

5

Listen to my words, O LORD, 1
 consider my inmost thoughts;
 heed my cry for help, my king and my God. 2
 In the morning, when I say my prayers, 3 thou wilt hear me.
 I set out my morning sacrifice^a
 and watch for thee, O LORD.
 For thou art not a God who welcomes wickedness; 4
 evil can be no guest of thine.^b
 There is no place for arrogance before thee; 5
 thou hatest evildoers,
 thou makest an end of all liars. 6
 The LORD detests traitors and men of blood.
 But I, through thy great love, may come into thy house, 7
 and bow low toward thy holy temple in awe of thee.
 Lead me, LORD, in thy righteousness, 8
 because my enemies are on the watch;
 give me a straight path to follow.
 There is no trusting what they say, 9
 they are nothing but wind.
 Their throats are an open^c sepulchre;
 smooth talk runs off their tongues.
 Bring ruin on them, O God; 10
 let them fall by their own devices.
 Cast them out, after all their rebellions,
 for they have defied thee.
 But let all who take refuge in thee rejoice, 11
 let them for ever break into shouts of joy;
 shelter those who love thy name,
 that they may exult in thee.
 For thou, O LORD, wilt bless the righteous; 12
 thou wilt hedge him round with favour as with a shield.

6

 do not punish me in thy fury.

 And thou, O LORD—how long?
 Come back, O LORD; set my soul free,

I am wearied with groaning;
 all night long my pillow is wet with tears,
 I soak my bed with weeping.
 Grief dims my eyes;
 they are worn out with all my woes.
 Away from me, all you evildoers,
 for the LORD has heard the sound of my weeping.
 The LORD has heard my entreaty;
 the LORD will accept my prayer.
 All my enemies shall be confounded and dismayed;
 they shall turn away in sudden confusion.

7

O LORD my God, in thee I find refuge;
 save me, rescue me from my pursuers,
 before they tear at my throat like a lion
 and carry me off beyond hope of rescue.
 O LORD my God, if I have done any of these things—
 if I have stained my hands with guilt,
 if I have repaid a friend evil for good or set free an enemy who attacked me without cause,
 may my adversary come after me and overtake me,
 trample my life to the ground
 and lay my honour in the dust!

Arise, O LORD, in thy anger, rouse thyself in wrath against my foes.
 Awake, my God who hast ordered that justice be done;
 let the peoples assemble around thee,
 and take thou thy seat on high above them.
 O LORD, thou who dost pass sentence on the nations,
 O LORD, judge me as my righteousness deserves,
 for I am clearly innocent.
 Let wicked men do no more harm,
 establish the reign of righteousness,^a thou who examinest both heart and mind,
 thou righteous God.

God, the High God, is my shield who saves men of honest heart.

^a the reign of righteousness: or the cause of the righteous.

God is a just judge, every day he requites the raging enemy.	11
He sharpens his sword, strings his bow and makes it ready.	12
He has prepared his deadly shafts and tipped his arrows with fire.	13
But the enemy is in labour with iniquity; he conceives mischief, and his brood is lies.	14
He has made a pit and dug it deep, and he himself shall fall into the hole that he has made. His mischief shall recoil upon himself, and his violence fall on his own head.	15
I will praise the LORD for his righteousness and sing a psalm to the name of the LORD Most High.	16
	17

8

O LORD our sovereign, how glorious is thy name in all the earth!	1
Thy majesty is praised high as the heavens. Out of the mouths of babes, of infants at the breast, thou hast rebuked ^a the mighty,	2
silencing enmity and vengeance to teach thy foes a lesson. When I look up at thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars set in their place by thee,	3
what is man that thou shouldst remember him, mortal man that thou shouldst care for him?	4
Yet thou hast made him little less than a god, crowning him with glory and honour.	5
Thou makest him master over all thy creatures; thou hast put everything under his feet:	6
all sheep and oxen, all the wild beasts,	7
the birds in the air and the fish in the sea, and all that moves along the paths of ocean.	8
O LORD our sovereign, how glorious is thy name in all the earth!	9

9-10

I will praise thee, O LORD, with all my heart, I will tell the story of thy marvellous acts.	1
I will rejoice and exult in thee,	2
I will praise thy name in psalms, O thou Most High, when my enemies turn back, when they fall headlong and perish at thy appearing;	3

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. founded.

- 4 for thou hast upheld my right and my cause,
seated on thy throne, thou righteous judge.
- 5 Thou hast rebuked the nations and overwhelmed the ungodly,
thou hast blotted out their name for all time.
- 6 The strongholds of the enemy are thrown down for evermore;
thou hast laid their cities in ruins, all memory of them is lost.
- 7 The LORD thunders,^a he sits enthroned for ever:
he has set up his throne, his judgement-seat.
- 8 He it is who will judge the world with justice and try the cause of the peoples fairly.
- 9 So may the LORD be a tower of strength for the oppressed,
a tower of strength in time of need,
- 10 that those who acknowledge thy name may trust in thee;
for thou, LORD, dost not forsake those who seek thee.
- 11 Sing psalms to the LORD who dwells in Zion,
proclaim his deeds among the nations.
- 12 For the Avenger of blood has remembered men's desire,
and has not forgotten the cry of the poor.
- 13 Have pity on me, O LORD; look upon my affliction, thou who hast lifted me up^b and caught me back from the gates of death, 14 that I may repeat all thy praise and exult at this deliverance in the gates of Zion's city.
- 15 The nations have plunged into a pit of their own making;
their own feet are entangled in the net which they hid.
- 16 Now the LORD makes himself known. Justice is done:
the wicked man is trapped in his own devices.
- 17 They rush blindly down to Sheol, the wicked,
all the nations who are heedless of God.
- 18 But the poor shall not always be unheeded
nor the hope of the destitute be always vain.
- 19 Arise, LORD, give man no chance to boast his strength;
summon the nations before thee for judgement.
- 20 Strike them with fear, O LORD,
let the nations know that they are but men.
- 10 Why stand so far off, LORD,
hiding thyself in time of need?
- 2 The wicked man in his pride hunts down the poor:
may his crafty schemes be his own undoing!
- 3 The wicked man is obsessed with his own desires,
and in his greed gives wickedness his blessing;
4 arrogant as he is, he scorns the LORD and leaves no place for God in all his schemes.
- 5 His ways are always devious;
thy judgements are beyond his grasp,^c
and he scoffs at all restraint.

^a thunders: prob. rdg., Heb. unintelligible. ^b thou . . . me up: prob. rdg.; Heb. from those who hate me. ^c beyond his grasp: prob. rdg.; Heb. on high before him.

He says to himself, 'I shall never be shaken; no misfortune can check my course.' ^a	6
His mouth is full of lies and violence; mischief and trouble lurk under his tongue.	7
He lies in ambush in the villages and murders innocent men by stealth.	8
He is watching ^b intently for some poor wretch; he seizes him and drags him away in his net;	9
he crouches stealthily, like a lion in its lair crouching to seize its victim;
the good man ^c is struck down and sinks to the ground, and poor wretches fall into his toils.	10
He says to himself, 'God has forgotten; he has hidden his face and has seen nothing.'	11
Arise, LORD, set ^d thy hand to the task; do not forget the poor, O God.	12
Why, O God, has the wicked man rejected thee and said to himself that thou dost not care?	13
Thou seest that mischief and trouble are his companions, thou takest the matter into thy own hands.	14
The poor victim commits himself to thee; fatherless, he finds in thee his helper.
Break the power of wickedness and wrong; hunt out all wickedness until thou canst find no more.	15
The LORD is king for ever and ever; the nations have vanished from his land.	16
Thou hast heard the lament of the humble, O LORD, and art attentive to their heart's desire,	17
bringing justice to the orphan and the downtrodden that fear may never drive men from their homes again.	18

11

In the LORD I have found my refuge; why do you say to me, 'Flee to the mountains like a bird;	1
see how the wicked string their bows and fit the arrow to the string, to shoot down honest men out of the darkness?'	2
When foundations are undermined, what can the good man do?	3
The LORD is in his holy temple, the LORD's throne is in heaven.	4
His eye is upon mankind, he takes their measure at a glance.
The LORD weighs just and unjust and hates with all his soul the lover of violence.	5

^a my course: prob. rdg.; Heb. which. ^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. storing up. ^c the good man: prob. rdg.; Heb. om. ^d Or who setteth.

He shall rain down red-hot coals upon the wicked;
 brimstone and scorching winds shall be the cup they drink.
 For the LORD is just and loves just dealing;
 his face is turned towards the upright man.

12

Help, LORD, for loyalty is no more;
 good faith between man and man is over.
 One man lies to another:
 they talk with smooth lip and double heart.
 May the LORD make an end of such smooth lips
 and the tongue that talks so boastfully!
 They said, 'Our tongue can win the day.
 Words are our ally; who can master us?'
 'For the ruin of the poor, for the groans of the needy,
 now I will arise,' says the LORD,
 'I will place him in the safety for which he longs.'

The words of the LORD are pure words:
 silver refined in a crucible,
 gold^a seven times purified.
 Do thou, LORD, protect us and guard us from a profligate and evil generation.^b
 The wicked flaunt themselves on every side, while profligacy stands high among mankind.

13

How long, O LORD, wilt thou quite forget me?
 How long wilt thou hide thy face from me?
 How long must I suffer anguish in my soul,
 grief in my heart, day and night?
 How long shall my enemy lord it over me?
 Look now and answer me, O LORD my God.
 Give light to my eyes lest I sleep the sleep of death,
 lest my adversary say, 'I have overthrown him',
 and my enemies rejoice at my downfall.
 But for my part I trust in thy true love.
 My heart shall rejoice, for thou hast set me free.
 I will sing to the LORD, who has granted all my desire.

14

The impious fool says in his heart,
 'There is no God.'
 How vile men are, how depraved and loathsome;
 not one does anything good!

^c Verses 1-7: cp. Ps. 53. 1-6.

The LORD looks down from heaven on all mankind
 to see if any act wisely,
 if any seek out God.
 But all are disloyal, all are rotten to the core;
 not one does anything good,
 no, not even one.

Shall they not rue it,
 all evildoers who devour my people
 as men devour bread,
 and never call upon the LORD?
 There they were in dire alarm;
 for God was in the brotherhood of the godly.
 The resistance of their victim was too much for them,
 because the LORD was his refuge.
 If only Israel's deliverance might come out of Zion!
 When the LORD restores his people's fortunes, let Jacob rejoice, let Israel be glad.

15

O LORD, who may lodge in thy tabernacle?
 Who may dwell on thy holy mountain?
 The man of blameless life, who does what is right and speaks the truth from his heart;
 who has no malice on his tongue,
 who never wrongs a friend
 and tells no tales against his neighbour;
 the man who shows his scorn for the worthless
 and honours all who fear the LORD;
 who swears to his own hurt and does not retract;
 who does not put his money out to usury
 and takes no bribe against an innocent man.
 He who does these things shall never be brought low.

16

Keep me, O God, for in thee have I found refuge.
 I have said to the LORD,
 'Thou, Lord, art my felicity.'
 The gods whom earth holds sacred are all worthless, and cursed are all who make them their delight;^a
 those who run after them^b find trouble without end.
 I will not offer them libations of blood
 nor take their names upon my lips.
 Thou, LORD, my allotted portion, thou my cup,
 thou dost enlarge my boundaries:

^a are all worthless . . . delight: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure.

6 the lines fall for me in pleasant places,
indeed I am well content with my inheritance.
7 I will bless the LORD who has given me counsel:
in the night-time wisdom comes to me in my inward parts.
8 I have set the LORD continually before me:
with him ^a at my right hand I cannot be shaken.
9 Therefore my heart exults
and my spirit rejoices,
my body too rests unafraid;
10 for thou wilt not abandon me to Sheol
nor suffer thy faithful servant to see the pit.
11 Thou wilt show me the path of life;
in thy presence is the fullness of joy,
in thy right hand pleasures for evermore.

17

1 Hear, LORD, my plea for justice, give my cry a hearing,
listen to my prayer,
for it is innocent of all deceit.
2 Let judgement in my cause issue from thy lips,
let thine eyes be fixed on justice.
3 Thou hast tested my heart and watched me all night long;
thou hast assayed me and found in me no mind to evil.
4 I will not speak of the deeds of men;
I have taken good note of all thy sayings.
5 I have not strayed from the course of duty;
I have followed thy path and never stumbled.
6 I call upon thee, O God, for thou wilt answer me.
Bend down thy ear to me, listen to my words.
7 Show me how marvellous thy true love can be,
who with thy hand dost save
all who seek sanctuary from their enemies.
8 Keep me like the apple of thine eye;
hide me in the shadow of thy wings
from the wicked who obstruct me,
from deadly foes who throng round me.
9 They have stifled all compassion;
their mouths are full of pride;
10 they press me hard, ^b now they hem me in,
on the watch to bring me to the ground.
11 The enemy is like a lion eager for prey,
like a young lion crouching in ambush.
12 Arise, LORD, meet him face to face and bring him down.

^a with him: prob. rdg.; Heb. om.

footsteps.

Save my life from the wicked;
 make an end of them^a with thy sword. 14
 With thy hand, O LORD, make an end of them;^a thrust them out of this world in the prime of their life, gorged as they are with thy good things,
 blest with many sons
 and leaving their children wealth in plenty.
 But my plea is just: I shall see thy face, 15
 and be blest with a vision of thee when I awake.

18

I love thee, O LORD my strength. 1
 The LORD is my stronghold, my fortress and my champion, 2^b
 my God, my rock where I find safety,
 my shield, my mountain refuge, my strong tower.
 I will call on the LORD to whom all praise is due, 3
 and I shall be delivered from my enemies.
 When the bonds of death held me fast, 4 destructive torrents overtook me,
 the bonds of Sheol tightened round me, 5
 the snares of death were set to catch me;
 then in anguish of heart I cried to the LORD, 6
 I called for help to my God;
 he heard me from his temple,
 and my cry reached his ears.
 The earth heaved and quaked, 7
 the foundations of the mountains shook;
 they heaved, because he was angry.
 Smoke rose from his nostrils, 8
 devouring fire came out of his mouth,
 glowing coals and searing heat.
 He swept the skies aside as he descended, 9
 thick darkness lay under his feet.
 He rode on a cherub, he flew through the air; 10
 he swooped on the wings of the wind.
 He made darkness around him his hiding-place 11
 and dense^c vapour his canopy.^d
 Thick clouds came out of the radiance before him, 12
 hailstones and glowing coals.
 The LORD thundered from the heavens 13
 and the voice of the Most High spoke out.^e
 He loosed his arrows, he sped them far and wide, 14
 he shot forth lightning shafts and sent them echoing.

15 The channels of the sea-bed were revealed,
 the foundations of earth laid bare
 at the LORD's rebuke,
 at the blast of the breath of his ^a nostrils.
 16 He reached down from the height and took me,
 he drew me out of mighty waters,
 17 he rescued me from my enemies, strong as they were,
 from my foes when they grew too powerful for me.
 18 They confronted me in the hour of my peril,
 but the LORD was my buttress.
 19 He brought me out into an open place,
 he rescued me because he delighted in me.
 20 The LORD rewarded me as my righteousness deserved;
 my hands were clean, and he requited me.
 21 For I have followed the ways of the LORD
 and have not turned wickedly from my God;
 22 all his laws are before my eyes,
 I have not failed to follow his decrees.
 23 In his sight I was blameless
 and kept myself from wilful sin;
 24 the LORD requited me as my righteousness deserved
 and the purity of my life in his eyes.

25 With the loyal thou showest thyself loyal and with the blameless man blameless.
 26 With the savage man thou showest thyself savage,
 and ^b tortuous with the perverse.
 27 Thou deliverest humble folk,
 and bringest proud looks down to earth.
 28 Thou, LORD, dost make my lamp burn bright,
 and my God will lighten my darkness.
 29 With thy help I leap over a bank,
 by God's aid I spring over a wall.

30 The way of God is perfect,
 the LORD's word has stood the test ;
 he is the shield of all who take refuge in him.
 31 What god is there but the LORD?
 What rock but our God?—
 32 the God who girds me with strength and makes my way blameless, 33 who makes me swift as a hind and sets me secure on the mountains;
 34 who trains my hands for battle,
 and my arms aim an arrow tipped with bronze.

Thou givest me room for my steps, my feet have not faltered.	36
I pursue my enemies and overtake them, I do not return until I have made an end of them.	37
I strike them down and they will never rise again; they fall beneath my feet.	38
Thou dost arm me with strength for the battle and dost subdue my foes before me.	39
Thou settest my foot on my enemies' necks, and I bring to nothing those that hate me.	40
They cry out and there is no one to help them, they cry to the LORD and he does not answer.	41
I will pound them fine as dust before the wind, like mud in the streets will I trample them. ^a	42
Thou dost deliver me from the clamour of the people, and makest me master of the nations.	43
A people I never knew shall be my subjects; as soon as they hear tell of me, they shall obey me, and foreigners shall come cringing to me.	44
Foreigners shall be brought captive to me, and emerge from their strongholds.	45
The LORD lives, blessed is my rock, high above all is God who saves me.	46
O God, who grantest me vengeance, who layest nations prostrate at my feet, who dost rescue me from my foes and set me over my enemies, thou dost deliver me from violent men.	47
Therefore, LORD, I will praise thee among the nations and sing psalms to thy name, to one who gives his king great victories and in all his acts keeps faith with his anointed king, with David and his descendants for ever.	48 49 50

The heavens tell out the glory of God, the vault of heaven reveals his handiwork.	1
One day speaks to another, night with night shares its knowledge, and this without speech or language or sound of any voice.	2 3
Their music goes out through all the earth, their words reach to the end of the world.	4

^a Prob. rdg., cp. 2 Sam. 22. 43; Heb. will I empty them out.

- 5 In them a tent is fixed for the sun,
who comes out like a bridegroom from his wedding canopy,
rejoicing like a strong man to run his race.
- 6 His rising is at one end of the heavens,
his circuit touches their farthest ends;
and nothing is hidden from his heat.
- 7 The law of the LORD is perfect and revives the soul.
The LORD's instruction never fails,
and makes the simple wise.
- 8 The precepts of the LORD are right and rejoice the heart.
The commandment of the LORD shines clear and gives light to the eyes.
- 9 The fear of the LORD is pure and abides for ever.
The LORD's decrees are true and righteous every one,
10 more to be desired than gold, pure gold in plenty,
sweeter than syrup or honey from the comb.
- 11 It is these that give thy servant warning,
and he who keeps them wins a great reward.
- 12 Who is aware of his unwitting sins?
Cleanse me of any secret fault.
- 13 Hold back thy servant also from sins of self-will,
lest they get the better of me.
Then I shall be blameless
and innocent of any great transgression.
- 14 May all that I say and think be acceptable to thee,
O LORD, my rock and my redeemer!

20

- 1 May the LORD answer you in the hour of trouble!
The name of Jacob's God be your tower of strength,
2 give you help from the sanctuary
and send you support from Zion!
3 May he remember all your offerings
and look with favour on your rich sacrifices, 4 give you your heart's desire and grant success to all your plans!
- 5 Let us sing aloud in praise of your victory,
let us do homage to the name of our God!
The LORD grant all you ask!
- 6 Now I know that the LORD has given victory to his anointed king:
he will answer him from his holy heaven
with the victorious might of his right hand.
- 7 Some boast of chariots and some of horses,
but our boast is the name of the LORD our God.

They totter and fall,	8
but we rise up and are full of courage.
O LORD, save the king,	9
and answer us in the hour of our calling.

21

The king rejoices in thy might, O LORD:	1
well may he exult in thy victory,
for thou hast given him his heart's desire	2
and hast not refused him what he asked.
Thou dost welcome him with blessings and prosperity	3
and set a crown of fine gold upon his head.
He asked of thee life, and thou didst give it him,	4
length of days for ever and ever.
Thy salvation has brought him great glory;	5
thou dost invest him with majesty and honour,
for thou bestowest blessings on him for evermore	6
and dost make him glad with joy in thy presence.
The king puts his trust in the LORD;	7
the loving care of the Most High holds him unshaken.
Your hand shall reach all your enemies:	8
your right hand shall reach those who hate you;
at your coming you shall plunge them into a fiery furnace;	9
the LORD in his anger will strike them down,
and fire shall consume them.
It will exterminate their offspring from the earth	10
and rid mankind of their posterity.
For they have aimed wicked blows at you,	11
they have plotted mischief but could not prevail;
but you will catch them round the shoulders	12
and will aim with your bow-strings at their faces.
Be exalted, O LORD, in thy might;	13
we will sing a psalm of praise to thy power.

22

My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me	1
and art so far from saving me, from heeding my groans?
O my God, I cry in the day-time but thou dost not answer,	2
in the night I cry but get no respite.
And yet thou art enthroned in holiness,	3
thou art he whose praises Israel sings.
In thee our fathers put their trust;	4
they trusted, and thou didst rescue them.
Unto thee they cried and were delivered;	5
in thee they trusted and were not put to shame.

- 6 But I am a worm, not a man, abused by all men, scorned by the people.
- 7 All who see me jeer at me,
make mouths at me and wag their heads:
- 8 'He threw himself on the LORD for rescue;
let the LORD deliver him, for he holds him dear!'
- 9 But thou art he who drew me from the womb,
who laid me at my mother's breast.
- 10 Upon thee was I cast at birth;
from my mother's womb thou hast been my God.
- 11 Be not far from me,
for trouble is near, and I have no helper.
- 12 A herd of bulls surrounds me,
great bulls of Bashan beset me.
- 13 Ravening and roaring lions open their mouths wide against me.
- 14 My strength drains away like water
and all my bones are loose.
- 15 My heart has turned to wax and melts within me.
My mouth^a is dry as a potsherd,
and my tongue sticks to my jaw;
I am laid^b low in the dust of death.
- 16 The huntsmen are all about me;
a band of ruffians rings me round,
and they have hacked off^c my hands and my feet.
- 17 I tell my tale of misery,
while they look on and gloat.
- 18 They share out my garments among them
and cast lots for my clothes.
- 19 But do not remain so far away, O LORD;
O my help, hasten to my aid.
- 20 Deliver my very self from the sword,
my precious life from the axe.
- 21 Save me from the lion's mouth,
my poor body^d from the horns of the wild ox.
- 22 I will declare thy fame to my brethren;
I will praise thee in the midst of the assembly.
- 23 Praise him, you who fear the LORD;
all you sons of Jacob, do him honour;
stand in awe of him, all sons of Israel.
- 24 For he has not scorned the downtrodden,
nor shrunk in loathing from his plight,
nor hidden his face from him,
but gave heed to him when he cried out.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. My strength.^b I am laid: prob. rdg.; Heb. thou wilt lay me.^c and they have hacked off: prob. rdg.; Heb. like a lion.^d my poor body: prob.rdg.; Heb. thou hast answered me.

Thou dost inspire my praise in the full assembly ; and I will pay my vows before all who fear thee.	25
Let the humble eat and be satisfied.	26
Let those who seek the LORD praise him and be in good heart for ever.
Let all the ends of the earth remember and turn again to the LORD ;	27
let all the families of the nations bow down before him.
For kingly power belongs to the LORD, and dominion over the nations is his.	28
How can those buried in the earth do him homage, how can those who go down to the grave bow before him ?	29
But I shall live for his sake, my posterity ^a shall serve him.	30
This shall be told of the Lord to future generations ; and they shall justify him, declaring to a people yet unborn that this was his doing.	31

23

The LORD is my shepherd ; I shall want nothing.	1
He makes me lie down in green pastures, and leads me beside the waters of peace ; he renews life within me,	2 3 and for his name's sake guides me in the right path.
Even though I walk through a valley dark as death	4
I fear no evil, for thou art with me, thy staff and thy crook are my comfort.
Thou spreadest a table for me in the sight of my enemies ; thou hast richly bathed my head with oil, and my cup runs over.	5
Goodness and love unfailing, these will follow me all the days of my life, and I shall dwell in the house of the LORD my whole life long.	6

24

The earth is the LORD's and all that is in it, the world and those who dwell therein.	1
For it was he who founded it upon the seas and planted it firm upon the waters beneath.	2
Who may go up the mountain of the LORD ? And who may stand in his holy place ?	3

^a But I . . . posterity: prob. rdg. ; Heb. obscure.

4 He who has clean hands and a pure heart,
 who has not set his mind on falsehood,
 and has not committed perjury.
 5 He shall receive a blessing from the LORD,
 and justice from God his saviour.
 6 Such is the fortune of those who seek him,
 who seek the face of the God of Jacob.
 7 Lift up your heads, you gates,
 lift yourselves up, you everlasting doors,
 that the king of glory may come in.
 8 Who is the king of glory?
 The LORD strong and mighty,
 the LORD mighty in battle.
 9 Lift up your heads, you gates,
 lift them up, you everlasting doors,
 that the king of glory may come in.
 10 Who then is the king of glory?
 The king of glory is the LORD of Hosts.

25

1 Unto thee, O LORD my God, I lift up my heart.
 2 In thee I trust: do not put me to shame,
 let not my enemies exult over me.
 3 No man who hopes in thee is put to shame;
 but shame comes to all who break faith without cause.
 4 Make thy paths known to me, O LORD;
 teach me thy ways.
 5 Lead me in thy truth and teach me;
 thou art God my saviour.
 For thee I have waited all the day long,
 for the coming of thy goodness, LORD. ^a 6 Remember, LORD, thy tender care and thy love unfailing, shown from ages past.
 7 Do not remember the sins and offences of my youth,
 but remember me in thy unfailing love.
 8 The LORD is good and upright;
 therefore he teaches sinners the way they should go.
 9 He guides the humble man in doing right,
 he teaches the humble his ways.
 10 All the ways of the LORD are loving and sure to men who keep his covenant and his charge.
 11 For the honour of thy name, O LORD, forgive my wickedness, great as it is.
 12 If there is any man who fears the LORD,
 he shall be shown the path that he should choose;

he shall enjoy lasting prosperity, and his children after him shall inherit the land.	13
The LORD confides his purposes to those who fear him, and his covenant is theirs to know.	14
My eyes are ever on the LORD, who alone can free my feet from the net.	15
Turn to me and show me thy favour, for I am lonely and oppressed.	16
Relieve the sorrows of my heart and bring me out of my distress.	17
Look at my misery and my trouble and forgive me every sin.	18
Look at my enemies, see how many they are and how violent their hatred for me.	19
Defend me and deliver me, do not put me to shame when I take refuge in thee.	20
Let integrity and uprightness protect me, for I have waited for thee, O LORD.	21
O God, redeem Israel from all his sorrows.	22

26

Give me justice, O LORD, for I have lived my life without reproach, and put unfaltering trust in the LORD.	1
Test me, O LORD, and try me; put my heart and mind to the proof.	2
For thy constant love is before my eyes, and I live in thy truth.	3
I have not sat among worthless men, nor do I mix with hypocrites;	4
I hate the company of evildoers and will not sit among the ungodly.	5
I wash my hands in innocence to join in procession round thy altar, O LORD, singing of thy marvellous acts, recounting them all with thankful voice.	6
O LORD, I love the beauty of thy house, the place where thy glory dwells.	7
Do not sweep me away with sinners, nor cast me out with men who thirst for blood, whose fingers are active in mischief, and their hands are full of bribes.	8
But I live my life without reproach; redeem me, O LORD, and show me thy favour.	9
When once my feet are planted on firm ground, I will bless the LORD in the full assembly.	10

1 The LORD is my light and my salvation;
 whom should I fear?
 The LORD is the refuge of my life;
 of whom then should I go in dread?
 2 When evildoers close in on me to devour me,
 it is my enemies, my assailants,
 who stumble and fall.
 3 If an army should encamp against me,
 my heart would feel no fear;
 if armed men should fall upon me,
 even then I should be undismayed.
 4 One thing I ask of the LORD,
 one thing I seek:
 that I may be constant in the house of the LORD
 all the days of my life,
 to gaze upon the beauty of the LORD
 and to seek him^a in his temple.
 5 For he will keep me safe beneath his roof
 in the day of misfortune;
 he will hide me under the cover of his tent;
 he will raise me beyond reach of distress.
 6 Now I can raise my head high above the enemy all about me;
 so will I acclaim him with sacrifice before his tent
 and sing a psalm of praise to the LORD.

 7 Hear, O LORD, when I call aloud;
 show me favour and answer me.
 8 ‘Come,’ my heart has said,
 ‘seek his face.’^b
 I will seek thy face, O LORD;
 9 do not hide it from me,
 nor in thy anger turn away thy servant,
 whose help thou hast been;
 do not cast me off or forsake me, O God my saviour.
 10 Though my father and my mother forsake me,
 the LORD will take me into his care.
 11-12 Teach me thy way, O LORD;
 do not give me up to the greed of my enemies;

 liars stand up to give evidence against me,
 breathing malice.

16 The LORD sets his face against evildoers

 The LORD is close to those whose courage is broken 18
 and he saves those whose spirit is crushed.
 The good man's misfortunes may be many, 19
 the LORD delivers him out of them all.

 The LORD ransoms the lives of his servants, 22

Strive, O LORD, with those who strive against me; 1 fight against those who fight me.
 Grasp shield and buckler, 2
 and rise up to help me.
 Uncover the spear and bar the way 3

 Let me hear thee declare,
 'I am your salvation.'
 Shame and disgrace be on those who seek my life; 4
 and may those who plan to hurt me retreat in dismay!
 May they be like chaff before the wind, 5 driven by the angel of the LORD!
 Let their way be dark and slippery 6
 as the angel of the LORD pursues them!
 For unprovoked they have hidden a net^a for me, 7
 unprovoked they have dug a pit to trap me.
 May destruction unforeseen come on him; 8
 may the net which he hid catch him;
 may he crash headlong into it!
 Then I shall rejoice in the LORD 9
 and delight in his salvation.
 My very bones cry out, 10
 'LORD, who is like thee?—

 the poor and wretched from those who prey on them.'
 Malicious witnesses step forward; 11
 they question me on matters of which I know nothing.

and not concealed thy unfailing love and truth
from the great assembly.
- 11 Thou, O LORD, dost not withhold thy tender care from me;
thy unfailing love and truth for ever guard me.
- 12 For misfortunes beyond counting press on me from all sides;
my iniquities have overtaken me,
and my sight fails;
they are more than the hairs of my head,
and my courage forsakes me.
- 13^a Show me favour, O LORD, and save me;
hasten to help me, O LORD.
- 14 Let those who seek to take my life
be put to shame and dismayed one and all;
let all who love to hurt me shrink back disgraced;
let those who cry 'Hurrah!' at my downfall
be horrified at their reward of shame.
- 16 But let all those who seek thee
be jubilant and rejoice in thee;
and let those who long for thy saving help ever cry,
'All glory to the LORD!'
- 17 But I am poor and needy;
O Lord, think of me.^b
Thou art my help and my salvation;
O my God, make no delay.

41

- 1 Happy the man who has a concern for the helpless!
The LORD will save him in time of trouble.
- 2 The LORD protects him and gives him life, making him secure in the land;
the LORD never leaves him^c to the greed of his enemies.
- 3 He nurses him on his sick-bed;
he turns his bed when he is ill.
- 4 But I said, 'LORD, be gracious to me;
heal me, for I have sinned against thee.'
- 5 'His case is desperate,' my enemies say;
'when will he die, and his line become extinct?'
- 6 All who visit me speak from an empty heart,
alert to gather bad news;
then they go out to spread it abroad.

^a Verses 13-17: cp. Ps. 70. 1-5. ^b O Lord . . . me: prob. rdg.; Heb. may the Lord think of me. ^c never leaves him: prob. rdg.; Heb. do thou not give him up . . .

All who hate me whisper together about me and love to make the worst of everything:	7
‘An evil spell is cast upon him;	8
he is laid on his bed, and will rise no more.’
Even the friend whom I trusted, who ate at my table, ^a exults over my misfortune.	9
O LORD, be gracious and restore me, that I may pay them out to the full. ^b	10
Then I shall know that thou delightest in me and that my enemy will not triumph over me.	11
But I am upheld by thee because of my innocence; thou keepest me for ever in thy sight.	12
 Blessed be the LORD, the God of Israel, from everlasting to everlasting.	13
Amen, Amen.

BOOK 2

42-43

As a hind longs for the running streams, so do I long for thee, O God.	1
With my whole being I thirst for God, the living God.	2
When shall I come to God and appear in his presence? Day and night, tears are my food;	3
‘Where is your God?’ they ask me all day long.
As I pour out my soul in distress, I call to mind how I marched in the ranks of the great to the house of God, among exultant shouts of praise, the clamour of the pilgrims.	4
How deep I am sunk in misery, groaning in my distress: yet I will wait for God; I will praise him continually, my deliverer, my God.	5
I am sunk in misery, therefore will I remember thee, though from the Hermons and the springs of Jordan, and from the hill of Mizar,	6
deep calls to deep in the roar of thy cataracts, and all thy waves, all thy breakers, pass over me.	7
The LORD makes his unfailing love shine forth ^c alike by day and night; his praise on my lips is a prayer to the God of my life.	8

^a who . . . table: or slanders me.^b to the full: transposed from end of verse 9.^c makes . . . forth: or entrusts me to his unfailing love.

- 9 I will say to God my rock, 'Why hast thou forgotten me?'
Why must I go like a mourner because my foes oppress me?
10 My enemies taunt me, jeering^a at my misfortunes;
'Where is your God?' they ask me all day long.
11 How deep I am sunk in misery,
groaning in my distress:
yet I will wait for God;
I will praise him continually,
my deliverer, my God.
- 43 Plead my cause and give me judgement against an impious race;
save me from malignant men and liars, O God.
2 Thou, O God, art my refuge; why hast thou rejected me?
Why must I go like a mourner because my foes oppress me?
3 Send forth thy light and thy truth to be my guide and lead me to thy holy hill, to thy tabernacle, 4 then shall I come to the altar of God, the God of my joy, and praise thee on the harp, O God, thou God of my delight.
5 How deep I am sunk in misery,
groaning in my distress:
yet I will wait for God;
I will praise him continually,
my deliverer, my God.

44

- 1 O God, we have heard for ourselves,
our fathers have told us
all the deeds which thou didst in their days, 2 all the work of thy hand in days of old.
Thou didst plant them in the land and drive the nations out,
thou didst make them strike root, breaking up the peoples;
3 it was not our fathers' swords won them the land,
nor their arm that gave them the victory,
but thy right hand and thy arm
and the light of thy presence; such was thy favour to them.
4 Thou art my king and my God;
at thy bidding Jacob is victorious.
5 By thy help we will throw back our enemies,
in thy name we will trample down our adversaries.
6 I will not trust in my bow,
nor will my sword win me the victory;
7 for thou dost deliver us from our foes
and put all our enemies to shame.
8 In God have we gloried all day long,
and we will praise thy name for ever.
9 But now thou hast rejected and humbled us and dost no longer lead our armies into battle.

^a jeering: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure.

Thou hast hurled us back before the enemy, and our foes plunder us as they will.	10
Thou hast given us up to be butchered like sheep and hast scattered us among the nations.	11
Thou hast sold thy people for next to nothing and had no profit from the sale.	12
Thou hast exposed us to the taunts of our neighbours, to the mockery and contempt of all around.	13
Thou hast made us a byword among the nations, and the peoples shake their heads at us;	14
so my disgrace confronts me all day long, and I am covered with shame	15
at the shouts of those who taunt and abuse me as the enemy takes his revenge.	16
All this has befallen us, but we do not forget thee and have not betrayed thy covenant;	17
we have not gone back on our purpose, nor have our feet strayed from thy path.	18
Yet thou hast crushed us as the sea-serpent was crushed and covered us with the darkness of death.	19
If we had forgotten the name of our God and spread our hands in prayer to any other,	20
would not God find this out, for he knows the secrets of the heart?	21
Because of thee we are done to death all day long, and are treated as sheep for slaughter.	22
Bestir thyself, Lord; why dost thou sleep? Awake, do not reject us for ever.	23
Why dost thou hide thy face, heedless of our misery and our sufferings?	24
For we sink down to the dust and lie prone on the earth.	25
Arise and come to our help; for thy love's sake set us free.	26

45

My heart is stirred by a noble theme, in a king's honour I utter the song I have made, and my tongue runs like the pen of an expert scribe.	1
You surpass all mankind in beauty, your lips are moulded in grace, so you are blessed by God for ever.	2
With your sword ready at your side, warrior king, your limbs resplendent ^a in their royal armour, ride on to execute true sentence and just judgement.	3 4

^a your limbs resplendent: prob. rdg.; Heb. and in your pomp prosper.

- 5 Your right hand shall show you a scene of terror:
your sharp arrows flying, nations beneath your feet,
the courage of the king's foes melting away! ^a
- 6 Your throne is like God's throne, eternal,
your royal sceptre a sceptre of righteousness.
- 7 You have loved right and hated wrong;
so God, your God, has anointed you above your fellows with oil, the token of joy.
- 8 Your robes are all fragrant with myrrh and powder of aloes,
and the music of strings greets you
from a palace panelled with ivory.
- 9 A princess takes her place among the noblest of your women,
a royal lady at your side in gold of Ophir.
- 10 Listen, my daughter, hear my words
and consider them:
forget your own people and your father's house;
11 and, when the king desires your beauty,
remember that he is your lord.
- 12 Do him obeisance, daughter of Tyre,
and the richest in the land will court you with gifts.
- 13 In the palace honour awaits her; ^b
she is a king's daughter, 14 arrayed in cloth-of-gold richly embroidered.
Virgins shall follow her into the presence of the king;
her companions shall be brought to her,
15 escorted with the noise of revels and rejoicing
as they enter the king's palace.
